Clarksville is situated on the right bank of the Cumberland river, contains about five thousand inhabitants, and is the capital of Montgomery county, Tennessee. Its location is high and commanding; and for health is equal, if not superior to any other point in the United States; being in latitude 36½° —far enough South to be free from the rigors of a Northern winter, and far enough North to be exempt from the dangerous and deadly epidemics of the South. Its society is of the very first order, and the city sufficiently large to furnish every elegance and luxury, without the concomitant expense, extravagance and depravity of a larger city. It has churches of every Christian denomination, and also a good Male College. Finally, Clarksville is accessible from all points of the compass, and therefore we most cordially solicit patronage from abroad.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.—Parents and guardians who may patronize our school will be notified in due time of all examinations, vacations, etc.

MALE DEPARTMENT,
SUMMERFIELD, Dallas county, Ala.,

WILL re-open First Monday of October next, under the direction of its former principal, Rev. D. C. H. Conery, M. A., assisted by Rev. Jno. S. Moore, M. A. These gentlemen are both members of the Alabama Conference, of high reputation as to scholarship, experience and skill. Their best energies will be employed to promote the religious and intellectual training of their pupils. Summerfield is retired and healthy. Boarding is had at $13 or $14 per month. The principal boards a portion of the young men when his terms are complied with.

Circulars are sent every three months to parents and guardians. Catalogues can be had by applying to the principal, or to the undersigned.

Let our friends, everywhere, sustain this, the only male school now in operation under the care of the Alabama Conference.

E. A. PARKER,
President Board of Trustees.

The Great Drawback to persons emigrating to the Western country, is the great fear they have of the Fever and Ague—the most dreaful of all diseases. Every day we hear of persons attacked by this disease, and made helpless in a short time without any means of affording relief. In view of the great demand for a remedy, Dr. HOSTETTER has presented his celebrated "Bitters," whose curative powers for all diseases of the stomach have been universally acknowledged. The "Bitters," prepared after a long experience and deep study, have received the encomiums of the most eminent physicians, as well as all classes, in every part of our country. To those who doubt their many virtues, all we can say is, to try them, and judge for themselves respectively.

Sold by Druggists every where, and by HOSTETTER & SMITH, Sole Proprietors, 58 Water and 55, Front streets, Pittsburg. July 1-4t

At a meeting of the officers and teachers of the New Hope Sabbath-school of Algiers, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

That whereas Almighty God has seen fit, in his wise dispensation, to remove from our midst our well beloved and much lamented sister Amelia Ames, therefore

Resolved, That, by the death of sister Ames, we feel that the Sabbath-school has lost a kind, faithful, and affectionate teacher, and we a zealous and energetic co-worker in the Sabbath-school cause—sister Ames having been connected with the Sabbath-school for the past sixteen years—and it is further

Resolved, That the deep heart-felt sympathy of the members of this Sabbath-school be and are hereby tendered to the relatives and friends of our deceased sister; and may he who has promised to heal all our sorrows heal the sorrows of those who have been bereaved by this sad affliction.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

JESUS AND THE LITTLE CHILD.

CHILD.

Savior, I am very weak;
Wilt thou hear me when I speak?
May I come and tell thee all,
Though I am so young and small?

SAVIOR.

Fear not, my child, to come to me,
For I was once a child like thee;
And though I reign in glory now,
I keep my love for babes below.

CHILD.

And wilt thou take my sinful heart,
And make it pure in every part?
Help me to grow a loving child,
Like thee, obedient, meek, and mild?

SAVIOR.

I died, my child, to set you free
From sin, and hell, and misery;
And none of all the child-like train
Shall ever seek my face in vain.

A CHILD'S HYMN.

Through the pleasures of the day,
When I read and when I pray,
Let me ever keep in view,
God is seeing all I do.
When the sun withdraws his light,
And I go to rest at night,
Let me never lay my head
On my soft and easy bed,
Till I lift my heart in prayer
For my heavenly Father's care;
Thanking him for all his love,
Sent me from his home above;
Praying him to kindly make Me his child for Jesus' sake.

"IT IS ONLY HIS WAY."

"Papa, here are some pretty flowers for you," said little Mollie Loring, as she ran to meet her father on his return home. "Ain't they beautiful," continued she, extending her fingers and laying their tapering tips upon a half-blown Luxenburg, a cape jessamine, and a white bud; that seemed trying to hide itself amongst the crisped petals of a crape myrtle, "this tea rose is playing bo-peep at you; ain't they pretty, papa?"

"Yes. Who sent them to me?"

"Nobody. I gathered them for you."

"Pshaw! I thought some friend sent them. Go to play, and don't pester me."

There were more dimples than one in that quivering chin, and something more than the heat of a mid-summer's day had crimsoned the sweet face of the child as she turned into her doll-house, saying to herself, "I fixed them so nicely, and tied them with my doll's new blue sash that aunt Nina gave me yesterday. Ma says it is only his way, but I think it is a mighty bad way; that's all I know about it, and I wish our pa was like Carrie Morton's."

What a pity that papa does not consider it a "bad way"—what a pity that he does not know how such conduct estranges his little ones from him; and throws back upon their warm hearts the sweet affections which they are so happy in offering, and he would be so happy in receiving, if he only knew how to appreciate the love of children, if he only knew how to speak kind words to them. But he is kindly disposed, it is only his way, for even now, while Mollie is regretting her amiability to draw from him a word of approval, he is turning the flowers in his hand, and saying, as he admires them: "Well, she certainly has displayed very good taste in putting them together; nothing could be more tastily arranged than these verbenas on this lemon geranium leaf, and how beautifully she has dotted this crape myrtle with heart's-ease and white rose buds."

Why did you not say those words to your daughter? She would have embalmed them with a child's previous love, and stored them away in memory's urn, to gladden her heart when friends prove false and the world unkind, when the sorrow of the present makes her fear the future, and turn for relief to the remembrance of childhood's joys and youth's sunny hours. Fathers, speak kindly, lovingly to the little ones around you, thank them for their love offerings, tell them the flowers are beautiful and sweet, point out their beauties and sweetness, tell them in what respects they resemble little children, and thus teach them to "look through nature up to nature's God." If you have adopted a repulsive manner, abandon it and make home happy by your smiles, that your children may believe you when you say you love them, and know how to understand those who talk to them of fond parents and happy families.—Methodist Protestant.

EVIL COMPANY.

Sopironius, a wise teacher of the people, did not allow his sons and daughters, even when they were grown up, to associate with those whose lives were not moral and pure. "For," said the gentle Eulalia one day when he had refused to permit her to go in company with her brother to visit the frivolous Lucinda—"Father, you must think that we are very weak and childish, since you are afraid that it would be dangerous to us in visiting Lucinda."

Without saying a word, the father took a coal from the hearth and handed it to his daughter. "It will not burn you my child!" said he "only take it."

Eulalia took the coal, and behold, her tender white hand was black, and without thinking she touched her white dress, and it was blackened.

"See," said Eulalia, somewhat displeased, as she looked at her hands and dress, "one cannot be careful enough when handling coals!"

"Yes, truly," said her father. "You see my child, that the coal, even though it did not burn you, has nevertheless blackened you! So is the company of immoral persons."

THE GREATEST
Medical Discovery
OF THE AGE.

Mr. Kennedy, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,
From the worst Scrofula down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.
Two or three bottles will clear the system of biles.
Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.
One or two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.
Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.
Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corns and running ulcers.
One bottle will cure scaly eruptions of the skin.
Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of ringworm.
Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed growing on the pastures, and along old stone walls, should cure every humor in the system; yet it is a fixed fact. If you have a humor, it has to start. There are no ifs nor ands, buts nor ha's about it suiting some cases, but not yours. I meddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts. I give it to children a year old, to old people of sixty. I have seen poor, puny, wormy-looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to a perfect state of health by one bottle.

To those who are subject to a sick head ache, one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief in catarrh and dizziness. Some who have taken it and been costive for years, and have been regulated by it. Where the body is sound it works quite easy, but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it will cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed; they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad result from it; on the contrary, when that feeling is gone you will feel yourself like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever man listened to.

Manufactured by DONALD KENNEDY, No. 120 Warren street, Roxbury, Mass. Price $1 per bottle.

DR. T. McGOWN'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
IODINE OF POTASI,
THE GREAT
BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,

Prepared from pareira root, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a Panacea or Catholicon than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Coindet, Baron, Bardsley, Manson, Ricord, Gendrin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy; diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Biles, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally;) Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Bronchitis, Tonsillitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tuberculs, especially of the neck; Cancers, Palsy; Tumors, Gonorrhea, Gleet; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Forvyce says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in constitutions enfeebled and emaciated by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparations of Sarsaparilla."

Female Complaints.—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Irregularities, Suppression, Diseases of the Womb, Leucorrhea, Tumors, Enlargement of the Uterus, Breasts; Chorea, etc.; Impurities of the Blood or System, and all diseases dependent thereon. Makes the skin clear and smooth—an object of interest with the ladies. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.

McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.

McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.

McGOWN'S OINTMENT—Never known to fail curing old Sores, Cancers, Chronic Sore Eyes, etc.

Such as Constipation, Inward Piles, or Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin, and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil and great Depression of Spirits.

The proprietor, in calling the attention of the public to this preparation, does so with a feeling of the utmost confidence in its virtues and adaptation to the diseases for which it is recommended.

It is no new and untried article, but one that has stood the test of a ten years' trial before the American people, and its reputation and sale is unrivaled by any similar preparations extant. The testimony in its favor given by the most prominent and well-known Physicians and individuals in all parts of the country is immense, and a careful perusal of the Almanac, published annually by the proprietor, and to be had gratis of any of his Agents, cannot but satisfy the most skeptical that this remedy is really deserving the great celebrity it has obtained.

GOD IS WISDOM, GOD IS LOVE

We publish two of the stanzas sent by Nellie. The remainder is not equal to them.

I who heed the approach of morn when first the sun
Unfolds his coming by the golden beam
That tinged the eastern cloud or freckled sky
Ere it rose in full revealed some feature new
In earth's habiliment, and marked change
That marked the progress of the king of day
Was first more clearly traced the radiant truth
Which sparkled from the earth, and lent a glow
To all the blushing sky above, in those Bright words that "God is Wisdom, God is Love"
Gazed upon the sky at sunset's hour
Saw the ample golden tinge expire
In fragments blazonry; then as the stars
Dreamed slowly forth from their far other homes
And softened twilight clothed the fading earth,
With type Divine, in universal sheet
Were taught indelibly the glowing word
Believe and learn, for these my every works
Proclaim that "God is Wisdom, God is Love."

THE PRAYER OF LITTLE TED.

Up with the sun at morning,
Away to the garden he hies
To see if the sleepy blossoms
Have begun to open their eyes.
Running a race with the wind
With steps as light and free
As any wild bird that flies
In the forest or over the sea.

Now to the brook he wanders
To see if the noiseless fish
Are sporting the sparkling ripples
In the shiny water adrift,
And under hidden cover
His gleaming skiff is moored
As pearly sea shell is never Even in the richest hoard.

Now in the rosy arbor
Sits the object dear to all
That blushes in nature's bed,
Is sweet as the dew that follows
The darling's airy tread.

From a bee at the window my neighbor
Looks down on our little girl
And watches the pleasant blossom
Which cannot vary his lot
As he lies in picture books and muses
Bright fountain and noble tree
Flower that grows in roses
And that in beyond the sea;
But he yet rises, bubbles laughter
He hears and bootsteps greet
His stately falls never to echo
To the tread of him dear to feet.

This child is our speaking picture
A reading that chatters and sings
Sometimes a sleepin, cheerful
Our other one has wings!
His heart is a charmed casket
Full of all that's stirring and sweet
And on harp strings hold such music
As follow his twinkling feet
When the glory of sunset opens
The highway by angels trod
And seem to raise the city
Whose builder and Maker is God
Gone is Ted to portal
Deep by the gates of pearls
The eyes of our other angel
Watch how tall he grows!
And task to be taught and directed
To guide his feet aright
So that he be counted worthy
To walk in sandals of light;
And hear and heed the welcome
From messengers meek and blest,
Of the starry fleet of heaven,
The pattering little feet

LETTER FROM JERUSALEM

CONCLUDED FROM A PREVIOUS ISSUE

Jerusalem, March 5, 1858

From Bethlehem we rode on to the Pools of Solomon, and his gardens. Many interesting places were pointed out on the way—the reputed site of the baptism of the Eunuch—Adullam the border of Joshua. The valley leading down to Hebron is called Eschol, supposed to be the place from where the spies brought their fruits. The vineyards are very extensive, and we were told that the clusters of grapes are as large now as represented in our pictures of those brought by the spies. Two miles from the city we entered a rich valley, still beautiful and luxuriant with vegetation, cedar and still as when Abraham used to commune with God, in its lonely solitude among the ancient oaks which shaded its soil. Our dragoman, Abdallah Yusef, declares it well called Abraham's, and in all probability he drew water from its depths. It had all the appearance of antiquity, and as wells of water in this country are of such vast importance it may have been preserved to this time. This valley is surrounded by hills, terraced and cultivated to their tops with vines or olives. Hebron, "built seven years before Zoan, in Egypt," is now called "El Khalil, the beloved," the name by which Abraham is known to the East." It is built upon the side of a hill before the plains of Mamre, where we pitched our tents for the night in full view of the mosque which conceals the cave of Machpelah.

We stood upon a rock on a hill side, which overlooked this beautiful vale, where our tents were relieved by a back ground of an olive crowned hill, rich in vegetation, and the plain covered with verdure and adorned with wild flowers of every line. The scene was exceedingly picturesque and beautiful and associated with events of Bible history, of the covenant of God with Abraham, sublimely instructive there, in the vale of Hebron, Joseph was sent by Jacob to visit his brethren at Sechem and Dothan, and David also went to Hebron by the command of God; and we know from scripture history that Abraham, Sarah, Isaac, Rebecca, Rachel and Leah all have their resting place in the cave concealed by the mosque which we saw. The mosque is a large building, with two minarets, surrounded by a wall 60 feet high and surmounted by battlements that give it a fortress like look. In the morning of our departure we rode through the city and up to the gate of the mosque. A solemn entrance for man or woman into that place guarded by the Moslem power. It might fall. We saw two steps ascended on our way from it. Saul, the last the longest, with Mussulman, who gave a splendid description of its magnificent treasures. All the sepulchres of the patriarchs, he said, were covered with rich carpets of green silk, embroidered with gold, their wives with silver embroidered in the same manners. The Sultans of Constantinople furnish these carpets, which are renewed from time to time. The gateways were thronged by multitudes of people, men, women, and children, all apparently of the lower class, but blessed with the finest of Jewish faces and most brilliant eyes. Near the entrance of the mosque is a school, where a large number of children were reciting the lessons to the doors of their temples, inside and out in the street, some with tin sheets or Arabic letters; others with parchment or something like it, and some with books; and the hum of children's voices went up like music in the temple of this truly oriental city. The features and expression of these children were that of intense loveliness. The children of Abraham are distinctly marked; the Jewish face is preserved throughout the East. Money could not buy a passport into the Mosque of Omar; it is forbidden ground, upon which the eyes of Christians must not look. They do despise them, and point the finger of scorn when they pass.

We rode through the Lazar, which extends around one side of the mosque, a dark, unsightly place where they sell their goats, meats, fruits and vegetables. We took our way back to the Pools of Solomon. These works bear the design of Solomon. They are truly massive and will endure for the ravages of years to come if left to the hand of time to destroy. They are three in number, of oblong shape, partly excavated in rock and enclosed in masonic work. They all built upon sloping ground, and they run into the other. Their breadth is about 250 feet. The third is the greatest in length, measuring 600 feet, the second 500, the first 250 feet. These wonderful reservoirs of water seem to justify a population of considerable magnitude for Solomon, for I made me great works; I planted me vineyards; I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kinds of fruits. I made me pools of water to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees." Eccl. ii, 4, 6. Below these pools, partly between two hills, where his gardens were pointed out, and there could be no mistake in the location of either. We saw the pipe of the aqueduct which caused the water to descend from these pools into that fertile spot, laid out in a plan by Mr. Meshullam, a Jewish gentleman, who has already derived profit from it in a few years. The almond and other trees were in bloom as we passed the place. The people who are employed as laborers live in singular looking habitations, resembling caves in the mountain, partly dug out of the rock.

We passed through Bethlehem again on our way to Sur Saher Convent, and enjoyed with peculiar freshness the prospect of a country so honored by the incarnation of our Lord—his birth and childhood. We felt as though it was hallowed ground, trodden by the early footsteps of our Savior, and we gave a last look at the place of his nativity as we passed under the walls of the convent down the valley to ascend a hill said to be the highest in Judea, with a view of Jerusalem in the distance distinctly visible. We reached the monastery of St Saba before night, rising perpendicularly from a bed of rocks on the side of the brook Kedron, of a most wild and picturesque aspect—a region perfectly desolate in appearance, without vegetation. The rocks have a most singular formation, like the works of art, running around the banks one after another like strata or layers of earth and rising one above another to an immense height, a few projections in large masses. The sides are perforated with caves, where the Anchorites once lived, or the refuge of persecuted saints. This monastery, the oldest christian convent in the world, is a perfectly isolated spot, where 12 monks live away from the haunts of the busy world. It has two towers and its walls are high; upon the roof, which is flat, are many cells for the Anchorites and a low round tower for a fortress, and one of the Fathers is obliged to keep watch alternately every night for fear of the Arabs. No woman is allowed to visit this monastery, but the gentlemen of our party were permitted to enter within its walls. Our tents were pitched within a short distance from its towers, where we were safely protected by our dragoman and guard from the wandering tribes which we occasionally saw. We passed three on our way with their camels, which we were told were of the Ishmaelite tribe. They were well made, fine, but fierce looking men.

We left this desolate cloister spot in the morning for the Valley of Jericho and the Dead Sea, and never did we witness a scene more wild and terrific than the wilderness of Engedi. It is broken by deep, dark and dreary glens and lofty precipices, which exclude the rays of the sun from their depths, down which it is fearful to look. The cold and piercing rocks are thrown up into a most sublime grandeur, as though they might have been the habitations for christians in times of persecution.

Thus is truly a wonderful country, where every spot has a spiritual creation, in which its holy pages of the past are illustrated. God himself lives, speaks, acts, and this desolate region has become silent with terror. The camp of the Wild Arab contrasts disagreeably with these solitudes with their tents, flocks of goats which they resemble, and flocks of sheep, which are pasturing on the mountains. The most numerous flocks and company of men, women, and children we had ever seen. The tents were all made of black hair cloth, which does not protect them against the sun and rain. The children of these Ishmaelites are fine looking, and they followed us, putting out their hands for backsheesh; they know how to beg. They have strongly marked features, with a fine expression; and though their complexions are tawny, their features are regular and eyes brilliant and sparkling. Even these wild people of the wilderness is a demonstration of the providence of God in the family of Abrahams's descendants, and carry the mind back to Hagar in the wilderness with her son Ishmael ready to perish with thirst. They still preserve their characteristic—their hand is against every man's and every man's against them. It is said several of their nomadic tribes live peaceably under their tents within the jurisdiction of Hebron.

In going down to the valley of Jordan a very high mountain, whose precipitous brow overlooks the plain below, tradition says is the hill of temptation where Christ fasted 40 days and was tempted of the devil. A chapel has been built upon its height and caves have been excavated in its sides by holy men. It was among the mountains of Engedi that David fled from the persecutions of Saul and hid himself in a cave. On the direction of St. Saba, is a lonely mosque, called Nibbi Monsa," where the Moslems affirm Moses was buried, in opposition to scriptural testimony. It is said to contain a catafalque of Moses, gorgeously covered with green silk enriched with gold, and is visited by pilgrims from all parts of the Turkish Empire.

The waters of the Dead Sea burst upon us from the summit of the mountains as we began to descend into the valley by a pass so steep and narrow as to appear frightful. We rode toward the sea surrounded by a most desolate region, like a sandy desert spread out before us, without a green shrub or tree to relieve the eye from the rays of the sun pouring with intense brightness over the plain. A hazy atmosphere concealed the mountains of Moab, whose outlines we could faintly discern, rising high along the opposite shore of the Dead Sea and forming a perspective against the sky. There, again, the voice of God was heard in the dashing of the waves against the shore, where his wrath was made known in the destruction of those cities; and these solitudes are only broken by the funeral dirge of the wave whose dying anthem is still borne upon the breeze in pensive strains. The waters of this sea are extremely salt and disagreeable to the taste. Some of our party who bathed in them found the specific gravity so great that they could not sink and could sit upright. We rode through the plain, which looked like a sandy desert, though the earth appeared hard as if its surface had been washed by salt water and dried in the sun. We reached the banks of the Jordan, whose stream runs with great rapidity and empties into the Dead Sea. Its waters, like those of the Nile, resemble in color our Mississippi. Its banks toward its entrance are deep and precipitous, and its shores higher up are bordered with a rich foliage of the willow, whose boughs dip in the stream. The acacia, tamarind, oleander and wild grape, thorns, bulrushes and cane grow luxuriantly along its stream. These thickets are the habitations of the jackal and other wild animals: "Behold," says Jeremiah, "he shall come up like a lion from the swellings of Jordan against the inhabitants of the strong." There, in this stream, was wrought the miracle of Elisha raising an axe, which had fallen to its surface. Indeed the sight of its waters, hallowed by the most sacred associations of many miracles wrought by divine power through the agencies of the prophets, as recorded in the holy scriptures, was calculated to create an interest unlike any other river in the world. And among its most sacred associations is the important event of the baptism of our Savior, when heaven opened and the Holy Spirit, like a dove, descended and rested upon him, while was heard a voice saying, "This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased." Not far from where we stood did the prophets Elijah and Elisha pass over the waters, which were divided by the touch of Elijah's mantle, and they walked on together in communings until the horses and chariots of fire parted them both asunder and Elijah went up to heaven in a whirlwind. We drank of the waters, which were pleasant, and were grateful for the privilege of looking upon a stream possessed of so many divine remembrances for contemplation as recorded by the inspired writers of the holy scriptures to make us wise unto salvation and eternal life.

We started from this place to rest at Jericho while the sun was setting behind the lofty hills of Judea, which tower above the plains in sublime grandeur. We drank at the stream which flows from the rocks bordering the plain, of which the prophets of old thank, and at which the disciples of Jesus, and perhaps Jesus himself, quenched their thirst also, when on their way from Jerusalem to Jericho. We had an additional guard at this place—a Sheik from the Dead Sea and another from Jericho making a formidable party against the wild Arabs of these mountain passes: some with spears and lances going before, others in the rear. Nothing can appear more graceful and fleet than these Arabs upon their horses; they seem to skim over the ground like birds in the air, while their turbans and flowing drapery float in the wind, adding grace and beauty to all their movements. They know how to manage a horse and sit with ease upon him.

Our tents were struck in the fields of Jericho, for there are no ruins to tell where the city

London, June 28, 18

Mr Editor:—It may be of interest to readers to learn something of the manner of conducting business in the House of Commons. The building itself was intended to be the finest in the kingdom, and from the [illegible] presence every imposing appearance [illegible] Hither [illegible] Hall of Westminster, to which, in [illegible] his decorative [illegible]. It is necessary to [illegible] order from a member to enter the House of Commons. You pass through Westminster Hall, the finest hall in the world, and [illegible] one of the most deeply interesting [illegible] associations. You walk directly over the [illegible] where Burke stood when he impeached Warren Hastings, where Cromwell was installed Lord Protector, clothed in purple and gold, where the first Charles was condemned, and the seven Bishops were justly acquitted amid the [illegible] of the multitude. The Hall is quite [illegible] long, 68 feet wide and 110 feet high, with [illegible] pillar to support it. After winding through many passages and up a number of [illegible] stairways I found myself in the gallery of the House. The subject of discussion was the "India Bill," which was being bitterly opposed by the opposition, headed by Lord Palmerston. The appearance of the House, as a body, is by no means impressive. As you are aware the members sit with their hats on, seldom taking them off except when rising to address the speaker, who is, at present, a large man with a monstrous wig, well suited to frighten the timid into something like propriety. There is no eloquence in the House of Commons. The speaking is very plain, but practical and pointed, the speaker addressing himself to the subject at once, and without any flourish of trumpets. Whenever a member begins to wander or to speak to an irrelevant question he is immediately cried down. An amusing illustration of this occurred at the moment of my entrance. A member was addressing the House in a very earnest manner, as he thought upon the India Bill, but as others thought upon some other subject. Both his own party and the opposition instantly began to cry out "question! question!" at the very top of their voices. But the speaker seemed to think he was there to make that speech, and make it he would. On he went, amid cries and shouts and yells, with hands uplifted, and cheeks all flushed for the space of a quarter of an hour, when he suddenly paused. "Mr. Speaker," said he, "I will not detain the House a little longer, but merely to say that I am [illegible] without any of the qualities of a speaker." He stammered and halted and finally sat down, to the satisfaction of at least one looker on in the gallery. He was followed by Lord Palmerston, who, for about ten minutes, poured hot shot into the ranks of the ministry. He was the best speaker of the evening, very direct and, at times, very bitter, exposing in a forcible manner, the defects of the bill before the House. As the final vote was not to be taken the evening, D'Israeli was not present. There is very poor accommodation for strangers in the House, there being but one gallery, which holds about seventy-five persons. The speaker's gallery will not hold more than half that number. When all the members are in attendance about one-third of them have to sit up stairs, which gives rise to much inconvenience in case of a division. They have neither desk nor table before them, and those who wish to take notes during a debate must use their hats for that purpose. Each seat is constructed so as to hold sixteen members, there are five tiers of seats and four rows of tiers on the floor of the House, seating only 320 members, out of more than 600. There are few young men in the Commons, and yet business is dispatched more rapidly than with us; one reason for this being, as we have already intimated, that no member is allowed to speak, unless he has something to say.

Amid all the pomp and pageantry which meets you about the Houses of Parliament, it is quite refreshing to notice the tributes of respect and admiration paid, perhaps unconsciously, to the great Commoners. On entering St Stephens Hall, directly in your way to the House, you see before you the statues of Grattan and Burke, of Pitt and Fox, of Selden and Somers and John Hampden! Of the twelve figures in that Hall eleven were Commoners, all sprung directly from the people. What a commentary upon a government which looks to the people as the chief prop of the State!

JOHN McVEA

THE WAY TO EMINENCE

Long ago a little boy was entered at Harrow school. He was put into a class beyond his years, and where all the scholars had the advantage of previous instruction denied to him. His master chid him for his dullness, and all his efforts there could not raise him from the lowest place in the form. But, nothing daunted, he procured the grammars and other elementary books which his class fellows had gone through in previous terms. He devoted the hours of play, and not a few of the hours of sleep, to the mastering of these; till, in a few weeks, he gradually began to rise, and it was not long till he shot far ahead of all his companions, and became not only leader of the division, but the pride of Harrow. You may see the statue of that boy, whose career began with this fit of energetic application, in St. Paul's Cathedral, London; for he lived to be the greatest Oriental scholar of modern Europe—it was Sir William Jones.

WEDDING RINGOLOGY

As most of us [illegible] have a fourth finger, and that [illegible] to be called upon, [illegible] of its already [illegible] service, it is worth while [illegible] the marrying on the subject. The digitus impudicus is the fourth finger on the left hand. Why this particular digit should have received the token of honor and trust [illegible] and at its [illegible] congeners, both in Pagan and Christian times, has been variously interpreted. The most common explanation is according to Thos Browne, "presuming therein that a peculiar nerve, vein, or artery, is conferred thereto from the heart;" which due [illegible] communication, Browne shows to be anatomically incorrect. Macrobius gives another reason, as wild many perhaps satisfy those anatomists who are not satisfied with the above. "It has," he says, "ex thesauli," whose offices and general weakness are sufficiently indicated from its Latin derivative pollex, and from its Greek equivalent antichein, which means "to grasp hard;" as too busy to be set apart for any [illegible] employment; the [illegible] to the primary finger but half protected, and that scarcely [illegible] having other work to do, is also ineligible; the opprobrium attaching to the middle finger, called medicus, puts it entirely out of the question; and as the little finger stands exposed, and is moreover too puny to enter the lists on such a contest, the sponsal honors devolve, naturally on proximus, the wedding finger." In the British Apollo, 1788, it is urged that the fourth finger was chosen from its being not only less used than either of the rest, but more capable of preserving a ring from injury—having this one quality peculiar to itself, that it cannot be extended but in company with some other finger, whereas the rest may be stretched out to their full length and straightness.

[illegible] SUNDAY SCHOOL SECRETARY.

[illegible] Advocate speaks thus of Dr [illegible] the cause he represents:—"Dr [illegible] under efficient service, we trust, to [illegible] enterprise of the Church: both [illegible] the cause of Sunday Schools; [illegible] funds to supply them with the needful for their success and per- [illegible] We commend him and the cause he [illegible] the sympathy and co-operation of [illegible] necessity for this agency, and [illegible] united and liberal support of [illegible] promoting its objects, may be [illegible] stated to the General Conference, that the contributions [illegible] Church, during the four years [illegible] to the Publishing House, for the [illegible] Sunday School books, amounted [illegible] small sum of fourteen hundred [illegible] dollars! MAHOMET.

Slightly above the middle size, his figure, though [illegible], was handsome and commanding; the [illegible] head and open, the bones and frame- [illegible] the joints well knit together. His neck was long and finely moulded. The head, [illegible] large, gave space for a broad and noble brow. The hair, thick, jet black, and slightly [illegible], fell down over his ears; the eye-brows were arched and joined. The countenance was [illegible] ruddy. His large eyes, intensely black and piercing, received additional [illegible] from their long dark eyelashes. The nose was [illegible], and slightly aquiline, but fine, and of the [illegible] attenuated. The teeth were far apart. A long black bushy beard, reaching to the breast, added manliness and presence. His expression was pensive and contemplative. The face beamed with intelligence, though something of the sensuous also might be there discerned. The skin of his body was clear and soft; the only hair that met the eye was a fine thin line which ran down from the neck toward the navel. His broad back leaned slightly forward as he walked; and his step was hasty, yet sharp and decided, like that of one rapidly descending a [illegible]. There was something unsettled in [illegible] restless shot eye, which refused to rest upon its object. When he turned toward you, it was [illegible] partially but with the whole body.

OFFICE HOLDERS.

The [illegible] effect of the proximity of the [illegible] Capitol to the adjacent Commonwealth, may be observed upon inspection of the pay rolls of the different departments at Washington. One hundred and seventeen clerks claim citizenship in the "Old Dominion," at an aggregate salary of $166,850. Three hundred and eighty-three belong to the District of Columbia, receiving $325,513 per annum. Eighty-three are natives of Maryland, at an annual salary of $118,780. One hundred claim allegiance to the same State that the President does, Pennsylvania, receiving $149,780 annually. No other State is credited to the amount of $100,000, and none others are so unreliable and doubtful in political position.

BROTHERLY KINDNESS.

It is taught in the Holy Scriptures. The inspired genius of the poet-king, in language as beautiful as his theme, and in strains as musical as the spiritual harmony he celebrates, has pictured before us "how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." The beloved disciple has most convincingly instructed us that if we love not our brother, whom we have seen, it is mockery to profess love for God whom we have never seen.—Among the most earnest and impressive of the charges given by the Blessed Savior, in those pensive discourses which occupied the last hours before he was taken away from his disciples, was the one which made it the greatest duty of brethren to love one another, as he had loved them. In the inventory of graces and virtues set forth by St. Paul as entering into the mature christian character, "brotherly kindness" is placed next in order below "charity," which is the highest spiritual attainment, and "the bond of perfectness."

Brotherly kindness is to brotherly love, what the sunshine is to the sun—its out-beaming, its expression, its outward life. If the sun can exist without shining, then those professed christians who manifest no brotherly kindness, may nevertheless possess brotherly love. Or, as the sun is sometimes hid from sight by dense clouds for many days; so some christians who outwardly manifest no brotherly kindness, may excuse themselves under the plea that God has given them a spiritually cloudy instead of a spiritually transparent organization, and that therefore they are unable to make the brotherly love of their hearts shine forth as brotherly kindness in their lives. Such spiritual and social opacity, however, is a great misfortune.

THE TELEGRAPH CABLE LAID!

Just as we were going to press we got hold of the Evening Delta containing the following telegraphic dispatch, from St. Johns, N. F. dated to day, (Thursday): "The U. S. steam-frigate Niagara, and her consort, the British steamer Gorgon, arrived off Trinity Bay yesterday, having successfully laid her portion of the Trans-Atlantic cable.

The telegraphic communication with the Agamemnon, which has not yet reached the coast of Ireland, is perfect, and messages are passing through the whole length of the line every fifteen minutes.

The end of the cable will be landed from the Niagara to-day."

This certainly settles the question of transmission, even if some accident should yet happen. We think, however, that success is certain. We shall live more in an hour hereafter than in a week heretofore. May the success of this great enterprise be sanctified to the peace and salvation of the world.

HEALTH OF THE CITY.

A VISIT TO THE HOSPITAL.

The yellow fever has increased considerably of late. Seventy deaths were reported for the week ending Friday, July 30. From that time until last Thursday morning, there were upwards of fifty deaths in the Charity Hospital. On Tuesday last twenty eight yellow fever cases were admitted into that institution; Wednesday, but fourteen were admitted; and a still smaller number on Thursday. Whether it will be epidemic or not cannot be determined.

It is of a moderately mild type. Even among the hospital cases, who are generally poor, ill-fed, ill-clothed, ill-lodged, and dissipated Irish and Germans, who are sick from three to four days before they enter the hospital, from one half to two thirds are being cured.

It is almost wholly confined to the levee portion of the Third District, and, to the shipping and foreign population in that region. The American population, indeed, the better classes generally, have little or no fever among them. In fact, with the exception of that one region, and that particular class, the city is remarkably healthy. The leading physicians of the city have but little practice, and hardly any yellow fever at all. There is but little in private practice any where, and never have we seen a healthier looking, less debilitated, population, at this season of the year, than that of New Orleans.

In company with Dr. Austin, on last Wednesday, we visited the Charity Hospital, a noble and humane institution, supported by the state. Among all the cases, there was not a single American. About two thirds were getting well. Thirteen had died the day and night before—twelve men and one woman—a suggestive fact as to proportion. Side by side the silent sleepers lay in the "dead house," waiting for burial, or to be taken by their friends, simply wrapped in hospital sheets. An Englishman's wife came, with wringing hands, and moanings sad to hear, to kiss the disfigured lips and face of her departed husband.

In one ward, a woman was sick with yellow fever, and had a young infant, the husband and father having died the night before. In another place we found a poor Malay, with the yellow fever, who had thrown up a little black vomit, but who still bade fair to get well. Another man was throwing up black vomit, groaning fearfully, and dying. Another man had black vomit, and it was uncertain with the physician whether he would live or die. Another man had black vomit, and was out of danger. Some poor fellows, when the Doctor informed them that they had remittent instead of yellow fever, manifested great relief of mind.

Eight or ten young medical students, unacclimated, we found bravely busy throughout all the wards, risking every thing for the sake of their profession. We could not help invoking the blessing of God upon such courageous young men. Preachers, soldiers and doctors must go where duty calls, without turning aside for danger.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW

The Quarterly Review of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is now in its twelfth volume. Two of the ablest and most honored men in the connection have been its editors. Bascom has been removed from earthly responsibilities, and Doggett, after eight years' service, chooses more exclusive devotion to the regular work of the itinerancy. Dr. Summers, in addition to his already too arduous labors, as General Book Editor, has now the editorship of the Quarterly. An almost unanimous conviction in the General Conference of his fitness for the office, together with the prevalent desire to reduce expenses by saving the salary of another editorship, were the reasons which induced the imposition of this double charge.

At the recent session, a majority, we believe, of the delegates came up with a foregone determination to discontinue the Quarterly, in consequence of its limited circulation, and consequent inability to pay its way. It cannot be disguised, however, that another reason for this determination was largely manifest, namely: the absence of a proper appreciation of the value of such a periodical, both to the reputation, scholarly culture and intellectual life of the church, and especially of the ministry. The friends of the Quarterly were able to save it only by a compromise, to the effect that if it did not obtain, by the first of January next, a paying circulation sufficient to sustain it, estimated at two thousand cash subscribers, it should be discontinued. Thus, the whole church perfectly understands the condition upon which its life is suspended. What we do must be done quickly. It is therefore incumbent upon all, preachers, brethren, and friends, who have a just conception of the value of the Review, and of the importance of sustaining it, to act promptly and vigorously, each one without reference to another, as though the matter depended upon him alone.

"What is every body's business is no body's business." It is a great pity that our connectionalism, so valuable in most respects, should unfortunately be so abused as to work to the injury of many of our most important interests. Yet, in these modern times, such is the falling in of godly zeal among many of our preachers and people, that such is the case, in many things. Whenever a Methodist preacher fails to feel that every interest of the church depends upon his own personal exertions, he had better—repent, or locate.

To discontinue the Quarterly would be far more injurious to the reputation of Southern Methodism than many imagine. Every leading church in the land has such a periodical, many of them not half so strong, numerically and pecuniarily as we are. It would be a public official admission that Southern Methodists, and the Southern people, have not sufficient taste and culture to delight in and sustain the higher grades of periodical literature. It is already a known fact, that, while newspapers flourish in the United States much more than in Europe, quarterlies are much better sustained there than here, proving, as Europeans contend, their superiority in the number of their cultivated and studious men. While this is not true to the extent they claim, the discontinuance of our Quarterly would make it appear much more true than it now does. And it would be argued that not only is American literary taste and culture much inferior to that of Europe, but that in the South it is more inferior than any where else, and that Southern Methodism has deteriorated in this regard since its disconnection with the North.

The importance of the Quarterly Review to the self-culture of that large body of our preachers, who, in early life, are not blessed with the higher educational and literary advantages, cannot be exaggerated. Access to that kind of periodical literature is absolutely indispensable to them. Without the Quarterly, those who, unfortunately, have not sufficient aspiration in that direction, would content themselves to remain as they are—ignorant of the current thought, sentiment, and criticism which enter into the intellectual life, and form the mental and moral standards, of the time—and without the refinement and power necessary to the highest acceptability and usefulness. On the other hand, those who would have such mental aliment, would seek it elsewhere, and, without the safe guide to the judgment to be found in their own, would be liable to be wrongly moulded, in political, philosophic, and spiritual views and principles, by the periodical literature of other schools and other countries.

The last number of our Quarterly, the first one edited by Dr. Summers, gives reason for much encouragement. It is out in good time, and the prospect is that it will appear regularly, in better time, hereafter. This promptitude is almost marvelous; when we remember that Dr. Summers had not a single contribution on hand when the General Conference closed, and that his hands were already full with his other duties. The contents, too, are appropriate, and interesting, and of quite a popular cast.

The first, and most able and elaborate article, on "German Philosophy," by Rev. Dr. W. J. Sasnett, of Oxford, Ga., gives quite a rational account of the causes, characteristics, evils, and benefits, of the literature and philosophy of Germany. Many of his views are striking, and the whole will be read with interest.

The "Use and Abuse of the Pulpit," we judge to be by the Editor. It is a most timely and appropriate paper, and should be read by every Methodist preacher in the land.

The "Power of the Press" is from the pen of Rev. Dr. McFerrin, and is in his happiest and most characteristic style.

"Popular Education" is from our brother of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. McAnally, and, for its brevity, contains a vast amount of information, and gives evidence of very large and patient research.

"The Fourth General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," gives a clear and concise view of the important acts of the late session, and those who have been asking the question, "what did the General Conference do?" will here find it satisfactorily answered. The "Bishops' Address" follows, and then the "Pastoral Address of the General Conference." And then come "The Reports on Education" adopted by the late General Conference. The "Brief Reviews" and "Biblical, Literary, and Religious Miscellanies," are full, and in the Editor's best style.

As a sort of help to a right public opinion in reference to the standard of learnedness which should obtain in the Quarterly, about which there is so much difference of opinion among Methodist preachers, we append the following remarks from a writer in the Southern Christian Advocate. He says: "Observed one, who had previous affinity for high-churchism, "What a spanking review of Henkle's Primitive Episcopacy, a complete prostration in my mind, of the high places of high-churchism—an end to me of the succession." "A great article is that in your Review, on the Jesuits," remarked to me, one of Carolina's ripest scholars. "That article on the Huguenots from one of their descendants in the last number," said one just risen from its perusal, "is itself worth the subscription price of the book." "What a masterly periodical your church possesses in that 'Review,'" said a critic well known to fame, "but, I fear, it is too far above the grade of intellect of your people for it to be supported."

"Methodist people, forbid that such be the case. Self-respect, love for learning, zeal for religion, all, incite you to redoubled effort for the existence of the Review."

This writer thinks the Review might attain a rank even higher than that attained under the scholarly editorship of Dr. Doggett, "were the means at command to remunerate first class writers, or would these occasionally, con amore, advance the interests of the Review by a contribution from the well filled storehouse of their minds. The scholar has not often silver or gold at command for the cause of religion or learning, but he has the untold riches of the mind, which he is as much bound to be willing to distribute, as the moneyed man his dollars and cents—one is not less excusable than the other, for not giving freely of his abundance. Many of our literary men seem too much disposed to consider that in literature, it is more blessed to receive than give."

MEMORIES OF THE FATHERS.

Bishop Andrew, in the Southern Christian Advocate, speaks in terms of warm commendation of the "Sketches of Itinerant Ministers," recently published by our Publishing House at Nashville. It will have, we trust, a very large sale. The Bishop says: "I remember how when I was a boy I used to sit for hours and listen to my venerable father, as he talked of revolutionary scenes of war and bloodshed in which he had been an actor.

With similar feelings I have sat and listened to the simple story of the early pioneers of Methodism in these broad lands—men who laid all on the altar of God, and dedicated life and health and strength and all they possessed, to the great work of planting the pure doctrines of the gospel amidst the mountains and valleys and plains of this great country. They marked out the way for us and made the rough places smooth. Many of them have gone down to the grave unhonored and unsung, and quietly rests their dust in some old field or obscure grave, and no stone tells to passers by the name of the christian hero whose sacred dust sleeps beneath.

Cherishing, as I do, these views, it is with feelings of high gratification that I have perused the volume referred to. I regard it as the first instalment of a debt due to the memories of our sainted fathers, and a pledge that other volumes filled up with like precious memorials, will follow in proper succession; for there yet remain scores of worthy men whose history if properly told will yet thrill many thousands.

Would that some competent pen would give us a truthful picture of that great man, George Dougherty. I have heard from some of the old Methodists marvelous accounts of his pulpit ability and power. He must have been one of the greatest preachers the Palmetto State ever produced. He died I think in Wilmington, N. C. I recollect to have seen him at my father's house in Georgia, when I was a little boy, and have now a vivid impression of his appearance at that time. He had but one eye, and wore a blue coat, rather the worse for wear, and a slouched hat. It was the first and last time I ever saw him.

And then there was James Russell, one of the most remarkable men of the age in which he lived; and Hope Hull, emphatically a man of power; and Anthony Senter, from whom I learned more of church discipline in a few months in Charleston, than I had learned in as many years elsewhere; and Bishop Capers' great friend, evidently a man of might in his day, Abram Gassawny; and my dear old friend, Sam'l Dunwody; then, turning west there was Barnabas McHenry, a giant in his day, and Samuel Barker, and Learner Blackman, all men of note, and men whose record now, if properly given, would be intensely interesting. These named are but a few of the long list of worthies of the former days, of whom we have as yet very imperfect memorials.

But we should not only like to see brief sketches of the lives of the holy and self-sacrificing itinerants of the older time, but there were not a few laymen and local preachers of that day who mightily helped in the promotion of the cause of God. Some of these well deserve a place in such a picture. Upon the whole we repeat the wish that this work may for many years come forth an interesting and profitable annual, to instruct and animate the church in her great work of evangelizing the world.

JUDGE COLEMAN'S COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS, at the recent examination of Centenary Institute, Alabama, was unintentionally omitted in our notice of week before last. An Alabama gentleman, who has called our attention to the omission, says it was highly creditable to the orator.

REVIVAL INTELLIGENCE.

CITRONELLE, ALABAMA CONFERENCE

REV. A. V. LE VERT writes that a meeting had been in progress at Citronelle from the 10th to the 23d, and would probably continue a week or two longer. A previously cold church had been much revived, and quite a number had been converted and added to the church. Bro. Le Vert speaks quite hopefully of the prospects of the work in that region.

NEWBERNE, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

REV. J. W. MCCANN writes us that Rev. Mr. Henderson was carrying on a meeting of considerable interest at Newberne, Ala. Five had already been converted. Rev. Dr. Harmon, formerly of this city, was preaching there with much satisfaction to the people.

WARSAW, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

REV. W. C. HEARN writes: We have just closed a protracted meeting at this place, which has been progressing for ten days. The Lord was with us in great mercy and power. Twenty-two professed faith in Jesus, and rejoiced with the love of God in their hearts. The church generally revived. Bless the Lord, our God. Brothers C. C. Galloway, Hood and Stone of Alabama Conference, and brother Sharer of M. P. Church rendered good service.

GENEVA CIRCUIT, ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

REV. R. D. CARVER says in a letter that the Lord has graciously revived his work on that circuit. The third quarterly meeting, held at Pleasant Hill, was continued for twelve days and nights, attended by manifestations of divine power never before witnessed in that section. The church was greatly blessed—thirty-one persons professed saying faith in Christ, and forty-five whites, and twenty-two blacks were received into the church on probation—sixty-seven in all. The P. E., Rev. A. S. Dickinson, rendered valuable assistance, as also did other ministers. The old custom of retiring to the woods in a body to pray—the men in one direction, and the women in another—was adopted, and, at one time, on their return from a glorious out-door prayer meeting, such was the outpouring of the Holy Spirit that no regular service could be held.

WARREN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. P. G. GREEN writes us of some most gracious visitations of the saving power of God on his circuit. At Bethel, assisted by Rev. Dr. Drake, whose preaching, as well as that of the other circuit preacher, was attended with unusual power, a meeting commenced on the 2d and closed on the 7th of July, at which thirteen white persons were added to the church. At a private house, during family worship, the Holy Spirit descended, every unconverted person present was converted, and several of the negroes out in the yard.

At Bogue Sha, seven miles distant, another meeting was commenced on the 16th, and continued till the 22nd. They had a glorious time—the church was revived—old difficulties were settled—many were converted—and eighteen added to the church.

The mission part of the work is doing well. Seven colored congregations are preached to, and are large and attentive. More could be preached to, if week-day preaching could be made available. Many of them have been converted, and some forty have joined the church. But many of the blacks in that country are not preached to, over which brother Green very sadly laments.

NEW CHURCH IN TALLADEGA, ALA.

REV. B. B. ROSS writes, July 27: Our new church in this place was dedicated on Sabbath last. Sermon by Rev. Dr. Neely in his usual thrilling and eloquent style. One good brother remarked that "the Lord Jesus was all through it." This is the highest compliment that could be paid to a sermon by a minister of Christ. On announcing that a debt of $500 yet remained on the building the congregation raised in cash and subscriptions $533. A noble collection, considering the pressure of other claims this year. To God be all the praise. At night after sermon by the same brother $87 were raised for the Book and Tract Depository cause.

SAN MARCOS, TEXAS CONFERENCE.

REV. I. H. COX, in a private letter, says: "We have recently had fifty conversions, and expect a still more gracious revival."

MEADVILLE CIRCUIT, MISS. CONFERENCE.

REV. H. M. YOUNGLOOD, writes: I have some glorious news for the friends of our Zion. We closed a glorious meeting on Sunday last, at old Sharon Church, in Amite county, at which we have had some twelve or fifteen conversions, that we know of and perhaps several more that escaped our notice, upwards of twenty backsliders were reclaimed. Several persons were enabled to claim the blessing of perfect love; among them one of our itinerant preachers who was present, seventeen whites and eight blacks joined the Church, making twenty-five in all. This my dear brother, is what I call a revival. There is a very great difference between a revival and a mere excitement, or even a season of refreshing to the membership. We sometimes see announcements of great revivals, and that so many joined the Church but not a word about the conversions, reclamations, or sanctifications.

A MALE NUN.

For the last forty years, in the quiet old tumble-down city of Versailles, inhabited by decayed Legitimist families, a lady dressed in the garb of a semimonastic style was known to pursue the even tenor of her way, received into the local circles of aristocracy, and in receipt from a noble family of 6,000 francs annuity, as ex-abbess of a suppressed monastery. At her death this week she turns out to be a man. The real abbess must have died in emigration, and a swindler of the rougher sex getting her papers has personated her for nearly half a century. The name of the deceased androgyne was Countess de Solège de Lange. The matter makes no noise: people only shrug up their shoulders.

The cottage where Robert Burns was born has been converted into a beer shop.

LETTER FROM REV. H. H. MONTGOMERY.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi Annual Conference.

Brethren: Since the election of Bro. Abbey to the Financial Secretaryship of the Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South, the Bishop has appointed me to the Agency of the Book and Tract Society of our conference.

Having looked a little into the condition of affairs, I think it best to address you in reference to some things connected with it.

1. This is your Society, and your Depository. You must sustain both in their united operations—the great aim being to circulate good, moral and religious literature. I hope, then, that all disposition to find fault or predict evil will at once be given up. We must be united in this work, or our energies will be crippled, our efforts circumscribed, and our success very limited.

Let every preacher do some thing to sustain our Depository—then we shall succeed and do good.

2. Previous to last March our books were received from Dr. Hamilton, and our operations were under his general supervision. Since the adoption of the plan for Depositories by the late General Conference, Dr. H. has visited us and made arrangements for us to take the stock furnished by him, and now in the Depository. This, with other stock recently received, gives us a stock of from $10,000 to $12,000 of books, tracts and stationary.

3. We now want your united efforts in getting this stock into circulation. As we expect to reduce the price of some books, and want money to help us, we shall make it to the interest of every one to send the cash with his order.

4. We are in want of funds; and appeal to every preacher to take collections and forward to us as soon as practible. Yes, we want every preacher to do this. Not less than five dollars can be raised by each—and others can raise sums much larger. No one will be hurt by these collections—none will be poorer—you will the more certainly receive your own claim. Will you try? My brother, remember, it is for your Society, your Depository. Then you will sustain your own interests.

"But why do you appeal to us for money now?"

Well, I will tell you! 1. We are in debt to the Parent Tract Society, and ought to pay up. 2. We have given away a large amount of books to the poor, and need something to pay for them. 3. As Bro. Abbey spent most of his time last year in obtaining subscribers to the capital stock, but little was raised as contributions to the Society out of which the expenses of our Society and Depository could be paid. The subscriptions and notes of share holders do not mature generally, before November next, others run to March 1859. About $23,000 in subscriptions and notes were obtained. But we are now needing funds. And if we meet our obligations we must have them soon. Until the share holders pay in their subscriptions we must appeal to you in this way. I shall hope to have a ready and substantial response from you soon.

I trust that subscribers will forward their money so soon as due. This will be to their interest. They will then be entitled to the GENEALOGICAL BIBLE. This Bible is expected on in August. Perhaps more soon.

Yours in the work,

H. H. MONTGOMERY, Agent.

REV. J. E. CARNES.

By the last few numbers of the Texas Christian Advocate, we learn that the new editor has arrived, and assumed his charge. He makes a promising beginning. Under his control, we have no doubt, the Texas paper will continue, increasingly, to prosper, and to promote the interests of Methodism in the broad and fair land which it serves. We welcome our brother, and congratulate him upon his auspicious reception, and commencement of his work. Our interest in him, and in the success of his paper, he will readily understand, cannot be exceeded by that of any other friend. Methodism in Texas is a much larger and more important department of the interests of our church than is generally imagined by those outside of her bounds. Indeed, it is well if any of us properly appreciate the immense prospect before us there, to be realized or marred, according as it is appreciated by those concerned. But we are too full of these thoughts about Texas, and too much in the habit of tracing them out on paper, to trust our pen further. We rejoice, for the sake of Texas, and also for the sake of the taste, style and power of Methodist journalism, that Mr. Carnes was chosen for his present post. He and his paper receive no heartier God-speed than this one from New Orleans.

ROMANISM IN THE UNITED STATES.

In 1808, fifty years ago, there were about 7,000,000 of people in the United States mostly Protestants in name. There were at that time but 1 Romish Diocese, 2 Bishops, 58 Priests, 30 Churches, 2 Ecclesiastical Institutions, 2 Female Academies, and 1 College in the whole land. Now in 1858, we have 41 Dioceses, 39 Bishops, 1,872 Priests, 2,053 Churches, 35 Ecclesiastical Institutions, 29 incorporated Colleges, 134 Female Academies, and 20 Colleges not incorporated, and a Catholic population estimated at 4,000,000. Besides its other means of answering its interests, the Papal church in this country has 18 weekly newspapers conducted in French, German and English. It will be seen from these statistics that the ratio of the increase of the Papal body has greatly exceeded the ratio of the increase of the population. While the whole population is only four times as large as it was fifty years ago, the Romish Priests have increased to twenty-five times number in 1808.

REV. JAMES MCLEON, of the Texas Conference, recently and happily married, has, in a mysterious dispensation of providence, lost his wife. God be merciful to our dear old friend, and comfort him in his bereavement.

RETRIBUTION.

It will be recollected by most of our readers that the South Western Baptist, a few years since made most strenuous, persistent, and unjust efforts to persuade Methodists that they were down-trodden, priest-ridden, and despotically governed people—entirely under the irresistible control of the episcopacy and clergy—and that it was their duty to their church and country to nullify, revolutionize, and overturn things generally. He failed, however, most signally.

The following extract from that paper illustrates the scripture, "that with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged, and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again:"

"The last Tennessee Baptist confirms all our worst apprehensions. Messrs. Graves, Dayton and Pendleton, editors of that sheet, clearly indicate their determination to effect a division of the denomination, if they can. In an editorial of considerable length, in which Mr. Graves ostensibly gives an account of his recent trip to Kentucky, he takes occasion to allude to a trial now pending in the Walnut Street Baptist Church Louisville, Ky., between their pastor, Dr. Everts, and elder S. H. Ford, editor of the "Christian Repository," in which he "supposes" elder Ford to be found innocent, and yet "excluded" from the church—that Kentucky Baptists would at once take sides, and a general rupture would be the result! To this case he "supposes" another."

The case alluded to in the last line is that of Mr. Graves himself, who, with Mr. Dayton, is about to be brought to trial, when, the Western Baptist supposes, they will cause a split in the denomination. We take no advantage of these difficulties in the Baptist church—we do not—we never did—attack that church. We merely call attention to the above evidence, and add that, as we predicted long ago, such difficulties would follow the course of such men as Graves and Henderson.

PRIMITIVE METHODISTS.

A correspondent of the Methodist Protestant says that this Church commenced about forty years ago, and was indirectly originated by the eccentric Lorenzo Dow, who, during his visit to England, introduced camp-meetings. After Mr. Dow's return to America, Hugh Bourne and William Clews, two zealous local preachers belonging to the Wesleyan Church, determined to graft the camp-meeting on British Methodism; this was resisted by the authorities of the Wesleyan Conference; and the issue was that Bourne and Clews quietly withdrew and began to build on a foundation of their own. Omitting the Primitives, all other Methodist off-shoots have fewer members than when they left the parent stock.

THAT "STAMPEDE."

The Bulletin of this city having published a statement that there had "been within a few months past quite a stampede in the German Methodist Churches in New Orleans, and vicinity, towards Swedenborgianism," the True Witness remarks that it knew of nothing to justify such a statement, although aware of the defection of one of the German preachers, and then calls upon the Advocate for information. In reply, we have to say that the first impression of the True Witness is correct. The preacher fell away to Swedenborginism, and took a few persons with him, and but very few of them could be called a loss.

The Society for the Encouragement of Science, Letters, and Arts, at Milan, has, in accordance with the report of its committee, adjudged to Dr. Edwin Lee, M. R. C. S., England, the prize of 600 livres, as the author of the best essay on the subject, "What are the really useful applications in physiology, psychology, and therapeutics, that are to be expected from the investigations undertaken into the phenomena of animal magnetism."

REV. G. W. CARTER, of the Virginia Conference, has been elected to the Chair of Intellectual and Moral Philosophy in the University of Mississippi, at Oxford. We were about to congratulate Mr. Carter, but really we must congratulate Mississippi and the Southwest. But at the same time, we condole with Virginia and the itinerancy. He is an excellent and valuable man any where.

The Southern Bank at Bainbridge, Ga., closed.—The Bainbridge Argus of the 21st ult. says: We have been informed by the acting cashier of this bank that every dollar in this bank had been paid out, and the vaults are now minus of either specie or bills on other banks. He consequently closed doors on Monday, and left in the stage on Monday night.

Health of Mobile.—The Mobile Tribune, of the 27th, (yesterday,) says: Notwithstanding the intense heat Mobile is unusually healthy. Last week there were only fourteen deaths, and not one from fever of any kind. Five were young children—one still-born—and two may be said to be from old age.

The New York Sunday Atlas says that the famous (or infamous) John Eckel has married the Mrs. Cunningham, and that they are now living together, as of old, in New York city. Eckel is proprietor of a fat melting establishment, which has recently been indicted as a nuisance.

HONORARY.—Rev. H. N. McTyeire has received the degree of D. D. from Emory College, Ga., in addition to the same honor from Florence Wesleyan University. Rev. W. J. Sasnett, of Georgia, has received the degree of D. D. from Centenary College, La.

Col. Fuller, late editor of the New York Mirror, it is said, has been engaged as the regular American correspondent of the London Illustrated News.

It is estimated that the damage done to the new Customhouse in Mobile, by the fire on Sunday night, is about $10,000.

The Columbus (Ga.) Times, of the 28th inst., reports the crops in that neighborhood flourishing.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

AN INTERESTING DISCOVERY.

We see it stated that thirty thousand Christians have recently been found upon an island north of Celebes. It has been rumored for a time that there was there a Christian people, forgotten and forsaken, which, however, yet possessed three Bibles, and continued steadfast in the faith. When missionaries first landed on the island, they met with a school teacher and his pupils, who repented in the Malayan tongue, "As the heart panteth after the waterbrooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O Lord."

No Bibles were found, but the most precious promises of the Bible written upon the bark of trees. They knew the Apostles' Creed, and the Heidelberg Catechism, and had Christian customs. Twenty churches and schools yet existed. Through the instrumentality of pastor Heldring, founder of the Magdalen Asylum at Steenbeck, and chief patron of Inner Missions in Holland, four missionaries, who had been educated under the venerable Gossner, were sent out, and three thousand persons baptized.

This is certainly a most interesting discovery. The island on which these Christians were found belongs to the East Indian Archipelago. The Dutch have for years had political rule in this region. This may account for the original introduction of Christianity among this people, and for the fact that the Heidelberg Catechism was still found in their possession. But still the particular time and circumstances in which this introduction took place may well challenge special attention, and elicit investigation from those who have the leisure and facilities for prosecuting it.

PACIFIC METHODISM.

This is the name we give to our branch of Methodism on the Pacific, in contradistinction to the California Methodism of the Northern Church. Our Conference there is the Pacific Conference, theirs the California Conference—our paper there is the Pacific Methodist, theirs the California Christian Advocate—our position there (and every where else) on the slavery question is pacific, neither pro nor con, theirs that of abolition agitators. The last two numbers of the Pacific Methodist contain some notice of the proceedings of our late General Conference. The Frazer River gold fever was at delirium height, and would injure the churches as well as business. The editor calls on the emigrants to pay for the Methodist before they go. Rev. B. H. Russell writes from Grand Island, that there is a wide field before us in the north part of the State; that the large valley is filling up with western people, who prefer the Southern Church, and that now a half-dozen more preachers could be employed in that region. Rev. Dr. T. O. Ellis writes from Los Angelos, that he has formed a society at San Beruardino, of 33 members, and general prospect very good. The Santa Clara Circuit needs dividing, as it is large enough for two, and there are several other places, where they are calling for workmen.

Rev. O. Fisber, P. E. of the San Francisco District, is laboring with all his well-known zeal, having baptised a full-blood Indian, besides reporting other accessions. Bascom Institute, at San Jose, is highly recommended.

We bid our brethren on that coast God speed.

POPULATION OF CHINA.

The correspondent of the London Times estimates the gross population of China to be 360,279,897—not much more dense in proportion to the area of the country, than that of several European countries; but the pressure on the eastern seaboard provinces is unparallelled.—The average for the whole empire is 268 to the square mile. Kiangsu has 850; its next inland province, Anhui, has 705; Shantung has 644; ths imperial district of Chihli, 475; and Chekiang, on ths south coast, has 671. Canton, with its neighboring proviuces of Kwangsi, Kweichow, and Yunnan, are the most thinly peopled provinces of the empire. The opium traffic in China is increasing. The value of the opium imported into China in 1856 was £7,202,345. The poppy is cultivated in one or two of this provinces, and 60,000 chests of opium are annually grown. The government deplore this, but cannot stop it.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

ALABAMA.

The Central Railroad is attracting hopeful attention, and its success is said to be certain.

THE MURRAIN.—The Mobile Tribune says: The cattle and deer disease, which was first heard of a few months ago in East Florida and the south-eastern part of Georgia, has been reported to exist in the neighborhood of Pensacola and in Baldwin county, and now we are informed that it has broken out in our own county. From all that we can learn, however its severity has much abated.

Copperas water, or a solution of copperas in the sod, applied to the mouth and tongue as a wash, seems to be the remedy most generally recommended, though we have heard of cases near Point Clear, in which it has been successfully trested with calomel and oil.

The Moutgomery Mail says there was six feet of water in the channel of the Alabama river at that point on Saturday last the 31st ult.

GEORGIA.

The Mscon (Ga.) Citizen says, "a gentleman recently from Florida, and who passed through southwestern Georgia, says the present corn and cotton crop promises to be the largest grown for twenty years.

LOUISIANA.

The Caddo Gazette of the 31st ult., says: The rain has not been as great, and the nights are getting coolsr. We have the finest crops of corn ever made in the parish. Cotton is very promising, it is doing its "level best."

From the West Baton Rouge Sugar Planter we learn that the population of that parish consists of whites 1950, slaves 4300, free negroes 132—number of voters 388.

The Alexandria (Rapides) Democrat, of the 27th ult., says: We have had, during the present week, fine growing weather—but few showers, and extremely hot—thermometer 96° in the shade.

The cane crop is excellent. The cotton, for three weeks previous to the present, had too much rain, but will soon recover if the present weather continues.

The Alexandria (La.) American, of the 24th ult., states: We have had, for the past week, a continuation of showery weather, varied every now and then with a hard rain, which the intervening spells of hot sunshine have had a bad effect upon the cotton crops throughout the parish wherever these causes have acted, causing it to grow too much to weeds and shed considerably. Into corn is generally good, the early planted having been injured greatly by firing. The cane crops are remarkably good generally.

TEXAS.

A Westoru Texas correspondent of the Delta says: We are looking forward to the completion of that great enterprise, the Houston and Opelousas Railroad, with much anxiety; for, undoubtedly, its completion will add a new and important epoch to Texas history. The abundant crops here now will enable farmers to lend their assistance to this great work. It were vain for me to attempt a description of our crops. Let it suffice, if no uncommon accident happen, we shall make more than we can gather and prepare for maket. The face of the whole country wears a smile, on necount of the fine prospects ahead.

Gen. Wm. S. Taylor, late Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, died on the 22d ult., at his residence near Larissa in Cherokee county, in that State.

The Tyler (Texas) Reporter, of the 21st ult., says: We have it from very good authority that Gov. Runnels has appointed Col. Matt. Ward, of Cass, as United States Senator, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of the lamented Henderson.

TENNESSEE.

The Memphis Appeal, of the 31st ult., says: The river is still rising, but at a much diminished rate. The rise during the twenty-four hours ending last night was not more than two inches. Drift continues floating down.

The Memphis Eagle and Enquirer, of the 30th ult., says: We learn from a reliable source that the damage done to this road by the late flood will not exceed five hundred dollars. The work will progress vigorously, and in a few days the construction train will make regular daily trips over the finished portion of the road, now upwards of twenty-two miles.

The Memphis Appeal, of the 31st ult., says: The iron for the entire twenty-five miles of this road between Brownsville and the Mobile Road has been brought; some six or seven miles of it have arrived. Gov. Harris hended over to Col. Gopp, on Monday last, $200,000 in the bonds of the State, for the eighteen miles beyond Brownsville and the bridge over the Forked Deer river, and tract laying began at Brownsville yesterday.

By October 1st the cars will cross the South Fork of the Forked Deer, and hundreds of planters who last year sent their produce to other markets, or to this one over another route, will then send their produce here by this road, as being so much shorter and more direct.

THE LATEST NEWS.

FOREIGN.

The STEAMSHIP PERSIA, arrived at New York, Aug. 3.

GENERAL NEWS.

The India bill and the bill admitting Jews to the Parliament without taking the oath prescribed by the old law have passed both Houses of Parliament.

D'Israeli stated in Parliament that the British Government were preparing a plan for submission to the United States Government on subject of visiting vessels suspected of being slavers, which he believed would be satisfactory and acceptable to the American Government, and would accomplish the end they had in view, viz: the suppression of the slave trade.

Later accounts from Turkey report that the fanatical movement of the Mohammedans against the Christians, in Asia, was still continued with unabated fury.

The foreign residents at Canton had become seriously alarmed, and had sent their goods to Hong Kong for safety.

The French troops will not be withdrawn from Rome, as previously reported.

Advices from Tripoli report that a revolutionary movement has been discovered among the Syrian Christians.

A still further improvement in American Securities is reported.

COMMERCIAL NEWS.

AT LIVERPOOL, July 24, the sales of Cotton for the week account to 45,000 bales, of which speculators took 1600 bales, and exporters 4,000 bales.

All qualities have slightly declined. The decline is chiefly in the lower grades.

The latest advices from Manchester are less favorable than those by the Vanderbilt. Less activity prevailed in the market. There is, however, no quotable change in prices.

The Bullion in the Bank of England had increased £304,000.

ST. DOMINGO.

By the arrival of the schooner California at New York, we have advices from Puerto Plata to July 14.

Business was very dull. The market overstocked with merchandise. Supply of provisions on hand sufficient to last four months. Specie very scarce, in fact, none to be had, the people losing confidence in the paper money issued by the Government, and exchanging the same at one hundred and fifty for one dollar of specie.

Capt. W. Boynton and four of the crew of the brig Atrecdo, formerly under the command of Commandant M. L. Johnson, in the service of Santana, (Liberator,) came passengers in the California.

The Gaceta Official of July 11, is entirely taken up with an accounnt of the rejoicings at Santiago, consequent upon the defeat of Baez. The celebration took place upon July 7, the first anniversary of the commencement of the revolution.

A Washington despatch to the New York Times says: I learn from a very reliable source that as soon as Baez was defeated and Santana restored to power in St. Domingo, as reported by Capt. McIntosh of the U. S. Navy, our Government took the initiatory step towards securing a foothold there which may lead to the establishment of a permanent government by the whites.

WEST COAST OF AFRICA.

The proceedings in the Admiralty Court at Monrovia, in the case of the Regina Coeli, had terminated, and an award of $6,600 had been made to the Ethiope.

Dr. Davis left the English Niger expedition at the camp above Rabba, on the 6th of May. All the other officers were then well. The new Spanish Governor of Fernando Po had just arrived, in company with six Catholic priests, and a proclamation had been issued closing Protestant places of worship and schools, which had caused great dissatisfaction in the colony.

The price of oil was high; but a fine oil season was expected, as it was likely to come in plentiful.

But few slave vessels had lately been seen in the Bight of Benin; the last that made her appearance, the Mary Gibbs, under American colors, had been captured by Her Majesty's ship Trident.

Capt. Protet, Commander of the French squadron on the coast, had lately returned from a lengthened visit to the King of Dahomey, to obtain the exclusive privilege for the French to purchase slaves at Whydah and the Dahomian ports. The Commodore's mission proved a complete failure, the large and increasing legitimate commerce of the Bight of Benin, and the eagerness of the natives to cultivate cotton, having raised the price of slaves to from $100 to $120—a price beyond the figure to which the contractor is limited.

DOMESTIC.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Mississippi Central Railroad Company, who were the original contractors of the new mail route, have renewed their contract, and promise to carry the great Southern mail from Washington to New Orleans in four days, commencing on the 1rst of August. Two hours additional time has been allowed them over the ninety miles of staging between the terminii of the railroads.

Secretary Cass has privately written to Gov. Stevens, that he will use his best efforts to counteract the illegal taxation of miners, on the Frazer river, being imposed by the Hudson Bay Company.

NEW CALEDONIA GOLD FIELDS.

The President has appointed a special agent to proceed to the newly-discovered gold regions in British America, for the purpose of preventing any collision between our citizens and the officers of the Hudson's Bay Company, and also for the purpose of ascertaining accurately to what extent, and under what restrictions, our citizens have a right to take gold from the Frazer River and other mines.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

By an official report of the appropriations of the last Congress they amount to $84,300,000. The postal service alone is $17,000,000; and the estimated receipts only $12,000,000, showing that the maintenance of steamships and other mail service is a direct tax upon the treasury of five millions of dollars. Deducting the receipts from the total appropriations leaves $72,000,000 as the expenditures of the year.

THE NEW CALIFORNIA MAIL ROUTE,

Across southern Mexico from Minatitlan on the Gulf coast to the Bay of Ventosa on the Pacific, will, we hear, soon be opened—in fact inaugurated by the passage of the great mail on the 1rst of October. The steamship Quaker City, is is said, has been purchased to ply between this city and Minatitlan, and will soon make her appearance in these waters. The Company are about to ship stock for the road—a large number of Troy coaches, and several hundred mules for purposes of transportation, until the Tehuantepec railroads is built. The coaches will start from the head of navigation on the Minatitlan river and go through Tehuantepec on the Pacific between day light and dark, a distance of one hundred and forty miles, which will be accomplished over an excellent road by means of relays of fresh teams at stations eight or ten miles, or less, apart. Of course the time by this route will be eight or ten days less than that by the Isthmus, and the company have the mail contract.

☞ The submarine telegraph cable from Yorkersburg, Va., to the Ohio shore has been successfully laid, and a through line of telegraph by this route between Baltimore and Cincinnati will soon be opened.

FROM SANTA FE.

The Santa Fe Gazette of the 26th of June, has a congratulatory article on the progress being made in the construction of the military road between that place and Fort Union.

Dr. M. Steck, U. S. Agent for the Apache Indians, says, that the Indians of his agency were never in so prosperous and promising a condition. This season the Apaches will plant considerably, and in a few years, should the reserve system be adopted, they will be able to raise nearly all the provisions necessary for their consumption.

The Gazette publishes intelligence from Col. Clement's surveying party, encamped two hundred miles east of Santa Fe. The country on the Canadian fork of the Arkansas is spoken of very favorably, and the surveying thus far was progressing satisfactorily. The Indians had plundered a remota ranche, however, killing and eating the cattle, and were evidently about in great numbers. With the escort protecting the party, there was nevertheless no fear of the result should they venture an attack.

SOUTHWEST PASS, August 4.

SUSPICIOUS VESSEL.—A dispatch from the Southwest Pass says, that a vessel which arrived here this morning, (name not given) reports having passed in latitude 28° 58' 30" north, longitude 89° 20' west, a large black clipper built vessel, schooner rigged, with its deck crowded with a suspicious looking set of men. The vessel appeared to avoid being spoken.

The schooner carried a large swivel gun, and had on board other arms and accoutrements.

Local Intelligence.

A DUEL was fought between Col. Henry, of the Nicaraguan army, and Mr. Howel, August 2d, on the Metairie Ridge, in which the former was dangerously wounded.—We have been informed that the police were fully apprised of the affair in time to have prevented it. If so, it is a shameful winking at crime.

THE PARK.—The Picayune complains that the improvements in the proposed park on Metairie are in violation of good taste. "The cutting of straight roads through it will not add to its beauty. Winding avenues, over arched with grand old trees; paths, opening unexpectedly, and leading away to shady nooks, intersected by others whenever a beautiful vista may be obtained in the distance, rather than the stiff and formal straight lines that characterize the streets of the city should be the aim of all improvement."

GARDENING.—The same paper says that in the vicinity of New Orleans but few gardens are to be found that exhibit the high grade of culture necessary for remunerative returns. Too much land is in most cases used. Trenching, manuring, watering, and rotation in crops are scarcely attempted. The coarser vegetables with the rudest tillage are raised, and but little attention is paid to the production of the fruits of the season, and for a succession of harvests which constitute the main art of gardening.

A square of ground within a short distance of a populous neighborhood, within nine months, by scientific culture and a proper selection of production, has been made to produce twelve hundred dollars, the labor bestowed being that of only one man. It promises yet to produce two or three hundred dollars more.

NEW ORLEANS MARKET.—The Delta says that "the usual depression attending the closing of the season is experienced in the money market. Calls upon the Banks are limited. There have been sales of March and April next paper at 8 and 9 per cent., and the general rate of three to four months' first class signatures is 8 and 9 per cent. The Citizens' Bank has declared a dividend of ten per cent. on the earnings of the last six months, payable to stockholders on and after the 9th inst., making 15 per cent. dividend for the last year, with a considerable sum carried to the reserve fund. We refer to our monetary columns for other interesting information."

Cotton, Middling, 11¼ to 11⅝. Stock on hand, not cleared, 36,947 bales. Sugar, fair to fully fair, 6¼ to 8¼.

Marriages.

MARRIED—At the residence of the bride's Mother, on the 17th inst. by Rev. W. Wadsworth, Miss ALICE V. ROBERTSON, of Issaquena county, Miss., and Rev. W. D. BROWN, of Texas.

MARRIED—On the 1st inst. by the Rev. John D. Willis, Mr. WILLIAM MCMURRY, to Miss SARAH D. WATKINS, all of Jefferson county, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: You will confer a favor upon me by publishing a marriage that occured on the 18th inst., the parties well known and respected by many of the readers of the Advocate, who would like to hear from two such faithful servants.

FEMALE COLLEGE,

Columbia, Tenn.

WE return our grateful acknowledgments to our friends and patrons for the kindness and confidence they have ever manifested towards this Institution, by entrusting their dear daughters to us for instruction; and we am resolved that this trust shall never be betrayed. We will return them committed to our care with their minds accurately and thoroughly cultivated.

Please to consider—

1st. The IMPARTIALITY and THOROUGHNESS of our Examinations, and the superior scholarship of our pupils—their refined manners and lady-like deportment.

2d. That some of our Classes were examined an hour each by literary gentlemen, in several of the most difficult branches of Mathematics, and came off triumphant.

3d. That Gen. G. J. Pillow, Gen. Lucius J. Polk, Gen. R. H. Allen, Hon. A. H. Hill, Hon. J. Brien, Rev. Bishop Soule, D. D., Rev. Bishop Pane, D. D., Rev J. B. McFerrin, D. D., and many other distinguished gentlemen in this and adjoining States, have permitted us to refer to them in testimony of the position which this College holds among the literary institutions of the South.

4th. Our patronage, during the year, has been 207 pupils—150 of whom were boarders—the others from town and vicinity. This is one of the largest Boarding Schools in Tennessee, and far larger than any in Columbia.

5th. Our terms are lower than other Schools. All may rely upon this.

6th. We have educated 60 teachers in this College who now stand as the head of the Profession in Tennessee, for scholarship and skill in teaching.

7th. We have a body of Teachers in the College, for the coming year, equal to any in the South, and such they have proved themselves to be, both in the Recitation Room and in our public Examinations in the presence of a thousand persons who came to witness our performances

We solicit public patronage and favor, and consident are we that we can do ample justice to those committed to our care, since during twelve years we have in this School, all our patrons at home and afar have, without one exception, so far as we know, expressed the highest approbation of the Institution.

Try us—your most sanguine expectations shall be gratified.

Next session begins First Monday in September.

S. DESOTO, A. M., Professor of Greek and Modern Languages.
O. F. LEARY, A. M., Professor of Latin and Adjunct in Mathematics.
N. F. BRIGGS, A. B., Professor of Natural Science.

EXPENSES for board and tuition vary from one hundred and fifty to one hundred and eighty dollars per session of ten months—half in advance.

The next session will begin the Second Wednesday in September. The location is healthy and accessible, being only two miles from the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, with which it will be connected by a branch road, terminating at Florence.

The Faculty is full—Apparatus good—Course thorough—Examination rigid—Discipline mild, and there is every prospect of a large increase of pupils the next session.

The Preparatory School is under the Superintendence of Prof. RICE, a gentleman from the University, is duly conducted and offers the very best means of preparation for college.

MURDEROUS SCAVENGERS.—Shallow practitioners have asserted that intestinal worms are not injurious in fact that they act the part of scavengers, removing foul and indigestible matter from the alimentary canal. What audacious humbug! What miserable philosophy! Every experienced physician knows that these animals cause inflammation of the bowels and sometimes actually eat through the coating of the stomach and lower intestines, causing inevitable death. Of all the diseases of children this is the most dangerous and distressing. Unfortunately, too it is one of the most common. In Wiser's Canadian Vermifuge, however, a safe, quick, unfailing remedy is provided. The proprietor challenges the world to show that it ever failed to effect a cure.

BOARDING, ETC.

In this particular, we would inform the public that a large and elegant Boarding House, capable of accommodating more than one hundred young ladies, has been built in connection with the Academy. This department will be under the immediate supervision of President Hamilton and his accomplished lady assisted by an agreeable and experienced matron. The rooms are sufficiently commodious, thoroughly ventilated, and handsomely furnished with good beds, mirrors, carpets, tables, wardrobes, etc. And to avoid confusion, as well as to the ease of convenience, the different suites of rooms are supplied with speaking-tubes, bells, and other modern improvements. In addition, the President will employ a sufficient number of trustworthy servants to meet the demands of the house in the very first style, such as cooks, washers, chamber maids, dining room servants, etc. Clean rooms about the establishment may be expected. Finally, parents and guardians who have daughters and wards to educate, in sending them to this school may rest assured that every effort will be made to guard their health and morals, cultivate their minds and manners, and leave them feel perfectly at home.

In consequence of the high price of labor, calaboe, etc—to say nothing of the considerable falling off in the means to furnish the boarders will be charged $65 00 per session of five months, everything included, one half of which must be paid at the beginning of each term.

THE CORPS OF INSTRUCTORS.

The Board of Trustees feel that they have reason to congratulate themselves and the country because of their success in securing the efficient and almost invaluable services of the experienced and talented President, Dr. A. L. HAMILTON, who unites every grace of mental accomplishment with an integrity of purpose and an energy which insures success in whatever he undertakes. Being a Virginian by birth he is a fine specimen of the "old Virginia gentleman," and has had large experience in teaching, having been mainly instrumental in founding, in several places in the South, permanent and now flourishing institutions. We would without hesitancy recommend Dr. Hamilton as in every way worthy of the esteem and patronage of the entire community.

As regards the Assistants, we beg leave to state that they were carefully selected by President Hamilton from some of the best Female Schools in the South. They are all thoroughly educated, high toned, accomplished ladies; and, in addition, have had great experience in the school-room. The Trustees take great pride and pleasure in recommending them as eminently well qualified in every particular for their respective departments, to parents and guardians who have daughters and wards to educate.

We have hitherto felt the necessity of a first-class Female School in our midst; one that could cope with the most renowned institutions of the North and East; and we now tender to the country our sincere congratulations upon being at last secured so great a desideratum.

THE CITY OF CLARKSVILLE.

Clarksville is situated on the right bank of the Cumberland river contains about five thousand inhabitants, and is the capital of Montgomery county, Tennessee. Its location is high and commanding, and its health is equal, if not superior to any other point in the United States belong in latitude 36½°—far enough South to be free from the rigors of a Northern winter, and far enough North to be exempt from the malignous and deadly epidemics of the South. Its society is of the very first order, and the city sufficiently large to furnish every elegance and luxury, without the concomitant expense, extravagance and depravity of a larger city. It has churches of every Christian denomination, and also a good Male College. Finally, Clarksville is accessible from all points of the compass, and therefore we most cordially solicit patronage from abroad.

CONCLUDING REMARKS.—Parents and guardians who may patronize our school will be notified in due time of all examinations, vacations, etc.

The Great Drawback to persons emigrating to the extreme Western country, is the great fear they have of the Fever and Ague—the most dreaded of all diseases. Every day we hear of persons attacked by this disease, and made helpless in a short time without any means of affording relief. In view of the great demand for a remedy, Dr. HOSTETTER has presented his celebrated "Bitters," who a curative powers for all diseases of the stomach have been universally acknowledged. The "Bitters," prepared after a long experience and deep study, have received the encomiums of the most eminent physicians, as well as all classes from every part of our country. To those who doubt their many virtues all we can say is, to try them, and judge for themselves respectively.

POETRY.

THE SUMMER MONTHS.

They come! the merry Summer months
Of beauty, love, and flowers;
They come! the gladsome months that bring
Thick leafiness to bowers.
Up, up, my heart! and walk abroad,
Fling work and care aside;
Seek silent hills, or rest thyself
Where peaceful waters glide;
Or underneath the shadow vast
Of patriarchal tree,
See through its leaves the cloudless sky
In wrapt tranquility.

The grass is soft; its velvet touch
Is grateful to the hand;
And, like the kiss of maiden love,
The breeze is sweet and bland;
The daisy and the butter cup
Are nodding courteously;
It stirs their blood with kindest love,
To bless and welcome thee.
They now are silver gray—
That blissful breeze is wantoning,
And whispering "Be gay!"

There is no cloud that sails along
The ocean of yon sky,
But hath its own winged mariners
To give it melody.
Thou scest their glittering fans outspread,
All gleaming like red gold;
And hark! with shrill pipe musical,
Their merry course they hold.
God bless them all, these little ones,
Who, far above this earth,
Can make a scoff of its mean joys,
And vent a nobler mirth.

But, soft! mine ear upcaught a sound—
From yonder wood it came;
The spirit of the dim green glade
Did breath his own glad name.
Yes, it is he! the hermit bird,
That, apart from all his kind,
Slow spells his beads monotonous
To the soft western wind.
Cuckoo! Cuckoo! he sings again—
His notes are void of art,
But simplest strains do soonest sound
The deep fonts of the heart.

Good Lord! it is a gracious boon
For thought-crazed wight like me,
To smell again these Summer flowers,
Beneath this Summer tree!
To suck once more, in every breath,
Their little souls away,
And feed my fancy with fond dreams
Of youth's bright Summer day;
When rushing forth like untamed colt,
The reckless truant boy
Wandered through green woods all day long,
A mighty heart of joy!

I'm colder now—I have had cause;
But oh! I'm proud to think
That each pure joy-font loved of yore
I yet delight to drink;
Leaf, blossom, blade, hill, valley, stream,
The calm, unclouded sky,
Still mingle music with my dream,
As in the days gone by,
When Summer loveliness and light
Fell round me dark and cold,
I'll bear indeed life's heaviest curse—
A heart that hath waxed old.

Wm. Motherwell.

OBITUARIES.

Seldom has it fallen to our lot to record the death of one whose exit has caused so great a sensation in our community, as sister ELIZABETH M. FORT, wife of Col. George D. Sharp, of Morehouse parish, La. She was born September 30th, 1808, in Washington county, Ga., was married Sep. 25, 1825, was converted, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in the spring of 1826 in Georgia, and moved to Louisiana in 1848. Sister Sharp was a lady of education and refinement, she was a devotedly attached wife, most fond and affectionate mother; indeed, it was around the family altar her virtues shone most conspicuously. She delighted in attending the house of God, strengthening the feeble, confirming the wavering, and pointing the poor mourner to Jesus. To the poor and needy, with the afflicted of her neighborhood, she shone as a bright light; her heart overflowing in charity, ever ready to attend the calls of suffering humanity; often, yea at midnight, at daybreak, have we met her at the house of sorrow and death, administering comfort and consolation. Well may her neighbors weep, for a true friend whose place cannot be supplied, is gone forever. To her deeply bereaved husband and loving children we can say, "Weep not, your wife and mother is now resting from all her cares—your loss is her eternal gain." Her last illness was long, and though her mind was impaired toward the close, she gave evidence of her acceptance, and shouted aloud the praise of her blessed Jesus. J. A. W.

The Southern Christian Advocate please copy.

RHESUS WILLIAMS was born in Darlington, S. C., Dec. 26, 1794, professed religion and joined the M. E. Church in 1811, was married Oct. 22, 1812, to Miss Lily M. Williams, in 1816 moved to East Feliciana parish, La., 1825 to St. Helena parish, 1845 to Madison county, Miss., and in 1856 moved to Rankin county, Miss., where he departed this life Jan. 2, 1858, aged 63 years and 8 days.

Bro. Williams lived to raise ten children; all married and settled in life, and all members of the church of his choice. Never will I, nor my family forget the kindness of brother and sister Williams and family. Brother Williams was one of the old time methodists. He loved the house of God! He loved the class room. He loved God's people. He was a good class-leader and steward. His motto was "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." He was an affectionate husband, a kind father, a good master, and an obliging neighbor. In his friends he reposed the utmost confidence. I know not how it could have been otherwise, when I consider the fidelity and unfeigned piety of her who was his bosom companion for so many years. God grant that in her last bereaved days, her peace may flow like a river!

Bro. William's death was very unexpected and sudden. The sabbath before he attended the preaching of Rev. J. A. Light, in reference to which bro. Light remarked to me, "Bro. Williams seemed to be in the enjoyment of unusual health and happy in the love of God." Indeed, the day before his death there seemed to be no symtom of disease, and at night he sat up till a late hour reading. But between midnight and day he was taken with congestion of the brain and in a few hours departed this life, we trust and believe for the land of ever lasting life. God grant that in the resurrection morn we may all meet to live with Jesus. Amen. ANDREW DAY.

EUGENIA G. SKINNER, daughter of George and Elizabeth R Skinner, the subject of this was born 19th May, 1848, and departed this life at the residence of her parents, in Marengo county, near Spring Hill, Ala., 27th March, 1858.

The writer begs leave to pay a slight tribute to her memory. It was his province to have daily supervision of her at school, and out of some 80 pupils Eugenia was distinguished as the most correct and studious.

Obedient and affectionate she never retired to rest until she knelt at her bed side. Long will her loved form dwell in the writer's memory. Long will her example be pointed out as worthy the imitation of her school-mates.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"I WANT MOTHER."

An old man lay on a sick bed, struggling with death. Disease had worn out his body, and so affected his mind that he was insensible to all things and persons around him. His family, and one or two other friends stood by his bedside, for it was evident that he had but a few moments to live. He rolled his head as if in great pain, and made several efforts to speak. At length we could distinguish the words, "Mother! I want mother! Why don't mother come?" His mother had been dead nearly 50 years. He was probably unconscious that he had a wife, and children, and grand children around him, or that he was himself anything but a child. When he was really a child, he had his troubles as every child has, and then he would carry his little griefs to his mother, for he knew that she would sympathise with him, and her voice would comfort him.—He only knew that he was in trouble, and he thought if his dear mother would come she would comfort him.

Oh! that children could now understand what precious things their young affections are! It is sad to see how soon they sometimes part with them, and how easily they are made ashamed of them. Boys who love to lay their heads in a mother's lap, to kneel by her side and offer their prayers to God, and who feel as though they could not go to sleep without her coming to their bed and kissing them, and saying a parting "good night," are sometimes ashamed of this simple and sweet attachment. Bad children, such as are spoken of in Proverbs, xxx. 17, ridiculo them for these expressions of artless love, and call them babyish. When they become old enough to go out in the world, evil companions teach them that it is childish and unmanly to follow the counsels they received in childhood, and laugh about "anxious mothers;" and they are too often successful in their mean efforts to wean them from the purest and happiest affection which belongs to this world.—Then they part with the best love of earth forever.

Would that our little readers knew with what earnest, but vain longings, they may look back for these blessed young affections, should they live until youthful hopes have expired, and the cares of life have become oppressive. We could tell them of men of ripe age, strong minds, and who have reached high distinctions in the world, who have had hours, when crushed by troubles, and worn down by sufferings, they have been heard to exclaim, "Oh, that I were a little child again! Then I would carry my sorrows to my mother, sob upon her bosom, and she would take me in her arms and comfort me so sweetly."

Children, cherish youthful affections. If you lose them, they can never return to you in their present freshness. Nourish them through life, and there will never be a month, perhaps never a day, but they will help you to bear some trouble, and lighten up some dark hour. And they will help you to understand the still more tender and confiding affection which brings to the redeemed child of God, the love and watchful care of his Father in heaven.

"I'M AFRAID I'VE TOLD A LIE."

A true little girl was Nelly Dawson; this was seen in her face; for she was accustomed to speak the exact truth. She had been taught to do so. Her parents did not rely upon nature to give her sincerity, any more than to give wheat to their fields, or roses to surround their house. Her mother did not deem it enough, to insure good children, to let them alone, and forbear to plant evil; she well knew that good must be planted seasonably, and nourished and cherished with tender vigilance.

When Nelly was very, little, she came one day, with a very sad face, to her mother, saying, "Mother, I'm afraid I've told a lie."

"Why do you think so, my dear?" asked her mother.

"Because," said, she, "when Fanny asked me if there were any pears under the big tree, I told her no; but when Norah went out to get some for tea, I went with her, and we found two beautiful ones on the ground."

"They might have fallen after you were there."

"I guess they were there then, for they were under the leaves the current bush, and I shouldn't have seen them if it hadn't been for Norah. Was it not wrong for me to say there were none there?"

"It was wrong for you to say certainly there were none there; you should have said you thought there were none; but it was not a lie unless you wished to deceive her."

"I am very glad, then, but I am sorry to make mistakes; I suppose it is not quite right to make mistakes, is it?"

"Not to make them carelessly; and it is very wrong to have a positive habit; a way of thinking that we cannot be mistaken."

Thus, with the fear of falsehood as the greatest of evils, Nelly's soul became that delightful spectacle, a mirror of truth; no crooked, indirect, feigning and affected ways were hers. She knew that when she came into the spiritual world, her lips could not utter what in her heart she thought not; and that thoughts and feelings are there seen in their true light, and all shams and disguises worn here but drag the spirit to the abode of the wretched.

THE BOY PREACHER.

The papers have, of late, had much to say—perhaps too much—respecting the boy Kennedy, who, at the age of fifteen or so, has been drawing crowds to hear him preach. Till recently, this boy was a clerk in the store of one who is a member of one of the Prospyterian Churches in New York. He was an intelligent and serious-minded lad, well instructed in the Bible, and much valued by his employer. He became interested in the prayer meetings, and soon his employer observed that his place in the Sabbath School was vacant. Not knowing the cause—to wit, that he had been won over by the Baptists, and had been immersed—he spoke to him about it. The boy simply answered, that he attended another Sabbath School. With this the employer was satisfied, and said no more. Very soon a lady came into the store, and while the boy was busy at a distance, she spoke to his employer, and said, "Do you know what a beautiful prayer that boy can make? I heard him make one of the most beautiful prayers that I ever heard." This was all news; but soon he read in all the papers of the wonderful boy preacher, and then went himself with the crowd to hear him preach. He said the most remarkable thing about him was his wonderful self-possession. He stood in the pulpit as easily as if at home, and presented his thoughts clearly and methodically, making a full and pertinent use of the Scriptures, showing how he had profited in the Sabbath School. In conversation with him afterwards, he endeavored to persuade him to commence a course of study, but he demurred, and said that his call was to preach, and not to study; and to prove it, he showed that he had then before him invitations to preach in fifteen different places, where he was sure of crowded assemblies. Still his friend insisted that he would ruin himself if he pursued this course, and that as soon as the novelty of the idea of the boy preacher had gone, his power for good would be gone, unless, by study, he prepared his mind for permanent usefulness. And though he did not succeed in his argument, the boy has since concluded to commence a course of study.—What will be the issue of this precocity, time alone can determine. The ordinary course of things does not encourage high expectations from it. Yet some very distinguished men commenced preaching very early, and had great reputations as juvenile preachers. Such was Thomas Spencer, Such was Robert Hall.—Such was William Jay, who once, most appropriately, took for his text, as he rose before a vast assembly, "There is a lad here, which has five barley loaves and two small fishes, but what are they among so many?" Spurgeon, too, is notable among the exceptions to the general rule. It is said of the boy preacher in New York, that his sermons are commonplace, having little of interest in themselves. The wonder is that such a boy can produce them. And with the charm of this wonder alone, he draws his thousands around him.

THE GREATEST
Medical Discovery
OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,
From the worst Scrofula down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.
Two or three bottles will clear the system of biloo.
Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.
One or two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.
Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.
Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corns and running ulcers.
One bottle will cure scaly eruptions of the skin.
Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of ringworm.
Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.
Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed growing on the pastures, and along old stone walls, should cure every humor in the system; yet it is a fixed fact. If you have a humor, it has to start. There are no IFS nor ANDS, humors nor ha's about it suiting some cases, but not yours. I peddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts. I give it to children a year old, to old people of sixty. I have seen poor, puny, wormy-looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to a perfect state of health by one bottle.
To those who are subject to a sick head ache, one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief in catarrh and dizziness. Some who have taken it had been costive for years, and have been regulated by it. Where the body is sound it works quite easy; but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it will cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed; they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad result from it; on the contrary, when that feeling is gone you will feel yourself like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever man listened to.
Manufactured by DONALD KENNEDY, No. 120 Warren street, Roxbury, Mass. Price $1 per bottle.

DR. T. McGOWN'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
IODINE OF POTASI,
THE GREAT
BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,

Prepared from SARSA ROOT, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a PANACEA or CATHOLICON than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fardyce, Brodie, Lugol, Coindet, Baron, Bardsley, Masson, Ricord, Gondrin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy; diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Bites, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally); Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cachexy, Palsy, Tumors, Generrhea, Ulcer; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Tester; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Forcye says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in constitutions enfeebled and emaciated by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Beck, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparations of Sarsaparilla."

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Irregularities, Suppression, Diseases of the Womb, Leucorrhea, Tumors, Enlargement of the Uterus, Breasts; Chorea, etc.; Impurities of the Blood or System, and all diseases dependent thereon. Makes the skin clear and smooth—an object of interest with the ladies. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.

McGOWN'S ESSENCE TAR.—A certain cure for Bowel Complaints, as Diarrhea, Dysentery, Flux, etc.

McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL.—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.

McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS.—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.

McGOWN'S OINTMENT.—Never known to fail curing old Sores, Cancers, Chronic Sore Eyes, etc.

DOCTOR HOOFLAND'S
CELEBRATED
GERMAN BITTERS, PREPARED BY
Dr. C. M. JACKSON, Philad'a, Pa.
WILL EFFECTUALLY CURE
LIVER COMPLAINT, DYSPEPSIA, JAUNDICE,
Chronic or Nervous Debility, Diseases of the Kidneys and all diseases arising from a disordered Liver or Stomach.

Such as Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness of Blood in the Head, Acidity on the Stomach, Nausea Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil and great Depression of Spirits.
The proprietor, in calling the attention of the public to this preparation, does so with a feeling of the utmost confidence in its virtues and substitutes to the diseases for which it is recommended.
It is no new and untried article, but one that has stood the test of a ten years' trial before the American people, and its reputation and sale is unrivalled by any similar preparations extant. The testimony in its favor given by the most prominent and well-known Physicians and individuals in all parts of the country is immense, and a careful perusal of the Almanac published annually by the proprietor, and to be had gratis of any of his Agents, cannot but satisfy the most skeptical that this remedy is really deserving the great celebrity it has obtained.

WISE AND BEAUTIFUL READINGS.

A writer in the "Atlantic Monthly" for August has a paper on "Singing Birds and their Songs," the reading of which leaves the mind and heart in such a frame of poetic joy as is produced by communion with nature in springtime, when the green leaves, the blossoming shrubs, and the songs of birds, bless the senses and soul with beauty, fragrance and music. He has a keen understanding of

HOME HAPPINESS—

"Those persons enjoy the most happiness, if possessed of a benevolent heart and favored by ordinary circumstances of fortune, who have acquired by habit and education the power of deriving pleasure from objects that lie immediately around them. But these common sources of happiness are opened to those only who are endowed with genius, or who have received a certain kind of intellectual training." * * * "In proportion as we have been trained to be agreeably affected by the outward forms of nature, and the sounds that proceed from the animate and inanimate world, are we capable of being made happy without resorting to expensive and vulgar recreations."

From the marked increase of such sentiments as the above, the hope is encouraged that the time will come when the rage of fashion, the ostentation of extravagance, and the restless desire for everything but home and its duties and joys, will be considered coarse and miserable, equally removed from both refinement and happiness. True taste, true happiness, and true piety go hand in hand.

In this same paper we find most beautifully illustrated,

THE WINSOMENESS OF SIMPLICITY—

"The music of birds though agreeable to all, conveys positive and durable pleasure only to those who have learned to associate with their notes, in connection with the scenes of nature, a thousand interesting and romantic images. * * In vain will it be said * * that the notes of birds, * * considered as music, * * do not equal that of the most simple reed or flageolet. How soon would the songs of birds lose their effect, if they were loud and brilliant, like a band of instruments! It is their simplicity that gives them their charm. * * Simple melodies have among all people exercised a greater power over the imagination than louder and more complicated music. * * The effect of a great part of our sacred music is lost by an excess of harmony and too great a volume of sound."

POETRY OF BIRD-SINGING—

"The songs of birds are as intimately allied with poetry as with music. * * The song of a bird resembles a lyrical ballad in its influence on the mind. Though it utters no words, how plainly it suggests a long train of agreeable images of love, beauty, friendship, and home! When a young person has suffered any severe wound of the affections, he seldom fails, if endowed with a sensitive mind, to listen to the birds as sharers in his affliction. The voice of every singing bird has its associations in the minds of all susceptible persons who were born and nurtured within the precincts of its untutored minstrelsy. The music of birds is modulated in pleasant unison with all the chords of affection and imagination, filling the soul with a lively consciousness of happiness and beauty, and soothing it with romantic visions of memory,—* * of dear and simple adventures, and of comrades who had part in them,—of dappled mornings, and serene and glowing sunsets,—of sequestered nooks and mossy seats in the old wood,—of paths by the river side, and flowers that smiled a bright welcome to our rambling,—of lingering departures from home, and of old by-ways, overshadowed by trees and hedged with roses and viburnums, that shed their shade and their perfume around our path to gladden our return."

Unhappy indeed is that person who has no sympathy with the beautiful in nature, with which we are constantly surrounded. One of the very best and most valuable influences of a right culture of the mind and heart, is that which brings the soul into communion with these "things of God." The same Holy Spirit—the breath or inspiration of God—reigns in the kingdom of God in nature, which reigns in His kingdom of grace. And it is a great and sad defect of soul when we understand not the divine significance of those pleasant instrumentalities which God, in nature, has provided for the happiness of those who have learned to be delighted with the survey of her works, and with the sound of those voices which she has appointed to communicate to the human soul the joys of her inferior creation.

The same writer gives us an idea of the

SCIENCE OF BIRD-MUSIC—

"There are not many birds whose notes could be accurately described upon the gamut. The nearest approach we can make to accuracy is to give some general idea of their time and modulation. Their musical intervals can be distinguished but with difficulty, on account of the rapidity of their utterance.

I have often attempted to transcribe some of their notes upon the musical scale, but I am persuaded that such sketches can be only approximations to literal correctness. As different individuals of the same species sing very differently; the notes, as transcribed from the song of one individual, will never exactly represent the song of another. If we listen attentively, however, to a number of songs, we shall detect in all of them a theme, as it is termed by musicians, of which the different individuals of the species warble their respective variations. Every song is, technically speaking, a fantasia constructed upon this theme, from which none of the species ever departs."

LETTER FROM PALESTINE.

SYRIA, Palestine, March 20, 1858.

To-day we had a walk with our little party over the brook Hebron and up the Mount of Olives, and enjoyed one of the most beautiful panoramic views of Jerusalem and the surrounding country that it is possible to imagine. We first entered the church of Ascension, which tradition says was built over the spot where Christ went up into Heaven, and left an impression of his foot upon the rock, which is carefully preserved; surrounded by the walls of a circular arched room like a chapel (it is now a Mosque). But the scriptures say he led them out as far as Bethany, and he lifted up his hands and blessed them and parted from them, and was carried up into Heaven.

O! how rich in interesting scriptural location is the Mount of Olives, hallowed by so many recollections of our Savior; not a spot but is marked by some sacred association calculated to awaken feelings of interest in the whole site. Upon its side he taught his disciples many truths.

The view of the city, from its height, is beautiful and imposing; its walls, gates, towers, terrace-roofed houses, ornamented with little domes, produce a fine effect as we look down upon them. The Mosque of Omar and its minarets, built upon Mount Moriah, the site of Solomon's Temple, Mount Zion, Ophel, the valleys Silvam, Hinnom and Jehosaphat, with their countless tombs, and Abraham's pillar rising above them in its oriental form, cut from the solid rock. The valleys, studded with trees and dotted with gardens, combine together in unity, stretching beneath the eye in all their variety, as we cast its glance towards the city once "the perfection of beauty, the joy of the whole earth," over which our Savior wept as he sat upon the Mount contemplating the scene before him and saying: "If thou hadst known, even thou at least," &c. From the minaret, we had a view of the mountains of Moab, with their uninterrupted outline, a bold and lofty range, including the peaks of Pisgah, and Bethpeor, where Balaam stood prophesying of Israel—"How goodly are thy tents, oh Jacob; and thy tabernacles, oh Israel! Let me die the death," &c. The Dead Sea and the River Jordan are distinctly visible—on another side the tomb of the prophet Samuel, and the place where he was born—Bethany, a little distance, where Christ has left a lasting testimony of his last interest in the devout and lovely family of Martha, Mary, and their brother Lazarus, hallowing it still more by taking his last leave of earth near its vicinity, and the place he so often frequented, sending back his messages to the disciples by angels, saying: "Why stand ye here gazing into Heaven, the same Jesus shall come in this like manner as you have seen him go into Heaven." And his words of promise left, "I will be with you always, even to the end of the world."

We could not, turn our eyes without some sacred impress of holy things in which the Savior is connected with the Prophets who delivered their messages of holy inspiration within its precincts. Every spot is hallowed by past associations of Biblical events; and an impressive silence, more eloquent than language, reigns over them all. A chilly, desolate feeling creeps over the soul as the Mosque and minaret meet the sight, and infidelity unfurls her banner upon the battlements of modern Jerusalem, which are now floating in the breeze before my sight.

This lovely Mount, the favorite retreat of Christ and his disciples, which was once crowned with beauty like a Paradise or Eden, has olive trees still sufficient to justify its name—but what loveliness, when their shadows were thrown over its terraced sides among gardens blooming with beauty along its gentle declivities when every spot was cultivated, and adorned with rich productions of the goodly land.

Everything which interests us, is in the past; and the present bears testimony of all that the Prophets have written and the Savior declared. A curse rests upon the people.

We entered the garden of Gethsemane again, and the grotto where tradition says the Savior retired to pray, and sweat great drops of blood which fell to the ground. A subterraneous room, dug out of a rock, fitted up like a chapel for worship, is marked as the spot. Close by is the tomb of the Virgin Mary, whose sepulchre we could not see when we entered it before, in consequence of the immense crowd assembled there for worship. The tombs have all a similar appearance, hewn out of solid rock—that of Joseph of Arimathea, shown us in the Holy Sepulchre, was of like character. Those of Joseph and Mary were in the same style, which we have to view by lighted candles. All these traditional grottos are entered by the light of candles. Cenotaphs also for the father and mother of Mary were shown us in this place.

The tombs of the kings, which were entered in another place in the valley, were very impressible, very deep in a bed of rocks, with their passages almost filled up with earth; and huge massive stone, half buried, lie where they fell, which once were used as doors to these subterraneous vaults, or sepulchres of the dead. We entered low churches and crept along by the light of candles into an arched room with recesses in its side called the tomb of David, containing several other departments, with niches for the dead. Beneath these vaults we passed through another labyrinth or winding way in the same bed of rocks to another tomb, called that of Solomon, like those above, with the exception of a sculptured column embedded in earth with a small piece of the shaft lying above the ground. There were many other niches among the rocks, all empty. The entrance to this mausoleum was sculptured with a cornice, wreaths of flowers and bunches of grapes. That of Simon the just was hewn in the side of a rock, but the entrance so filled up that we did not attempt to go in; but we descended with our candles into another ding out of lime stone rock, mingled with red, that when lighted the arched ceiling and walls resembled variegated marble. Tombs of the Judges, and caves, were scattered all along our pathway, in this field. We ascended some hills of considerable size, covered with vegetation, which were composed of rushes, found by analyzation to be those of animals, used perhaps as offerings.

The valley of Gihon—we had a fine walk above this vale and pool, where Solomon was proclaimed king, anointed by Zadock the priest, and Nathan the prophet. The deep valley and surrounding hill-sides were peculiarly suited to such an event; like a spacious amphitheatre, where thousands could have a full view of the proceedings with perfect ease. We looked down upon the picturesque valley which presents the same aspect as when Solomon rode down upon King David's mule amid the multitude which thronged around him, and the shouts of the people which went up as they blew the trumpet which echoed among the hills and cried "God save the king!" And here, also, Isaiah stood when he delivered the wonderful prophecy of the coming King and Savior of Israel

ALABAMA MOUNTAIN SCENERY.

BLACK CREEK FALLS—GADSDEN CIRCUIT—LOCAL PREACHERS.

MR. EDITOR: On Wednesday, the 16th inst., by the request of the Presiding Elder of this district, who has been sick for some time, I set out for a Quarterly Meeting on Gadsden Circuit, a small work lying on the western bank of the Coosa river. Tarrying one night with brother J. E. Grace, I arrived in the evening of the second day at the house of brother W. C. Torrentine, preacher in charge of Gadsden Circuit, and was met with the cordial grasp and whole-hearted welcome so common to Methodist preachers. On Friday we ascended the southern extremity of the Look Out Mountain for the purpose of visiting Black Creek Falls, the Niagara of Alabama. Wish it had another name—one more musical—aboriginal; but as we could not find an Indian name for it, let it be Black Creek Falls. As little as sight-seers and pleasure-seekers seem to know of it, there is here upon the top of the Look Out Mountain the most remarkable natural curiosity to be found in Alabama. On rising to the summit of the mountain, the scenery around you in every direction is of the most attractive and picturesque character. Standing upon this elevation you see to the south and east the dim outlines of the Mountains of Talladega, Calhoun, and St. Clair counties. On the west those of Blount, and on the north the beautiful valleys and ridges of Marshall and Dekalb. Here to your right as you look northward flows the meandering Coosa. Along its borders a rich and delightful valley, skirted by the mountain, extends for more than forty miles in a north-easterly direction.

Through this valley the Gadsden and Georgia railroad is located, extending from the former point towards Dalton, Ga. It has been surveyed, and when completed will connect with the Alabama and Tennessee river railroad, at Gadsden, forming an unbroken communication between Selma and the Eastern cities.

But what of the cataract say you? Can't describe it, sir. Just imagine some huge Pegasus, in the days of mythic story, flying over the foot of the mountain, and in a rage striking his hoof into the solid rock, thus making a semicircular excavation of several hundred feet in extent and more than one hundred feet in depth, and you have some idea, though inadequate, of the fearful precipice adown which the rushing torrent foams, and leaps and thunders! We descend a part of the cliff south of the falls by artificial steps, and all along our path to the stream below the falls immense rocks lie in ruinous confusion, as if the stream above, by the attrition of time, had worn away that part of the mountain or rent it asunder; or, as if nature, by some mighty upheaval, had thrown off these huge fragments along the banks of the turbid stream.

The falls are about 100 feet in height, and the body of water, though not more than 30 feet wide at this season of the year, makes noise enough for any one who has never heard the roar of Niagara. But the most striking feature in the scenery is a large amphitheatre formed behind the falls, about 800 by 125 feet in extent—the shape of a horses foot. There is first a floor of solid rock, rising gradually like the seats in a theater; then there is a roof formed by the overhanging cliffs, making a perfect shelter for this floor. Immediately below the basin into which the cataract empties, a large boulder rises, upon which, as a platform, a speaker could address twenty thousand persons sheltered by the rock. But of course he could not be heard unless you could still the thunders of the waterfall. The rock below, an amphitheatre, reminded me of Mr. Wesley addressing 10,000 persons in the amphitheatre at Gwennap. To add to the attractions of the place three Chalybeate springs burst out from under the overshadowing precipice, and a neat Hotel is kept by Mr. Thomas B. Edwards, who is incessant in his attentions to his guests. A sulphur spring is also inconvenient; and take it all in all it is one of the most delightful places for summer resort in this or any state. The thermometer rarely ever rises higher than 80 under the sheltering rocks.

The Quarterly Meeting was near Turkeytown, six miles from Gadsden—was very pleasant "the Lord was with us" in power. The people in that circuit enjoy preaching. They listen well. The local preachers are remarkable for their ability and zeal. One of them, Dr. Rolls, deserves especial mention for his talents and devotion to the work. An accomplished physician, a kind neighbor, an eloquent and earnest preacher, he has won all hearts to him. Possessed of a pleasing, though quiet address, a warm heart and a winning pathos—strong in his denunciations of sin, and tender in his appeals to sinners, lovely in private life, and godly in all his conversation, he commands the unlimited confidence of all who know him. He asked the writer of this last year: "Do you think any one is called to be a local preacher?" The reply was, "My commission was, 'Go into all the world;' I cannot answer for others." The Dr. has often been serious about entering the itinerancy, but such a large field of usefulness lies before him and around him that he hesitates. He preaches Christ every where—in his talk and in his walk—in his trade and in his profession, and has more men under his influence than any local man I ever knew. I trust he will not see this sketch, but if he does I hope he will forgive me. He is about 35 years of age and health feeble; but I pray that he may be long spared to the Church.

The other preachers of the circuit, all good and true, will not consider me as making an invidious distinction in thus making special mention of him. He enjoys their entire confidence. This sketch is to provoke others to renewed devotion to the cause of our common Master.

LETTER FROM NEW ENGLAND.

MR. EDITOR: Another prophet—a second Daniel—has arisen in the person of a fanatical Millerite, who resides in this city. He fixes the later part of this year (1858) as the one which is to witness the end of all things terrestrial, by a pyrotechnic exhibition. The solution of the problem has caused him much anxiety, and therefore, to explain this great mystery he has labored diligently, so as to be able to give the result of his labors to the world in due season for them to get their ascension robes ready. The result is arrived at mathematically. I will give you the formula: The square root of the cost of Ezekiel's chariot was 8564.—From this extract "prophetic value" of "scarlet lady of Babylon," 1282. Take from this the cube ram mentioned by the Prophet as "pushing westward," 4757, and you will have for remainder, 2824. Deduct from this "the number of the beasts" mentioned in the Apocalypse, 666, and you get at the result, 1858, the year in which the end of the world is to take place. This "learned prophet" is very eccentric—never wears shoes or stockings in summer or winter, and has not shaved his face or cut his hair for the last twenty years. You may see him the coldest day in winter, when the snow is two feet thick on the ground, walking through the streets barefooted. He is able to buy shoes and live comfortably; but he thinks that Christ is to come soon, and the greater hardships and suffering that he undergoes in the meantime, the greater will be his reward in heaven. He belongs to the sect called Millerites.

In New York and Boston, the Red Republicans, who are levellers in politics and haters of government and society, have been creating quite a stir, by parading through the streets with music and banners upon which are written revolutionary mottoes, and by holding public meetings at which speeches are made eulogizing Orsini and Pieri, the would-be assassins of Louis Napoleon; and, also, proclaiming their determination to avenge their death. At one of the public meetings held in Boston, Garretson, the noted abolitionist, addressed them. In his speech he denounced this government; and called upon them to unite as one man in the attempt to liberate "the poor down-trodden slave of the South from the iron despotism of the cruel and heartless slaveholder," when the crowd rent the air with their shouts, by which they signified their assent.

The abolition party is made up of German Socialists and political parsons. And here let me say, that when we hear of the Northern Church being abolitionized, we must confine the remark to the preachers; for the people are sick and tired of this hubbub on slavery. In many places in New England they have entirely broken up churches, by sowing discord and strife among the members, and by preaching politics instead of "Christ and Him crucified." I know of a small town of two thousand inhabitants in about twenty miles of this city; and out of that two thousand only two hundred attend church! What is the cause of this? Political preaching! The ministers of that place took sides with the Republican party; attended their meetings and torch-light processions, at which they spoke, denouncing the other party in the most fiendish manner; and upon the Sabbath they would enter the sacred desk, but it was polluted by their entrance into it, and instead of feeding the people with religious truths, they would belch forth a political speech, in which they would denounce in unmeasured terms perhaps three-fourths of their congregation!

I know a political parson who, in writing to a friend during the last Presidential campaign, signed himself "yours for Fremont and Christ!" I saw in Portsmouth, N. H., about thirty ministers marching in a torch-light procession, and in the same procession, before and behind them, were the drunken rabble. I do not wish to be understood as trying to convey the impression that such is the character of New England ministers; but as referring to the political parsons. For there are as pious and devoted ministers—ministers who have the cause of Christ as much at heart, and who labor as zealously to advance His kingdom on earth, as any ministers I have ever seen.

The fanatics of the North have set up a howl against the action of the American Tract Society, as if the demons of Pandemonium had broken loose, and were now roaming free through the country. But their howling is not noticed by the conservatives.

But it must be remembered that the Abolitionists are few in number, and are daily growing "beautifully less." W. G.

COMMENCEMENT AT CENTENARY.

This week has been full of interest to the hearts which throb with delight at the improvement of the young. It is enough to quicken the pulse's flow to think of the tide of influences which is to flow out from this college. These young men are to go out into society and leaven the masses for good or ill. Many have gone from the walls of Centenary to occupy useful, responsible stations. And it might prove a salutary task for one who has patronized a distant college, to look over our catalogue and see the names of our alumni; and then to look around and see where our graduates are and what they are doing. Most of them are fighting manfully the great battle of life, in useful responsible stations—the peers of the best men in the land—often the honored and trusted of their fellow-men.

It makes my blood bound and course through my veins with something of youth's enthusiasm to attend Commencement at Centenary College. I think of other Commencements, when I had personal interests in the exercises and some noble friends and kinsmen of mine took part. They are scattered now, some of them in every state from Alabama to California. Three, much loved, highly prized, are in that mystic land from whose regions no messages ever come back to us.

We looked on those graduates, so soon to take their place in the great hurrying noisy car of life, which will rush on with them to some station where they must build their own town, or be left to wander about as listless loungers, watching other men build up for themselves a reputation and a home. Most of those young men had the appearance of men who felt that there was work for every man to do, and that each was ready for his share.

The young men who took the first honors justified the accuracy of figures by their orations on Thursday. All felt that the honors were deserved. God bless the young men! And may their times and generation ever acknowledge that they merit the first honors. There was a graduate from Natchez, Mi., whose speech had some of the most beautiful metaphors and comparisons to which I ever listened. You felt as if a perfect garland of classic imagery had been thrown around you. Yet very few could hear him, he spoke so low. The young gentleman from Jefferson, Mi., has a head which is a "fac simile" of the pictures of Tom Moore the poet, yet his speech was rather practical than poetical. The young gentleman from Catahoula had a fine speech, but he spoke too low. I was pleased with the tone of sound morality which prevaded all the speeches; but—I object to the low tone of voice of most of the speakers. The young gentleman from Lafourche, and the one from Shreveport deserve praise for distinctness of sound.

I love Centenary, but there is some perfecting yet to be done for her. The young gentlemen do not, as a general thing, declaim well. In a country like this, where every man is liable to be called on for a speech, a good delivery, and fine gestures are indispensable. It has grown into a necessity that there be a teacher of elocution appointed. The Faculty have too many duties to perform to be able to give due attention to this matter. I imagine that those graduates had been studying very hard, and had not been able to bestow that attention upon the graces of oratory that the occasion demanded. Some of them had not allowed themselves time to commit their pieces perfectly.

In dress most of the young men looked the solid, quiet young gentleman. Some seemed too careless of exterior adorning; a few looked as if every portion of their attire was studiously conformed to the fashion plates. But why spend time in criticising the dear young fellows? I enjoyed Commencement greatly. Jackson is now, what she always has been, a hospitable town, capable of entertaining more persons than any other town of its size.

GAMMA.

SCHOOLS AT BATON ROUGE.

We are much gratified to learn by a letter to this office from our friend, Dr. C. G. Young, that the schools at Baton Rouge are in a flourishing condition, and that the recent examinations were very satisfactory. The Doctor says: "I have attended with much satisfaction the Annual Examinations of the Collegiate Institute and the Read Seminary which took place here during the present week. The former is an Academical School established at this place by Professor Magruder. No better place can be found any where in the United States to educate boys who do not intend a regular collegiate course, or to prepare those who do intend such course to enter college. The principal of the Read Seminary is well known throughout the State, having been engaged at this place in educating young ladies for fourteen years. During the session which has just terminated eighty-pupils have been in attendance, and for three days have elosed satisfactory examinations, closing on Friday evening with a most entertaining musical concert.

Having frequently visited this Institution during the past year I am prepared to commend the progress the pupils have made. The course of instruction is full, and the teaching is thorough. I do not know any lady who is better qualified to have charge of young ladies than Mrs. Read, or any better place to educate young ladies than Read Seminary. I have been struck with the appearance of health presented by the pupils in both of these schools. The entire amount paid for medical bills at Read Seminary during the past ten months is only six dollars. I should not omit to mention that the Literary Societies of both institutions were addressed by C. K. Marshall D. D. At the Collegiate Institute the Doctor was in his happiest mood, and the address was in his own peculiarly felicitous style. At the Seminary he was surprised, but it was Marshall that spoke, and the audience were enchanted by his bewitching eloquence."

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

MR. EDITOR: In April last its indebtedness was very nearly $7000. Since that time subscriptions have been obtained, amounting to over $3300. Some, who in the beginning of the enterprise gave liberally, have come forward a second time and subscribed. In addition to these there are many other persons in De Soto and the parishes adjoining who have a common interest in this educational enterprise. To these, therefore, would we appeal for aid. The agent is now in the field and designs to call in person upon all that he can, but still he may fail to see many that would probably be able and willing to contribute. It may not be amiss to propose to any such that they address the agent at Mansfield, stating what they are willing to subscribe, payable on or before the 1st of April, 1859; he will take great pleasure in acknowledging the fact through the Advocate.

The Methodist Church in Louisiana has a snug little interest at stake here, in the shape of grounds, buildings, etc., costing, in all, something over $33,000. And whether this interest shall be greatly increased in value and importance rests with the Church and with the friends of liberal education. Let these be true to their trust and the day is not far distant when Mansfield Female College shall stand a proud monument of their liberality—a temple of science, from whose consecrated halls, in the years to come, hundreds upon hundreds, with intellects enlightened, natures refined and elevated, shall go forth to bless the world in which they live; while they shall continue to hold in greatful remembrance the names of those by whose munificence so beautiful a temple as this has been erected and dedicated to female education.

REPORT OF THE EXAMINATION.

The undersigned, having been requested to act, in the absence of the Visiting Committee, beg leave to state that the exercises commenced Friday, the 2d inst., and closed Wednesday, 7th.

Among the one hundred pupils examined, not more than three could be ranked as low as passable, one-fourth of the whole may be reported good, one-half very good, and one-fourth perfect.

The improved method of teaching arithmetic, geography and English grammar, gave general satisfaction. An examination so creditable, both to pupils and teachers, must have been preceded by much faithfulness on the one hand, and great perseverance and close application on the other.

The specimens of paintings and drawings exhibited in the department of fine arts indicates that the pupils had made rapid proficiency, and that the instructress therein ranks high in her profession.

The declamations, colloquies and musical entertainments, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, were among the finest we ever heard. Wednesday was Commencement day.

The graduates, five in number, read their compositions before a crowded assembly of attentive listeners, who gave evidence of their high appreciation. For brilliancy of thought, beauty of expression and gracefulness of manner, and fine modulation of voice, Miss Nellie Long excelled, in the valedictory.

Commencement day was a day full of promise for the Mansfield Female College. Expressions of satisfaction were heard on every hand.—Frankness and thoroughness had characterized the examination throughout. Citizens, friends and visitors were proud that such an institution of learning had been founded in Northwest Louisiana. Visitors were pleased with the town of Mansfield, and delighted with the hospitality of those citizens whose houses were opened for their entertainment during the Commencement occasion.

The ensuing session opens 1st October next. We solicit for the institution an increase of patronage.

"THE COUNSEL OF THE UNGODLY."

One of the many apt and striking expressions of the royal prophet, David, is this: "the counsel of the ungodly." It is wealthy and weighty with meaning, and uttered in most happy and forcible words. "Counsel" conveys the idea of instruction and influence, whether imparted by words, or by the common utterance of opinions, or by habitual association and example; whether intended directly for particular persons, or brought to bear upon society, in any manner whatever.

All men and women form their opinions, and principles, adopt their courses and avocations, and have their characters, lives, and destinies moulded, under some kind of "counsel" or other. Naiman judges and decides in reference to life and its interests originally, independent of the influence and suggestions of the sentiments and practices of others. It is therefore the part of the most ordinary wisdom for each man and woman to consider well the "counsel" to which they "walk" and under the silent influence of which their present and eternal destiny is being determined, either for good or evil.

There is then, "the, counsel of the ungodly," which is the same thing as "the wisdon which is from beneath, which is earthly sensual and devilish," described by St. Paul. It is a "counsel" which proceeds from "the spirit that worketh in the children of disobedience," diverting them from "the path of life" into "the course of this world," which is "the way of sinners." There is danger that we fall into it, for the majority are travelling that way; for "broad is the way that leadeth unto destruction, and many there be which go in thereat." This is the "way that seemeth right unto man, but the end thereof is death." The sign-board of this way is, that it "seemeth right unto man;" that is, it is in harmony with his natural tastes and deserves—in unison with "the wisdom of this world," "the counsel of the ungodly."

It is the more dangerous, because we are approached in the way of "counsel," that is with advice, manifesting a sympathy for us and an interest in our happiness. This "counsel" is often given us by our nearest and dearest friends, "the partners of our blood," Wise and wealthy men, and beautiful and fashionable women, walk in that "counsel," and bid us follow. There is danger, Oh, there is danger!—And when we once allow ourselves to adopt "the counsel of the ungodly," it is very difficult to mortify our desires, to break our habits, and to separate ourselves from the company of the world. In what "counsel do we walk?" Let us consider while there is time. And what "counsel" do we give to others? Let us consider before we ruin somebody, if we have not already done it. Save Lord, we beseech thee!

A VALUABLE WORK.

Cyclopedia of Commerce and Commercial Navigation. By J. Smith Homans, and J. Smith Homans, Jr., Harper and Bros., pp. 2007. 1858

Through J. C. Morgan, of this city, who has it for sale, we have received a copy of this large and valuable repository of commercial information. We do not suppose there is any thing of the kind in existence that will compare with it for fullness and accuracy. It contains, also, a vast amount of knowledge of all kinds, historical, geographical, biographical, scientific, and—more than we enumerate. Not only business men, but every American citizen should possess it. It contains a whole education, for all practical purposes, precisely adapted to "the great Yankee nation." Without such a work, Yankee knows scarcely any thing, adequately, of his own country. An attentive study of it will make him more enlightened, more patriotic, more liberal as a man, and prouder as an American citizen, than he would be without availing himself of the immense fund of knowledge which this work holds out to him. Vast historic al knowledge is also contained in it, and as a work of geographical reference it is at present unequaled. It is illustrated with maps and contains the latest and most reliable statistical tables of the population, productions, wealth, exports, imports, etc., of all countries.

The Montgomery (Ala.) mail, in reference to this work, says: "There is nothing connected with our history as a nation or with our progress and prosperity at home and abroad, that is more worthy of study than is the history of the rise, progress, and present position of our vast commercial marine. Possessing as we do an immense sea coast, varying in temperature, productions, and climate, bordering on both the Atlantic and Pacific, it seems to be foreordained that our country is to take the lead of all other nations in commercial enterprise. Our sails already whiten every sea, and in every port of prominence can be observed the stars and stripes of this, the greatest republic of the earth. We have opened trade and commercial relations not only with the enlightened nations of Europe, but have even caused the jealous Japanese and the timid and naval ghtened Islanders of the South Seas to exchange commodities with us, and to supply us with luxuries of which our predecessors were totally deprived. Mainly to the enterprise, energy and industry of our commercial fellow citizens may be attributed the civilization and christianization of the untutored Sandwich, Phillipine, Sunda and other Isles, and the archipelagoes which stud both the great oceans. What remains to be done in the future in this regard, no one, not even the most sanguine can anticipate. Our steady advance—the sure and rapid strides which young America has made in commercial knowledge, and in carrying out enterprises which have baulked other older and more powerful nations, are beginning to be looked upon by the world at large as indicia of the great truth which our fathers boldly enunciated amid the scoffs, the taunts and jeers of old and decrepid monarchies—that man is capable of self-government, and that a nation needed not the tinsel and draperies of royalty to make it either strong, proud, powerful, enlightened, or energetic in peace or valiant brave or undaunted in war.

It becomes every American who wishes to understand the extent to which our gigantic commercial interests have [illegible], to consult this cyclopedia.

BISHOP SOULE.—Since the General Conference, Bishop Soule has made a visit to his friends in Ohio and Michigan, preaching with a great deal of his meridian power, much to the gratification of those who heard him. He has returned in fine spirits, and in pretty good health.

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH LAID AT LAST.

"The (telegraphic) lines have fallen to us," and made the homes of the modern inhabitants of this world "pleasant places." "We have a goodly heritage."

The greatest of all human enterprises has been accomplished! Modern human skill and energy were not to be baffled within the limits of the possible. A year ago the attempt was a failure, and it was too late to make another until another year. In the meanwhile many discouragements presented themselves. Scientific men said that, if laid, the electric current could not be sustained for so great a distance, at such immense depths under water; so that the prospect of failure, after the successful laying of the cable, stared the heroic adventurers in the face. And then the next attempt to lay it was a failure. Storms and terrible weather opposed. One of the gallant steamers was nearly lost.

It seemed as if the forces of physical nature, which have been one of the greatest obstacles in the way of civilization, against which man has toiled and battled from the beginning, and over which the greatest victory of all was about to be obtained, were determined to resist to the last extremity. It seemed as if old ocean, which had hitherto been "the middle wall of partition" between the nations of the earth, and which was now about to be so "broken down," figuratively speaking, as to enable men from the "four quarters of the earth" to talk over it to each other, was determined, if possible, not to suffer such an overcoming of the power undisputedly held from the beginning of the world. But the battle has been fought and the victory won.

One really feels impressed with the thought that this is a practical prophecy, and symbol, and means, of the approach of that "good time coming," when men shall learn war no more," and when "nothing shall hurt or destroy" in all God's dominions. Reckless and unprincipled speculation, by which some parties are sometimes greatly wronged, and others enriched by ill-gotten gains, and by which the commercial word has heretofore been converted into an immense lottery, or grand gambling arena, will now cease. Trade will be conducted more honestly and more certainly; and, consequently, the world will enjoy, for the first time, the divinely-intended benefits of a healthful commercial progress. Supply and demand, the two great and natural laws of trade, will govern, without any material violation.

The day of the glory of the great ocean steamers is over. They will need to be advertized hereafter. Heretofore the telegraphic despatches from them, and about them, announcing their arrival and departure, have been worth millions, as advertisements. We shall not depend upon steamship arrivals for the news any longer. We shall get the news every day from every important part of the world. Daily newspapers will wonderfully increase in importance. Religious newspapers will have to add dailies to their usual weekly issues. We are even now thinking about a "Daily Christian Advocate" in this office. Give us the circulation we should have with the weekly, and we shall be able after a while to speak definitely about the daily. We must have one here during the next General Conference, and we should like to be experienced in the business before the time.

One of the great dangers connected with these increased facilities for obtaining the news, is, that men will be tempted to read nothing but news. There is danger that real mental labor, such as distinguished the elder times of English thought and literature, and which was promoted by isolation from the din of the great world, and by solitude and loneliness of soul, will now decline, and that men will become simply ready and superficial chatterers about the news. However, "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." It is a glorious consummation. The idea of the telegraph, as well as all other great scientific truths, was no doubt a revelation from God, as Prof. Morse himself believes. There ought be a general day of thanksgiving appointed, throughout both Europe and the United States, to offer up the gratitude of the civilized world for this wonderful success of the greatest of human enterprises.

The Cable has been landed on both shores, and signals are passing uninterruptedly. It is in perfect order. The Cable laid is sixteen hundred and ninety-eight nautical miles in length from the Telegraph station at Bull's Bay, on the American coast, to the head of Valencia harbor, and for more than two-thirds that distance is laid in water over two miles deep. Communication between the two vessels has been kept up constantly since the vessels separated. The electrical instruments are attached to the ends of the coil on each ship, and worked the same as in a regular telegraph office.

The uninterrupted and perfect communication through the whole length of the Cable, submerged at an average depth of two miles, has demonstrated, beyond a doubt, the practicability of the enterprise. Lieutenant Everett's machinery for paying out the Cable has worked admirably. Captain Hudson, of the Niagara, Messrs. Everett and Woodhouse, telegraph engineers, the electricians, the officers of the ship, and every man on board the American portion of the fleet exerted themselves to the utmost to make the expedition successful, and by the blessing of Divine Providence, they were successful beyond general expectation. The Niagara will discharge her cargo of telegraph materials at Trinity Bay, and after coaling at St. Johns, will return to New York for orders.

The announcement of the successful laying of the Atlantic Cable, which was delivered at the office of the New York and New Orleans Southern Line at 12 30 P. M. was received by the Telegraph News Reporter at New Orleans at 11.50 A. M, being forty minutes ahead of time. If the Trans-Atlantic line shows an equal degree of promptness with the Southern Line, a despatch left at the London office at 9 P. M, would reach us before 5 o'clock the same evening; or four hours ahead of time.

Since writing the above, the following items have come to hand by telegraph. The Niagara paid out 882 miles of cable—the Agamemnon 1010 miles. When the connection with the telegraphic instruments was perfected, a strong electric current was received from the other side of the Atlantic. On the 6th of August strong electric signals were received from Valentia Bay during the whole day. The recording instruments to be used are being prepared and graduated to suit the cable. These arrangements are progressing as rapidly as possible. The Queen's message and the President's reply are expected some evening this week. Upon the receipt of the Queen's message, and the reply of the President, of which notice will be sent to all parts of the country, there will be a general celebration in honor of the completion of the great enterprise, in which every town and village is invited to join. The New York city Council received a message from the Mayor recommending that the hospitalities of the city be extended to all concerned in the Trans-Atlantic Telegraph enterprise. The citizens of New York city are requested to illuminate their buildings. All the public buildings will be illuminated on the night of the day fixed for the public celebration. A municipal dinner will be given to all engaged in the glorious project.

CENTENARY COLLEGE OF LOUISIANA.

MR EDITOR: The commencement exercises of Centenary took place last week, beginning on the 25th ult., with the commencement sermon from Rev. C. K. Marshall, of Mississippi, and closing on Thursday the 29th. The exercises of the four days, (after Sabbath); consisted of the Preparatory Exhibition; Baccalaureate address by Prof. Holcombe; the dedication of the new halls of the Franklin and Union Literary Societies; the anniversary exhibitions of the same; the address of Hon. James S. Brown before the same, and the speeches of the graduating class. Near fifty speeches and orations were delivered, and I may say were highly creditable to the institution, and especially to the young gentlemen, composing the class to whose hands her honors were confided for the present year. The Baccalaureate by Prof. H. was full of suggestive interest; full of pith, full of strength, full of truth; no empty declamation, no imaginative flights, above and beyond the comprehension of men. He spoke like one whose thoughts emanated directly from the laboratory of the mind where a severe analysis detects the ore of truth which lies embedded in the dross of error, and directs his disciples how to separate, coin, and render it current.

The College Chapel, which it is said will accommodate three thousand persons, was pretty well filled. Most of the youth and beauty of the Felicianas were present, and representatives from almost every part of Louisiana and the Southern part of Mississippi.

A more hospitable people than those of Jackson I have never seen; the number of people which they feed on commencement occasions, it is really incredible. I saw at some places, tables which would accommodate fifty persons, several times filled; but their generosity is not confined to special occasions, it has been my privilege years ago, to converse with young gentlemen who said with tears of gratitude in their eyes, that the worthy citizens of Jackson had been fathers to them; and the matrons had been as kind as their mothers could have been. I have been thrown much among the patrons of Centenary for the last twelve years; I have yet to hear the first complaint by students or parents of neglect in time of sickness.

The report of the Examining Committee will be published, and will be highly gratifying to the friends of Southern education. The fact that this committee is composed of learned gentlemen from the different Christian denominations, as well as from the different learned professions, is, in our estimation, very commendatory; as it shows a willingness to be scrutinized by those who have no denominational interests to serve by the success of the Institution.

Centenary College is one of the most gratifying monuments of the enterprise, public spirit and liberality of the citizens of Mississippi and Louisiana. About $250,000, we are informed, have been spent since the first movement was made to build a college on the present site. Most of this was spent by the State of Louisiana to great disadvantage, previous to the act of 1845, by which it was conveyed to the present Board of Trustees and Visitors.

An amount of not less than one hundred thousand dollars have been expended by the Board in building, repairing, furnishing and endowing, since it came into their hands. The center building, just completed, is one of the most stately edifices in the country, and, with its wings, presents a front of over seven hundred feet. This gives twenty-eight additional rooms, making the whole number of rooms in the main college buildings ninety-four. The center building contains a chapel, one hundred and one by seventy-five feet in the clear, with gallery all round, (this chapel, in beauty and architectural elegance, is believed not to be equaled by any college chapel on the continent,) two society halls, thirty-six by sixty feet; a geological and mineralogical cabinet, twenty-four by seventy feet, together with rooms for library, apparatus, machines, lecture and recitation rooms, laboratory, and offices occupy the remaining twenty-four rooms.

About sixty large and well-ventilated rooms are used for dormitory purposes.

The faculty is composed of seven professors, besides those in the Preparatory Department. The six who have been laboring during the past few years, have given great satisfaction to all who have witnessed the examinations.—Our friends who are fond of agricultural pursuits, will be glad to learn that agricultural chemistry is to be embraced in the department of Natural Science.

Centenary is surrounded by delightful groves of pine, magnolia, beech, oak and elm, situated in a high, dry country twelve miles from the Mississippi river, east of Bayou Sara. With the accommodations of Centenary College, its able and industrious faculty, its bland and healthy atmosphere, its splendid appratus, library cabinet and machines, and the refined and intelligent character of the citizens of Jackson, we know of no place in the United States more deserving of patronage. It is a parent seeking an institution which can transform stupidity into sprightliness, without any effort on the part of his son, of course Centenary will not suit him; or if he wishes to substitute some venerable name, like Yale or Harvard, for scholarship, it will not suit him; but if he wishes his son to acquire scholarship as the reward of severe toil and diligent application, he can be gratified at Centenary, and receive his son at the end of his course with a constitution not impaired by the rigor of a climate to which he is unaccustomed.

For if the assertion of Dr. Alcott of Boston be true, that "one-fourth of all the deaths in that city were from consumption arising from scrofula, which was induced in a large proportion by school treatment," it is a matter of some moment to a parent, who does not wish his son sacrificed to gratify the ambition of unfeeling teachers to think of the inconsistency of sending him so far from his sunny nativity to be stimulated by appeals to his pride into the highest and most injurious, because most sedentary exertion. He may come back, as many have with roses on his cheeks, but there may be, as often has been, a worm in the stem; the very flush may be hectic. If Northern professors be superior, we have their works of science which can be understood and taught here, further than any of our sons will advance in their college course. But I hope we are not willing to admit their superiority, and adopt their principles of moral science, political economy and interpretation of the constitution. I hope we will not make the ignoble and untruthful admission that in scholarship, intellectuality, and means, we are incapable of affording scholastic privileges for young men, enough at least to tax their physical strength for the first twenty-five or thirty years of life. Why not wipe out the reproach that we are in a state of semi-barbarism, and have to send our sons thousands of miles from home to be educated; and more than all, to a country infested with superficial thinkers, whose stupidity is only equaled by their fanatical hatred of the South.

The degree of A. B. upon Messrs. S. H. Brown, of Williamsport, La.; G. W. Buckner, Baton Rouge, La.; H. W. Bullen, Jefferson county, Miss; W. O. Burns, Bossier, La.; R. P. Cates, Shreveport, La.; J. J. Davis, Jefferson county, Miss.; A. C. Dunartruit, St. Mary's, La.; W. W. Farmer, Farmersville, La.; C. Goodman, West Feliciana, La.; C. C. Harris, Baton Rouge, La.; J. J. Hodges, Bossier, La.; W. E. Irvine, Natchez, Miss.; F. A. Jones, Jefferson county, Miss.; H. C. Quin, St. Helena, La.; L. Row, West Feliciana, La.; W. F. Schwing, St. Mary's, La.; T. W. Scott, Jefferson county, Miss.; B. H. K. Wailes, Catahoula, La.; J. C. Williams, Thibodaux, La.; who graduated with much credit.

The second Degree of the Arts was conferred upon Messrs. A. P. Brown, E. J. Delony, W. F. Norsworthy, Chas. C. P. DeLee, of Louisiana; W. N. Tignor, of Mississippi, and Wm. W. Wall, of New Orleans. The Honorary Degree of M. A. was conferred upon Hon. W. J. Hamilton, of La., and Rev. B. Jones, of Port Gibson, Miss. That of L. L. D. upon the Hon. C. P. Smith, Chief Justice of Mississippi, and Hon. E. T. Merrick, Chief Justice of the State of Louisiana, and that of D. D. upon Rev. W. J. Sasnett, of Georgia.

PREACHERS WANTED.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate says that preachers, of the right stamp, willing to devote themselves to the work, are greatly needed in all our Northwestern territory. There is room in the Missouri Conference; there is room in the St. Louis Conference; and there is room in the Kansas Conference. In all these experienced men are greatly needed. Those now there are not sufficient for the work. It the) work) extends faster than the number of preachers increase. The population of the country is increasing very rapidly, and though our preachers, taken as a body, are energetic, active, and efficient, they have more calls than it is possible for them to answer. How a Methodist preacher can waste the precious life which may be so valuable in the salvation of souls, and in the extension and establishment of the church, is a mystery; especially in this age, when such glorious openings are vouchsafed to us.

Bishop Early calls for preachers for Kansas. Bishop Andrew, speaking of the Indian Mission Conference, for which preachers are wanted, says: "Now, O ye Methodist preachers, many of whom are busy with your merchandise, your plantations, and your professional pursuits, have you been sprinkled with the blood of atonement; has God laid the burden of souls upon you; has the Holy Ghost called you to lay all upon the altar of your condescending and adorable Redeemer; have you a heart to feel for the perishing, and an ear open to the wail of the wretched and the call of the Church? O man of God, arise and shake yourself from the fetters which the world, the flesh and the devil have thrown around you, and cast off the sleep into which you have fallen; gird on the armor of God, hearken to the battle-cry of God and truth, and rush to the field of conflict, of glory, fully confiding in your glorious Leader for support, and reward and final victory."

REV. JOHN M. DAWSON, of the Arkansas Conference, died on the 14th of July. Bro. Dawson was in charge of the Clarksville circuit, and was a young man of promise. His end was one of peace. Last year he traveled the Grand Shoals circuit, and up to the time of his death had traveled Clarksville circuit with great acceptability.

RELIGION AND PUBLIC MEN.

"Saxon," the very tasteful and interesting New Orleans correspondent of the Nashville Christian Advocate, speaking of Gen. Quitman's death, says: "No man's death has excited more universal regret. There is no dissent to the verdict that he was an honest man. His most bitter political opponents accord to him the character of disinterestedness and purity. These qualities were as conspicuous in his public and political as in his private life. In these times the loss of such a man must be severely felt. Quitman could ever be pointed to as an honest politician, in whom the patriot was more eminent than the politician, and in whom the politician rose to the dignity of statesmanship.

The religious reader will wish to know how the deceased statesman stood affected towards practical and experimental piety. On this subject our secular journals maintain the characteristic silence and apparent indifference.—What his views were and what his hopes in the final hour, we cannot learn from the many eulogies that have been written, and the numerous tributes that have been paid to his memory. This absence of all allusion to the most important of all personal matters, and in which the public is quite as much interested as any other, may not be taken as a tacit admission that the subject of so much encomium had nothing of religion in his life and character.—It is rather an indication of that irreligiousness which marks the bulk of the journalism of the day. It shows the manner in which religion is divorced from the affairs and interests of life, and the carefulness with which personal piety is ignored in the estimate which the press puts upon the character of our public men."

ANOTHER CASE.

MR. EDITOR: I learn that the dissatisfaction in the Church at Nashville on the subject of dancing, has been brought to a close, by allowing the offending party, C. D. Elliott, to withdraw from the Church, just before final action. These compromises of the Disciplinary rights of the Church, constitute a very questionable policy, by which we never gain anything in the end. The church of God has rights as well as individuals, and they should be maintained.

In the mean time I am more than mortified to learn there is a quasi Methodist school in Mississippi, one over which a professed Methodist presides, in which a dancing master is employed! Is this so? I shall be more than glad to be corrected if I am misinformed. I trust that no member of the Alabama or Mississippi Conferences will allow any man to remain a member of the Church, who has dancing taught in his school, or tolerate members of the Church in having their children taught a vice that is doing more to debauch female purity and character than any other of the day. The Church and ministry must take and maintain an unwavering stand upon this subject. A minister who shrinks from his duty in this matter, must not expect to escape censure by his Conference.

WATCHMAN.

SINGING SCHOOLS ON SUNDAY.

A correspondent asks the following questions: "Is it right for members of the Church to attend singing schools on the Sabbath? Can they do so, and not violate the command to keep the Sabbath holy?"

The pastor, or presiding elder, should be asked such questions, before asking an editor. No general rule can be laid down for the government of such cases. They are to be determined by the circumstances.

If the singing school is for the purpose of making money, it is highly sinful to attend it on the Sabbath. If it interfere with religious service, it is sinful. If it have neither of these objections, it may yet be so conducted as be sinful. If it do not interfere with divine service, and is intended for the improvement of the singing in public worship, and is piously conducted, it may not be sinful. Indeed, in such a case, it may be a benefit, not only in the way of improving the wretched singing which is so common; but, also, where there is no preaching, of spending a part of the Sabbath day pleasantly, piously, and improvingly. But singing schools are difficult to conduct in such a way as not to violate the Sabbath, and to desecrate the house of God. It cannot be done, unless it is made a religious service.

A QUESTION TO BE CONSIDERED.

A gentleman, in a private letter, asks the following very pertinent question: "Is it fair for brethren and friends to write letters to a christian minister asking his services and inviting him to attend meetings, lay corner stones, dedicate churches, preach on special occasions, and work for the public generally, and enclose neither stamps nor envelops with which to prepay the answers? I know a minister who often pays from twenty to fifty cents two or three times every week, and often as much for days together, in reply to correspondents who never consider that they write not on his business but their own. What say you? Is it just?"

We add: Is it right for a minister to have to pay his own expenses on these visits, by invitation, for the benefit of the public?

THE HOME CIRCLE.

The August number gets out in good time—a more important matter, in the way of its success, than has been conceived. Another letter from Summerfield to Bishop Soule opens the number. No. I. of "Summerfield Stories," by Rev. R. A. Young, A. M., follows. Mr. Young, in a prefatory note, gracefully welcomes Dr. Huston to the second term of the Editorship of the Home Circle. We like first. A "Baccalaureate Address," by Rev. Dr. Mitchell, is an able and eloquent paper, in the Doctor's best style. Many other papers of value fill up the number. The editorial department is well and gracefully furnished.

THE LIFE OF BISHOP CAPERS

"The Life of William Capers, D. D., one of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, including an Autobiography; by W. M. Wightman, D. D., published by J. D. Berrin, Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., 1858," has been sent us. It is a well bound book of over five hundred pages, about two hundred and twenty pages the first part being taken up with the autobiography, which reaches from the Bishop's birth to his thirty-first year. It is written in an easy, graceful, and charming style so characteristic of the lamented Bishop. No other but Dr. Wightman should have been chosen to write the life of Dr. Capers. Both natives of Carolina, both happy representatives of the thought and culture of the society, and characteristic Methodism, of their time, both refined gentlemen and devoted Methodist preachers, and both intimately associated many years, it is peculiarly appropriate the former should write the life of the latter. And Dr. Wightman, while a fine writer generally, excels in biography. His power of discriminating character, so to speak, is remarkable. This book will become a classic in Methodist literature. Of course, all reading Methodists, North and South, as well as all who desire to make acquaintance with the representative men of the last half century, will not fail to procure the work.

HEALTH OF THE CITY.

During the week ending Sunday last, there were 140 deaths from yellow fever, of which only ten were Americans. It is fatal among the shipping. It is spreading, however, into many parts of the city. Unacclimated persons, unless they have decided to become acclimated, trusting to providence for recovery, had better keep away.

There were three hundred and six deaths all during the week ending Sunday morning. This is about the usual average, deducting those from yellow fever. People should be regular in their habits, temperate in the gratification of their appetites, making no change in ordinary habits. They should be cheerful and go about their business as usual. Many persons have lived here for many years and escaped the yellow fever; and most who think they have, themselves, if they take it, will get well if they commence a remedial course in time. All, have "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ," and the "perfect love which casteth out fear."

BROOKS' HOME.

We give it this name, because it is not a hotel, nor will the gentlemanly proprietor, Mr. Brooks, call it a boarding house. It is a home for the gentlemen and ladies who love it, either wholly or partially. We have seen more at homes out side of our own home than can eat at any time you choose, and have anything you wish. A better table we have not seen in the South. Everything is done that can be done to make those sojourning there comfortable and contented. The situation is the best in the city—on Camp street, opposite the upper corner of La Fayette Square, looking upon its umbrageous trees and sweet grass, and upon the crowds of merry happy children that congregate there in the afternoon, at the sound of the organ.

A SUNDAY PAPER.

We have changed our publication day from Saturday to Wednesday, in consequence of the opinion expressed by our worthy printer, which was believed to be correct, that all our readers will get the paper before the ensuing Sabbath. Most of them have not a paper suitable for Sunday reading. This week, however, we were delayed to Thursday.

DR. MYERS, of the Southern Christian Advocate, quite pleasantly salutes us. He has our sincere thanks. Such a compliment from such a paper as the Southern Christian Advocate is indeed. It is an excellent paper, and increasing in power and usefulness. Dr. Myers has done much to elevate Methodist journalism, and to raise that standard which it is destined to reach. Our hopes, in this direction, depend much upon his paper.

REV. S. WATSON, editor of the Memphis Christian Advocate, has a very earnest and wise editorial on the subject of primary schools. Has our brother Watson any plan to suggest by which primary Methodist schools can be made available for the masses of our people who cannot send their children to our high schools and colleges? We should be glad to see such a plan.

BISHOP ANDREW has been quite feeble since the General Conference. We saw him at the house of Dr. Summers, in June at his home in Summerfield. He was unable to accompany us to a meeting of the Trustees of the Southern University. He was projecting a tour through the upper part of South Carolina, where his connections, we are quite sure, would be highly appreciated, and where his health would probably be improved.

REV. Dr. LOVICK PIERCE, the "old eloquent" of Southern Methodism, at the recent commencement of Wesleyan Female College, Macon, Ga., preached a characteristic commencement sermon on the text in Titus ii. 3: "In like manner, also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with broidered hair, or pearls, or costly array, but (which becometh women professing godliness,) with good works." Would that all the (fashionable) world would have heard it!

REV. DR. DIXON, known in this country as delegate from the Wesleyan Conference to the Northern General Conference, is said to be entirely blind.

MR. W. A. BUTLER, author of "Nothing to Wear," has a new poem in press.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

News from our Home Work.

"To spread Scriptural Holiness over these Lands."

As the Advocate is now largely confined to the dismal upon our columns is lowy, we gladly welcome the revival correspondence, except in the case of unusually interesting ones, which we publish. In the depletion of our mail as may see a large portion of the pages of this week. We trust the preachers and officials will send us reports of revivals in the way of revivals, collections, church building, and the like. God grant a general revival!

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Webster Circuit—

Rev. J. M. Jones, writes of a most glorious revival at Pleasant Hill: "We have just closed a protracted meeting which was instrumental in the conversion of many souls. At every service for nine days at the Hill, Christian, sinners out upon mine ers and mourners. Seven tongues flamed upon elect bodies, and they all told the world as love of Jesus. Near the close the young disciple were called up to renew their covenant; but no license was the feeling that the precise number was not taken. We suppose that not less than sixty or seventy professed faith in Christ.—Twenty-seven were add to our number, the rest we hope will soon be found in company with us, or some other branch of the Church of Christ. Then came the separation, and oh! shall I ever forget it? Old soldiers, young volunteers, God's people of every name upon their feet, resolving never to lay down the armor, until the final victory shall be gained. Ten or twelve were still at the altar, pleading with God, as a man would for his life."

Such a time, he says, has never been seen in those pine hills. The local preachers rendered valuable service.—Special mention is made of Exr. J. O. Woodward, a superannuated preacher, who has been teaching school to support his family. Bro. Jones says it is a shame that he is not so supported as to be able to devote all his time to the work. They have a series of meetings ahead. Put the Advocate in the hands of the new members at once.

Georgetown Circuit—

Rev. R. T. Henningston writes: "We held a protracted meeting, of five days, at Georgetown, embracing the third Saturday in July. It was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord,' and two joined.

We have just closed a meeting of six days at Providence. This was a precious meeting, our congregation large and well behaved; all seemed interested. About twenty-three souls were converted, forty-four whites and seven blacks were received on probation. At the last hour service on the last day, there were a number of conversions. Not a mourning one left, it was almost a clean sweep."

Glorious Revival at Rehoboth—

Missionary Collections of $140—Fifty-five probable Church.

Rev. V. H. Johnston, of Bayou Pierre Circuit, Mississippi Conference, writes us of a glorious revival at Rehoboth, on that work. It was the right kind of a revival. Not only were many converted, but a very large missionary collection was taken up. "How much is the circuit going to raise this year? Is it going to be the banner circuit? How will the missionary collection in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and in all the South-western Conferences, compare with those of last year? Let us begin to hear from the different works. Bro. Johnston has not yet informed us how many subscribers to the Advocate were obtained at that revival. It will shortly be heard. But to the letter. He wishes the Nashville Advocate to copy:

"We began a protracted meeting at the above mentioned place on Saturday the 21st ult., which continued until 9 o'clock Sunday night, August 1st. The Lord was with his people in power. At times during the meeting it the never been our privilege to see such manifestations of the glory of God.

On the last Sabbath we had a most excellent love feast in which young converts arose as witnesses for Jesus.—Baptised some, one adult received about fifteen into full connection. I made missionary speech, and took up the largest collection, we have no hesitation in saying, taking every thing into consideration, that has been taken in the State, numbering up to the hundreds sometimes, as high as one dollar and one dollar and eighty cents. The last night was the great time of the feast; twenty-four joined.—Of the number was an old man, who has not been to Church for twenty years; about twenty young men; may God grant many of them out to be heralds of the cross. We left between thirty and forty at the altar. As much as we could desire sought, twenty-five were help fully and powerfully converted. Fifty-four joined during the meeting.

Thanks to the brethren of the ministry for their efficient aid. The Rev. Thos. Nixon was with us the first part of the meeting and preached with power.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

State Street Colored Church—

Rev. A. McBayne, the faithful and efficient missionary to the State street Colored Mission, Mobile, Ala., sends a very earnest and encouraging report. He says: "The revival spirit that visited us last year, and which resulted in the conversion of over one hundred souls, lingered with us during the winter, and when spring opened it increased and the people say there has not been such a revival among the colored people in this city for sixteen years. Two hundred and fifty-seven had joined the Church on probation up to the close of the last quarter, and more or less are received every Sabbath."

The city tax book informs us that there are about 6,000 slaves belonging to the city, besides the slaves there are 800 or 900 free persons of color, and creoles, and by reference to the various protestant Church records it is found that but 1,244 of the entire colored population are members of protestant churches. Our Sabbath-school is large and prospering in usefulness. A number of the larger scholars have professed conversion and joined the Church and promise to make more intelligent, better trained, and embro useful members than most others."

Prairie Creek Colored Mission—

Rev. P. R. McCurry, sends his report for the third quarter. He says: "I have received twenty persons on probation—baptized a few children—and married six couples. Overseers say they feel the matrimonial vow to be more binding when married by a preacher; the effect is salutary. Three have been recently converted, and many interested for their salvation. The mission is in a healthy condition. Could we hold protracted meeting, many might be converted. Having access to them only on the Sabbath, we need that several plantations should unite to building a church. Then we could serve more plantations, and labor longer with them."

Kowaligee—

A Correspondent writes that they had some good meetings at that point. Six joined the Church, and the members were greatly encouraged. Rev. Mr. Stearns is pastor.

Tapulga Circuit—

Rev. H. J. Hunter, writes, that a great work is progressing on his circuit, at eight of eleven appointments. Over one hundred persons have been added to the Church. Over one hundred were at the altar for prayers during the last round. They expect still greater things.

TEXAS CONFERENCE.

San Antonio—

Rev. Thos. A. Smith, a local-preacher, writes: "A meeting, protracted for about ten days on the west side of the Medina river, west of San Antonio, there were about forty added to the Church. While that was in progress I attended a meeting five miles east of San Antonio which continued four days and nights, under my charge in the post oak region; the Lord was powerfully present thirty-two whites professed to be happily converted and thirty-one attached themselves to the Church, and six colored persons, thirty-seven in all. That section of country has been settled only about four years."

At Seguin on Mill Creek on Owls Creek, at Prairie Lea, etc., there were in all about one hundred conversions and accessions.

RIO GRANDE CONFERENCE.

Rev. J. W. Devilbiss reports over one hundred conversions and accessions. Of the conversion of a Mexican brother D. writes to the Texas Advocate: "The Mexican who joined the church at Oak Island Chapel was converted and obtaining a Spanish Bible immediately began family worship in his own language. Never shall I forget the scene when Antonio Gero joining the church. He came forward and gave the writer his hand and then broke weeping profusely. Bro. Belvin stepped forward and translated him a Bible in his own language. He hugged it to his bosom, beaming with emotion.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Help the Lambs.—A preacher sends us five new subscribers, all new converts. Let every member of the Church, and especially every young convert, have the paper.

East Baton Rouge Circuit—

A Correspondent writes that the Lord is reviving his work on this circuit, through the instrumentality of different preachers. Church members made happy in the Lord of God, family altars are erected, prayer-meetings crowded, mourners are converted, and many are added.

EAST TEXAS CONFERENCE.

The Texas Advocate reports revivals on Sulphur and Sumner circuits. Thirty-one persons had joined the Church on the latter circuit.

Literature, Education and Art.

Shelby Medical College, Nashville, Tenn.—We have just received the announcement of the eighth session of this institution. John Frederick May, M. D., Professor of the Principles and Operations of Surgery; E. B. Hopkins, M. D., Prof. of the Theory and Practice of Medicine; John P. Ford, M. D., Prof. of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children; Thos. L. Maddin, M. D., Prof. of Anatomy, (Descriptive, Histological and Surgical); John H. Callender, M. D., Prof. of Materia Medica and Therapeutics; Richard O. Curry, M. D., Prof. of Medical Chemistry and Medical Jurisprudence; Darius F. Wright, M. D., Prof. of Physiology and Pathology; H. M. Compton, M. D., Demonstrator of Anatomy. This is a new institution, which the General Conference will probably recollect. We wish it success.

The Atlantic Monthly for August, published at Boston, the rival of Harper and of New York Magazinism generally, has come to hand. We have had time to read the first article. The literary standard of this Magazine is a very high one. It is fast excelled by any thing of the kind in this country. We cannot, however, recommend its political and religious tendencies.

The American Cotton Planter for August.—This agricultural journal is the result of the union of the Soil of the South, Columbus, Ga. and the Cotton Planter, Montgomery, Ala. It is now published at the last named place, Dr. N. B. Cloud, agricultural editor, Charles A. Peabody, horticultural editor. Price one dollar a year.

Harper for August has been received. Thackeray's "Virginians" is a very readable number of that interesting series. The whole number is full of interest, and will keep up the immense popularity of the Magazine.

Letter of Hon. H. W. Hilliard, on the political issues of the day, has been sent us.

Personal.

Mr. Loudon, the English horticultural authority, is dead. The English papers announce the death of the only daughter of Mr. Macready, the tragedian. Gen. Chas. Stewart was eighty years of age on the 28th ult. Miss Jane Lloyd, the greatest of English beauties, is to be married to Col. Lindsay, the "hero of the Alma," who was lucky enough to get nine Russian balls fired into the colors which he carried, without receiving one into his own body. Queen Victoria has gone to France to visit the Emperor and Empress. Madame Champagneux, the only daughter of the celebrated Madam Roland, has just died in Paris, aged 77. Ex-President Pierce had arrived at Cadiz and sailed again for Marseilles. A monument to Madame Sontag has been erected at Marienthal, near Dresden, by the Duke of Mecklenburg Strelitz. Baron Rothschild has taken his seat in the House of Commons, amidst loud and prolonged cheering. Madame Pahlen, a Russian lady, has died of glanders from the accidental contact of her face with that of a diseased carriage-horse. At the meeting of the Alumni of Harvard College, a letter was read from Mr. Benjamin Huger, of S. C., who graduated in Harvard in 1813, concerning an antique manuscript, which he desired to entrust to the keeping of the College. An Irish paper records the death of Mrs. Hemphill, of Straw, near Newtownstewart, in her 84th year. She was the eldest daughter of Mr. William Garland, of Leardan, who married Maria, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Andrew Buchanan, of Tullyrough, near Omah, and was first cousin to the Hon. Jas. Buchanan, now President of America. Miss Nightingale has formally declined to proceed any further in the appropriation of the £15,000 to £50,000, collected in her name for the reform of the nursing department of civil and military hospitals. Dr. Chapin, of the Episcopal Church, for years editor of the "Chronicle of the Church," and author of several works, died recently at New Haven. Rev. Mr. Weston declines the Episcopate of Texas, on the ground of the misapprehension under which he was elected as to his being a Southern man, taken into connection with some of his actual antecedents in their leanings upon Southern principles and institutions. Agassiz, at the festival of the Phi Beta Kappa Fraternity, at Cambridge, Mass., announced that "the regarded Blue Hen no longer as a European," whereupon the enthusiastic and much pleased Bostonians leaped to their feet, as one man, and interrupted the speech by cheering vociferously. When this tumult subsided, the Professor resumed with a declaration that he designed to remain in America, if for no other reason, to show that science here could be free from the trammels of routine." Mr. Bushnell, who married Catherine Hayes, died at Biarritz, France, on the 31st. In the accounts by the Europa it is stated that the case of Lady Bulwer Lytton had been adjusted to the satisfaction of all parties, under the special request of her ladyship's condition she had been set at liberty. Miss Dix, the philanthropist, is in Nashville, a guest of Dr. Cheatham, at the Asylum. Judge Elmore has been appointed Associate Justice of Kansas, in place of Judge Cato, resigned. Count de Laredel, the proprietor of the lakes containing boracid acid, for which Tuscany is so celebrated, has just died at Florence, leaving an immense fortune. A company of gentlemen of Greenville, Ala., have recently searched out and exhumed the remains of Capt. William Butler, and removed them to that village, with a view to rear a monument to his memory. The county of Butler, of which Greenville is the capital, takes its name from Captain Butler, who fell in battle in 1818, in the territory of which that county is formed. The Tabernacle, Sunday in New York, recently held a festival at their new Chapel, when their pastor, Rev. Joseph P. Thompson, D. D., was presented with a purse of one thousand dollars. The Washingtons and Bonapartes are united in the person of Madame Murat, vice-regent of the Mount Vernon Association for Florida. She is the granddaughter of Washington through the Lewises. By her marriage with Achille Murat she became the niece-in-law of Napoleon the First. The grandniphew of Robert Morris and Benjamin West, and nephew of Robert Fulton, recently applied to the Mayor of Philadelphia for the humble situation of watchman of one of the Schuylkill reservoirs. The palace of the Elysee will be occupied during the ensuing winter by the Emperor. Extensive repairs, to the estimated amount of 16 or 17,000,000f., it is said, are to be made in the palace of the Tuileries. Queen Victoria was christened in Private by the Bishop of August, on a visit to her daughter. Humboldt writes to George Ticknor, of Boston, that his physical strength is slowly declining, but that he still writes, chiefly at night, and can study as an hour without fatigue. He is in his eighty-ninth year. The fifth volume of Cosmos is going through the press. Mrs. Cunningham, the New York Evening Post says, denies the rumor that she is married to Mr. Eckle, and states that he has not visited her house since the trial. The Rev. Dr. Sadlier, of Trinity College, Dublin, committed suicide recently. A few days ago the Rev. Dr. Francis Vinton, of Brooklyn, N. Y., fell and fractured his right leg, while frolicking with the juvenile members of his family, at the family homestead in Pomfret Hill, Conn.

TEXAS.

Cotton was being picked before Aug. 1st.... Galveston is to be lighted with gas.... Houston has 4615 population, having doubled in eight years.... Indians troublesome about San Saba.... The sheriff of Gillespie county has captured 24 negroes on their way to Mexico.... Great numbers of dead fish are reported floating on the bay and gulf about Indianola.... A correspondent of the Crescent says, that in the country east of San Antonio, the soil, when properly cultivated, yields very large crops. Corn, wheat and root vegetables are the only things that have been raised this year. The wheat turned out 20 bushels to the acre, and the corn, with ordinary cultivation, will yield about 40 bushels. There is one patch which will yield over 100 bushels to the acre. This is the Peabody corn. Its increase over the other may be attributed in a part to its natural superiority, but mainly to the better culture which it has received.... Notice is given that all stock in the Southern Railroad company, on which no payment or only partial payment has been made, will be put up for sale on the 15th Sept. at the office in Marshall.... A correspondent of the Pleasanton writes from San Antonio: "There is to be no want of corn in Western Texas; for every field which escaped the ravages of the grasshoppers is yielding abundantly, and many localities escaped these pests entirely. The crop of Chinese sugar cane, which laughs at grasshoppers and drouths, is at the same time immense, and the first heads of ripe seed are already gathered. Some of my neighbors are having it ground and are making bread of it. In Western Texas we must plant the earliest variety we can find—that which matures in the shortest time. The weather for the last three weeks has been hot and unusually dry, cutting off the hopes of many who had looked forward to an abundance of the common corn; and they planted species ripening ten days earlier their hopes would have been realized."

MISSISSIPPI.

Handsboro' is a thriving village. Town lots are selling very high, and dwellings and business houses are going up daily. There is considerable prospect for a cotton factory and railroad in the town.... Gov. McWillie has issued his proclamation, convening both houses of the Legislature to meet at Jackson on the first Monday of November next.... Jones B. McRae, brother of Gov. McRae, is a candidate for Congress.... Yazoo crops are fine.... The river is falling at Natchez.... A. Porter, Levee Engineer, Coahoma county, writes to the Vicksburg Whig: "There are about seven miles of the levee in this county seriously damaged by the late flood—mostly small levees. The great Yazoo Pass levee, which has often been reported to break, still stands. At a late meeting of the planters it was resolved to rebuild the levees."... The Vicksburg Whig learns that the planters of the river counties of Mississippi have agreed to meet in convention at Greenville, Washington county, on the 11th Oct. next, for the consideration of matters connected with their levees.... The same paper of the 10th says: We learn from gentlemen who have had a partial opportunity of seeing the crops on the river, that the cotton, where not overflowed, looks very fine; and it is generally believed there will be more cotton made than was supposed a month since. It is believed that Bolivar will make at least half a crop—Washington, probably about the same. We are inclined to believe Issaquena is much worse off than either Bolivar or Washington.

ARKANSAS.

The Little Rock Democrat of the 4th inst. says: "We have had opportunities for conversing with persons from all parts of the state concerning the crops. With the exception of a very few localities the corn crop will be more than an average one. Fruit of all kind is abundant; apples, pears, peaches, etc., are now in market selling cheap. The cotton crops, though below the average, will yield double what was anticipated six weeks since."... Good grain crops reported about Hillsboro'—too much rain for cotton.... The steam saw mill of Burton & Stewart, 28 miles from Fort Smith, was consumed by fire on the 19th ult.—valued at about $8000.... Hon. Albert Rust, the democratic nominee for Congress in the southern district, is opposed by James A. Jones, editor of the Camden Herald, Independent, and Hon. Thomas S. Drew, southern rights Democrat.

LOUISIANA.

Engineer G. W. Wilson decides to spend $15,000 of the $20,000 appropriated to St. Mary's parish, in draining Grand Marais. He thinks Spanish lake can be drained, making St. Martinsville as dry as Franklin. Good crops are reported in Claiborne.... The first bale of cotton of the season was received in this city from Madison parish on 5th.

FLORIDA.

The cars on the Alabama and Florida railroad are now running to the plantation of Mr. John Bolling, which is three miles nearer Greenville than they have been running for some time past. The company have money and iron enough to lay 60 additional miles of track, and the work will be speedily progressed toward the completion of that distance.

ALABAMA.

A man named Hibbett was recently murdered, and his person and premises robbed, in his own store, in Lowndesboro', by a man named Aiken, who was arrested.

TENNESSEE.

New wheat, is said, is selling at Knoxville at 65 cents per bushel.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Fine weather and promising corn and cotton are reported by the Pendleton Messenger.

The Very Latest Intelligence.

DOMESTIC.

The U.S. Agricultural Exhibition.—This exhibition will take place at Richmond, Va., during the last week in August, beginning on the 25th. The premium list for 1858 is a very liberal one. Among the premiums to be awarded we may mention $100 for Durham bulls, not under three years old; $75 for Durham cows and heifers of same age; $100 for Devon bulls; $75 for Devon cows and heifers; $100 each for Ayrshire, Hereford and Alderney bulls and $75 each for cows and heifers. In the horse department, premiums of $100, $75, $50, $30, down to $5, will also be awarded; while for sheep the premiums will range from $30 down to $5. The grounds at Richmond are very commodious and accessible. The Virginia Central Society has agreed to furnish the grounds, etc., and guarantee the payment of ten thousand dollars in premiums in addition to the expenses of the United States Society. Hon. Caleb Cushing, of Mass., has been invited to deliver the annual address.

Yellow Fever in Philadelphia.—The Philadelphia Ledger complains that the quarantine laws of that city are not properly enforced, and that vessels recently from ports infected by yellow fever have been permitted to come up to the city wharves. The pilot of one of them went ashore and died a day or two after of yellow fever, and Mr. Geo. Sherzline, a pastor of coal-boats, was attacked by fellow fever while discharging a bark from Havana.—He died in a very short time, and two other custom-house officers, who visited the vessel, were attacked by the same disease.

Curious Phenomena.—A few days ago, on the farm of the Hon. John C. Davis, near Monticello, Ind., two large springs burst forth from the earth, and continued to throw off such volumes of water that large fields in the neighborhood have been covered with standing pools and ponds.

The Fall Elections.—Between now and the eighth of November next, the free States will elect 127 of the 236 members of the next United States House of Representatives, leaving nine to be elected in March and April next—three in New Hampshire, four in Connecticut and two in Rhode Island. Vermont will commence the election of members of Congress on September 8th, and Maine will follow six days later in the same month. The middle and western States will elect their 118 in October and November.

Gen. Walker for Sonora.—The Utah Peace Commissioners have returned. They passed through St. Louis on their way to Washington. Mr. Cradlebaugh, of the party, reports, that when twenty-one days from Albuquerque, they met three hundred and seventy-five men, well armed, on Shawnee Fork, Arkansas River, on their way to Sonora. A large body of mounted men, numbering some 600, armed with Minie rifles and Colt's revolvers, and having with them a battery of 18 guns under Col. Titus, are reported to have passed through Chusky, bound for Sonora.

It was reported that Gen. Walker, at last, the head of the expedition, and was with Col. Titus at El Paso.

Miscellaneous.—The schooner Marquette ran into and wrecked the Telegraph on the lake at Cleveland, Ohio. The ship Mediterranean, from New Orleans, put into New York short of hands, having lost several by yellow fever.

De Rivera was arrested and sent to jail in Savannah August 4, at the instance of Col. Blount. Mrs. and Miss Blount, it is said, still entertain him. Mr. Barrett, democrat is elected to Congress from St. Louis District, Mo. Gerrit Smith is the nominee of the (so-called) liberal party for Governor of New York.

Missouri Election.—There were three candidates for Congress in the St. Louis District—J. R. Barrett, S. M. Breckinridge and Francis P. Blair, jr. Mr. Barrett was elected by a plurality vote, and in the St. Louis District the whole Democratic ticket was successful.

Improved Line of Travel.—The President of the Selma and Tennessee River Railroad has effected an arrangement with a stage company, whereby there is now an uninterrupted line of travel from Selma to Rome, Ga. The distance is 200 miles and is to be travelled over in thirty-two hours. The staging is from Alpha to Rome.

Paupers Sent Back.—The ship Oliver Putnam, which sailed from Boston, Mass., last Saturday, for Liverpool, took out 126 passengers, about seventy-five of whom were paupers, collected from the State almshouses and returned to the old country, from whence they came.

The $10,000,000 Loan.—The Ten Millions loan was opened for bids on the 9th. Upwards of $5,000,000 have been awarded at about five per cent., $3,000,000 at between four and five per cent., and about $2,000,000 at 4¼ to 4½ per cent.

We publish the termination of the Blount and DeRiviere affair at Savannah, Ga. It appears that Mr. Blount dropped the prosecution, and came to an understanding with De Riviere, by which the latter was to return to New York, and leave Blount and family to return to Mobile.

General News.—Judge John Dun, Chief Justice of Supreme Court of New York, died yesterday. The river at St. Louis fell a foot on the 10th. In Kansas, the majority so far, against the English ordinance is 6368. Gen. Walker is not en route for Sonora, but is in Ala. Democratic ticket success-ful throughout Missouri. Democratic Governor, Ellis, elected in North Carolina. Gen. Lane and Mr. Delason chosen Senators in Oregon.

California.—Steamship St. Louis arrived. Frazer river reports favorable. Fremont's man in Mariposa had bought, and gained a victory of the Mercer Company. Markets dull. Demand for corral vacants.

FOREIGN.

The screw steamship Nova Scotia, of the Liverpool and Canadian line, arrived at Quebec on the 8th, with Liverpool dates to the 28th.

Much excitement and irritation have been caused at Copenhagen in consequence of the seizure of seven Danish merchantmen by order of the Prussian Government.

GREAT BRITIAN.

Decimal Currency.—Prof. Alexander writes our Government, will probably be adopted by Great Britian, with our system of measures.... A serious gale on the English coast had caused considerable damage to the shipping.... Mr. Barlow, late Consul at Naples, has been appointed British Consul at Richmond, Va., in place of G. P. R. James.... The June report of the Board of Trade shows a diminution in the exports of Great Britian.... In Parliament Lord Lyndhurst called for the correspondence of the Government with the United States on the subject of the Right of Search.... Lord Molmesbury replied that arrangements were in progress that he confidently believed would settle all difficulties on the subject.... Baron Rothschild had taken his seat in the House of Commons amid loud and prolonged cheering.... Cavont, the Sardinian Minister, has had a conference with the Emperor Napoleon, on the state of affairs in Italy.... Later accounts from India and China represent the weather as being unprecedented. The heat was terribly oppressive to the Europeans in their thick clothing.... The Allied forces suffered severely in loss of men at the capture of the Peihl forts.... At Liverpool, July 27, Cotton, 32s. 6d. Lard firm at 57s. Sugar firm at 6s. Advance upon the quotations by the Persia.

MEXICO.

A conducta, bringing from $800,000 to $1,000,000, had left San Luis Potosi and Zacatecas, and was expected in about a week at Matamoros.... Zuloaga, the late President under the Conservative party, has left the city of Mexico, and had declared for the Constitution of 1834; and Parrodi, the leader of his part of the army, had left him (Z.,) and they were now fighting one against the other. According to the best authority the Liberal party were carrying all before them.... Durango had fallen into the hands of the forces under the Governor of Chihuahua, who had declared for the constitution of 1857. Guanajuato, Guadalajara and Zacatecas had also fallen into the hands of the Liberals.... News has also reached Matamoros that General Moreno had abandoned Tampico and fled to the mountains, leaving the town in charge of only fifty men. General Carvajal, with a large detachment of the forces of Tamaulipas, was to have marched on Tampico, while others pursued Gen. Moreno. Gov. Garza had left Matamoros to superintend in person the movements of the Tamaulipos forces. The battery and ammunition which left here for Monterey was expected to arrive in time for Gen. Vidaurri to take the field in person on the 27th of this month, which he announces as his intention to do, at the head of the main body of the Army of the North, so soon as these needed supplies shall have arrived at Monterey.... Immediately after the taking of San Luis Potosi, Col. Zuazua issued a decree banishing the bishop of that diocese and thirty priests. The complaint against these clergymen seems to be that they, during the action of San Luis, were very active, under the head of their bishop Barajas, in encouraging the reactionist forces in the city to resist the entrance of Zuazua's troops; taking the field in person and distributing "sanctified" medals to the soldiery.—thus pretending to make God bless their blows, and, in case they fell, giving them a passport to heaven.

Steamship Niagara, with Liverpool dates to July 31st, has arrived. Cotton sales for the week 38,000 bales. Decline of 1⅛ to 1¼. At noon, 31st market firm and active. General News.—Parliament winding up. In India, Gawalior is captured. Brilliant victory over the Sepoys at Lucknow, 600 of them killed.

Local Intelligence.

Rain, in large measure, fell on Sunday afternoon, and some showers on Monday.

The Steamer Virginia blew up at the lake end of the Jefferson railroad on Saturday morning last, and eight of the sufferers have since died. She was a passenger boat running to Ocean Springs and other watering places on the coast between this city and Mobile.

This institution, though the oldest in the State is now in a more prosperous condition than at any previous period. The next session begins October 1st, but pupils are desired to be present by the 15th of September. The arriving at school, patrons will find ample accommodations for forty-three, without delay, in Summerfield, a distance of only eight miles.

Coaches for public occasions only—in winter green, and in summer pink.

The best healthiness and good society of Summerfield, this proverbial, only four deaths having occurred in it since it was established.

The male School, under the very able care of Dr. Tinsley, is in a flourishing condition. The female school is equally prosperous. No location in the south or North can offer besides, superior to these possessed by the Centenary Institute. By the large additions we have been making to the buildings within the last year, accommodations are now furnished for one hundred and twenty boarders in the Female College.

The President and family together with all the female teachers board in the College and have the especial oversight of all the pupils.

One half of the charges are payable in advance, and the remainder by the first of March.

Please to consider—

1st. The IMPARTIALITY and THOROUGHNESS of our Examinations, and the superior scholarship of our pupils—their refinement and lady-like deportment.

2d. That none of our Essays were examined an hour each by literary committees, in several of the most difficult branches of Mathematics, and came on triumphant.

3d. That Gen. G. J. Pillow, Gen. Lucius J. Polk, Gen. R. H. Allen, Hon. M. G. Bill, Rev. J. Briel, Rev. Bishop Soule, D. D., Rev. Bishop Pane, D. D., Rev. J. B. McFerrin, D. D., and many other distinguished gentlemen, to Ireland adjoining states, have point the letter in them as testimony of the excellent which our College holds among the literary institutions of the South.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer Little Children to come unto Me."

THE CHILDREN'S EDITORIAL.

The Editor wishes to talk a little with the children.—This is the children's column, and this first article, or piece, in the column, is the children's editorial.

Children, do you know what an editorial is? It is an article written by the Editor. You thought, perhaps, that the Editor wrote all the articles in the paper. But this is a mistake. He writes none of the articles on the first page. The articles on that page that look light, are written by other men, and sent to the office to be printed.—Their names are sometimes placed at the bottom of their articles, sometimes they are not.

The articles that look dark, are cut out of other papers, or taken out of magazines, and books. The Editor's articles, that is, the editorials are on the second page. The second page is the first page on the inside. The news is on the third page. When you wish to read the news, just turn to the third page. When you wish to read the editorials, turn to the second page. And when you wish to read the correspondence, that is, the letters published in the paper, turn to the first page.

But when you wish to read the children's column, turn to the fourth page; that is, the page on which you are now reading. The first column on that page is the children's column; you are now reading that column. In this week's paper, the first article in the children's column is the children's editorial.

You must all read it. The Editor wishes to get acquainted with you, and to get you acquainted with him. He cannot come to see you, now; but he can talk to you in the paper. And you must write to him. Your mothers will tell you how to direct your letters.

But we must tell you about the IRISH BOY'S FORTUNE.

A boy came from Ireland to this country about two years ago to seek his fortune. A few months since he found his Savior, and became a happy child of God. Now he writes back to his friends, "I have a found a fortune." Ah yes, and nobody, nothing can rob him of it. It is above the changes of the times, and beyond the power of defaulters and thieves.

Can you sing? Here is a song for you. Your mothers will learn you the tune, and then you can sing this

CHILD'S HYMN.

When daily I kneel down to pray,
As I am taught to do,
God does not care for what I say
Unless I feel it too.

Yet foolish thoughts my heart beguile,
And when I pray or sing,
I'm often thinking all the while
About some other thing.

Some idle play or childish toy,
Can send my thoughts abroad;
Though this should be my greatest joy
To love and serve the Lord.

Oh, let me never, never dare
To act the trifler's part,
Or think that God will hear a prayer
That comes not from my heart.

But if I make his ways my choice,
As pious children do,
Then, while I seek him with my voice,
My heart will love him too.

POETRY.

MY DREAM.

The following poem is by an English girl, a seamstress, who supports, we believe either partially or entirely, her family, by her needle. We have scarcely in our lives read any thing that seems so to break out from the strong agony of a crushed, suffering heart, as this poem does. It seems to us that the soul that does not ache for the writer of these lines must be harder than a "nether millstone." We are sorry to find that through all its strong, grand despair, the light of faith does not shine; no trust in God seems to brighten the blackness of the present. O, English girl, bearing through thy weary, toilsome life thy crown of genius, there is something better for thee than the "Sleep where dreams no more shall come."

Trust in God, and thou hast the future of eternity; the rest, the glory, the beauty of heaven; for unto Genius, struggling, suffering, yet true to its highest self, we believe is especially given

"The joy unspeakable, and full of glory."

Not in the laughing bowers,
Where, by green twining elms, a pleasant shade
At summer's noon is made,
And where swift-footed hours
Steal the rich breath of the enamored flowers,
Dream I. Nor where the golden glories be,
At sunset, laying on the flowing sea,
And to pure eyes the faculty is given
To trace the smooth ascent from earth to heaven.

Not on the couch of ease,
With all the appliances of joy at hand;
Soft light, sweet fragrance, beauty at command;
Wands that might a God-like palate please,
And music's soul-creating ecstasies,
Dream I. Not gliding o'er a wide estate,
Till the full, self-complacent heart, elate,
Well satisfied with bliss of mortal birth,
Sighs for an immortality on earth.

But where the incessant din
Of iron hands, and roar of brazen throats,
Join their unmingling notes,
While the long summer day is pouring in,
Till day is done, and darkness doth begin,
Dream I. Or in the corner where I lie.
On winter nights, just covered from the sky,
Such is my fate, and barren as it seem,
Yet, thou blind, soulless scorner, yet I dream.

And yet I dream—
Dream what, were man more just, I might have been!
How strong, how fair, how kindly and serene,
Glowing of heart, and glorious of mien,
The conscious crown, to Nature's blissful scene;
In just an equal brotherhood to glean
With all mankind exhaustless pleasure keen;
Such is my dream.

And yet I dream—
I, the despised of Fortune, lift mine eye,
Bright with the luster of integrity,
In unappealing wretchedness, on high,
And the last rage of destiny defy,
Resolved, alone to live, alone to die,
Nor swell the tide of human misery.

And yet I dream—
Dream of a sleep where dreams no more shall come;
My last, my first, my only welcome home!
Best beheld since life's beginning stage,
Sole remnant of my glorious heritage,
Unalienable I shall find thee yet,
And in thy soft embrace the past forget!
Thus do I dream. Home Magazine.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Yazoo City Station.

Whereas, Bro. DAVID M. HOLLINGSWORTH, who has for many years been a faithful and efficient member of this Quarterly Conference, is about to remove from this city to New Orleans, be it therefore resolved, 1st, That, with feelings of unmingled regret, we bid adieu to bro. and sister Hollingsworth, feeling that our church and community have lost a most useful christian family.

2d, That bro. Hollingsworth bears with him the unbroken confidence, the warm affections and earnest prayers of this Conference, and that we recommend him and his family to the kind sympathy and christian regard of the people of God in New Orleans.

3d, That the secretary be ordered to place these resolutions on record and send them to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, for publication.

We do not know the writer of the following clever lines, but she should not neglect the gift that is in her.

SOPHIE.

BY SALLIE M. WHITE.

The soft and sacred golden light
Lit up the shadows of the night;
When, beautiful as if no sins
Had ever come her pathway near,
Or left a footprint lingering there,
A young girl drest in white came in.

The breezes kissed her raven curls;
A tiny row of fairy pearls
Were half hid by a blushing lip;
For lips twin rose-buds warm and true
Were folding up the nectared dew,
For birds of paradise to sip.

Brilliant and beautiful and deep
Like showers of sunshine rocked to sleep
Upon a smiling, summer sea,
The glorious love-light of her eyes,
Like evening stare on cloudless skies,
Shone on my heart resplendently.

When Zion's songs this maiden sings,
It only needs an angel's wings
Of snowy white, sparkling with gems,
To make us think a seraph fair
Had left its native, heavenly air
Of sinless robes and diadems.

Sweet, lovely girl, in future hours,
Wreathed with immortal stars and flowers,
The other side the stream of time,
More beautiful and loved than now,
In sainted spirit-charms be thou
An angel in a better clime.

Opelousas, La.

WITHOUT OUR GOD!

Without our God! O who would wish to stay,
And struggle on, upon this changing earth,
With nought to cheer, or comfort, on its way,

Without our God! what link have we to bind
Our toiling, fainting, hearts, on earth t' rely?
Where Angel forms are loaned us to remind
Of what our Heaven is made, beyond the sky.

Without our God! we ask thee not oh! no,
Father, to stay the chastening rod severe;
Thou wouldst at not let thy faithful children go
Without affliction, and a falling tear.

Without our God! when death is lingering near,
To snatch us hence, into his cold embrace,
How will the sinning heart to him appear
That oft rejected his redeeming grace.

May this, O God, may this our portion be,
A steadfast faith, and instant, constant prayer;
And when life ends in an eternity,
Father receive us to thy Heavenly care. EVA.

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

WESLEY ANDREW SMITH, died in Plaquemine, La., on the 24th of June, 1858, aged about 22 years.

I learned from him a few days before his death that he was a native of Nashville, Ten., where his parents, Wm. and Elizabeth Smith, lived when, at the age of seven years, he was kidnapped from home by a horse-jockey, called "Tuck Hollin," to ride races. His captor, after two or three years, left him to go to Cuba, where he took the yellow fever and died.

This unfortunate boy was left in the worst of society.—His resorts were far beyond the out-posts of church sentinalship, where he roamed in unarrested profligacy—Some three months before his death, he was thrown from a cart by the horse running away and so seriously injured that he never recovered. A week before his death, I was called to his bed-side, and found a human being in a state of destitution, the like of which I had not seen. He requested baptism—responded to the vows and gave his hand in token of becoming a probationary member of the Church. From time to time, I visited him—read, sung, prayed and talked with him. He requested to be conveyed to the Charity Hospital of New Orleans, but his strength was too far gone. The Mayor generously took charge of him, providing a nurse, etc. I offered to write to his father, but he insisted I should not, saying, if he ever got well he would go home, but if not he did not want his parents to know whet ever became of him. A few hours before his death, he told his nurse he was going to die, and that the Savior would come to receive him. He requested his funeral to be preached in the room where he died, from a Bible given him by a female friend, and then the Bible to be put under his head in his coffin.

Should his parents still survive, I would say, there was hope in his death. SAMUEL HAWES.

Plaquemine, La., July, 1858.

Helen was early taught to pray—possessed a kind disposition and was much beloved by all who knew her well. If she had at any time displeased her mother, she would go immediately to her and ask her forgiveness, then retire to her room, where her mother has often found her upon her knees, apparently much engaged in prayer. She embraced religion last fall, but for some reasons did not acknowledge it till about two months ago, since which time she has been much interested about her salvation. She was violently attacked the 23d inst. with bilious fever—lingered six days and then ceased to suffer and to live. How dear such expressions as these to her parents: "O ma, it is hard to part with you, but I have it to do. O ma, be faithful and meet me in heaven. I think my sins are forgiven and if I die, I think shall go to heaven. This world is not any home, my home is in heaven."

COLUMBUS BASCOM and WILLIAM OSCAR, sons of Emma and J. N. Welch, died in Greenwood, Miss., of whooping cough and fever, July 14 and 24. Columbus was two years and ten months old; William was eleven months old.

Long the little sufferers lingered in the severest pain, but their unclean spirits, ere there lines are traced, are in the heavenly land, singing the praises of Him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me." Though we have lost our only boys on earth, we shall meet them again in heaven, where there shall be "neither sorrow nor crying."

JAMES ALONZO SIMON, son of J. S. and Ann Simon, died on the evening of the 30th of July, at 8 o'clock, at the residence of his father, in Catahoula, parish, aged 6 years and 24 days.

"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Go, sweet child, to the bosom of thy God. To you death is but the beginning of a life everlasting. Gentle, and amiable, and affectionate, the idol of your parents and tenderly loved by your brothers and sisters, you die lamented by your school mates and instructor. Thou hast failed from earth to bloom in heaven.

Mrs. NANCY DORCH died in Bossier parish, La., of flux, July 8, 1858. Sister Dorch was born in Claiborne county, Miss., Nov. 28, 1813, joined the M. E. Church and professed religion in 1836, from which time to her death she maintained a consistent christian character. During the latter years of her life she was the subject of almost continual affliction, through all of which she was sustained by that religion which is so eminently the balm of the afflicted. She died in great peace, with her family around her, commending to them the religion which so graciously comforted and sustained a wife and mother in the last great battle for immortality. A. E. G.

THE GREATEST
Medical Discovery
OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases, both blunder humor. He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of biles.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One or two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corns and running ulcers.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed growing on the pastures, and along old stone walls, should cure every humor in the system; yet it is a fixed fact. If you have a humor, it has to start. There are no IFS nor ANDS, human nor inhuman about it suiting some cases, but out yours. I peddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts. I give it to children a year old, to old people of sixty. I have seen poor, puny, worm-y-looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to a perfect state of health by one bottle.

To those who are subject to a sick head ache, one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief to catarrh and dizziness. Some who have taken it had been cursive for years, and have been regulated by it. Where the body is sound it works quite easy, but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it will cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed; they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad result from it; on the contrary, when that feeling is gone you will feel yourself like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever man listened to.

Manufactured by DONALD KENNEDY, No. 120 Warren street, Roxbury Mass. Price $1 per bottle.

DR. T. McGOWN'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
IODINE OF POTASI,
THE GREAT
BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,

Prepared from FRESH ROOT, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, hasty too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a SPECIFIC for Cancerous than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Coudet, Baron, Bardsley, Manson, Ricord, Gendrin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Goit, Rheumatism, Scorbutic Dropsy; diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Biles, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally.) Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter, Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cancerous, Pasty, Tainted, Gonorrhœal Gleet; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Lawrence, says of sarsaparilla, when exhibited in combinations embodied and enacted by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by the judicious use of Sarsaparilla."

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Irregularities, Suppression, Diseases of the Womb, Leucorrhea, Fluxes, Enlargement of the Uterus, Ovarian Dropsy, Cholera, also impurities of the Blood or System, and all diseases dependent thereon. Makes the skin clear and smooth—an object of interest with the ladies. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.

McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL.—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.

McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS.—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.

McGOWN'S OINTMENT.—Never known to fail curing old Sores, Cancers, Chronic Sore Eyes, etc.

LETTER FROM PALESTINE.

SYRIA, Palestine, March 20, 1858.

Bishop Gabat has an Institution for the education of youth, upon a ridge along the valley of Gihon, which we visited—part of them are charity scholars, about twenty, supported at the school; the others, day pupils. The house rooms and gardens are well adapted to the purpose. At the extremity of the garden, a gate opened into a protestant cemetery where under a flourishing olive tree we saw the monument erected to the memory of their former Bishop, Alexander, a faithful laborer. We entered the vestibule of an old mosque, which the Mahomedans call the tomb of David, and pretended to show us where he was buried—part of this building was said to be an ancient church, erected on the spot in the city of David, where, it is said, Christ partook of the last supper, and instituted the holy sacrament. The place is hallowed by this great event, and the first Christian temple the world ever saw. Here James the less was consecrated the first Bishop of Jernsalem; and from this spot the apostles were sent forth by our Lord to go and teach all nations. The old dilapidated mosque was full of interest, though in infidel hands. The heart must be cold and dead not to feel the weight of divine truths when passing ever consecrated ground hallowed by these recollections.

The Armenians have a large convent in this quarter—the church was crowded with Pilgrims. We could only stand upon the threshhold and look in below; but at no time are ladies allowed to worship in the same aparment with the men. We went up into the gallery and looked down upon the multitude kneeling and seated upon the floor, bowing and crossing themselves and responding to a priest who was chaunting the service. This church was erected in the fourth century, and said to stand upon the site where James the elder was beheaded; and they profess to show the precise place where the event took place. The church is highly ornamented with ancient paintings, and much gilding. The door of the church, as well as the preaching chair, which has a canopy over it, is adorned with imitations of tortoise shell and mother of pearl, illustrated with Bible scenes and flowers. The floor is paved with Mosaic, but covered with a carpet to preserve its beauty. The people all sit upon the floor in Eastern style.

We walked this morning through the Jaffa gate, past a cemetery, to see the Greek Convent of the Cross. A military station was strung along upon one side, with a large encampment of white tents, which had a picturesque appearance. Perhaps they were stationed there to keep the pilgrims in order. The cemetery was full of people—the women, with their white veils, were in clusters amusing themselves among the tombs with their children, looking like a multitude of ghosts, presenting a peculiar appearance in that desolate place.

The Convent of the Cross, or Greek College, is situated in a deep valley, surrounded by rocky hills of a most arid appearance, shut out from the world. The buildings are very large, like a fortress—built of stone, high, with a terraced roof, and tower, with a clock, upon whose face can be seen, over the minute hand, a gilded ship, which keeps motion with the pendulum, emblematic of the voyage of life.

The prospect from the roof of this monastery would have been fine if the site had been elevated, but we could only look down upon the hills and a few groves of olives terraced upon the sides. All the rooms were shown us, with the chapel, where they profess to have found the original tree from which the cross of the Savior was taken. An altar is placed over the spot, and in the little recess is a hole in the floor covered over; a tree is painted upon the side with three lamps lighted to shew its form. We saw a few scholars in some of the departments, writing.

O, could you but see its pressing our way along through these narrow streets and bazaars, not more than ten feet wide beside the side-walk, which are used for stalls by vendors of goods, fruits and vegetables, amidst a world of people, where you can see nothing but turbaned heads and great clumsy camels, mules and horses wending their way among them, you would not wonder why we are obliged to have a guide along with us whenever we go out of the gates of this city, which is truly compact. We found our way to the Armenian Missionary's House, the Rev. Mr. Jones, a Subbatarian, who has treated us with great kindness and hospitality since we have been here, and accompanied us to the Jews' wailing place, a narrow passage between the walls of the Mosque (site of the old Temple) and the City. The old wall looks as if it had stood from the days of Solomon—large massive stones of immense size, nine tiers of them, one above another, worn by time. The scene was touching as they came in, one after another, bowing and kissing the stones of this wall; mourning over Jerusalem! The Rabbis had books, and chaunted aloud the lamentations of Jeremiah in pensive, melancholy strains, bending their bodies forward and back, as if in distress—some shed tears—they continue this custom every Friday. On our return we saw beggars lying by the road-side so feeble that they were carried to and from the place—most pitiful objects, with their hands extended for alms on this day. Friday is the wailing in preparation for the Sabbath.

Our friend accompanied us to their synagogue, where we were deeply interested in their services. The Spanish Jews are the descendants of those driven away from Spain by Ferdinand and Isabella, and said to speak the same language of the fifteenth century. They claim to be the descendants of Judah. Their temples were full of worshippers, humming and chanting. The Polish Jews had a more lengthy service, and we were in to see them take out the Law and bear around the Ark which held it. The people chaunted, "Hear, O Israel," &c.

LETTER FROM CHINA.

SHANGHAI, May 12th, 1858.

REV. H. N. McTYEIRE: Since my last to you, but little has occurred that would at all be interesting to you or any of your readers.

It is to-day quite cold, sufficiently so for winter clothing, as one would judge to see me with my great coat on part of the day. Myself and family are still in the enjoyment of good health and are able to continue in our work without a day's intermission. Your papers come quite regularly now and are a great source of enjoyment to myself and companion. And especially when we find you away from the city in company with some of our good Bishops, giving us as you go a sketch of the rural scenery, not even passing by the country bride without a compliment, or famous places without a note. We did, indeed, have some hearty laugh over your country excursions and felt the better of it afterwards. And who would blame us in our isolated condition? We would not be melancholy but cheerful in the work of the Lord to which we have been called. The box of books which came from your office has been a great source of pleasure to me.

The Lord has been good to me and I feel deeply humbled. How unworthy do I see myself when looking back upon the past and beholding the abundant goodness of God to me! I still have abundant evidence that God is with me and far from being discouraged. I am daily encouraged by the manifest desire of many patiently and attentively to listen to the great truths of the redemption of man, by the suffering and death of Christ our Saviour. My daily prayer to God, is "Lord increase my faith" and trust in Thee, that by faith I may see the kingdom of God coming and being established in our midst! The kingdom of God cometh not by observation, but by faith in the fulfilment of His promises. There are many who daily come and ask to be taught the way to everlasting life. Such manifestations on the part of an idolatrous and degraded people encourage us much. I have not gone into the interior preaching quite so much during the last three months as I desired, owing to the disturbed state of the empire, but my time has been wholely taken up at Shanghai. All is quiet at this place so far. Now and then we see the heads of some outlaws hanging up in cages to warn the people. Last week the heads of three Canton men who murdered the captain and mate, (both foreigners and of a foreign ship) who had these men as sailors, were severed from their body and now hang on the wall of the North gate of the city. There were three other Canton men taken into the city on yesterday by foreign police, for stealing, or taking by force, five hundred dollars from other Chinese in foreign employ. Their way of getting it was this, the men in foreign employ came with five hundred Mexican dollars, to exchange for sycee at the Chinese bank, where eyes were filled with lime concealed on the bodies of these men, and thus made their escape with the money. Three of these were soon overtaken and handed over to the Chinese authorities. Last week when three were slain, many foreigners were present. I saw the Chinese soldiers returning from the spot with many of their swords quite bloody and holding them up to be seen by the people. Those who do not partake in the deed, or as they say, fortunate enough to be executioner, dip their broad knives in the blood of the victim, or a certain number of cash clotted with the blood and hang it upon their bodies to keep at bay all evil spirits.

The Plenipotentiaries of the four great nations of the earth, have gone to Peking, to pay a visit to His Majesty the Emperor. We have heard from them but once. The Emperor had not condescended to see the "Barbarians," neither were they permitted to put foot on shore. I send you the news as received. The English had given six days for the Emperor to invest some one with power to treat, and if after that time no one came, the forts at the mouth of the Peiho would be taken and advance made toward Peking. We are expecting news to-day from the North.

WILLIAM LAMAUTH.

ABSENTEEISM IN THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH.

The London Patriot says: "The living of Camberwell, a parish containing many thousands of people, is held by an absentee. It is worth £2,000 a year, yet the incumbent managed to get into debt to the time of £30,000, and the greater part of that debt remains unpaid to the present day, though he draws his £2,000 yearly, and gets the duty performed, while he is playing hide and seek with his creditors, by two curates, to whom together he pays only one-tenth of the annual income he himself derives from the parish. Such is one of the fruits of a National Establishment, in which clergymen possess benefices as private property, and do what they will with their own—parish and parishioners, money and men. And the Bishops connive at these things, being unwilling to make a stir, or to expose themselves to the trouble and unpopularity which must be the result of any departure on their part from easy-going customs. They seem to think their first duty is to make things comfortable for the clergy; after them, they may perhaps consider the parishioners."

[For the N. O. Christian Advocate.]

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY.

As some reference has been made in a late paragraph in your columns to the late meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Southern University, it is proper to spread before your readers a fuller statement of the transactions of that body, and of the policy which controlled them in deciding to defer the opening of the halls of the Institution for the reception of students until the fall of 1859.

The Board upon assembling at Greensboro, made a faithful examination into the state of the funds, the condition of the building recently erected, and the whole class of circumstances bearing upon the institution within the reach of observation. Much of the money subscribed had yet to be collected; the building was not yet completed; and it was plain that an attempt to organize the University at this time, would bring it forward to public view under disadvantages which would not merely hinder its present efficiency, but which might very seriously affect its future prosperity. But two members of the Faculty had signified their acceptance of places which they had been invited to fill; and the Trustees after full and anxious deliberation resolved to defer any other elections to some future day.

The paragraph to which I have alluded, might mislead some of your readers in regard to the Presidency. If stated that "the most prominent candidates for the position were the Hon. H. W. Hilliard, and Rev. Dr. Doggett, of Virginia." Now neither of these gentlemen was a candidate, nor is it known that either would have accepted the place if he had been elected. The former gentleman was present, took an active part in the proceedings of the Board, and made a decided speech against opening the University this year, and also against the election of a President or Professors at that session.

Indeed, he is understood to favor the policy of keeping the doors of the Institution firmly closed against the admission of students until everything is ready for their reception; that the University when it does start, shall be able to do affective work upon a scale commensurate with the noble liberality of its founders, and the hopes of its friends and the Church.

Both gentlemen were spoken of for the Presidency, but it is not at all certain that either of them would consent to undertake to fill a place so full of grave responsibility, and involving such an amount of anxious labor.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

GENTLEMEN: The undersigned members of the Committee of Examination, take pleasure in presenting you the following report.

We have attended all the examinations of the College classes during the past week, and we should be unjust to our own feelings, did we not testify to their fullness and impartiality. The able corps of professors, each in his special department, exhibited clearly the purpose of allowing all of the students to establish their claim to thorough scholarship, or if unfortunately that pretension was not fully supported, to clearly unmask its emptiness. The fullest opportunity was given this committee to propound all desired interrogatories, as each class came before them.

The President examined the Sophomore Class in the Evidences of Christianity, and the Junior Class in Rhetoric. The first examination was highly satisfactory, and demonstrated the assiduous attention of the students to this important study. The juniors did themselves honor by their ready and clear responses, and vindicated alike their own scholarship, and the zeal and ability of their distinguished teacher.

The several classes examined by the able and experienced professor of Mathematics, gave most gratifying evidence of thorough discipline and study. They, in most instances, performed with promptness and precision all problems, presented either by the professor or ourselves; and we left his classes with the settled conviction, that while drones would have a most uncomfortable time with this professor, faithful students would find all the aid necessary for their advancement to the most distinguished attainments.

The classes examined in Greek evinced a high degree of scholarship. The passages to be read were generally assigned by ourselves; and, in almost every instance, the students read these selections correctly, and answered with readiness the questions propounded in grammatical analysis. They seemed to appreciate the privilege they enjoy in receiving the instructions of a professor having, as a Greek scholar, no superior in the country.

The above remarks may be applied with equal force to the examinations conducted in the department of the professor of Latin.

The classes under the care of the professor of Modern Languages, we found making steady and rapid improvement. The accomplished professor in this department, a native of France, has certainly abundant cause to be satisfied with the proficiency attained by the students under his charge.

Those of us who have been members of previous examining committees of this college, remark with pleasure the improved grade of scholarship in all the classes.

We cannot close this report without expressing our satisfaction with the perfect harmony so happily existing between all departments of the College. And we notice with still higher gratification, the respect and affection evidently entertained by all the students for the President and each member of the Faculty. Long may this state of things continue, and the career of Centenary College be crowned in the future as it has been in the past, with such gratifying evidences of harmony, prosperity and usefulness.

To the commanding talents, great zeal and efficiency of the honored President, the College is evidently much indebted for its present high consideration at home and abroad. Every true friend of this noble Institution, we doubt not, will unite with us in the hope that he may be spared to direct its destiny for many long and prosperous years.

Respectfully submitted,

W. H. POTTER, Chairman,

ABBEY'S GENEALOGICAL BIBLE.

To the Shareholders in the Book and Tract Society of the Mississippi Conference.

THE GENEALOGICAL FAMILY BIBLE which you are entitled to from the Board of Managers, will, some of them, be ready for delivery in October or thereabouts, and they will all be furnished as soon thereafter as convenient or practicable. The engraving and lithographing are expected to be completed early in September, and by that time it is hoped the material for binding and the sheets will be received from England, and the paper for the Register made, and the whole in the hands of the binder. The books will then be produced as fast as practicable. It must be remembered, however, that this kind of binding cannot be thrown off rapidly like other work.

The following is a "Prefatory note," accompanying the Bible and to be bound in the book. It will explain somewhat in regard to it.

The time and labor necessary in getting up this new, and I think, valuable production, has been tenfold greater than I anticipated. The unfaltering determination was to make the very best book that could be made. No pains have been spared to make a thorough acquaintance with this subject, and I feel fully warranted in saying that this book will far, very far, exceed anything of the sort ever presented to the public, either in this country or in Europe.

The CASE, of which mention was made in a circular a short time since, is in the course of preparation. I find, however, that no metal of less value than silver can be used for this purpose, that is free from objection. I have had a plain cheap case made, which may be seen at the Depository. The price of this is $3. In a short time, however, two or three other samples will be had of a more costly kind. One will be made of best morocco, one of mahogony, and perhaps one of rose wood. Samples of them will be made so soon as the size can be ascertained. I am unable to state the cost. Probably eight to ten, and twenty to twenty-five dollars. Samples will be at the Depository about 1st November next.

I feel confident in indulging the hope that the Bible will meet the highest expections of its patrons. It will be an imperial quarto, the size of Harper's celebrated Pictorial Bible.

Yours truly, &c.,

R. ABBEY.

Vicksburg, July 10, 1858.

PREFATORY NOTE.

A GENEALOGICAL FAMILY BIBLE—that is, a Bible to be identified perpetually with the Family in its genealogical descent, conveying the Family Statistics from generation to generation, in continuous succession, has been long and extensively needed, and is regarded by thousands a desideratum.

Every Family needs something to use as a sacred depository of its domestic events, that they may be properly recorded, and faithfully preserved from generation to generation.—Their accumulation becomes a domestic treasure, increasing in value as they lengthen in their chronological extent.

No souvenir can be so valuable as this: no record can so preserve and perpetuate the endearments and tender recollections of the Family Circle. No monument nor memento, in after years, can so closely and tenderly bind the past to the present—can so feelingly and sympathetically unite a presently existing people, with either a near or remote ancestry, and intertwine the memory of departed sires and mothers so affectionately in the hearts of their offspring, as the simple Family Statistics, carefully recorded at the time they occur, and faithfully handed down to a grateful posterity. We have long needed something that has not heretofore been presented to the public, to interweave the endearments of an ancestral home, the sympathies of a far off and successive generation, and the sacred memoirs of our fathers of bygone ages, with the every day reflections and remembrances of present life.

Without a Perpetual Genealogical Family Register, genealogical lines, so far as domestic attachments and revered memories of the departed are concerned, are forever severed into segments, and those a very few years behind us are forgotten, and our fathers are strangers to us. And we ourselves live on with a no wise comfortable anticipation, that our children, a few removes from us in genealogical descent, will not even know who we were, where or when we lived or died, or even that there were such identical persons.

In this country there are not comparatively, very many who have a correct historical knowledge of the fathers and mothers, and other near kindred, of their own immediate parents. And if you look upward to the third and fourth links in the chain of family succession—or, perhaps, in some very rare instances, a step or two higher—all is blank; and we have no known and appreciable ancestry! We know that we have descended—but from whom, we have no domestic history that informs us.

Let any man suppose himself to possess a Register in which was carefully set down at the time, the births, baptisms, marriages and deaths of his ancestry, in a regular line of succession, running upward even eight or ten generations, and he will suppose himself to possess a gem, the value of which could not be estimated in money. Such a treasure our children cannot furnish for themselves, but we can furnish it for them.

Such a Register is herewith, for the first time, presented to the public. And it is made in connection with the Holy Bible, for the reason that a Bible is obviously the most appropriate instrument for the conveyance of these endearing and sacred memorials, and the most fitting depository and casket for such a treasure. A Family Bible, as a household article, is presumed to dwell in the very heart of the family. It is itself—its text, its word, the partner, the associate, the mirror, the tablet of the family's inmost affections, as well as the depository of the breathings, and the witness of the prayers of its religious life.

The "Family Bible" as it is usually called, as common amongst us, does by no means even attemp to occupy the ground and answer the end of the present Genealogical Family Bible. It fails to do so mainly in the following particulars:

1st.—It makes no provision for the registry, in convenient tabular form, of the births, baptisms, marriages and deaths, as these events occur. They merely provide half a dozen pages or so of blank paper, with perhaps a caption indicating, without a tabular plan or form, that a portion of these events may be there recorded.

2d.—It makes no provision for the perpetual continuation of any of the statistics. They do not look beyond the present generation, or perhaps partially, its immediate successor.

3d.—It makes no provision for the preservation, or even for the existence of the Marriage Certificate.

4th.—Quarto Bibles, either in this country or in Europe, are not manufactured with the view to a durability for ages. And it well known that these used as Family Bibles, do not usually remain in a good state of preservation beyond ten, twenty or fifty years, at most, until they become loose in the binding, tattered, valueless, and are lost.

The Perpetual Genealogical Family Register connected herewith provides for the registration of all the regular natural family statistics, by the mere filling up of the appropriate blanks. Baptism is one of these regular family events, and a very important one amongst a Christian people. And, suggestively, this provision for the regular domestic registration of Baptisms, will, it is hoped, tend greatly to the more regular discharge of that high Christian duty, on the part of Christian parents.

Secondly.—Ample provision is made for the regular continuation of these registrations in a line of genealogical descent, for about a thousand years.

Thirdly.—In many of the states of the Union the laws respecting the registration of Marriages are either very loose or totally defective. Hence it is not possible in multiplied thousands of instances, to refer to an authentic record of this important domestic fact. Sometimes the lack of such a certificate or record is both disadvantageous and mortifying. Its immediate presence in the family, running for generations upward, can but be a very pleasant satisfaction always. This Register provides not merely for the registration of the event, but for the marking and preserving, in all time to come, of the proper Certificate of the fact, made in due form, by the proper officer. The register also covers all the ground of such collateral facts as are important to be preserved.

And Fourthly.—This Bible is made as durable as the condition of the arts and sciences of the present age will allow. Diligent search has been made both in this country and in Europe for the most durable material—first to determine what is the most durable, and then to procure it. The paper on which this Bible is printed is hand-made, and is manufactured in England. It is believed to be as good paper for this purpose as can be procured in the world. It is very far superior, so far as durability is concerned, to that ordinarily used in books of this sort, and to any machine-made paper, though not quite so smooth on the surface.

The Register is made of parchment-paper, made by hand, and is manufactured in this country. It will wear very nearly equal to parchment, and is altogether superior in this respect to any paper made of purely vegetable material.

The leather is manufactured in Europe, and is a different article from the various kinds used for book-binding in this country. It has probably never before been used at all in the United States. In the ordinary book-binding business it is not known. It is superior to all the samples that could be procured of any kind of leather that would answer for handsome binding.

Sufficient care has been taken with regard to the ink; it is believed to be ineffaceable.

The Binding is of the very best workmanship, executed with the greatest care, and under close confidential supervision. The mode is that pursued in blank-book binding, which is different from and more durable and strong, than that employed in the binding of printed books.

It is believed the book will last until it wears out. It cannot come to pieces with any amount of ordinary handling. It is not known why, with such care and usage as it will likely receive, it may not last indefinitely, of as long as any other manufactured article. From the best information that can be gathered by the most careful research, respecting the durability of paper and books, in the short time since these things have been known, it is believed that this Bible, with careful usage, will last thousands of years.

The Frontispiece has been designed, planned and executed with considerable labor and skill. It is not only entirely original, but it is believed to be the first successful attempt to make a picture of prospective genealogical family succession, passing and winding through the scenes of imaginary life. It is likely to please the eye and instruct and improve the heart and the affections, while at the same time it imparts quickly to the mind the main design of the entire book.

The Bible itself is merely the regular authorized version of King James, carefully revised and corrected in England. It will be observed it has no marginal references. It is not intended as a book to study. The entire surface of the page is occupied by the text, that it may be as large, clear and plain, in its letter, as practicable.

The Apocrypha is excluded as a matter of religious principle; because, besides other important reasons—first, it forms no part of Scripture; and secondly, its matter is unsuited, in the belief of many, to be so sacredly associated; and thirdly, its incorporation in the Bible is likely to mislead many into the belief that it has, at least, some legal connection with the Holy Canon.

Finally, its preservation. Such a book as this, made for the purpose it is mainly intended to subserve, should by no means be subjected to ordinary reading or common handling. It is a Family Keepsake, belonging as much to posterity as to the present age. That it may be the more carefully kept, a suitable and handsome case has been prepared, for those who desire it, in which the Bible may be preserved from soil or external injury. Let it retain its newness of appearance for ages to come.

Every house should have several Bibles and Testaments, smaller and more convenient than this, for every day reading. This should be kept. It is an heir-loom—a souvenir—a sacred memorial—a memento of ancestral affection—a rich legacy of paternal regard.

STRUCK A WALE.

The Rev. B. Jenkins, writing from Shanghai to the Southern Christian Advocate, of Charleston, remarks:

A remarkable occurrence took place when H. M.'s screw steam gun-vessel Nimrod was proceeding, under steam, for the entrance of the river Min, on the 16th inst. When about four miles outside Sharp Peak, a violent concussion was experienced by all on board, as if the ship had struck the ground; but knowing from the position that such could not be the case, the real cause was evidenced on looking astern, on their discovering a large whale, severed nearly in two—blowing convulsively and bleeding so profusely as to redden the water all around. The whale had doubtless been struck with much violence by the screw propeller, and indeed the engines were brought to a momentary stand-still by the shock. Unusual and unlikely as this may appear, it is, nevertheless, a fact.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

A little boy had died. His body was laid out in a darkened room, waiting to be laid in the cold, lone grave. His afflicted mother and bereaved little sister went in to look at the sweet face of the precious sleeper, for his face was beautiful even in death. As they stood gazing on the face of one so beloved and cherished, the little girl asked to shake his hand. The mother at first did not think it best, but the child repeated the request, and seemed very anxious about it; she took the cold, bloodless hand of her sleeping boy and placed it in the hand of his weeping sister.

The dear child looked at it a moment, caressed it fondly, and then looked up to her mother through tears of love, and said:

"Mother, this hand never struck me."

What could have been more touching and lovely?

INDIA SHAWLS.

At the last monthly sale by auction of India shawls, at London, the number of purchasers was as follows: 15 French, 3 English, 3 Americans, 2 Belgians, 1 Russian and 1 German.—The stock consisted of 6000 pieces, of which there were only 1800 veritable cashmere shawls. The remainder consisted of Indian tissues of the value of $5 to $8; it is only in England that these common scarfs find wearers. The sale brought almost the sum of $800,000. The French buyer's proportion was three millions. As four of the principal shops of Paris have their agents in Lahore, and thus receive directly their goods from India, it is clearly proved that France possesses almost a monopoly in these articles of luxury. There is scarcely a French lady, even of very moderate fortune, who does not possess one or more Indian shawls.

INDIAN POPULATION.—The total number of Indians in the states and territories in the United State, exclusive of a few who have lost their tribal character or amalgamated with whites, is from 320,000 to 350,000. Of these, about 2,250 are located in New York, Indiana, the Carolinas, and Alabama, and are harmless, peaceful tribes. All the rest, numbering over 300,000, are settled in California, Florida, Kansas, Texas, Nebraska, Oregon, Washington Territory, the upper Missouri, and the whole Northwestern frontier.

REVIVAL AMONG THE ZULUS.—A revival is reported among the Zulus, in South Africa, similar in character and nearly simultaneous with that in America. The information is contained in a letter to Mr. Grout, missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. among the Zulus, who is now on a visit to this country. About the time that work began—September last—a number of females in Boston, at Mr. Grout's suggestion, commenced a prayer-meeting especially for the conversion of the Zulus. The meeting is still held at 10 o'clock every Monday morning.

NEW ORLEANS:

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 18, 1858.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

THE CITY OF NEW ORLEANS

Is a position unequaled by any other in the South for a great and powerful Christian newspaper. Harper's great work, recently published, the "Cyclopedia of Commerce and Commercial Navigation," truly says that New Orleans possesses commercial advantages superior to those of any other place in the United States. It is connected, by water navigation, with a larger and richer territory than any other American city. The most of this territory is yet in the infancy of its commercial development. The city itself is in its infancy. The time approches when it will be a compact city from the levee to the lake, and from far below the Third District to above Carrollton. It is now spreading in every direction. And on the other side of the river, including Algiers, Gretna, etc., it is going to grow into a large city. Railroads will soon bring it into close connection with the whole Union. Let us appreciate these advantages, and keep pace with them, in the support and circulation of our paper established here.

OUR AGENTS AND FRIENDS

Have it within their power to give the paper a circulation accordant with the extent and wealth of the territory to which New Orleans is a commercial centre, and commensurate with the importance of the city itself. It is a great triumph that the paper has been already successfully and firmly established. The improvement of the power of this advantage, is now our work. It is the work of the editor, and the preachers, and friends, and members of the church, in the territory alluded to. Shall we do our duty? Shall we acquire the power for good thus within our reach? Will not every one who reads this help in every possible way for the accomplishment of the end we have in view—namely—a large circulation? Let old preachers and young—members and friends, male and female—quarterly conferences, sunday-schools and families—assist. Could you do more good than by increasing the circulation and power of

OUR CHRISTIAN JOURNALISM?

We doubt whether a wider field of usefulness, especially for laymen, is to be found any where else. Our Advocates constitute our true tract system, and their circulation is the best tract distribution. Indeed, journalism is at this day the controlling power in the guidance of public opinion, and in the moulding and direction of the tendencies of thought and sentiment. Secular journalism annually pays hundreds of thousands of dollars for the accomplishment of those ends which our preachers and friends can do for us with but little trouble. They can send us the news, religious and otherwise, from all parts of the country, every week, in short and pithy letters, accompanied by scores of new subscribers, and the money, all in the same letter.

We shall

ENLARGE AND IMPROVE THE PAPER

Precisely in proportion to the ability given us. Give us, what an Advocate at New Orleans ought to have, the largest circulation in the South, and the paper shall correspond to the circulation. We desire a large increase of circulation, and of means, soon, because we desire to add some improvements soon. Do you not wish to have a larger paper, with beautiful type and press work? You know how to obtain it. Let it be attended between now and the approaching Conferences. Then we can do, what we very much desire to do, improve the paper by the beginning of the new volume in February next. Would that you could do what you can do, by that time! If so, we should be able to please you much more than we now expect.

ARRANGEMENTS ARE BEING MADE

For a large increase of the literary power and taste of the paper. The best writers are being engaged, and the best facilities employed.

We intend to have a literary paper, as tasteful as any in the land, containing the most elegant productions of the best minds, and keeping our readers well informed as to all items of real progress in the literary world. We intend to do away with the necessity of patronizing those magazines and periodicals which have no affinity for either our civilization, our institutions, or our religion, and which, under the guise of taste, inculcate the worst sentiments, and recommend the worst practices, of the depraved and heartless circles called fashionable society. We advocate the highest literary culture, and the highest personal and social refinement, as included in the divine life taught in, and only attainable through, the gospel of Jesus Christ.

It will be a newspaper. No weekly shall excell us in the fullness and faithfulness of our news department. We shall give all the important intelligence, religious, political, commercial, agricultural, literary, miscellaneous, personal, domestic and foreign. The Atlantic Telegraph will bring us the news almost simultaneously with its reception at New York, at least as soon as it can be received at any point South of New York. We go to press on Wednesday morning, and get the paper into the mail of that day, with the telegraphic dispatches of that morning. And we shall soon make arrangements to give the paper more commercial value than ever.

Of course we need not say that it will be a religious paper, devoting all its power to the spread of scriptural holiness over these lands. But it will be a religious paper in another sense. It will aim to cover the entire ground of legitimate journalism—addressing itself to all departments of life, and to all the aptitudes of human nature—discussing with freedom all valuable topics, whether technically religious or not—but doing all in the name of Jesus, and with a sincere desire to glorify God, and to promote the happiness and salvation of mankind.

All the preachers, who have not done so, will please send us, immediately,

LISTS OF THE POSTOFFICES

Within their respective circuits and missions, that we may send them the accounts. We have already sent our accounts to all who have sent us their post offices.

DO NOT WAIT UNTIL CONFERENCE,

But remit your collections immediately to the office. Do everything in a business-like manner, and attend to all the interests of the Advocate before you leave.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS IN ARREARS

Will please remit, immediately, the amounts they owe, or give the money to an agent. If you do not know the amount, send $5 or $10 and you shall be duly credited with the whole. Let each one send a new subscriber.

OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Will please take pains in writing. Write a plain hand, whether on business or for publication. For publication, write with brevity. Our paper is too small for long articles, and such are never read. What is usually put into two columns should be put in one fourth of a column.

TRUE HEROISM.

There is a history of heroism in the Methodist itinerant ministry that will never be written. The men of power who have struggled up through indescribable disadvantages in youth, with heart-agonies that never can be translated into human speech, could they set out their experiences before men, would fill the world with the wonders of a romantic heroism, which would put even Dickens' life picturings in the shade. The self-made men of the Methodist itinerancy constitute the grand division of grenadiers of the sacramental host. The labors and sufferings, in unpenetrated obscurity, of the great army of privates—the less distinguished preachers—will never be known this side the judgment-seat of Christ.

These who ride poor far interior circuits, or frontier or swamp missions, and are instrumental in the conversion of more souls every year than the New York prayer-meetings of world-wide fame—who are they. Mostly men who never had any help from man, but who, trusting in God, and putting forth their own indomitable energy in his cause, have made themselves felt where they have trod the earth. And many of them have made their marks among the foremost. God bless them! Though they claim no educational institution of note as their Alma Mater; though have no brother-hood in the circle of its Alumni; yet, notwithstanding these disadvantages, they have their diplomas in the "seals," the "living epistles" of their ministry; and they belong to the great army of graduates of the greatest university in the world—the Itinerant Ministry!

We have been led to the utterance of these thoughts by the following in the Pacific Methodist: "Three years ago, a young man in California, (converted here, we believe) felt it to be his duty to preach the gospel, and, taking the sensible view that the call to preach, involved the call also to make preparation for it, he at once began a course of study. Not possessing means sufficient to carry him through, he went to the mines, worked nearly a year, made money, came back, and entered school, where he pursued his studies with unwearied energy and assiduity. Recently, there was a vacation of the school. His funds having got low, and the vacation occurring during the harvest season, he spent the time laboring by the day, in order to obtain the means of continuing a little longer at school. This is the spirit of true manhood. Our young friend is treading in the footsteps of many among the brightest names that adorn the history of our country, both in church and state. Men who thus work out the means of acquiring knowledge, are likely to apply it to good purpose when it is obtained.

THE ADVOCATES AND THE PREACHERS.

There is a work for the preachers of our church in reference to our periodicals which has never yet, in our entire history, been attended to with that unanimity, vigor, and success, which can be reached. We really fear that the proportion of preachers who do but little for the success of this great interest is too truthfully indicative of the proportion who do but little for any church interest. How many men have we who work all the time, with all their might, for all our interests? Such are the only men fit for the itinerancy. The man who does not do it violates his vows to God; for he has consecrated himself, by the most solemn vows, to this work, and to this only.—A productive preacher is the only sort of a preacher worth any thing. These non-producers, and mere consumers, are in the wrong place in the ministry.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate says:—There are about two hundred preachers that receive copies of the paper, as agents. Of these two hundred about fifty, we think, are active, and in a good degree successful in their agency. Fifty more, perhaps, do something occasionally, when they happen to think of it, feel like it, or when some person comes directly to them, and asks to subscribe for the paper, or to settle a year's subscription; and about one hundred, or half of the whole number, scarce do anything at all. Of course we do not, in these remarks, pretend to strict exactness, but this is not far from a literal expose of facts as they are. Again—there are persons who have been taking this paper for six successive years, and never paid one cent on subscription. Others are in arrears for five, or four, or three years. This is so, and yet where these subscribers live there have been circuit preachers every year, professedly acting as agents, and the money not collected nor the paper ordered to be stopped.

At Winchester, Va., a large number of the members of the Northern Methodist Church, in connection with the Baltimore Conference, have withdrawn for the purpose of connecting themselves with the Southern. All Maryland and Delaware should follow.

THE SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH WORKING.

The great problem is solved. A dispatch from Queen Victoria to President Buchanan, dated London, August 16th, was received in this city at half past six o'clock on the same day. The greatest rejoicing prevails in both England and the United States. The same day a dispatch was received by the American Directors from the British Directors, as follows:—"Europe and America are united by telegraph! Glory be to God in the highest, on earth, peace, and good will towards men." A most appropriate utterance! So may it be!

THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE.

London, England, Aug. 16, 1858.

To the Honorable President of the United States:

Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of this great international work, in which the Queen has taken the deepest interest.

The Queen is convinced that the President will join with her in fervently hoping that the electrical cable, which now connects Great Britain with the United States, will prove an additional link between the nations whose friendship is founded upon their common interests and reciprocal esteem.

The Queen has much pleasure in thus communicating with the President, and thus renewing to him her wishes for the prosperity of the United States.

London, August 16.—This came through at 5 o'clock this morning.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

To the Queen of England:

The President cordially reciprocates the congratulations of Her Majesty the Queen of England, on the success of the great international enterprise accomplished by the science, skill and indomitable energy of the two countries. It is a triumph more glorious, because more useful, than was ever won by the conqueror on the field of battle. May the Atlantic Telegraph Company, under the blessing of Heaven, prove to be a bond of perpetual peace and friendship between the kindred nations, and an instrument designed by Divine Providence to diffuse religion, civilization, liberty and law throughout the world. In this view, will not all the nations of Christianity, spontaneously unite in the declaration that it shall be forever neutral, and that its communications shall be held sacred in the places of their destination, in the midst of hostilities.

Dated at Washington, August 16, 1858.

ABOLITION OF RUSSIAN SERFDOM.

All white men possessed of mental and moral enlightenment and elevation necessary to sustain it, should be free citizens. The black man was made for another form of government, and in it he is happier, and really far more elevated, than he could be anywhere else. His color is not more distinctly different from that of the white man than is his mental and moral organization unsuited to the white man's government. And the color is no doubt providentially designed to indicate his political character. The first attempt to make a black man a free citizen, is, to change his color. He is civilized, christianized, benefitted in every way, by his present relation, in the South, to the white race. But he becomes no more suitable for freedom. Liberia is a failure, as all candid and well-informed men know; and colonization is a humbug, of the most amiable, and yet, most cruel, kind.

The enslaved portions of the white race in Europe are all steadily approximating freedom. The Emperor of Russia has commenced the work of emancipating the 20,000,000 serfs of his empire. It is one of the most important movements of the age. In other countries and in earlier centuries, the serfs have been emancipated only through the protracted agency of sanguinary insurrections—of Peasants' Wars in Germany—of tumults of the Jacquirie in France—of Wat Tyler's rebellion in England, and other similar scenes of outbreak, desolation, and blood. But in Russia—hitherto regarded as the chosen seat and center of autocratic despotism—this great movement has been commenced by the Autocrat himself. The number of serfs who are bondmen on the estates of the Crown, is said to be 9,000,000; those belonging to the nobility and other landed proprietors are estimated at 11,760,000, making, in all, throughout the Empire, 20,700,000 human beings to be separated from the land with which they have hitherto been bought and sold, and made free from every form of legal servitude.

Such an undertaking, however, is to be successfully accomplished by no mere pressure of power, and by no general decree. It is to be executed in accordance with a comprehensive plan, which has been many months in maturing, and which is designed alike to guard the rights of proprietors, and prepare the serfs for ultimate freedom. They are immediately to cease being serfs, and to become, what are termed in the Imperial programme, provisional vassals. They are to be paid for their labor, and to acquire the right of purchasing lands, and in proportion to the industry, capacity, and intelligence which they develop, are they raised to perfect social freedom.

The Czar meets with opposition—many of the largest proprietors have under their control from 1000 to 10,000 serfs, who are bound to the soil, and whose labor upon it imparts to it all its value, and creates the wealth of its owners. Many more, it is said at least 2000, possess from 500 to 1000 serfs, and a multitude of others possess a smaller number. These several classes of landholders, whose interests will be affected by this movement, embrace, as is estimated, not less than 127,000 families.—The active opposition of all, or nearly all of these, will of course be arrayed against the measure, and will inevitably retard its progress.

Rev. G. W. Carter accepts the appointment of Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy in the University of Mississippi.

NO BISHOP FOR THE PACIFIC.

The Pacific Methodist, judging from the plan of Episcopal visitations, concludes that the Pacific Conference will have no Bishop in October. The editor seems saddened by the conclusion. We sympathize with him, and with our brethren there. They ought to have a Bishop at their next Conference, to remain till the following one. Whether or not our present number of Bishops could have made arrangements to supply them at their next session, we cannot say. We suppose they could not. They would not wilfully neglect so important a work.

But the General Conference never did a more unwise thing than refuse to strengthen the Episcopacy, by at least one, if it be true, as we assume, that, with the present number, one could not go to California this fall. It was a hasty decision, and the harm of it will yet be more manifest, we fear. There seemed to have been a tacit issue between the General Conference and the Bishops as to the amount of work the latter were able to do, and hence the action of the former in refusing to supply any more at that session. That issue is an old one, and a hurtful one. It should be settled.

We have the impression that Bishop Pierce intends to spend a year on the Pacific, and attend two sessions of the Conference, when he does go, which will be in the spring or early winter, we suppose. If so, he will leave his foot-prints in stone. Our Pacific brethren must do the best they can until he gets there. They will have his labors, and the benefit of ordinations. They will only lack his presidency at the Conference. All will come out well in the end.

OUR MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate gives the following tabular review of this society: "In 1845, the Missionary Society of the Church South was formed, and its first fiscal year closed in May, 1856. The amount raised for missions during the year closing at that date, was $68,592.

For the year ending May,	1847,	$ 73,697 00
" " "	1848,	62,613 00
" " "	1849,	65,495 00
" " "	1850,	85,973 00
" " "	1851,	113,801 00
" " "	1852,	123,163 00
" " "	1853,	166,901 00
" " "	1854,	168,031 33
" " "	1855,	164,336 71
" " "	1856,	172,654 53
" " "	1857,	212,802 19
" " "	1858,	201,325 19

Our St. Louis contemporary adds: "Thus it will be seen the increase has been gradual, but more than one hundred per cent. in ten years. Ten years from this time, if the Church be true to herself, the amount raised annually will not be less than half a million of dollars."

We ought to raise half a million now. We have the means, and our people are willing to give the money. Nothing but judicious and energetic working of our missionary machinery is necessary. We mean precisely what we say. The money can be raised now. Never say ten years hence! All South America, the Mexicans in Texas and California, the neglected plantations of blacks, our destitute home work, the foreign fields we ought to occupy, all say, now, not ten years hence.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

For the week ending Sunday morning last there was 457 deaths, from all causes, in the city; 286 were from yellow fever. It may now be called epidemic. The rule, we believe, which determines any disease to be epidemic is, that it causes more deaths than all other diseases. This has been true of the yellow fever in this city for the past week. If, to constitute an epidemic, it is necessary that the disease in question be generally prevalent in the city, the yellow fever here is not an epidemic, for it is not generally prevalent. It is in spots, in different parts of the city. Neither has it invaded the American population to a great extent. Yet it has steadily increased, both in the city, and among the American population. It is not of a malignant type, and is easily cured when taken in time. There are three cases in the boarding house where the editor of this paper and his family are, (none of the latter acclimated but himself) and they are all doing well. There is no panic in the city. Even the unacclimated stand their ground with great cheerfulness. In 1854 and 1855, it culminated the ninth week, declining steadily afterwards. The present week is the ninth since it began this season, and, in all probability, this week will present the heaviest bill of mortality.—Next week will probably witness a decline.—Indeed, it manifested symptoms of decline toward the last part of last week. For the twenty four hours to noon, Tuesday of last week, there were 36 deaths by yellow fever; to noon Wednesday, 45; to noon Thursday, 52; to noon Friday, 46; to noon Saturday, 42.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Our Government asserts its right to pass troops and munitions of war over the Isthmus of Panama, notwithstanding the objections of New Granada. The recent large customs receipts indicate that part of the New Loan authorized by Congress will not be needed. President Buchanan's difficulties with Mormonism are not at an end, it seems. Gov. Cumming, according to late accounts, seeks the removal of the United States Judge, (Eckels,) for proceeding against polygamy, and asks the appointment of a Mormon, with four wives. Commissioners Powell and McCulloch stand aloof. The President must decide. The War Department have issued orders for the immediate movement of 2000 troops to the Territories of Washington and Oregon, for the purpose of subduing the Indians. General Harney has been appointed Commander-in-Chief of the expedition. The receipts at the Treasury for the last quarter amount to over twenty millions dollars, nearly one-half of which is from the sale of Treasury notes. The expenditures for the same quarter amount to twenty-two million seven hundred and fifty dollars.

OUR CAUSE IN CHINA.

Rev. Mr. Cunningham writes to the Nashville Christian Advocate: "One person has been received to baptism since the date of our last report. We now have eight native members in full connection, and some on probation. Our congregations remain about the same. Several additions have lately taken place to other missions here. The number of converts is slowly but steadily increasing. We think the evidences of progress are stronger now than at any former period in the history of missions in China. At Fu-chau, our brethren of the Northern Methodist Board have lately baptized several persons, after laboring ten years with but one native member. Other missions at that port have also baptized a number lately. The Wesleyan mission at Hong-Kong is growing prosperously."

The Rev. John Caird's sermon on Religion in Common Life, preached before the Queen a year ago, has had a sale of more than 100,000 copies. And this amazing popularity is likely to be enduring. A few Glasgow merchants have built a magnificent church in Glasgow, and Mr. Caird is to be the preacher in this new building, guaranteeing him a stipend of £1,000 or $5,000 per annum, requiring him to preach only one sermon a week. On the first Sabbath the church was filled to suffocation, and, if possible, the preacher's renown is increasing from week to week. As a further evidence of Mr. Caird's genuine popularity, the eminent publisher, Blackwood, has paid over to him a sum almost fabulous—£5,000—for the copyright of a volume of his sermons; and there can be but little doubt of the publisher clearing another £5,000 at least for himself as the result of the speculation.

Rev. E. Stevenson, D. D.—We learn from the Nashville Advocate that Dr. Stevenson has become Principal of the Female Institute, Russellville, Ky. That paper says: "Our excellent Brother Stevenson belongs to the class of Methodist preachers who mean to wear out, not rust. After eight years of faithful toil in the Book Concern, he retires gracefully from its responsibilities, and takes to other work. The Female Institute has been fortunate in securing his services. History tells of Cincinnatus, that he was called from the plow to the head of Roman affairs, and went. Any body else would have done that. There was nothing particularly great in that. But we have often wondered whether, after the public service was performed, Cincinnatus went back to the plow. History is silent on that point."

A Name for an Indian Boy.—We have received says the St. Louis Advocate, from Mrs. Senator Linn, of Boonville by the hand of Rev. G. B. Parsons, twenty dollars for the Missionary cause, for which she desires that an Indian boy shall receive the name of her late honored husband, Lewis F. Linn. Will not others do likewise? We should like to replant and perpetuate the loved names of our friends and public benefactors, among the sprightly youth of the Indian border. Who will send us another twenty dollars for this noble cause, and a name to accompany the one received?

The Great Eastern.—The Portland Argus thinks that if this steamer is offered for sale she will be purchased by the Grand Trunk Company in London, and that she will be fitted up with all possible expedition; and be employed permanently on the line between Liverpool and Portland. If the steamship is sold, it must be at an enormous sacrifice; and there is no company in Europe so well situated to purchase and fit this monster vessel for immediate service, where there is a prospect of a remunerative return, as the Grand Trunk Company.

India.—The Rev. Dr. Butler writes under date of May 14: "All well, all Rohilcund ours! The light is rising in India's obscurity, and "her darkness" shall yet become "as the noon day." We are encouraged at the many indications we see already of God's wise and gracious designs in connection with the late mutiny, and do look for a glorious work of grace in this land. And it may be nearer than we imagine."

The Committees preparatory to the British Conference are now busily at work. They have just sent forth the first draft for the stations. The Revs. W. M. Punshon, E. Walker, R. Leake, R. Roberts and J. Vine, stand for London; the Rev. J. Rattenbury for Bristol; the Rev. Isaac Keeling for Bath; the Rev. John Hall for Manchester; the Rev. John Lomas for Birmingham; Dr. Johnson for Huddersfield.

The French Conference, recently held at Dieuleit, under the presidency Rev. Matthieu Gallienne, co-delegate of the British Conference, was addressed by Rev. William Arthur; received one preacher into full connection; eight remain on trial; and one, Rev. Jean Le Lievre, for twenty seven years in service, retired from active labor on account of failing health.

Spurgeon.—The Rev. H. M. Field, editor of the N. Y. Evangelist, is now travelling in Europe, and writing interesting letters to his paper. In his last he gives an extended and able analysis of Mr. Spurgeon's preaching, coming to the conclusion that with all his peculiarities, Mr. S. is an able, useful, evangelical preacher, and that all good men have reason to rejoice in his labors.

"Matilda," (Miss Caroline Matilda Smiley, of Nelson county, Virginia,) a sweet poetess who has been delighting the readers of the Richmond Christian Advocate, the Southern Literary Messenger, and the Louisville Journal, with gems of song as beautiful as ever emanated from the pen of a Hemans or a Sigourney, is about bringing out a volume of poetry.

Rev. Dr. Mitchell's Letter on "Theophilus Walton," was copied into nearly all the Advocates. The book is a decided success. It will be read all over the country.

BISHOP EARLY.

The venerable Bishop Early spent several days of the last week in our city, says the Richmond Advocate, a guest of his old friend, Wm. Gray, Esq. The Bishop is looking very well. We had the pleasure of conversing with him several times in our office; and called on him, but failed to see him. He is en route to visit his son, Rev. Thouins H. Early, of the Virginia Conference, now in charge of the Culpeper circuit. He will start, during the next month, on his Episcopal tour to the Western Conferences. The Bishop is still anxious for laborers to supply the Kansas Conference. The men for the work are somewhere in the Church. Who are they? Where are they?

The Baptist Bible Revision has gone the way of Babel. The Bible may need verbal corrections, but, with these exceptions, its grand old English cannot be improved for ages to come. When necessary, let "the Holy Catholic Church" (not the Romanist, or Baptist denominations) do the work as Providence may direct.

The Christian Chronicle, Baptist, speaking of the work of the American Bible Union, says: "Bible-Unionism is a failure, a magnificent failure, and nothing else. Its best friends have deserted it, having no confidence in it. Its translations are simply ludicrous. It has now come to a stand for want of funds and friends and confidence in carrying out its own principles. It has come square up to the word baptizo, and knows not whether to translate it or not; but death follows it in either case."

The Great Picture of the Bishops, Delegates to the General Conference, and of the Wesleys, and the deceased Bishops, which is being gotten up by Mr. Wm. T. Smithson, of Washington City, will, it is said, be one of the finest pictures ever executed in Europe or America. A great many subscribers have been obtained. Every body ought to have it. Its cost is $10. If a certain number of subscribers can be obtained, five thousand we believe, the price will be reduced to $5. The proceeds are to build a magnificent Southern Methodist Church in Washington.

Glenville Female College.—The annual commencement of the Glenville (Barbour county) Female College took place on the 14th ult.—The literary address was delivered by Col. John W. A. Sanford. A correspondent of the Columbus Sun speaks of this address as follows:—The Exercises closed with a Literary Address by Col. John W. A. Sanford, of Montgomery, a most elaborate production, showing great familiarity with the history of the past, and full of those graces which an ardent temperament gathers in the gardens of literature and poesy.

Seguin Male and Female College.—The Journal says this institution is now placed on a firm basis. "The day of its fitful existence is alternate sunshine and gloom is ended. Rev. J. W. Phillips is too well known in Texas to need a newspaper encomium; all we shall say, therefore, is that he is President of the Institution, and has made arrangements for an efficient corps of teachers in the Female department. The Male department will be supplied in like manner; and all will be under his immediate and constant supervision."

"Fifty Four Forty."—The line of 54° 40 min. was insisted upon some years ago should be the ultimatum with Great Britain as the northern boundary of our Pacific Territory.—But in our treaty with Great Britain our pretensions dwindled down and we surrendered all the territory above 46°. This very territory of 150,000 square miles or more, is the new El Dorado of Fraser River, and the region north of it, rivalling California in its wealth of gold.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate has an article of excellent tone and temper on the scriptural position, and prevalent peace and prosperity of the Southern Methodist Church. The action of our late General Conference on the slavery question has put to silence, almost, our political enemies both North and South. All our preachers and people can afford to be dignified, magnanimous, and full of brotherly kindness to all opponents.

The California Christian Advocate says that Bishop Scott had gone to Victoria, and the towns on Puget Sound—to examine the necessities of the work—on his way to the Oregon Conference. He is traveling and preaching all over the country, the only way a Bishop can meet the demand of that region. Dr. J. T. Peck and family had arrived.

The acting President of the United States at this time is a young man named James Buchanan Henry. Each morning he receives the reports of the Departments, notes their contents, and sends such of them as he thinks requires the attention of his uncle, to the President, at Bedford.

Rev. Robt. W. Barnwell, of South Carolina, lately elected to the Presidency of William and Mary College, declines the appointment which has been tendered him.

The Scientific American, of August 14, has come to hand. It is published by Munn and Co., New York, and is a most valuable journal of scientific and mechanical improvements.

Littleton Waller Tazewell, of Norfolk, is believed to be the only surviving member of the memorable Virginia Legislature of 1798–99 and 1799 and 1800.

The Christian Advocate and Journal desires to procure a copy of John Nelson's Journal, containing his portrait.

Rev. J. H. Rigg, Wesleyan Methodist, of England, is to prepare a popular and cheap commentary from Dr. Clarke's volumes.

One Hundred and Twenty young men have offered themselves to the British Conference for the ministry.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

News from our Home Work.

"To spread Scriptural Holiness over these Lands."

As the Advocate is not large, and as the demand upon our columns is heavy, we condense the revival correspondence, except in the case of unusually interesting letters, which we publish. In this department, our readers may see at a glance the progress of the work. We trust the preachers and others will send us every item of progress, in the way of revivals, collections, church building, and the like. God grant a general revival!

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Tallahatta River Mission—

Rev. R. W. Coons reports for the third quarter, nine appointments; eight assessions; six received on probation; one admitted into full connection, three by letter; seven dropped; one dismissed by letter; six children and one adult baptised; one Sabbath-school, pro-persons, with one superintendent, four teachers, twenty scholars; nine dollars missionary money, collected, for the missionary; five hundred persons, preached to; the mission upon the whole prosperous.

Gaylesville Circuit—

Rev. JAMES A. NEELY writes:

DEAR BRO. GILLESPIE: The vital sparks of God's sacred fire has fallen on Cedar Bluff Circuit. A revival commenced in Gaylesville the second week in July, continued nine days, over twenty professed conversion, twenty-four joined the Church, among them six young men who stand up, keeping up a weekly prayer meeting. We left Gaylesville and went to Hardiman's Church, in the same vicinity; there we had a gracious outpouring of the Spirit. From thence to Oakbowery and there too the Holy Ghost breathed upon us. In all we have had more than sixty conversions; one half of that number are young men. Four years since seven young men from this vicinity said there are we need us." They are now preaching to repentant sinners, and directing them to the lamb of God. May we not hope that this one community will in four years more send out three times the above number? Bros. Bowers, Shegog and others did us efficient service. I will also add that my camp meeting at Spring Creek, five miles north of Gaylesville will commence on the 16th of Sept. Ministerial help is solicited for the harvest is still plentious and the laborers are few.

IN THE LAST VOLUME of "Bancroft's History of the United States," he accuses Dr. Samuel Johnson of being the "lackey of the British Ministry;" denies to him genius; blames him for his physical dread of death, and sneers at what he calls the "ostentatious pomp of his morality." This is a harsh judgment, and will not be generally acquiesced in. Dr. Johnson had many failings and defects of character and disposition—but Mr. Bancroft cannot obscure the brightness of his fame.

THE DETROIT FREE PRESS says that Lewis Cass, Jr., presented to Dr. Duffield of that city, a Latin Bible, which is 928 years old. It is written on vellum with pen and ink, in characters so regular as to resemble closely printed matter of the present day. Mr. Cass obtained from a Greek Monk, who brought it to Rome from the convent of St. Catharine's, at the foot of Mount Sinai.

PRINCETON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY bids fair to censure calumny of the degeneracy of ministers sons. One-fifth of the present number of students are the sons of ministers; and in that Institution many now be seen the descendants of the Rev. Drs. Griffin and Witherspoon, and great grandson of the Rev. Jonathan Edwards.

DR. VALENTINE MOTT, of New York, the greatest of living surgeons, received by the last steamer his diploma of Honorable Fellow of the Royal Medico Chirurgical Society of Edinburg—an honor which we believe, has been conferred upon no other of our countrymen.

IT IS SAID that the very first paragraph of Hon. Rufus Choate's oration at Boston, on the 5th ult., contained two hundred and sixty-six words, uttered without pausing for breath. Another sentence contains over the hundred words, is twelve inches long in print, and is decorated with about two hundred and fifty adjectives.

THE ALUMNI of Harvard propose to erect a hall for their public exercises. The cost is estimated at $50,000, and a subscription of $5000 was made by George Saunders.

THE AMERICAN urges now exciting attention in Great Britain, are Mr. Bancroft's new volume; Professor Asa Gray's Botanical works, the new editions of Longfellow's poems, and Motley's Dutch Republic.

THE SHAKESPEARE autograph is enshrined in the British Museum. It lies on velvet, in a sloping mahogony case, with a plate glass before it, and curtains of blue silk to protect it from a strong light.

THE CONFERENCE of the Methodist Episcopal Church, recently held in Monrovia, resolved to establish a paper in Liberia for the benefit of their church and the country; is to be called the Liberia Christian Advocate.

THE BOSTON TRAVELLER says that Trustees of Tufts College, a few days ago, received a donation to the college of one thousand dollars, from a gentleman who prefers that his name shall not be mentioned.

Male Department—Rev. D. C. B. Connerly, M. A., Principal, J. J. Hutchinson, Jr., M. A., Teacher of Mathematics.

A NEW PAPER has been started in London, as an organ of revival intelligence. Its name is the "Revival Herald, or The Church Awakened."

THE NUMBER of churches in Great Britain is 11,000, while the number of dissenting chapels is 20,000.

THE LUTHERAN CHURCH. This large and respectable body of christians are making vigorous efforts to endow their literary institution, the Capital University of Columbus, Ohio.

MISSIONARIES TO FRAZER RIVER. The Rev. Bishop Scott, of the Methodist Episcopal Church writes from San Francisco, announcing his arrival in that city on the 14th of June. Alluding to the new gold fields recently discovered on Frazer river, he says: "People are hurrying there by thousands. I purpose following them in about two weeks, as far as Bellingham's Bay, where a second San Francisco is springing up, to see what arrangements can be made to supply them with the Word of Life."

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY in thirty-one years has issued one hundred and eighty-five millions of publications of different kinds. Its receipts and expenditures during the same time have amounted to five millions of dollars. During the last year, it employed 700 colporters.

CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIANS.—This body of Presbyterians, an off-shoot from the main body, and semi-Arminian in their views of doctrine, number twenty-two Synods, eighty-eight Presbyteries, and one thousand ministers.—The communicants number over one hundred thousand.

J. D. REID, Esq., of Utica, has made a contribution to a fund of $2,500 to be loaned to theological students who need assistance in prosecuting their studies, but will not accept it as charity. Mr. Reid's donation is $1,000.

FIFTY THOUSAND conversions among children were reported by the Methodist Sabbath schools of Philadelphia Conference for the past year.

FROM THE 42d annual report of "The American Bible Society," it appears that during the last year the number of volumes issued was 712,045, making a total since the formation of the Society of 12,801,014.

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT has appropriated the sum of 150,000f. for the restoration of the church of St. Anne at Jerusalem. This Church was built during the Crusades, on the spot, it is claimed, where the Virgin Mary was born, and was ceded to the French Government in 1855. It is almost in ruin.

Personal.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Lathrop, of West Springfield, wrote five thousand sermons in his ministry of sixty-five years.

The accomplished daughter of Theodore S. Fay, Esq., our former Minister to Switzerland, was recently married to Dr. Abbott, an American gentleman of high social position. Mr. R. Dale Owen, the late Minister Resident at Naples, is about to write a book, which can not fail to interest those who have taken an interest in Neapolitan affairs. The Prince Anatole Demidoff, Russian Minister to Tuscany, well known for his immense wealth, for his historical works on Russia and as the husband of the Princess Mathilde Bonaparte, from whom he lived separated, has just died at Turin. The Rev. Dr. Duffield, of Detroit, has a Bible which is probably the oldest one on this continent. It bears date A. D. 930, and consequently is more than 900 years old. The book contains six hundred pages, in double columns. Mrs. Elizabeth Willing Jackson, relict of the late Major Wm. Jackson, of the revolutionary army and private secretary to Gen. Washington, died in Philadelphia on the 5th inst. She had reached the age of ninety years. The New York Daily News, has a communication suggesting the erection of a monument, in that city, to Gen. Quitman, similar to that already erected to Gen. Worth. The richest Commoner in Scotland, Mr. John Gordon, of Cluny, has lately died, leaving property worth between two and three millions of pounds. The Hon. Charles R. Vanderlew, Minister Resident at Ecuador, left New York in the Moses Taylor for Aspinwall, on his way to Quito. The Dean of Ripon, in England, and John Q. Wilson, of Albany, N. Y., are the survivors of those who accompanied Robert Fulton on his first steam vessel journey on the Hudson. Mr. Kavanagh, who took the letter from Lucknow, during the siege, to Sir Colin Campbell, has been rewarded with a sum of £2,000, and an appointment in Oude worth £700 a year. We see it stated that, at the commencement of Bowdoin College, Maine, the degree of LL. D. was conferred on the Hon. Jefferson Davis, Senator from Mississippi. Madame Ida Pfeiffer, whose singular peregrinations in barbarous regions have long occupied the public, is now in the hospital at Hamburg, where Dr. Tuegel is treating her for chronic ague caught in Madagascar. It is proposed to erect a monument to the memory of the late George Washington Parke Custis, at Arlington Spring, Va. William Cullen Bryant has declined the appointment of Regent of the New York University, conferred upon him last winter by the Legislature. Lord Palmerston has purchased the London Morning Post from Messrs. Crompton, paper makers, whose property it has been for some time. The great French Botanist and botanical author, Bonpland, friend of Humboldt, and favorite of the Empress Josephine, died recently, aged eighty-five. Rev. G. N. Baird, editor of the Pittsburg Christian Advocate, has been made a D.D. by Allegheny College, Pa.

Miscellaneous Items.

A young lady, of Lockport, N. Y., who renounced Romanism recently, was told that "as she was born in the Catholic church, she ought to die in it." She answered promptly: "I was born in sin, but I have made up my mind not to die in it." Dr. Ray, in the report of the Butler Hospital for the Insane in Rhode Island, says: "I believe and it is in some measure the result of considerable observation of various psychological states—that in this age of fast living, nothing can be relied upon more surely for preserving the healthy balance of the mental faculties, than an earnest, practical conviction of the great truths of Christianity." There is now living, in Georgia, one of the soldiers at the old French Empire. He was in the battles of Marengo, Jena and Waterloo—went through them all unhurt, and emigrated to America when Napoleon was exiled to St. Helena. "Oh, Mr. Hill," said one of the Rev. Rowland's hearers, "how is it you say so many out of the way things in your sermons?" "Because," said the eccentric divine, "you are such out of the way sinners?" An ignorant minister having remarked in the presence of Dr. South, that the Lord has no need of man's learning, that witty divine replied, "Still less has he need of man's ignorance." Such a reply is better than a page of argument. Washington, visiting a lady in his neighbourhood, on leaving the house, a little girl was directed to open the door. He turned to the little child and said, "I am sorry, my little dear, to give you so much trouble." "I wish sir," she replied, "it was to let you in." One of the firemen saved from the wreck of the Pennsylvania, was Isaac Wisler, of Louisville. He says he was thrown into the river, and was saved by grasping a pig which swam ashore with him. The recent insurrection in Crete has elicited from a retired French consul statistics of the population. That island counts 50,000 Turks, 150,000 Greeks 15,000 Jews, 1000 Armenia—and 1000 Europeans; total, 220,000 inhabitants. The Pennsylvanian says the bulldels will hold a convention in Philadelphia in October next.

News from the Interior.

TEXAS.—Cotton and cane are suffering for rain. The Houston and Texas Central railroad has a large force on the third section above Hempstead. Large subscriptions are being obtained. Iron for the Brazoria road will soon be on the way. The Galveston road will soon be completed to Houston. A. A. Jones, partner of Gen. Henderson, died at Tyler. Heavy robberies of letters between New Orleans and San Antonio are reported. Severe drought is reported about Marshall. Wonderful corn and cotton crops on "Old Canry." Hell is probably Associate Judge of Supreme Court over Buckley. Indians troublesome about San Antonio. A grand council of Camanches, seven tribes, with lodges and Kheways, is said to have been held for a general war.

MISSISSIPPI. An attempt was made a few nights since, on the Central Railroad, above Lamar, to throw the cars off the track by placing a cross-tie on it. Five river counties of Mississippi—Bolivar, Coahoma, Issaquena, Tunica and Washington, containing taxable property to the value of over forty millions of dollars—contain less than fifteen hundred voters. Two cases of yellow fever have been landed at Vicksburg from steamboats. Another case is reported in the city. The value of taxable lands has increased 400 six per cent. in three years—that of slaves, in some time, thirteen per cent. Cotton in Yazoo opening finely. The Oxford Mercury speaks of splendid crops. Health about Yazoo not good.

ALABAMA. The Pensacola road is open for trains for thirty miles. Cotton prospects are changing for the worse. There had been a heavy hail in Macon county. A severe hail storm has occurred in Monroe county. In Russel and Barbour counties corn crops are very fine, cotton moderate. The citizens of Concord county have taken eighty-eight thousand dollars stock in the Montgomery and Pensacola railroad—only twelve thousand dollars to be made up. Gen. Fair, Minister to Belgium, has departed for his post. New cotton coming to Mobile rapidly. Rust in cotton about Eufaula. A wine company has been organized at Citronelle, capital $25,000.

LOUISIANA. Rain is needed in Claiborne Parish; the cotton is suffering. Corn is out of danger. Fruit is abundant in Claiborne. In East Feliciana, fever of a congestive type is prevalent. Corn and cotton doing well. Rain needed in some places. Quarantine has been established at Clinton. A vigilance committee has been organized in the parish of St. Jacques to prevent illegal traffic with negroes. Health about Baton Rouge is pretty good. Corn, cane and cotton look well, though the army worm has made its appearance. The Houma Ceres states that Mr. Valanceny was killed by the overturning of a buggy.

ARKANSAS.—Only four hundred dollars were necessary for repairs on the Memphis and Little Rock railroad. St. Francis river will be reached, it is said, by the first of December. Rust and Hindman elected to Congress.

TENNESSEE.—Fine tobacco crops reported about Clarksville. The Nashville and Louisville road is progressing, and will soon reach Gallatin. Samuel Tate, President of Memphis and Charleston railroad, died recently near Memphis. Great ore at Memphis recently.

FLORIDA.—The Spanish Consul at Key West, Mr. Salas, was drowned. The ship Ostrontho, was burned at Key West.

GEORGIA. Southwestern Georgia has fine corn and good cotton crops.

Local Intelligence.

CASUALTIES, ETC. A mail was found drowned in Canal Carondelet on Thursday. A man named Daugherty was stabbed on Saturday night. A fire, soon extinguished, occurred Sunday morning on Camp street, opposite Lafayette Square. A young mother, with a child three years old, jumped into the river to drown herself and child, on Sunday, but was rescued. Seduction and desertion the cause. The second mate of the Roger Stewart, just from Havre, fell overboard and was drowned. A little girl, while walking on the levee on Sunday, with her parents, fell through a hole in the wharf and was drowned. Another woman attempted suicide by drowning, but was prevented.

WRONG.—A French merchantman was towed up to the city on Saturday night, says the Delta, filled with immigrants. They were enjoying themselves singing quite merrily, when an officer of that District went on board and informed them that they must desist, as there were many persons around sick with yellow fever. At the mention of that disease, the "Marseillaise" froze in their throats, and hurried whispers followed. There were eleven priests and four nuns, aboard, who said they had come over by invitation of the Archbishop, and would be obliged to request speedy transportation to a more healthy district. It is to be hoped that the nuns will avail themselves of the first boat up the river; the priests can wait for orders.

SALUTES TO THE ORIENTAL TELEGRAPH. In honor of the great event of the time, the success of the Atlantic Telegraph, Mayor Stith has ordered national salutes to be fired at noon to-day, from Lafayette and Jackson squares. His proclamation is advertised in another column.

SALE OF WHARVES.—The sale of 21st June last was for the whole $601,000, which was rejected by the Council. The sale day before yesterday was for the whole, $1,052,000.

THE VIRGINIA is now generally believed to have been designedly blown up, by villains, with something besides steam.

HEAVY RAIN STORM from yesterday afternoon till this morning, and still continues.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION is actively at work.

The Very Latest Intelligence.

DOMESTIC.

CALIFORNIA.—The Empire City's news says the Frazer river excitement is cooling, from unfavorable accounts; 25,000 men had already gone. Frazer river was too high for work, and much suffering was the consequence; but the wealth of the mines was not doubted. A rich vein of coal has been discovered in Sonora county. The Administration and Douglass men are at war; Broderick's friends and the Republicans will probably side with the latter. Fruit was abundant in San Francisco. Fires, murders, suicides, robberies, attempted lynchings, a small number, are reported.

COLLISION reported between the Europa and Arabia, on the 11th; the former mistaking the latter's lights for those of Cape Race, was badly damaged, but no lives lost. Fruit crop in Pennsylvania reported a failure.

CENTRAL AMERICA. A Washington despatch, of the 8th inst., says: "Some months ago, the Presidents of Nicaragua and Costa Rica, arranged the boundary between the two countries, prepared an appeal, and despatched it to those of France and Great Britain, inviting their protection against the United States. Our Government has, in consequence, proceeded to act in such a manner as will plainly but firmly indicate to all foreign powers that the United States will not consent to their interference in Central American affairs. The Government will act in accordance with the Monroe doctrine.

SENSATION. At Louisville, August 16, the Queen's message was received at 11 o'clock. Its announcement from the Telegraph office was followed by a brilliant display of fireworks by the managers of the National office and line. There is great enthusiasm; the city authorities are preparing to join their sister cities in a grand jubilee in honor of the event.

At Nashville, August 18, the announcement of the opening of the Atlantic Telegraph, and the receipt of the Queen's message produced intense excitement. Large bodies of men paraded the streets with bands of music; all the bells in the city ringing, with illuminations, bonfires, etc. The Queen's message was received over the National line by Mr. D. P. Shepherd, the chief operator. Upon the receipt of the message his associate, Mr. Charles Allen, exclaimed: "So transit! no, it is so Trans-Atlantic glorious Monday!"

TELEGRAPHIC CELEBRATION. A dispatch from Louisville, received yesterday afternoon, Aug. 17, says: There is a grand, general illumination to-night throughout the Eastern and Western States. Most of the large towns and cities are in a perfect blaze of light, accompanied by the ringing of bells, firing of cannon, bon-fires, fire-works, torch-light processions, and every variety of demonstration in honor of the great event of the age—the completion of the Trans-Atlantic Telegraph. The rejoicing is universal and spontaneous here; half the population are in the streets.

THE REJOICE OF THE CABLE. A dispatch from Mr. Field states that there are about eighty miles of the cable left on board the Niagara, which will be reshipped in England.

MISSISSIPPI POLITICS. A despatch from Port Gibson, says there was a Democratic meeting there on the 16th, in reference to Congressional nomination. Judge Thrasher and Mr. Henry Hughes declined to be candidates. Mr. Eillet was the choice of the County Convention. Resolutions were passed endorsing the African Contract Labor bill. There was much discussion in relation to the subtreasury system and Mr. Cobb's letter.

FOREIGN.

SOUTH PACIFIC COAST.—The Chilian Congress was in session. In Peru, Louis Lomer, Illibuster, had been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment and labor. A desperate fight had occurred between French and Peruvian sailors, the former victorious. Castillo, it is said, will be next President. Instructions have gone to Gen. Lamar to notify Costa Rica and Nicaragua that the U. S. Government will take justice into their own hands. Jerez is not accredited to this Government. Vanderbilt is said to have defeated the Varizari treaty.

CANADA. A new Ministry in Canada was announced for the 7th inst.—Mr. Cartier, &c. the Premier, and, with three exceptions, his colleagues were members of the Ministry which resigned the preceding week.

THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE, to the President, was dated, August 16, received at 6:30 P. M. at New Orleans on same day. It is as follows:

To the Honorable President of the United States—

"Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of this great international work, in which the Queen has taken the deepest interest."

"European and American are united by Telegraph. Glory be to God in the highest, on earth, peace and good will towards men."

THE REBELLION in Central India is reported crushed. Lord Canning proclaims that Sepoys who have been concerned in the murder of British subjects, will not be pardoned. Large reinforcements were being sent to India. Austria, it is said, is concentrating 33,000 troops on the Danube, near the Turkish frontier. At Liverpool, Aug. 7, cotton sales for the week, 67,000 bales. Decline of 1-16d. "Manchester advices favorable. Sugar buoyant.

GOLD IN AFRICA. The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, in an article on "An African Exodus," remarks: "One thing will impel such an exodus toward Africa, as we have long waited for and hoped to see. In Africa the richest gold deposits in the world await the miner. We have been assured by a gentleman whose integrity we are willing to vouch for, and who has been eighteen years in the Guinea trade, that the amount of gold which abounds in some places, and which is protected by superstitious labor and by "fetish" notions from being gathered, is literally incredible.

One of the Most Prevalent, and at the same time troublesome and painful diseases that attend the human flesh, is the Fever and Ague. For a long time the medical world have been continually bringing forth numerous spurious forgeries, all of which had all without effect. Dr. J. HOSTETTER, an experienced and celebrated physician, has succeeded in furnishing the public with a valuable preparation for the cure of Fever and Ague. The steady and increasing demand lately made for the "Bitters" and the universal success attending it, have made for it a reputation unsurpassed by any specific of the kind. For the cure of the Fever and Ague, the Bitters is decidedly the most valuable, fastest-acting and should claim a superiority over any other preparation extant.

THE GARDEN—BY LIZZIE LEWIS.

There is a garden, beloved of God,
As primal Eden, by angels trod,
When Adam dwelt in its verdant bow'rs,
And Eve watched over its fadeless flow'rs.

The tree of knowledge, forbid no more
In this garden, yields its golden store;
The sacred fruit of the tree of life
Is still with immortal being rife.

And oh! in clusters of living vines,
What odor breathes, and what beauty shines!
What silv'ry light from the lily beams!
What "crystal depths" in the placid streams!

Here angels, too, from their homes above,
On silent missions of peace and love,
Oft glide, unseen, through the sacred bow'rs,
And bring fresh dews to the drooping flow'rs

'Tis not the garden, renowned of old,
Where a dragon watched its fruits of gold:
The guarded haunt of an eastern king,
Where fountains sparkle, and maidens sing.

'Tis known to a brighter, purer fame—
In sacred annals, it bears a name,—
THE LIVING CHURCH, to whose care is giv'n
Immortal souls, to be trained for heav'n

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer Little Children to come unto Me."

THE CHILDREN'S EDITORIAL.

The editor is afraid the children were a little disappointed last week. Their column was rather short; it was not more than half a column. But we had so much to put into the last paper that we had to crowd even the children's column as much as possible.

THE FIRST PAGE.

You must not forget to read the first page this week. The letter from Palestine was written by a lady from Louisiana who is now traveling there. Palestine is the land where the Savior was born, and lived, and died. It is the land where Jerusalem is, the land of Canaan, where the children of Isreal went when they left Egypt. There are several other interesting articles on the first page. You must read the second and third pages too.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

We have sad news for you this week. Here in New Orleans the yellow fever is spreading very fast among the poor Irish, Germans, and other foreigners. Some few of the Americans are sick with it, and some of them have died with it. We trust the children, when they kneel down to say their prayers, night and morning, will ask God to save the city from a bad epidemic, and to have mercy upon the dying.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

You read in the last Advocate about the laying of the telegraph cable across the ocean, between England and America. This is the greatest work that has ever been done since the beginning of the world. It is nearly two thousand miles from this side to the other side, so that the telegraph cable is nearly two thousand miles long! The ocean, for a great part of the way, is two miles deep. It lies away down so deep that fishes, and sea-animals are not able to live there! Now we shall get the news, from all parts of the world, every day. Up to this time, we only got the news by the steamship, once a week, or ten days. Sometimes there were any steamships, it took the news from ——— to two months to come, in the sail-ships.—Now it is to come every day.

——— here is a beautiful story, which we wish you to read. You will be pleased with it:

THE CATHOLIC CHILD'S BIBLE.

Little Mary Connor had a copy of the Bible given her by the Sunday-school teacher. Now Mary, having been brought up a Catholic, had never read the holy book until she was sent to a Sunday school. It was therefore a sort of wonder-book to her mind. Such beautiful stories as those of Joseph, Moses and David she had never read before. But what charmed her most of all was the lovely story of the life of Jesus.

Mary took great care of her Bible. When she went out she always hid it away in the drawer of her dressing table. At night she kept it under her pillow. When she had time to read it she went into the garden and sat alone in an arbor which was covered with shrubbery.

Here her mother found her one summer evening busily engaged in reading the story of David's battle with the giant Goliah.

"What book is that you are reading, Mary!" asked her mother.

Mary blushed, for she knew her mother did not like the Bible; but she would not tell a lie. So, like a good and brave girl, she said:

"I am reading the Bible, mother."

"The Bible! O you naughty girl. That book is only for the priests to read, and not for such as you. Give it to me."

Poor Mary had to give up her Bible. Her mother took it right to the priest, who lived near by. Mary went with her; and when her mother showed the holy book to the priest, as he stood at the window, poor Mary knelt down and earnestly begged him to let her keep the precious book.

The priest would not consent, and was very stern in his language to Mary for reading it. He also forbade her her mother sending Mary to Sunday-school. When Mary saw there was no hope of getting her Bible again, she sprang to her feet, and said:

"I have learned several chapters of it by heart; you can't take them away from me, sir!"

Poor Mary was kept away from Sunday-school a good while, but she was no longer a Catholic. The Bible had made her a Protestant, as it does all who read and obey it. That's why Catholic priests don't like it. If they would let their people read the Bible, they would all turn Protestants, and the priests would soon be left without a people. Let us try, therefore, to get Catholic children into our Sunday-schools, that we may teach them the Scriptures and lead them to the cross of the Lord Jesus.

A child can do very much good some times, especially when God has pardoned its sins, and filled its little heart with his love. We will tell you about

THE CHILD AND THE SHOEMAKER.

When Mr. Whitefield was preaching in New England, a lady became the subject of Divine Grace, and her spirit was peculiarly drawn out in prayer for others. She could persuade no one to pray with her but her little daughter, about ten years of age. After a time it pleased God to touch the heart of the child, and give her the hope of salvation. In a transport of holy joy she then exclaimed:

"O mother, if all the world knew this! I wish I could tell everybody. Pray, mother, let me run ro some of the neighbors and tell them that they may be happy and love my Savior."

"Ah, my child," said the mother, "that would be useless, for I suppose, were you to tell your experience, there is not one within many miles who would not laugh at you, and say it was all a delusion."

"O mother," replied the little girl, "I think they would believe me. I must go over to the shoemaker and tell him: he will believe me."

She ran over, and found him at work in his shop. She began by telling him that he must die, and that he was a sinner; and that she was a sinner, but that her blessed Savior had heard her mother's prayers, and had forgiven all her sins; and that now she was no happy she did not know how to tell it.

The shoemaker was struck with surprise, and his tears flowed down like rain: he threw aside his work, and by prayer and supplication sought mercy. The neighborhood was awakened, and in a few months more than fifty persons were brought to the knowledge of Jesus, and to rejoice in his power and grace.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

"Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee."

We have not much space to devote to this important department; but, believing, as we do, that the influence of the home circle has more to do in the formation of individual character, in the attainment of loss of human happiness, and in the general character and progress of civilization, than any other influence, we have done what we could.

"I SHALL NEVER BE HAPPY AGAIN."

"I shall never be happy again," quivered the pale lips; "earth and sky are alike dark to me, since they laid my only one in the dust."

"Does religion, then, afford you no consolation?" asked the white haired pastor, solemnly. "Does not the thought that you shall go to him lift the vail from your spirit?"

"No, no—I know nothing—think of nothing but that I have lost him—lost him! All is a dead blank; my heart is like a stone. O! I would give worlds to lose this awful weight—worlds, worlds!"

"And if I should say that this terrible weight may be cast off—this cold heart made warm again?"

"O, tell me how, for I am in despair!" she cried.

"In one year, dear madam," said the white-haired man, "my only son, grown to manhood, was drowned; my wife laid in her grave; my daughter taken from me by death, and my own health so prostrated that I could no longer minister in holy things to my people."

"How sad!" cried the young widow, clasping her hands, while her eyes filled. "How did you—how could you bear it?"

"By looking up to my Father, and saying, 'Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.' Is the prayer new to you?"

"O, no," murmured the disconsolate one, her pale face bowed upon her hands; "I say it every day; but—I have never felt it."

The Sabbath came round, and the young widow, for the first time since her husband's death, went to the house of God. On her way she met the white-haired man, and with a gentle but subdued smile she said, "I can bear it now."

"Yes," she answered; "it was a struggle, but as I felt it was right, the load fell off."

And the white-haired pastor, as he stood up to talk to the people, took for his text the words, "Thy will be done."

GRAVE OF HARRIET NEWELL.

A Mauritius correspondent of the Boston Traveler gives an account of his search for the grave of Harriet Newell, who died at Port Louis in 1812. The writer says:

"Thus I wandered and mused, and searched in vain, till at last I approached an artisan occupied in putting letters upon a monument, and, upon inquiring for the grave, was answered in some language utterly incomprehensible to me, and at the same time was pointed to the heel of the Irishman on the outside of the enclosure, who at once conducted me to the sought-for spot. The artisan was facing it when I addressed him. I had almost touched it, and stood upon it when I inquired of him; but the grave was so crowded by others, the slab containing the inscription lying upon the ground, and a low stone only being erected at the head, that it could not be recognized without stooping down to read the name and epitaph.

"The inscription is perfectly legible, and the grave kept with care and neatness, several of the Scotch and English residents being familiar with her history, and honoring her memory. Indeed, most of the Protestant population of the city have heard her name, if nothing more, and have heard it only to do it honor. The grave of a devoted English Wesleyan missionary almost touches that of Mrs. Newell, and hard by is that of the Rev. Mr. Themason, the friend and associate of Henry Martyn, whose tender spirit, touched with a tinge of melancholy, was, beyond any other, in harmony with hers. A few geraniums were growing near the grave, some of which I plucked, and three trees, resembling cypress and fir, out of four once planted at the corners of the adjacent grave, had in time shot up forty or fifty feet, whose branches spread out over Harriett Newell's grave, sighed out a soft and long requiem."

THE LITTLE ONES.

Now that the warm weather has come, let your children amuse themselves out of doors. Don't keep them shut up like houseplants, until they become as pale and as thin as ghosts. Strip off the finery, put on coarse garments, and turn them out to play in the sand—to make "mud cakes" to daub their faces with anything of an "earthly nature," which will have a tendency to make them look as though they had entered into a co-partnership with dirt. Keep them in the house, and they will soon look bellke, and be of about as much value as a potato which grows in the cellar, pale, puny, sickly, sentimental wrecks of humanity. Turn them out, we say, boys and girls, and let them run, snuff the pure air, and be happy. Who cares if they do get tanned? Leather must be tanned before it is fit for use, and boys and girls must undergo a hardening process, before they are qualified to engage in the arduous duties of active life.

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

MISS BETTIE McCLELLAN, died at the residence of her uncle, Hon. J. B. Thompson, on the 23d ult., of typhoid fever, in the twenty-first year of age. She was a native of Williamson co., Ten. but had resided here for the last two or three years. She professed religion two years ago, joined the church, and continued an humble, consistent christian course. She was ever ready to console, encourage, and assist the afflicted. She wept with those that wept and rejoiced with those that rejoiced. Self sacrificing, to a fault, without disparagement had no superior and but few equals in all the christian virtues. Her death was peaceful, a gentle falling of sleep in Jesus. She was preceded six weeks by a dear aunt, over whose protracted illness she had watched with assiduous care, prostrating her, and making her an easy to disease. Throughout her long and painful illness she showed by word and act that she was going to that rest that remaineth for the people of God. C.

MRS LOUISA HOLMES, wife of Dr. B. R. Holmes, died 8th August 1858 in Benton, Yazoo co., Miss. She was born 24th August, 1824, in Tenn., dedicated to God in baptism, trained in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. When 12 years old she professed religion, and joined the Methodist Church. She was sent to Tennessee to school, where for three or four years, she was connected with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Upon her return she re-joined the Church of her early choice. In her 20th year she was married to Dr. B. R. Holmes. She died of consumption, lingering four months. I conversed with her on the subject of religion; she said, she had some consolation and comfort; she had faith in God, but she did not enjoy as much of the faith and consolation of religion as she desired; had never gone to God in prayer without benefit. She expressed regret to part with her dear children. Sunday Rev. G. W. Cooper visited her and she requested him to read the 23d Psalm and to pray. Every doubt gave way, she seemed heavenly minded, and resigned. Her father-in-law knelt by her and exclaimed, "God is love!" "O, yes," she replied, "he is love; I have committed all into his hands; I want you to take my children, and raise them for the Lord." A short time before she died, her father-in-law asked her if she felt that the Lord was still with her, "O, yes," she exclaimed, "I feel him, I see him now." She hid all an affectionate farewell and then passed away quietly and peacefully. She was an affectionate wife, mother, and friend, and universally beloved. She leaves a husband, six children, a mother, and many friends. D. M. WHOOTEN.

THE GREATEST
Medical Discovery
OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,

From the worst Scrofula down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases, both thunder tumor. He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of canker in the mouth and stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One or two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure coreo and running ulcers.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed growing on the pastures, and along old stone walls, should cure every humor in the system; yet it is a fixed fact. If you have a humor, it has to start. There are no IFS nor ANDS, humors nor has's about it nothing some cases, but not yours. I peddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts. I give it to children a year old, to old people of sixty. I have seen poor, puny, wormy-looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to a perfect state of health by one bottle.

To those who are subject to a sick head ache, one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief in catarrh and dizziness. Some who have taken it had been costive for years, and have been regulated by it. Where the body is sound it works quite easy, but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it will cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed; they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad result from it; on the contrary, when that feeling is gone you will feel yourself like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever man listened to.

Manufactured by DONALD KENNEDY, No. 120 Warren street, Roxbury, Mass. Price $1 per bottle.

DR. T. McGOWN'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
IODINE OF POTASI,
THE GREAT
BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,

Prepared from FRESH ROOT, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a PANACEA or CATHOLICON than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Cowder, Baron, Bardsley, Munson, Record, Graham, Ten, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy, diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Piles, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's ointment should also be used, applied locally;) Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cancers, Ewer, Tumors, Hemorrhoids, Gleet; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Forcyce says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in constitutions enfeebled and enfeebled by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparation of Sarsaparilla."

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Irregularities, Suppression, Diseases of the Womb, Leucorrhea, Tumors, Enlargement of the Uterus, Breasts; Chorea, etc.; Impurities of the Blood or System, and all diseases dependent thereon. Makes the skin clear and smooth—an object of interest with the ladies. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.

McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL.—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.

McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS.—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.

McGOWN'S OINTMENT.—Never known to fail curing old Sores, Cancers, Chronic Sore Eyes, etc.

WILL EFFECTUALLY CURE
LIVER COMPLAINT, DYSPEPSIA, JAUNDICE,

Chronic or Nervous Debility, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered Liver or Stomach.

Such as Constipation, Inward Piles, to Fullness or Blood the Head, Acidity on the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations of, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and difficult breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots of webs before the sight, Fever and Dull pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin, and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil and great Depression of Spirits.

The proprietor, in calling the attention of the public to this preparation, does so with a feeling of the utmost confidence in its virtues and adaptation to the diseases for which it is recommended.

It is no new and untried article, but one that has stood the test of a ten years' trial before the American people, and its reputation and sale is unrivalled by any similar preparations extant. The testimony in its favor given by the most prominent and well known Physicians and individuals in all parts of the country is unrivalled, and a careful perusal of the Almanac, published annually by the proprietor, and to be had gratis of any of his Agents, cannot but satisfy the most skeptical that this remedy is really deserving the great celebrity it has obtained.

LETTER FROM PALESTINE.

March 20, 1858.

These Polish Jews are considered the most learned, but are not as neat in dress and as fine looking as the Spanish; they wear a black sash turban sourrounded by a rim of fur which gives them a singular appearance, with flowing beards—some have the turban alone—their outside garments are loose robes, to their feet, with dark and conclave colors. The Spanish Jews have the finest synagogues, much cleaner, and in better order, and were personally better looking and neater in apparel—we went into several temples in close proximity, and a new one about to be finished, quite large. It is mournful to look upon this dejected people at their wailings and worship, which appears much alike—the first only a preparation for the other. They are as scrupulous about the Sabbath as in the days of our Saviour, but not about the weightier matters of the law.

Their condition is dark and gloomy, as it regards the Gospel of Jesus, with the vail upon their hearts.

Oh! this Eastern world! it presents a most forbidding aspect, as it requires moral principle, which seems to have taken flight from earth. It is with the deepest sympathy that we look upon the degraded position of woman in her Mohomedan Paradise—lost to the sight of all that is noble, refined, and intellectual in her nature, she goes about the streets with her face veiled, but her soul has one of a deeper texture, where all that is beautiful and lovely is concealed from her sight, and she acts not as a guardian angel to the young, to give impetus to thought in its noble aspirations of mind, to mould and fashion the manners of a nature by high and elevated motives. But she fills up a niche in a harem subject to lordly power, to perish and be forgotten when her beauty fails; left without one resource of happiness in her old age, but her withered charms and wavering passions.

Some of the Jewish women read the Bible, this is the extent of their acquirements in their houses of worship. Those we saw at their wailings, were clad in long white veils, not beautiful at all—they may not have been of the better classes—they kissed all the stones as they passed by them. We were at a Sunday school taught by some English ladies—about a dozen little dewesses were able to read the New Testament in the English language. The Prussian Protestant Sisters of Charity have a school under their care, where the Jew, Mahomedan, and any other nations are privileged to send their children. They are taught in their own language, and the English also.—They had several very interesting girls. They told us of one who had left them but returned, fully impressed with the truth of the Gospel as it is in Jesus. Converts from Judaism are rare, but the seed thus sown God has promised to bless, notwithstanding the barriers which look to the natural mind insurmountable. This institution has a Hospital for the sick, which these Sisters of Charity take care of, besides it is supported by the Prussian Government, and called the Ladies' Prussian Hospital. The buildings are designed for the accommodation of invalids, where they have every medical attention and comfort. Every apartment was neat and airy, and the Sisters of Charity, though not bound by vows of celibacy, perform their labors of love and mercy with a self-sacrificing spirit worthy of imitation. They appeared amiable and intelligent, courteous and kind to strangers.

TRIAL OF SCOPUS AND CAVE OF JEREMIAH.

We passed through the Damascus gate to visit the Cave of Jeremiah, in which tradition says he lived and wrote his Lamentations. It is a long cavern with natural arches, wide and sufficiently capacious for a number of persons to live in—no doubt it has been improved, although it looks wild and perfectly natural.—Those caves are seen all along the mountains of Judea—the wilderness of Engedi has a plenty of them in its wild and desolate regions, such as David hid himself in when he cut off the skirt of Saul's robe. The mouth of this cave has an artificial entrance, and a gate-keeper who makes it a source of profit, and it is under the care of a dervish who lives in a hut near it. It lies directly on the road to Anathoth. Opposite, under the walls of the city is a place called Solomon's quarry, whose subterranean chambers extend far under the city, where it is supposed stones were hewn out for the building of the Temple, and indeed, from Jeremiah's Cave to the wall it appears like a mountain or hill entirely cut out, from the appearance of the rock, for the wall of the city is built upon a natural base near this cave twenty or thirty feet deep. The opening is small, but some of our party went in with candles and saw the extent, which is quite astonishing. We just looked in at the mouth, the aspect was too dark and gloomy to undertake the entrance, having seen so many caves.

We had the Hill of Scopus pointed out to us which rises above the tombs of the Judges, where it is said Titus first encamped with his army when about to lay seige to Jerusalem. We could well imagine where the glittering helmet and plume were seen, with the Roman eagle and wavering banners reflecting the rays of the sun, and the army nerved on to conquest with hopes of victory. We walked about the walls of Jerusalem for the last time in company with a friend who took his Bible along and sat down upon the side of Mount Olivet to view the several haunts of Jesus—it is wonderful to see the interest of all who come here take in the Bible, and if they never before felt its worth they do now, and are ashamed, if ignorant of its pages, for it is the only Book of Palestine to mark its boundaries and note its places. No one goes about Jerusalem without a guide, and, as it was most delightful to hear the young and gifted read page after page of this Holy Book when searching for places, and they go so easily found without mistake, if not the very spot, yet so near, that they are fully natural and true, for a certainty they were not afar off.

There is no occasion for the yellow leaved books which flood our land, not a trifling volume have we seen on a table or shelf. No works interest people here but the Bible and those travels which relate to it or aid in finding the holy places. It is a pity that many appear ignorant of facts with which they ought to be familiar, though well educated in other respects. A biblical scholar has great advantage over others. Jerusalem is crowded with people at this time—the great of all countries are represented here. A fresh party just arrived from the desert—some very interesting persons, well versed in the scriptures as well as other learned lore. Yesterday was Palm Sunday and the Holy Sepulchre was crowded to overflowing, and every passage from this place to it. To-day they have the branches all braided up in fanciful forms either to keep or sell.

S. B. THOMAS.

P. S.—Since this was written we have been up to the Feast of the Passover; they assemble at six o'clock, but we did not reach the Synagogue until the first ceremony was over, which we regretted very much. The Temples were all full and the sound of voices in their chantings was like a mighty rushing wind, and the trembling of their bodies in their acts of devotion were like trees swayed in a storm; even the little boys not more than five years old were instructed orally by their fathers and kept up the same motion. Some boys read Hebrew by us, with great facility, not more than seven or eight years old, and entered into the spirit of their devotions with great fervour. They had additional gesticulations, and covered their faces frequently as if in devout prayer. Before taking out the law the Priest walked around the synagogue chanting, which was responded to by another in the pulpit. The privilege of taking out the book and bearing it about is a source of profit, and sold to the individual.

After the morning's devotion, they go up to the wailing place to kiss the stones which they suppose to be remnants of the outer wall of the Temple. Oh! this sad, dejected people! it is mournful to witness their worship and wailings; nothing like joy illuminates their faces, they look as if their harps were hung upon the willows in reality, and there were no music in their worship.

"All joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone, and all the merry-hearted do sigh; the mirth of tabrets ceaseth, the noise of those that rejoice endeth, the joy of the harp ceaseth." Isaiah 24, 7-8.

DR. DRAKE ON THE QUARTERLY REVIEW.

CLINTON, Miss., Aug. 14, 1858.

MR. EDITOR: I noticed a publication in the Nashville Christian Advocate a few days since, from the Book Agent, notifying the public that if three thousand paying subscribers did not come in by the first of September, the Quarterly Review would be discontinued. I was somewhat surprised, after all that passed at the General Conference, that there should be such summary order for the execution of an old and favorite friend. It is most manifest, the General Conference willed its continued existence. The very able committee on the book concern, reported its death warrant, but the Conference after the deliberation, and all the pleadings were heard, placed it on the list of the living. At a late hour one of its enemies offered a resolution that unless its subscription could be brought up to the remunerative point, it should be discontinued. Did any one dream that it should only have a probation until the first of September? I would almost vouch that in the history of that periodical, one hundred new subscribers never came in between the months of June and September. Yet that, the most unfruitful period of the year for new subscribers, is to be its only trial for life or death. I must say that I think the discretion left with the agent and book committee, is being used in a way never contemplated by the General Conference. It is equivalent to reversing one of its deliberate decisions. Every man in his right mind knows that the thing required to be done, cannot be done, and it is equal to resolving on the discontinuance of the Quarterly. The period of the sitting of the Conferences does not commence before September, and this is almost the only time when subscribers ever come in to that periodical. Let the Conferences all have their sessions, and give it a fair and honest trial. If it must die, let it die lawfully. But why say three thousand? Did not St. Louis promise to publish it for two thousand? Is Nashville prepared to acknowledge she is one third dearer than her sister city? I think not.

I know not whether Dr. Summers is willing to undertake the editing of the work in addition to his other onorous duties; if not, I could suggest a man highly qualified for the office, who would undertake it. And as to the discretion of making the appointment, it is as clearly implied as in other cases where action has been had.

As an individual, I solemnly protest against the action of the committee and agent as reported in the late Nashville Advocate. I insist on a fair length of time being afforded to see whether the Quarterly can live. And meanwhile, I would urge all the preachers favorable to its continuance, to exert themselves to get subscribers.

DR. WALKER ON CLASS MEETINGS.

REFLECTIONS AND SUGGESTIONS ON LEADING CLASSES.

The class-meeting institution is nearly coeval with the date of Methodism itself, and for more than a hundred years has kept pace with its progress, and they are now held every returning Sabbath in Europe and America, in Asia and Africa, and in Australia and the Islands of the Ocean.

There seems to be no general disposition to abolish the institution, but on the contrary a general wish and purpose to cherish and maintain it among us. But notwithstanding this general theoretical approval of the institution, it is not to be disguised that there is not as general an attendance upon this means of grace as its admitted importance would seem to indicate. Why is this? Says one, it is because our people are not spiritual enough: if they were as religious as they ought to be, they would attend. Certainly—but they are not—Class-meetings were never intended for the edification of people who are as holy as they ought to be, but rather to help those who are not, to be so.

Thousands among us do not attend upon class-meetings. The question is, how are they to be got to go? Says another, by disciplinary compulsion. I doubt the efficiency of this before practice. The unspiritual man is not going to be compelled to go anywhere unless he can be interested. How shall we interest them and cultivate in them a love for class-meetings? This, we take it, is the grand question. Just here every thinker will feel that the great want among the spiritual instrumentalities of the Church is good and suitable class-leaders.—They, alas! we fear, are comparatively few.

We will offer a few suggestions, the result of some experience, which we hope will not be altogether unprofitable, especially to the younger class of leaders. And first, we would say, be brief. The Discipline says, speaking of class-meetings, "Let them not usually occupy more than about an hour." Now, in order to compass a profitable class-meeting in the space of an hour, it will be necessary for the leader to have a suitable portion of scripture and his hymns selected before he meets the class. Some men spend ten minutes looking up and down the Bible and the Hymn book, as though they were strange books which they had never seen before—books which it would not be safe to use in acts of devotion, without first giving them a careful scrutiny. Don't read chapters of sixty verses, nor sing hymns of seven stanzas. In prayer, let the prayer be appropriate to the occasion, and not about any possible necessity. Do not always use the same form of words and petitions; study variety in your prayers. Do not say that you can not do studying and premeditating your prayers—that you must just pray what the Spirit prompts. I must be excused from believing that old, stereotyped prayers, quoted from well drilled memories, are, in every instance, the promptings of the Spirit. I fear they are rather the result of thoughtless idleness.

I knew a class-leader once who always used the same form of words and petitions. I have heard him at the close of a sermon, at the holy communion, in general prayer-meeting, with penitents and in the family circle, and at class-meeting, yet it was invariably the same, until all the young people memorized it and it became a matter of ridicule. Do avoid any thing like this.

Avoid formality. Do not let the exercises become mechanical and dull. Vary the questions you propound, and seek to ask questions appropriate to the age and circumstances of your members. I would suggest that you ask one, for instance, in which of the graces they have made the most progress? Another, which of the graces they have recently had most occasion to exercise? Ask another to give some account of the means of grace they use, especially secret prayer and Bible reading. Another, what is the present state of their souls, and whether they have evidence of their acceptance? Ask some to speak, without propounding any particular question.

Again: it is far better, in my apprehension, that you should sit down in the middle of your class, and let them remain seated when they reply to you. If they stand up they will be almost sure to go to speech-making, and all the easy, natural sociability that should characterize such an occasion will be lost. Besides, many persons can talk well enough when seated, that become embarrassed and unnatural the moment they have to stand and speak. They feel that they are making a speech, and this frightens them. Now, do not say that it will do them good to bear the cross. There is no cross and no religiousness about it; it is simply embarrassment—nothing more nor less—just the same that a youth feels to make a speech, or a maiden to read a composition in public.

Do not ask your members in regular rotation, beginning at one end of a row, or bench, but here and there, as you would talk to a circle of friends; this will help to break up the formality and routine of the meeting. And by all means do not talk a pamphlet to each one in reply—only are a few pertinent words, and sometimes only sing a verse which may well express all you need to say, and give spirit and variety to the exercises.

Old Father Reeves of London, an eminently useful class-leader, used to request his members on closing the class, to examine themselves before returning, and find some passage of God's word that would express and describe their spiritual state, and when they met again he asked each what portion of the word would express their spiritual state; this gave point and brevity to the conversation, and also promoted self-examination, and Bible-reading.—Sometimes an appropriate illustration may be given, either from the word of God or from incident drawn from your experience, your observation, or your calling.

Now, I think if attention is paid to these little, yet important matters, class-meetings can be made most interesting and desirable places of spiritual resort. I think they are generally too long and too formal. People get into a formal solemn cantish habit that renders their meetings anything but occasions of spiritual edification and comfort. The leaders, by judicious measures, can break up these unhappy habits and make the meetings what they should be, to which brethren will be glad when it is said, "let us go up to the House of the Lord."

AMERICAN SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION.

MR. EDITOR: We need more light here-a-bouts in relation to the "Southwestern American Sunday-schol Union." We were visited not long since by Rev. Mr. Cleghorn, who represented himself as a duly authorized agent of that establishment, out on a collecting tour, and while in our region he seemed to take a special interest in collecting funds from the members of the Methodist Church. For this purpose he attended their appointments for preaching, their prayer-meetings, and other public gatherings, in addition to visiting them at their private residences, where he got only partook of their generous hospitality, but got a good deal of their money. He expatiated largely on the catholicity of the "Southwestern branch of the American Sunday-school Union;" its non-sectarian character; assured the Methodists that they were deeply interested in it; partners, and duly represented in the concern; had been greatly benefited by it; that wherever they got up a Sunday-school under its auspices they delivered it over as readily to the Methodists, if they were predominant in the neighborhood, as to any other branch of the Church; that many Methodist Churches had originated in Union Sabbath-schools, &c. Now, Mr. Editor, all this was news to me! I am an old Methodist, have read much about the benevolent institutions of our own and other Churches, have traveled extensively, and been a close observer of passing events, and I affirm that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is not a partner in the "American Sunday-school Union;" has no official connection with it; no official representation in it; no control of its funds, and no agents officially appointed to look after its interests. And as to the tale of Methodist Churches originating in Union Sabbath-schools, it may be true, but of the hundreds of Methodist Churches with whose origin and history I have been familiar, I have yet to find the first one that originated in a Union Sabbath-school. As Methodist Christians we have no objection to the American Sunday-school Union in itself, if its managers and agents would cease to sail under false colors, and abstain from practising frauds upon our people. Why should we interest ourselves in, and spend our money upon, the American Sunday-school Union, which, so far as I know, is responsible to no Church judicatory, when we have a Sabbath-school Union of our own, officially gotten up by our general Conference, with a traveling secretary officially appointed to look after its interests, and every officer connected with it directly responsible to the Church for the safe-keeping and proper disbursment of any funds that may come into his hands? And why should we go elsewhere to purchase Sabbath-school books, when we have them published at our own Publishing House in Nashville, and on hand at all our depositories by the wagon load, as good and as cheap as any Sabbath-school books in christendom? And if we want Sunday-school books to supply the destitute portions of our country with, why not get them from our own depositories, where the money we pay for them will be judiciously expended in the publication of more, as fast as the demand increases?

Mr. Editor, we shall have to watch these voluntary American Union Societies, and considering they are mostly under the control of professed christians and christian ministers, I regret to say, they need some watching to prevent imposition on the unwary. Just look at the recent development in the management of the American Bible Society, which is the pet of every Protestant denomination of any note on the continent, except the Baptist. Of the thirty-six managers twenty-one were found to be Presbyterians, and only four Methodists, and not one of the four from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and yet, by the grace of God, we are one of the most numerous, wealthy, and influential branches of the Christian Church in the land, and have given our money freely to sustain that noble catholic institution. I do not wish to be understood as insinuating that any injustice has been done us heretofore in the distribution of Bibles; for so far as I know, we have been fairly dealt by; but in future, "as good stewards of the manifold grace of God," I think we had better attend a little closer to the management of "our Lords goods" which have been entrusted to our care.

Finally, Mr. Editor, we wish to know something more definitely about this "Southwestern American Sunday-school Union." Where is it, what of its paternity, and who does the Concern belong to? Who has the management of our money when it goes there? Rev. Mr. Cleghorn is quite successful in getting money out of our people, and we wish to know what goes with it? Perhaps you can send us a pamphlet by mail that will enlighten us on this subject.

THE EAR.

What a wonderful organ is that, by which we hold communion with the vocal world!—How delicate its internal organism! How beautiful the convolutions of the osseous canal, through which plays the acoustic nerve! And then how perfect the mechanism of the central chamber, across which swings the chain of bones—the malleus or hammer—the incus or anvil—the stapes or stirrup—and the pisiform or pea-shaped, and which vibrates in the surrounding air, that finds ingress through the eustachian tube, which opens its trumpet-shaped mouth in the throat! And how curiously wrought the cartilaginous structure, which spreads itself like a whig, and yet so curved, as to converge the sound-wave upon the door of the air chamber, or middle ear!

These three distinct, but intimately connected structures, make up the organ of hearing; consisting as indicated, of the internal, middle, and external ear.

The external ear, acting like a convex mirror, focalizes the sound wave upon the tympanum, or drum of the ear. The percussion resulting communicates vibratory motion to the chain of bones, one end of which chain is attached to the tympanum, the other end holding connection with the auditory nerve and through which an impression is ultimately conveyed to the brain.

And now, through this beautifully complicated mechanism, we become cognizant of the thunder's deep monotone—the soft, gentle varied notes of the eolian harp—the sweet melody of birds—the harmony of human voices. Through this we hear the wail of sorrow and the song of joy; the shout of triumph and the echo of despair.

But would there be sound without an auditory nerve? We believe not. If all sentient creation were without this wonderful structure, the world would be mute. The lightning might flash—the earthquake might rock—the cannon might belch fire from its iron throat—the avalanche might descend—the angry ocean might dash its upheaved billows upon the rocky coast, but silence would reign. The gentler vibrations that convey the assurance of love and friendship, of trust and confidence, would wake up no sympathy in corresponding hearts.

What is sound? It is solely a sensorial perception. Force is employed, thereby vibration of the air is produced. This vibration is communicated through the medium of the tympanum or drum, to the chain of bones already described, and through this to the auditory nerve, and ultimately by it report is made to the brain, and the result of the whole is a perception, or impression we call sound.

There is no sound independent of an ear. It is nothing more nor less than a sensorial perception.

It is not the sound we perceive after the lightning flash that causes the earth to tremble; this is the effect of the vibration of the elastic air. It is not the roar which follows the discharge of ordnance, that shakes our dwelling; it is in like manner the effect of the violent disturbance of the atmospheric equilibrium.—We assert that there is no such thing as sound, "per se." The deaf can feel the shock, though they perceive not the sound.

If this philosophy be false, will some wiser head than the assertor of it produce the evidence.

SCIENCE HILL FEMALE ACADEMY.

The Annual Examination of the pupils of this widely celebrated and deservedly popular institution, commenced on the 14th and closed on the 17th instant.

This school is largely patronized, not only by Kentucky, but also by Virginia, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Missouri. And several other States are annually represented by pupils within its walls.

The number of citizens and strangers attending the recent examination was, perhaps, larger than ever before; and most of the time the attendance was so great that the spacious hall and its surroundings were insufficient to accommodate the eager throng, and many were under the necessity of leaving for want even of a standing position.

The ready responses of the pupils of the different classes in the various department, indicated a thorough knowledge of the subjects on which they were examined; not only satisfactory, but highly gratifying to the numerous patrons in attendance.

The music, both vocal and instrumental, was of the first order. The numerous paintings which adorned the walls, the work of the pupils, were elegant specimens of that fine art, and indicate a degree of perfection equaled by few young lady artists.

The essays read by the twenty-five young ladies, composing the graduating class, would do honor to older and more experienced essayists.

The exercises were varied, and enlivened by dialogues and other entertainments, highly appreciated by the audience.

The Annual Address, delivered by the Rev. W. C. Damly, was creditable to the talented speaker, and received with favor by the large and appreciative assembly.

A HOUSE IN THE COUNTRY.

I am a country clergyman, the possessor of twelve acres of mother earth; and I know well what pleasure and interest are to be found in the little affairs of that limited tract. My study-window looks out upon a corner of the garden; a blank wall faces it at a distance of five-and-twenty feet. When I came here I found that corner sown with potatoes, and that wall a dead expanse of stone and mortar. But I resolved to make the most of my narrow view, and so contrive that it should look cheerful at every season. And now the corner is a little square of as soft and well-shaven green turf as can be seen; through which snowdrops and crocuses peep in early spring. Its surface is broken by two clumps of evergreens, laurels, hollies, cedars, yews which look warm and pleasant all the wintertime; and over one clump rises a standard rose of ten feet in hight, which, as I look up from my desk through my window, shows like a crimson cloud in summer. The blank wall is blank no more, but beautiful with climbing roses, honeysuckle, fuchsias, and variegated ivy. What a pleasure it was to me, the making of this little improvement; and what a pleasure it is still every time I look at it! No one can sympathize justly with the feeling till he tries something of the sort for himself. And not merely is such occupation as that which I speak of a most wholesome diversity from mental work. It has many other advantages. It leads to a more intelligent delight in the direct works of the Creator; and though it might be hard to explain the logical steps of the process, it leads a man to a more kindly and sympathetic feeling toward all his fellow-men.—Fraser's Magazine.

THE BEST SCHOLAR.

In every school there is one who is called the best scholar. Teachers and pupils have no difficulty in deciding who is entitled to this honorable distinction; and when we once heard the pupils of a school exclaim, as a bright eyed boy entered the room, "Here comes Frank; he is the best boy in the school," we thought, "What a good introduction to a new teacher!" After becoming acquainted with the scholars, we found that they had told the truth. Frank was the best boy in the school, and will no doubt become one of the best men in the city. Think of it, boys. "The best boy in school." Who would not be proud of such a title? It is worth more than millions of dollars. But, perhaps, some scholars will say, "We can't all be the best." This is true; but you have a right to try; and the one who will try the hardest will succeed, for there is power in that little word try. Frank could not be the best boy in his school if he did not try. If you cannot be the best, be careful and not be the worst. Every school has one boy who is worse than any other scholar. We pity him; we pity his parents, his brothers and sisters. What a disgraceful title—"The worst boy in school!" He will no doubt become one of the worst men in the community. Every boy who reads this resolve to be "the best boy in school."

DISCOVERY OF A CHEST OF OLD COINS.

The Court Journal has the following: A most extraordinary discovery, which, for obvious reasons, is sought to be kept a profound secret, has taken place in an old ruined house at Iriel. An immense chest, full of gold and silver coins of English stamp, has been found concealed in one of the cellars, where it had been carefully walled up. From the papers and documents contained likewise in the chest, it has become evident that the house was once inhabited by Bolingbroke, who must have lain concealed here during the period wherein his whereabout has always remained a puzzle to biographers and historians. In one of his letters he mentions that "his retreat is convenient to the Seine." And the house in question is found to possess a subterranean passage leading down to the water's edge. The money is evidently the result of the subscription raised by the party of the Pretender, for want of which the latter was prevented from striking a decisive blow.

CÆSAR BORGIA.

The atrocious crimes and the singular beauty of Cæsar Borgia are not in the least doubtful. Contemporary history declares that this horrible monster, who, in a Christian age and country, renewed by his crimes the memory of the Roman Commodus, whom he resembled in strength and personal attractions, was the most beautiful young man in the world; comparing him in this respect with Ferdinand, King of Naples, celebrated at that time for his great personal comeliness, and giving the preference to Borgia. He was an Achilles, tall and graceful in person, and beautiful in the face, and, like Achilles of prodigious strength—a Hercules and Adonis united. Yet it must be doubted if his face could have any of that moral beauty, which appears in the countenance of men who get no credit for comeliness, though Borgia might present a beauty nothing less than that of "archangel ruined." Pope has adopted the name of this monster as descriptive of the height of incarnate wickedness; and the name of Borgia, borne by the father of Alexander and the brother of Cæsar, has an air of blood, of poison, and of sensuality about it which shocks the soul.—James Butler.

VALUE OF RELIGIOUS PAPERS.—A friend gave his testimony as follows: "I have been a pastor of a church several years, and have noticed that all men, who have been troublesome in my church; who have been easily offended at small things; who have been crooked, set and ugly—have been men who did not take a religious newspaper. And you will find that almost all church difficulties come from men who do not read religious journals."

A CHANGE.—Fifty years ago, the Green River Barrens in Ky., were covered with grass and flowers and not a tree was in sight. They are now a forest of large oaks, chesnuts and hickories. Whence came the seed, is an open question.

J. G. Saxe has prepared a new poem on "Love," in all its varieties, manifestations, accompaniments, and consequences, and with it goes forth for a new literary and lyceum campaign.

Bayard Taylor spent a week in the early part of June with his wife's relative in Gotha, having returned from his trip to Greece. He is now under way for a summer trip to Russia.

Horace Vernet has just finished a magnificent representation of the capture of the Malakoff.

Late at breakfast—hurried at dinner—cross at tea.

WASTE OF LIFE.

The life which is allotted to us in this world is made up of too few and too precious hours, and experiences, and possibilities, to waste it And yet one of the most sorrowful reflections of all wisely sensitives minds is, that so many of the hours, and such an amount of the powers, of their probationary being are continually escaping beyond the possibility of application, and result, and enjoyment. There are many hours, it is true, which are among the most valuable and memorable of our lives, which, according to the moral utilitarianism of certain religions Ben Franklins, are lost forever. Hours when, though no outward labor is performed, or tangible result attained, our souls enjoy a recreation that is more valuable than labor, and pass through experiences that are wealthier than any attainable outward results. Hours when we are introduced to more intimate acquaintance and communion with the eternal and omnipresent beauty and harmony of the universe, whether seen in nature or in souls—whether through communion with books, or through the brooks and stones and trees—whether through seemingly accidental converse with those guardian angels called kindred spirits, or through the sungs of birds amid the fragrant bowers of spring.

There are modes in which life is wasted, and the light of its lamp suffered to burn down and, shine with unappreciated light, discovering to us none of the treasures of truth beauty and goodness by which we are surrounded, and not directing us in any noble progress of mind or heart or usefulness. But there is no sadder waste than the prevalent absorption of time and soul by the never-ending succession of what are called the ordinary troubles of life. The stones and mud, and briars and thorns, that lacerate and annoy as we sojourn along the path-way of existence, are unhappily allowed to prevent the enjoyment of the vision and beauty of the spiritual landscape of divine providence around us, and the darkness of the night of trial so engrosses us that we see not the sweet sky of the heavenly mercy, studded with the quiet smiling stars of thousands of gracious promises. We so quarrel with the scarcity, in our unbelieving selfishness, of the manna and the quails of temporal subsistence, that we neither see nor appreciate the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night, nor do we press forward with tireless joy toward the land of promise to which they lead the way.

The closest and most valuable attention of which the mind is capable, and the intensest and most powerful thought and feeling, both of which are intended and calculated to enable us to reach the level of communion with the highest of heavenly things are wasted upon the daily and hourly little vexations about the things which are nothing worth, and which perish with the using. Alas, that the noble powers of the mind, and the rich capacities of the heart, and the precious few and fleeting hours of our sublime probation, should be consumed upon the altar of the most vulgar and groveling idolatry the world has ever known—the idolatry of self-fishness, whose priests are discontent and vexation!

> "Rise, my soul, and stretch thy wings;
> Thy better portion trace;
> Rise from transitory things,
> Toward heaven, thy native place."

MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS.

The American Sunday School Union, of which our correspondent, "Welchman," writes, on the first page, and against which neither "Welchman" nor the editor of this paper has any thing to say, when attending to its proper business in a legitimate way, has no claim, for a single dollar, by way of contribution, upon the Methodist people. We are puzzled to know which to condemn most, the Jesuitism which represents the Methodist Church as having an interest therein aforesaid "Union," or the ignorance of some of our people, which thus suffers them to be imposed upon. We see the same complaint made in the Northern Methodist papers as that made by "Welchman." Is it possible that we have to "post" clergymen as impostors, "getting money under false pretenses!" This thing must stop, either voluntarily or involuntarily. Let our people take and read the Advocate, and they will be better informed. How is it that Methodist preachers are never caught trying to fleece other denominations in this way? No agent, who is not a Methodist preacher, has any business in our pulpits, in his capacity as agent, except the agents of the American Bible Society. They are appointed, indifferently, from all protestant denominations. And that must keep separate from all these other concerns, if it would prosper. We trust, now, that we are done with this matter. When our people need the books of the Sunday-school Union, they can buy them. They are, most of them, good books; but, for Methodists, our Publishing House, has better.

RIO GRANDE MISSION CONFERENCE.

Rev. James W. Shipman, Presiding Elder of Victoria District, Texas Conference, has written to the Texas and Nashville Advocates, maintaining that the eastern line of the Rio Grande Conference is too far East. We are decidedly of a different opinion. Any farther west, it would leave nothing, scarcely, to build a Conference upon. We are aware that the present line cuts Mr. Shipman's District in two rather unceremoniously; but that can be arranged; and individual preference must yield to the common good. We trust our old friend will so conclude. We rejoice to hear him say that thirty or forty preachers can be profitably employed in the new Conference territory. It should be well manned, and vigorously cultivated. A great Conference will grow up there as the country settles. And emigration is tending to that region of balmy breezes, rich and cheap lands, and fine grass and cattle.

OCCUPYING THE WASTE PLACES.

Bishop Pierce, in a letter to the Southern Christian Advocate, gives us practical exemplifications of some bad things and some good things. The bad things are, that a great many preachers have so little zeal for God and the salvation of souls, that they never seek out the out-of-the-way-places, outside of their regular appointments. In consequence, the devil and his coadjutors, for generations, have full possession. All on account of indolent, ease-seeking preachers. The good things are, that private members, even women, can supply this lack of service, and build up Churches.

The Bishop says: On the 30th of July I left home to attend a four day's meeting at Mount Moriah in Louisville Circuit. Leaving the Ga. R. Road at Berzelia, my old friend, Bro. Kirkpatrick—took me in his buggy to the appointed place. On the way, we were overtaken by a gentleman who informed me that I was expected to dedicate a new church in Richmond county on the next day. It had been published all around, he said, and a large congregation would be in attendance. Pledged by my own promise to one place and announced by my friends for another—I was in a great strait.—The chief difficulties were the heat of the weather (tho thermometer at 96)—the distance—the pine hills, and the long, deep, dry sand beds. On consultation it was concluded that I ought to serve both places—here a little and there a little. After preaching on Saturday, I returned to the neighborhood of the new church and spent the night at Mr. McCormick's. Now I come to the points on which I wish to comment. In the days of other years I traveled through this country as an Elder, and judging from what I saw, without inquiring—came to the conclusion that this particular region was uninhabited. The preacher who served the adjoining Circuits I presume had the same impression. We were all mistaken, if not criminal. At any rate—here were people, generation after generation, without schooling, almost without the Gospel. Oh how many such wastes lie on the right and left of the Circuit Preacher's stereotyped round? Brother—brethren, hunt up these lost sheep. There is scarcely an old Circuit in Georgia but might be made new——if there was a mind to work outside of the superannuated "plan."

Sunday morning I found on a high barren sand hill a neat, commodious, well finished house of worship—full of people, eager to hear and as the sequel proved ready to work. At the close a liberal collection was made and a Church of twenty members, organized. It is not often now, that I have an opportunity of opening the door of the Church, and I enjoyed this occasion with a zest, heightened by the memory of the past and the hope of the future.

Who brought this neglected region into notice? What preacher fired with the love of souls has turned out into the "highways and hedges?" Ah me—neither Bishop, Elder, Deacon or Licentiate. No, it has been left for the piney woods of Columbia and Richmond counties to furnish a practical exposition of that singular passage in one of Paul's Epistles—"Help those women that labored with me in the Gospel." Two or three "elect ladies" have wrought the change What did they do? Preach? No. Sit down at home—and write to some minister to come and help them? No. Promise to bear all expenses if somebody would labor for the benefit of their poor neighbors? No. Did they give themselves to fasting and prayer and has God in answer, wrought a miracle? No. Well how in the world have they broken up the stagnation of a century—stirred up the people—built churches and made a waste place to blossom as the rose? Why, in the most simple, easy, religious way imaginable. They established Sunday Schools—visited the parents, attracted the children, furnished books, superintended the schools and have tried and have succeed wonderfully well to serve their generation by the will of God. These good sisters, Mrs. Mc. Cornick and Mrs. Leitner with others have got up six Sabbath-schools I believe, and within an area of five miles square have collected near three hundred pupils. Some of the schools meet in the morning before preaching—others in the afternoon. The scholars in a few instances walk five miles and never miss. Mr. M. and Mr. L. though neither of them Church members, are active and deeply interested teachers. (May the effort to do good be sanctified to their conversion and salvation.) A deep religious interest has been awakened—a few have professed conversion. On Sabbath morning before preaching, I visited one of the schools with Mr. M. and lady, and took part in the exercises—and was not disqualified for the expected sermon by the feelings and reflections of the hour. Many of the scholars are adults—grown people—in one school, a mother and child are in the same class, and of many it is true, that here they learn the alphabet and are taught to read. It has long been my opinion that this christian institution is the only school system which can or will carry the knowledge of letters to all the people of these Southern States. Colleges, Academies—Public Schools of every grade will always leave a large population untaught.—Legislation cannot furnish the remedy or wipe away our reproach. The column in the statistical table which reports the number that can neither write nor read will be increased by tens of thousands until christian charity, diffusive as the sunlight—circulates universally on her mission of love and mercy. Let the churches teach the poor. It is their duty. They can do it. Sabbath School education is the cheapest—safest—best. Good—necessary for all conditions of society—for the poor and the neglected—it is the only practicable mode No church is well organized without a Sabbath School. Without it the true functions of a church cannot be fulfilled. Sources of light by divine ordination and demand—the churches of Christ must shine till there is no place, no mind "hid from the heat thereof."

A RANDOM SHOT.

Rev. James E Evans, in a communication to the Southern Christian Advocate, is considerably "exercised" in mind, as to the "application" of some remarks of ours in a little article not long since, headed, "The Canvass Begun." We expressed the opinion, in that article, that the results of a certain "policy" would acquire for it, and for its authors, a certain "reputation." We had that opinion, legitimately, christianly, from facts known to us positively, and expressed it as modestly as possible.

If future facts do not corroborate former ones, we shall readily confess our mistake. And if any facts, past or future, warrant Mr. Evans in applying the remark, to which he takes exception, to any "policy" of ours, he is at liberty to give it that application in the most positive and definite way.

We trust this is satisfactory. And we trust also, that, after reading this, our friend will not be astounded, as he is evidently in some danger of being, that we survive, unhurt, the discharge of his battery of logic, loaded with "the code of honor," and wadded with a few irrelevant quotations from the Bible and the Discipline.

Our friend and brother has a strange interest in the application of our remarks. "No body in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, or any other State this side of Georgia, made complaint of being "hit." No body in Georgia does but himself. He does not acknowledge being hit himself, but he seems dreadfully afraid that somebody is. Come, dear brother, do not suffer your noted equanimity to be so unusually disturbed.

"ANNUAL CONFERENCE JOURNALS."

The Book Agent, in the last Nashville Advocate, calls all the other Church papers "Annual Conference Journals." If so, they are no longer Church Journals. But the Book Agent is totally mistaken. They are "organs of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," in the Conferences where they are patronized. This is the character and status given them in the express language of the Discipline. When the subject was under discussion in the Committee on Books and Periodicals, in the General Conference, the clause read to the effect that they were to be Conference "Organs," and Dr. McFerrin seconded a motion, made by the writer of this, to give them their present disciplinary character. Financially they belong to the Annual Conferences, while the central paper belongs to the General Conference. This is the only difference between them, except the location of the latter. The policy that dictated the change, was purely a financial one, to relieve the Publishing House of liabilities over which it had not sufficient control. The North Carolina Advocate, and the Pacific Methodist, were Annual Conference Journals, before the last General Conference. Did not their adoption by the body, and its election of their editors, make them General Conference Journals? If not, what effect had the change?

When the Agent says that the Nashville Advocate "is a paper to be circulated throughout the connection at large," we agree with him But it is well to "hold fast the form of sound words." The truth is all the papers will, and should, stand upon their respective merits.—And we have no fear that the Nashville Advocate will need any other recommendation

BISHOP SOULE.

Bishop Soule, says the Nashville Advocate, the Church will be pleased to hear, enjoys comfortable health. He preached and administered the Lord's Supper, at City Road Chapel, near his own residence, two weeks ago. The Bishop lives about six miles in the country, at his own farm, on the Gallatin pike. His recent trip, visiting and preaching to his old friends and relatives in Ohio and the West, has not left him the worse for wear. We saw him last Friday, going past our door up a fourth flight of stairs, to a meeting of the Missionary Board. And then, in the afternoon, he was in the cars on his way to a camp meeting near Murfreesboro'.

We heard a good story: A young farmer, his neighbor, walked over one day to borrow a plough of the Bishop. His request granted, he started home, saying he would send a servant for it. What was his surprise, on reaching home and looking out, to see the good Bishop coming with the plough on his shoulder!

THE EVANGELICAL APOLOGIST.

We receive the Evangelische Apologete regularly, and although we cannot read it, yet it serves the treble purpose of keeping us in mind of our dear friend, the editor, Rev. P. A. Moelling—of Galveston, our old home—and of the German department of our common work. The paper is elegantly printed, and edited with taste, discretion, and ability. Mr. Moelling has had many trials and difficulties, but the Lord has guided, blessed, and prospered him wonderfully since his arrival in this country. He is a cultivated gentleman, a good scholar, a delightful poet, a fine writer, and a magnificent preacher. Above all he is a pious, humble, loving hearted christian.

DISAPPOINTED CHARITY.

We find in the Texas Christian Advocate, under the head of "special notices," the following announcements: "the Union camp meeting had in contemplation, yea, sufficiently advanced to announce in your columns, this week, I guess, was cast away into the uncertain feature by sectarian devils, influence, upon those who ought to have seen what has been done already by such a crew."

We happen to know the author. He is, or has been, a local preacher in our church, who has for years been a monomaniac on the subject of uniting all the different denominations in one church. His brethren have borne with him long and patiently, and now he abuses them.

CONGREGATIONALISM AND SYMBOLISM.

The Northern Christian Advocate very pertinently puts the case of the Calvinistic theology in the present day. It says: An interesting article, under the above caption, appears in the July number of the Bibliotheca Sacra, from the pen of Prof. Shedd, of Andover, in which he discusses "the necessity that exists in Congregationalism for a stronger symbolical feeling, and a bolder confidence in creed-statements, in order to its highest efficiency as a Christian denomination." The historical and doctrinal ancestry of the Congregationalist and Presbyterian Churches are one and uniform. They differ only in the matter of Church government. Both trace their doctrinal unity through Dort and Geneva, and to preserve those inherited symbols intact, which divide them forever from the Arminian theology, is now their most anxious care and most difficult work. Congregationalism, from the excessive freeness of its government, stands exposed to doctrinal changes on different sides. Nevertheless, the orthodox Churches of the standing order" in New England, have stood like the British squares at Waterloo, against the attacks from without. They have not, however, been so successful against the insidious workings of antaphysical theology from within. They have been held together greatly by the strong bond of ancestorial fame, and the energy of a traditional faith. Yet to-day, if an assembly of its wisest men were to attempt to draw up in creed form a clearer, broader, bolder outline of the Congregational faith, than is contained in the venerable symbols of Savoy and of Saybrook—a creed that should speak the real faith of this generation in words which their scholars would approve, and the common people would receive, we apprehend they would find a tendency to Arminianism on the one hand, and to free thinking on the other, which would baffle the undertaking.

The editor also very justly and happily adds: The Methodist Church has always had a well defined foundation of faith expressed in creed form, and it is honorable to her name that among all the divisions and secessions that have gone off from her, there has been no diversity of doctrine. Another fact is ever worthy of remembrance, that no Deistical, Unitarian, Universalist, or Free Thinking sects have ever split off from her, as they have from the Papal, the English, the Lutheran and Calvinistic Churches. Her clearly defined, bold outline of faith, its obviously Scriptural character, the clear experience of her members, and the vigilance and energy of her Discipline, have hitherto kept her. Had there been a Pelagian tendency in her creed, it would have developed into Unitarianism or Rationalism ere now. But the test of more than a hundred years has discovered nothing of the kind.—Sound doctrine clearly defined, clear experience well attested, and energetic Discipline, will save her in the centuries of the future, as in the past. Nothing short of these will suffice.

THE BEGINNING OF NEWSPAPERS.

The first paper was issued monthly in manuscript form, in the republic of Venice, and was called the Gazette, probably from a farthing coin peculiar to Venice, and which was the common price at which it was sold. Thirty volumes of it are still preserved in a library at Florence. It was long supposed that the first newspaper published in England was at the epoch of the Spanish Armada, but it has been discovered that the copies of that bearing the imprint of 1588, in the British Museum, were forgeries.—There was no doubt that the puny ancestor of the myriads of broad sheets was not published in London till 1622—one hundred and fifty years after the art of printing had been discovered—and it was nearly one hundred years more before a daily paper was ventured upon. Periodical papers seem first to have been used by the English during the times of the Commonwealth, and were then called "weekly news-books." Some of them had most whimsical titles. It was common with the early papers to have a blank page, which was sometimes filled up, in the paucity of news, by selections from the Scriptures.

The first newspaper in North America was printed in Boston in 1690. Only one copy of this paper is known to be in existence. It was deposited in the State Paper Office in London, and is about the size of an ordinary sheet of letter paper. It was stopped by the government. The Boston News Letter was the first regular paper. It was first issued in 1704, and was printed by John Allen, in Pudding Lane. The contents of some of the early numbers are very peculiar. It had a speech of Queen Anne to Parliament, delivered one hundred and twenty days previously, and this was the latest news from England. In one of the early numbers there was an announcement that, by order of the Postmaster General of North America, the mail between Boston and New York set out once a fortnight.

A QUESTION FOR DR. SUMMERS.

Quarterly Review of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—And the Slave Trade.

Mr. Editor: In the last No. of the above named periodical, under the head of brief reviews, is found a short notice of recent publications by Dr. Adger; in which the minority report of the South Carolina Legislature is endorsed; in opposition to the majority report of the same body, on the subject of reopening the Slave Trade. This is also endorsed by the Editor of the Review, fully and heartily. Now Sir, all I wish to know, is this: is the Quarterly Review of the Southern Church, to be considered as open to the discussion of the already mooted political question of the reopening of the Slave Trade? If so, will there be admitted into its columns, reviews in favor of the majority report, on the same subject? I wish it distinctly understood, I do not desire this—and I wish it equally understood, that all the Methodist Church South, is not on the side of its present editor, on this question, by a large number.

L. Campbell.

CENTENARY INSTITUTE.

In making up the form last week, our printer separated, by mistake, one part of our notice of the Catalogue of Centenary Institute from the other. The male department was separated from the female department, making them both stand alone. It is not good for man (either male or female) to be alone." "What God hath joined together let not man (either printer or otherwise) put asunder."

Of the Principal of the Male Department of Centenary Institute, the Mobile Tribune says: Mr. Connerly, the principal, is a graduate of our Alabama University, where he carried off the highest honors. Since his graduation he has been mainly engaged in teaching, and has won a very high reputation both as a disciplinarian and an instructor.

The New York Musical Review says: "The Centenary Institute (Young Ladies' Seminary) at Summerfield, Ala., gave two musical performances, at the close of last month, one of which was Mr. Booth's Flower Queen. The part of the recluse in this cantata, was sung by their teacher, Mr. J. E. Gleffer, and that of the Rose, by Miss Henley, of Demopolis, a talented and promising young singer. This Institute is under the charge of the Alabama Conference, and immediate direction of Rev. J. T. Montgomery, a sensible man, who duly estimates the importance of the study of music. An excellent thing, which we hear in regard to this Seminary, is that the young ladies form the choir of the church in Summerfield, and lead the people in congregational singing; and example we desire to commend the many excellent Female Colleges of the Southern States."

BALTIMORE CORRESPONDENCE.

Dear Brother: As it is customary for our people in visiting the more northerly states, to send a scrawl to the editor, I, too, hope to be pardoned in a small perpetration of this sort.

Having been released this year by my brethren of the Mississippi Conference from the duties of a charge that I might recruit my health; and being solicited by an aged, beloved father—Samuel Vickers, Esq, to visit him this summer, I left Covington, La., the latter part of May, and arrived at Baltimore on the first day of June; and was soon by the side of my fond parents and relatives.

But oh how short lived was this great privilege; in a little over a month, my dear father was seized with bilious colic, a complaint to which he was subject, and in a few days he was gone from the house of clay. He died in great peace, on July 11th, in the sixty-sixth year of his age, leaving a wife and nine children to mourn our loss, and endeavor to meet him in the skies.

My father was a man of great probity, sound judgment, liberal, unselfish and charitable to a fault; and tho' holding more particularly to the Episcopalians, he despised high churchism; was strictly southern in his principles, and often expressed a surprise, that Southern Methodism had not established societies in Maryland. He had held several official posts, and was Register of Wills for this county at the term of his death.

I find southern preachers are well received, indeed, they look upon men sent here from the free states with distrust; and the preachers and people both inform me, that this slave territory will have to be set off in a conference to itself, with its own preachers; and perhaps, in the end, either have to adhere south, or form a separate organization. Yours fraternally,

G. T. VICKERS.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN CATHEDRAL.

Tidings from St. Petersburg bring the death of M. de Monferrand, a French architect, who under the reign of Alexander I, was selected to plan and superintend the structure of the great cathedral on the Neva, which he lived to see consecrated and set apart for Greek orthodox worship on the 30th of last May. Forty years of his life were given to this unremitting task, and he was 75 at his death, having lived through three imperial reigns. Sir Christopher Wren died at 80, after crowning the Cupola of St. Paul's with its existing lantern and cross, by aid of the same plummet that presided over the foundation stone. The Greek Church has thus erected the most modern, as it had the most ancient of all existing metropolitan temples, St. Sophia dating from the reign of the Emperor Justinian, and never having undergone any substantial change since its original design in the fourth century. The Petersburg minster is a purely classic or palladian as Peter's or Paul's in which a mistaken taste had been consulted, the Byzantine model being far more suitable in an esthetic point of view; but it is amazingly rich in polished marble. Its dimensions are midway between the Anglican and Roman edifice; its cost was borne by the Imperial exchequer—a tax on coals built Peter's and Paul's.

VALENTINE COOK.

Biographical sketch of the late Rev. Valentine Cook, A. M, with an appendix, containing his discourse on Baptism. By Edward Stevenson, D.D. Nashville, Tenn., published for the author, by J. B. McFerrin, agent, 1858.

This work reached us a few days since. Its approximation to mechanical perfectness, in the way of durability and beauty of paper, type, and binding, is very creditable to the Publishing House. It is a small work of two hundred pages. The style is characterized by that easy flow, rich fullness, and hearty Methodist-preacher pathos, for which Dr. Stevenson is noted. That wonderful man among the many wonderful men who constituted the corps of early Western Methodist preachers, is pictured forth in most life-like and glowing manner. The book reads like a charm. Nothing will add more to the godly zeal and heavenly unction of the Methodist preachers of the present day than the reading of such books. Nor will the laity find any thing, beside the Bible, better calculated to kindle in their hearts the holy flame of the simple evangelical piety of the primitive days.

DR. WINANS.

Natchez, Mi., August 9, 1858.

Rev. C. C. Gillespie: Though a little late, allow me to welcome you among us. May your relations to us be such as christians may delight to cherish.

You may have already learned that the Joint Board of Centenary College elected you to preach the next Annual Commencement Sermon. It is along way ahead to promise, but may you promise and live to perform.

The Board also requested that the following be published in the Advocate:

Rev. W. Winans, D. D., long the President of this Board, its "First Patron," the early friend, the faithful and zealous supporter of the interests of Centenary College, has, in the fullness of his years and the abundance of his labors, been removed from our counsels to his reward. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Dr. Winans this Board has been deprived of one of its most judicious advisers, the College of a ripe scholar, a generous and faithful patron, and the cause of sanctified learning a wise and unwearied advocate.

Resolved, That this Board offers to the family of our deceased brother its earnest sympathies, and that the Secretary be instructed to furnish them a copy of these proceedings, and procure their publication in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

W. H. WATKINS,
Secretary Joint Board.

BISHOP CAPERS.

The Life of Bishop Capers, by Dr. Wightman, is noticed in a very handsome manner by the Charleston Mercury. It says: Few books of recent issue so nearly come up to the full measure of a "Life" as this. It presents its subject as he appeared among men, and was known of all. Free from mere panegyric, it will enter into thousands of families where cherished memories of Dr. Capers are preserved, not to maintain those memories, but to exhibit to the young the character of the good Bishop their fathers and mothers loved. Bishop Capers as itinerant, local preacher, presiding elder, and editor, was so long and intimately known in this city, that his biography possesses attractions which add to its value as the gathered memorials of the life of the Founder of Missions to Slaves in South Carolina, of the Missionary Secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and of one of the Bishops of the Southern division of that Church after its rupture.

MISSISSIPPI.

The Jackson Mississippian says: Mississippi, with happily diversified resources, is to-day inferior to no State in the Union, in the elements of internal power; and the awakening spirit of progress and enterprise among her patriotic citizens, is fast raising her head from the dust of civil imbecility, and placing her on the high road to a proud and glorious destiny. Ten years ago—a period within the memory of all—we had attempted but little, done less, and accomplished almost nothing in the line of improvement, development and enterprise, which now, like magic, has charmed her from the sleep of contentment and repose, and arrayed her stalwart limbs in the robes of redeemed and regenerated enthusiasm and lofty public pride; a drowsiness which had caused her commerce to dwindle into insignificance, and her agricultural products almost to prove a burden from the want of suitable outlets through which to reach a place of traffic. This defect is now partially remedied; and intersected at various points, from the Tennessee line to Louisiana, by rail-roads, she has ascended one round in the ladder of her future glory, and left the rear guard of Southern States, to take her position among those of the front rank.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

For the week ending Sunday morning last there were 52 deaths in this city from yellow fever, an increase of 20 over the week before. The total deaths, from all diseases, for the week were 477, an increase of 29 over the week before. Whether or not the opinion expressed in our last, that the week ending last Sunday would present the highest number of deaths from yellow fever, is correct, this week will determine.

DEATH OF REV. PRESTON COOPER.

A brother minister sent us a note in time for insertion in last week's paper, announcing the death of this noted man, the dreamer and discoverer of Cooper's Wells in Mississippi. But was mislaid. He was an eccentric man, but a good christian, and an eloquent preacher. We trust that some competent person will take the trouble to collect all the facts of this remarkable case, have them properly avouched, and send them to us for publication. They should be put upon record.

Rev. H. H Montgomery, Tract Agent of the Mississippi Conference Book and Tract Society, wishes it understood that when invited to attend camp and protracted meetings, he will attend as agent, as well preacher of the Gospel. He makes this statement, he writes us, because he has been invited in the latter capacity, but not allowed to act in the former.

Harper for September, sent us by H. D. McGinnis, 36 Camp street, is a fine number. The "leader," on "The Family Newspaper," we shall "make use of" next week, as it harmonizes very much with our own views and purposes. Thackeray's "Virginians" is more romantic than ever this month. From the same house we have received some of Harper's publications which we shall notice next week.

Kentucky Conference, according to an intelligent correspondent of the Nashville Advocate, is well satisfied with the action of the General Conference in expunging the rule on slavery, and the Church there is very prosperous.

Foreign and Domestic.—On the 17th, Mayor Picman, of New York, transmitted a congratulatory message to the Lord Mayor of London, and on yesterday, 24th, the reply was received, dated 23d.

The Pacific Railroad Company met in Louisville yesterday, 24th, and organized by calling Hon. James Guthrie to the chair, and appointing Dr. Shannon Secretary.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

News from our Home Work.

"To spread Scriptural Holiness over these Lands."

As the Advocate is not large, and as the demand upon our columns is heavy, we condense the revival news given us, except in the case of unusually interesting letters, which we publish. In this department, our readers may look at a glance the progress of the work. We trust the preachers and others will send us every item of progress, in the way of revivals, reformation, church building, and the like. God grant a general revival!

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Cedar Creek Circuit—

Rev. Wm. A. McCarty, writes as follows: At Pineville, we are in the midst of one of the most gracious revivals I have ever witnessed. It commenced at a quarterly meeting ten days ago, and has steadily increased in interest. Thus far fifty-three have joined the Church, on probation, forty-four whites and nine in colored. Three have stood from the Baptist Church, "ring fired," not proselyted. I must notice one signal instance of the triumph of Grace, the case of Samuel Dubose, an aged man, whose years numbered seventy-six. On yesterday, with beaming countenance, he came forward and united himself with the people of God.

This is a fine country, and well populated, but, strange to say Methodism was behind in occupying the ground. Numbering scarcely a dozen members, Brother Moody (Proctor) has been laboring faithfully all the year, and now is reaping the harvest with joy. Other places on his work are astir with revival power.—Blessed be God, for the unspeakable grace.

Talk Bowery—

Rev. J. W. Laney writes: The great revival influence which has spread itself in various parts of the land has reached this circuit. Every portion of the work is more or less affected by it, and it is still going on. The old and the young are being saved. Whole families have been happily converted to God. The accessions to the church are born valuable men of influence and ability; and while this is the case, the sable race are sharing the glorious benefits, and we try not to neglect them. The number of whites who have joined the M. E. Church as yet is nine teen. The number of blacks I am not able to report, but the church has been much refreshed, strengthened and blessed. We have a noble band of local preachers, who have labored faithfully and effectively. I do not know how we could get along without these brethren. Let me call their names; I want the brethren who may fall on this work in the future to know them:—Rev. Pruitt, Harris, Oslin, Ardis, Jones, Harwell, Mays, Holt, and old bro. Oliver, who is like the ripe fruit, ready to be gathered and housed in heaven. Brother T. J. Williamson, who is much afflicted, has not been able to preach; but a nobler man is not to be found any where. Bro. Wild, the junior preacher, is very useful. The Lord bless him and his labors.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Woodville Circuit—

Rev. H. M. Youngblood, who wrote good news recently, writes again in the same encouraging strain. He says: "We closed a meeting of three and a half days at Woodville last Tuesday. There were some converts, eight accessions, some backsliders reclaimed, and the Church greatly refreshed. Last Saturday, at our regular meeting we had two conversions, four accessions, and a good time among the blacks. About sixty taken into the church on the circuit up to this time, and good prospects ahead." Bro. Y. is doing a good work among the backsliders.

Bayou Pierre Circuit—

Rev. H. V. Johnson writes: The Lord has been with us in great power at Zion. We began a meeting on the 7th inst., which lasted till the 15th. On Wednesday such divine power is rarely displayed as was manifested. The Church built up sinners awakened, sinners converted, and the cause of God moved forward. As we went up to Zion we were met with such expressions as these, "Can do no good there?" "Meeting last perhaps two days." But glory be to God he is able to do for us exceedingly and abundantly above what we are able to ask or think. Converts number eight. Accessions twenty, the good done at the meeting will not be told in time. On the first Sabbath of the meeting I asked for a conference collection which resulted in the sum of $32 25. On the last Sabbath of the meeting I made a missionary effort which resulted in the handsome sum of three hundred and forty dollars. Thanks to ministerial brethren for their efficient aid.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Rev. D. P. Cullin, writing from Spearsville, says: "We have gracious times."

Tensas Colored Mission—

Rev. J. C. Pitts, sends his quarterly report, for the quarter ending August 15. He says: "I have received forty-one on probation, making one hundred and eleven in all up to date; dropt 20 for non-attendance; twenty-eight infants; expelled two, had some conversions, mission prosperous. It would please you, sir, to hear the children answer questions from the catechism. Those of sister Lucy Hall, and others, also, will answer readily, I believe every question. I hope the patrons will continue to catechise their servants." We hope so too.

A painting by M. Ivanoff, a Russian painter of note, the subject of which is "St. John Preaching in the Wilderness," is now being exhibited in the Academy of Fine Arts at St. Petersburg. It has cost M. Ivanoff a letter states, twenty years' labor, and he made a journey to Jerusalem expressly to make sketches for it. It is said that the Imperial Museum of Russia has purchased it for 100,000 roubles (160,000f.)

RESOLUTIONS.

The following preamble and resolutions offered by Dr. J. E. Coker, were passed at the Third Quarterly Conference for Clinton Circuit, Mississippi Conference:

Whereas, It is a lamentable fact, that our membership is languishing, and greatly deficient in religious literature, and that many individuals even have no Bible, and are reading profane and fictitious literature; and that as the human mind is the great railway to heaven and should be richly laid with heavenly truths, and as we believe that our religious books, periodicals, tracts, and paper, would greatly supply their wants and benefits them much.

Resolved, That our preacher in charge, and the official members of this Conference be requested to use all efforts to distribute our religious books, periodicals, tracts, and paper, among our membership.

That as the human body is formed by atom added to atom, so also is the human mind formed by impression added to impression, and that as we believe the Sunday-School Visitor, a child's newspaper published by our church at Nashville Tennessee, is highly beneficial to the young and to the older mind.

Resolved, That this Quarterly Conference desire the superintendents of Sunday-schools of this Circuit, and they are hereby requested to use their best efforts to induce their pupils to subscribe for the Sunday-School Visitor.

Resolved, That the editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate be requested to publish these preambles and resolutions; and that the Secretary of this Conference be requested to send a copy of the same to him for publication.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Circular of Feliciana Female Institute.

The Undersigned has purchased the premises formerly owned by Rev. J. Jones, in Jackson, La., where he will superintend a Female Academy.

The design is to establish a Seminary of Learning in which the best facilities will be afforded Young Ladies for a thorough education in all the branches usually taught in such an institution.

Some two competent and thorough teachers will be employed.

The buildings are commodious and well adapted to the purpose. The grounds are extensive and pleasantly situated. The location for health can be surpassed by any in the State.

Such rules and regulations will be adopted as the good of the school will require.

Jackson, La., is situated in the edge of the pine land to the east of the Mississippi, 12 miles from Bayou Sara and 30 from Baton Rouge. It is also a town of Centenary College and for health, economy, advantages and facilities is not surpassed in the South.

The academic year will consist of but one session embracing ten months, from the first Monday in October to the Saturday before the last Wednesday in July; the first session beginning on the first Monday in next October.

Terms quarterly and strictly in advance.

Boarding can be obtained at the Steward's Hall, or in private families at prices varying from ten to fifteen dollars per month. This institution having an able Faculty, extensive buildings, large library, cabinet and apparatus, commends itself to all desiring a thorough classical and polite education.

Address Thos. W. De Wis Jackson, La.

School to commence the first Monday in October next.

RETIRE IN THE INTESTINES—Worms are a peculiar subject, but as they are ill to universal among children and the source of more ills than were committed in Pandora's box, we shall be excused for bringing to the notice of mothers a remedy which exercises every quality of these disgusting creatures. The preparation referred to is Wheeler's Canada Tansy Vermifuge, which invariably accomplishes its object and may be administered to the feeblest child with safety.

☞ Be particular and remember the name "Wheeler's Canadian Vermifuge." This is the only article that can be depended on. Remember this. For sale by

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer the Little Children to come unto Me."

CHILDREN'S EDITORIAL.

Children should not be sad and disconsolate, as a general rule. They should be cheerful and happy. There is no sin in cheerfulness and happiness. If you will read the obituary of that good man, Rev. Edwin Phillips, which you will find in another column, you will see that on his death bed he recommended "cheerfulness" to his poor wife and children whom he was leaving behind. None but a good man, who loved God and his neighbors could have been so cheerful on a dying bed. If we are good, and loving-hearted, and serve God, and say good words, and do kind things, all our lives, we shall not be afraid to die when the time comes. And we should not forget that we are going to die and go to heaven after awhile. O, we shall be glad, and more cheerful and happy than ever, when we get to that good, and beautiful, and happy land where Jesus and all the good and loving-hearted people are. We have just got a letter from one of our preachers in Alabama Rev. James W. Shores, and he tells us that another one of our preachers, Rev. Daniel Duncan, and his good wife, sister Rachel M. Duncan, have lost their little daughter. Her name was

MATILDA ELIZABETH DUNCAN.

She died in Forkland, Ala. She was only four and a half years old. She was the youngest child of the family, and was very tenderly loved by her father and mother, and by all their friends. But she was not made proud by the kindness shown her. She was a good little girl. Her father is a good singer, and had taught her to sing. Bro. Shores says in the letter that she used to sing for him most beautiful little songs. As she breathed her last breath, she raised her eyes and pointed her finger toward heaven. Her spirit is now happy in heaven. Her body is laid in the grave where it will moulder into dust; but God will raise it at the last day, and make it more beautiful than ever. Brother and sister Duncan now have three children in heaven, and three at home. They will all live together in heaven after awhile, if they are faithful. Have you any little friends in heaven? You must try and get there too.

TOUCHING POEM.

What a power poetry has to awaken feeling! A few days ago, says the Methodist Protestant, we met the following lines in a village newspaper. Carelessly running our eyes down the verses, we suddenly felt the tears start with irrepressible force. Thus prepared, see if you can read them without kindred emotion.

We have selected this beautiful poem for the children's column, because it is so suitable to the account we have just given of the death of Bro. Duncan's little girl. You must love all the beautiful things you see while you are in this world, and you must think a great deal about the beauty and joy of your home in heaven.

There is nothing more beautiful than good and beautiful poetry. There is a great deal of sorry poetry, but there is some good poetry. You should learn to love good poetry, and to be a good judge of it. It is a bad sign when a person has no taste for poetry. Let this never be said of you. This little poem is a good one. Read it. Pray over it. Think about it. Talk to your mother about it. You should learn to talk as well as read.

A child lay in a twilight room
With pallid, waxen face;
A little child, whose tide of life
Had nearly run its race.

Most holy robes the angels brought.
By holy spirits given,
Ready to wrap the child in them,
And carry him to heaven.

And shining wings, with claps of light,
Two shining wings they bore.
To fasten on the seraph child,
Soon as the strife was o'er.

Perchance their beauty made him think
Of some harmonious word,
That often from his mother's lips
The dying one had heard.

It might be, for he whispered low,
"Sing, mother, sing," and smiled,
The words one knelt her by the couch—
"What shall I sing, my child?"

"Jerusalem, my happy home,"
The gasping boy replied.
And sadly sweet the clear notes rung
Upon the eventide:

"Jerusalem, my happy home,
Name ever dear to me!
When shall my labors have an end
In joy and peace in thee?"

And on she sang, while breaking hearts
Beat slow, unequal time—
She felt the passing of the soul
With that triumphal chime.

"Oh! when thou city of my God, Shall I thy courts ascend?"
They saw the shadows of the grave
With his sweet beauty blend.

"Why should I shrink at pain or woe,
Or feel at death dismay?"
She ceased—the angels bore the child
To realms of endless day.

CAN'T HELP IT.

A little girl often followed her father round when he came into the house, with this question, "Father, what can I do for you?" And never was she happier than when he gave her something to do for him. Once he said, perhaps tired with her asking, 'Child, why do you ask that question so much?'

"Oh father," she answered, with tears swelling her eyes, "because I can't help it."

It was love that put the question; and her readiness to undertake whatever he set her about was prompted the genuineness of that love; she wanted always to be doing something for her father.

People sometimes are in doubt whether they love God or not. I will tell them how they can find out. Are you often asking your heavenly Father the same question this little child was asking her earthly father. Is it one of your first thoughts—"Lord, what will thou have me to do?" And do you keep on asking because you cannot help it? It so fills your heart that it must come out. And you not only ask, but are on the look-out all the time to hear what he says and do as he bids. This is the way to know whether you love God or not.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

"Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee."

EXPLANATORY AND APOLOGETIC.

Although the "Home Circle" department is intended for the family, it is of course more intended for the ladies than others. We present a sketch below, of rather unusual character. We do this for several reasons. One is, it is interesting, readable. Another is, it exemplifies a rare self-reliant fortitude, which, in harmony with gentleness and refinement, should be cultivated by all women. Still another is, that, while we have no sympathy with the unwomanly "fad" of "woman's rights," now raging in some parts of the country, yet we do believe that the female helplessness which is the general fashion—equally unwomanly. The female practice of medicine, among females, has nothing in it to condemn, but everything to commend. The education necessary to this practice should be obtained alone in female medical schools. The subject of this sketch had no such opportunity, and this is her only excuse. Somebody had to open the way, but we are glad that none dear to us had to do it. The sketch is quite interesting, and is copied by Harper's Weekly from the English Woman's Magazine.

DR. ELIZABETH BLACKWELL.

Elizabeth Blackwell is now a successful Doctor of Medicine in New York. She was a poor girl—supporting a widowed mother with a large family by teaching. She

In May, 1847, when she was years of age, she applied to Dr. [illegible] of Philadelphia, and in April [illegible] she left Philadelphia. Her application through accompanied by a certificate from her having gone through the requisite preparatory studies, ordered Dr. Dickson was to himself by twelve medical colleges. Among the applications she had made throughout the length and breadth of the United States, one had been addressed to the Medical College of the University of Geneva, in the State of New York. The faculty of that institution having received, at her request, agreed that they saw no reason why a woman, possessed of the requisite preparatory [illegible] should not be admitted.

But the position she had striven [illegible] had to attain was not without certain unpleasantness, inseparable from the nature of the case, and though she had weighed, and was prepared to submit to them, for the sake of the knowledge that she could obtain in no other way, it will be readily understood that a young and sensitive woman could find her [illegible] a novel situation, must assist at all the demonstrations of individual [illegible] of anatomical exposition, without occasional severe trial to her feelings. From her first admission into the college until she left it, she observed it an inviolable rule to pass in and out without taking any notice of it, a student going straight to her seat and never looking in any other direction than to the professor and on her note-book. But the suffering it had caused her, under compulsion into the college, suggested to her the desirability of providing a first-class medical school for the reception of female students, only—an institution which she hopes to establish in the course of time.

In January, 1849, the ceremony of graduation took place. The church was crowded to suffocation; an immense number of ladies being present, attracted from every point of the compass, from twenty miles round, by the desire to witness the presentation of the first medical diploma ever bestowed on a woman; and among the crowd were some of her own family who had come to Geneva to be present on the occasion. When the preliminary exercises had been gone through with, and various addresses had been delivered, the weary of the blue ribbons ascended to the platform, and, [illegible] her brother students, and received from the hands of Dr. Lee, the venerable president of the university, the much-desired diploma, which, with its seal and ribbon, and the word Domina changed to Doctrix, admitted her into the ranks of the medical fraternity, little reckoned against her sex. Each student, on receiving the diploma, returned a few words of thanks. On receiving hers, Dr. Elizabeth replied in a low voice, but amidst a flush of curiosity and interest, so intense that the words were audible throughout the building:

"I thank you, Mr. President, for the sanction given to my studies by the institution of which you are the head. With the help of the Most High, it shall be the endeavor of my life to do honor to the diploma you have conferred upon me."

The president, in his concluding address, alluded to the presence of a lady-student, during the collegiate course then closing, as an innovation that had been in every way a fortunate one; and stated that the zeal and energy she had displayed in the acquisition of science had offered a brilliant example to the whole class; that their presence had excited a beneficial influence upon her fellow-students in all respects; that the average attainments and general conduct of the students during the period she had passed among them were of a higher character than those of any class that had been assembled in the college since he had been connected with the institution; and that the most cordial good wishes of her instructors would go with her in her future career.

Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell is now a highly successful doctor at New York, where she has been latterly joined by a junior sister, Dr. Emily Blackwell, who has passed through the same professional education with equal eclat, but under greatly less difficulty.

OBITUARIES.

"I saw the death of the Righteous."

Death of the Rev. EDWIN PHILLIPS.—This man of God, so long and well known in Mississippi and Louisiana, died in Mansfield, La., 29th July, aged 48 years. His illness was a succession of diseases. Many weeks of suffering and intense anxiety were endured by this good man, with patience and resignation.

Edwin Phillips was born in Virginia, 1810. While in boyhood his father emigrated to Georgia, where he was reared and educated. From there he moved to Mississippi and adopted planting as his occupation. In 1835 he embraced religion; in 1837 was licensed to preach, and joined the conference in the Mississippi Conference. He travelled circuits variously: Hollowa, Louisville, Yazoo, Pearl River and Monroe circuits. He was then transferred to Louisville and Pearl River circuits, after which he was [illegible] Paulding circuit, Yazoo Mission, Carrollton and Madison circuits. In 1849 he superannuated, and located in 1851. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Andrew in 1836, elder by Bishop Waugh in 1841.

In 1832 he was married to Mary E. Walton, who now, with nine helpless children, deplore his death. "Oh! what a shadow over her heart is flung."

The prominent feature of Bro. Phillips' religious character was its fullness. He was a zealous minister, a manly [illegible] to his calling. His dying hours exhibited bright evidences of the reality of the Christian religion. When almost dead, he exclaimed:

"Happy! it with my latest breath
I may but gasp his name."

When asked what he would say to his family, he said, "Tell them to be happy." Looking on an unconverted kinsman, said he, "Ah! brother, this will do to die by!"

In his latest hours he was asked, if his trust was in the Savior.

He answered, "Yes, I have had a struggle, but I am more than conqueror through Him that loved us."

MRS. A. DUNNING, [illegible] of the late Rev. Adam Dunning, of Lexington, Ky., died on the 2d August, in the [illegible] year of her age. She had been a member of the Methodist Church for about fifty years. Two [illegible] preceded her to the grave. Mary, of the [illegible] well how to comfort her mother. She was [illegible]

LILIAN AMELIA POWELL, daughter of Rev. [illegible] and Mary A. Powell, died on Friday, 15th August, aged [illegible] years, [illegible] days. Thus an only [illegible] in Heaven. [illegible] little child to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

LETTER FROM GREECE.

ATHENS, May 1858.

We left Beyrout 26th of April, and sailed out of the harbor with a lovely prospect of the city, situated upon elevated ground, embosomed in groves of great beauty, where the orange and citron bloom and the cypress towers in its cone-shaped form, contrasting with its deep, dark foliage that of the lighter green of other trees. The city, situated upon a sloping hillside, appears to great advantage, relieved in the back ground by the mountains of Lebanon, which rise in sublime grandeur, with their bold outline against the azure sky of exquisite beauty. The bay, with its transparent waters was dotted with numerous small vessels and some noble ships of commerce which lay reposing upon its glassy bosom, anchored off from a rocky coast which is lined with romantic shelving cliffs, which add to its picturesque beauty, but not safety. The sun was just setting and touching its disc in the dark blue wave as we passed out of the harbor, tinging its surface with a purple light and throwing his departing rays upon the snowy heights of Lebanon, kindling them into a dazzling flame of pink of transparent light like the reflection upon the Alps seen in Switzerland, retaining the beams some time after they had disappeared upon the bosom of the deep. The scene was one of imposing grandeur seldom witnessed.

The mountains of Lebanon range along this coast, whose precipitous cliffs are washed by the sea, and upon the sloping ridges little villages are nestled along, and some seen clustering upon high declivities which looks almost inaccessible, where the pure mountain air secures health to the inhabitants, who fly there for relief in this sultry clime of excessive summer heat. We were told that although the gardens were clothed with the richest verdure, that within a few weeks they would become perfectly brown, like the sere leaf of autumn and scarcely a green spot be seen. A soft blue haze rested upon the distant hills as we passed along, where light and shade had so distinguished and marked each bold outline of hill, valley and mountain gorge which is so striking in Syria, where rocks of a reddish tinge give peculiar coloring to the distant landscape. The white foam of our Austrian steamer, making its pathway in the deep blue sea, all combined to heighten the picturesque beauty until it faded away in the shades of evening "like joys departed never to return."

The weather was most lovely and the steamer spacious and elegant; and although many pilgrims from the holy land were crowded upon deck, on their return from all corners of the earth, even from the mountains of Ararat, yet they were kept by themselves, except a German countess and her maid, who occupied the cabin with us. She had performed her pilgrimage, we were told, on foot all about Jerusalem, and the Dead Sea, and visited all the holy places in this manner—an effort of no ordinary kind.

We reached the island of Cyprus the next morning and went on shore to view a place hallowed by scriptural associations of the travels of St. Paul, who "sailed under Cyprus because the winds were heavy," and from other circumstances. When the persecution arose about Stephen those who were scattered abroad traveled as far as Phenice and Cyprus and Antioch; some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrea, which, when they were come to Antioch spake unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus." There was not much to be seen in this little city along the coast, which was altogether of a modern aspect, except a Greek church, called St. Lazarus, of some centuries old, a singular structure, highly ornamented with gilt lattice work and many pictures of saints upon gilded ground, which the people kissed as they passed along. It was thronged with people, who seemed to have come on a pilgrimage to see the tomb of Lazarus, whom tradition says was buried here; and it was shown to us in a vaulted arch below the church, reached by the descent of a flight of stairs.

We went around the ruins of the city and saw them harvesting grain, already ripe. The country looked poor, but we were told that the interior was very fertile and had many beautiful and highly cultivated gardens. A few palm trees were scattered about the city, adding something to its beauty. Two hundred thousand inhabitants live upon this island.

We stopped again at the island of Rhodes, whose city had an imposing appearance at the entrance of the harbor, being surrounded by a high, massive wall, flanked with towers, and a magnificent gothic castle rising from the very water's edge, built upon a rocky foundation of great size and strength by the knights of St. John. The city rises like an amphitheater from the sea upon the hill side, with its fortifications, domes, minarets and feathery palms towering above it, adding beauty and grace to the oriental landscape. A highly ornamented archway, in the gothic style leads from the quay to the town. The city, like all the oriental ones, is divided into quarters; and quite unlike them in every respect, the Jewish was the best. The Greeks dwell in the outskirts of the city and the Turks near the coast, where an extensive cemetery separates it from some beautiful country-seats and gardens, amidst a paradise of fruits and flowers, with fountains and reservoirs of water, and as badly kept as they were exuberant in vegetation. We had free access to them, but so slovenly in appearance were they that they were not inviting. The church of St. John has been converted into a mosque and the grand hospital into a public granary. The palace of the grand master of St. John is occupied by the Pasha, who governs the island. Our guide conducted us through one of the principal streets of antiquity, called the street of the Knights of St. John, which still bore the name as well as the aspect of former days. This silent, sequestered walk and apparently uninhabited place threw us eloquently back upon the past, when that powerful band reigned upon the island, as we read upon the arch of one of these massive portals the date of 1494, almost to the period of the settlement of our own favored country. They were driven out by the Turks in 1552, and, as a reward for their brave resistance, the Turks have suffered their coat of arms to remain graven upon the walls; and we saw many of their armorial bearings belonging to the most illustrious families of Europe. At the highest elevation of this street a powder magazine blew up and destroyed many massive buildings, if we should judge from the heap of ruins scattered about. We passed through some beautiful streets in the Jewish quarter, perfumed with the orange blossom and the rose, which grows to perfection on this island, from which it received its original name. It has a population of 35,000. This, also, associated with the history of St. Paul, gave an increasing interest to its position in his travels fresh in our thoughts, with that of Coos, which we passed so near as to look upon its green hills and valleys, and a city in the distance embowered among trees, with its white walls and houses contrasted with their green shades. The main land of Asia Minor was upon our right all the way; and so near did we come to its coast as to look along down its rocky ravines, marked by their deep, strong shades of coloring. Some inclined plains and strips of land filled out a little nook here and there with olive groves and vineyards and little settlements, but we saw few.

We passed the island of Patmos in the hazy atmosphere of evening, and did not see that hallowed spot with all its divine associations, so honored of God in the divine presence of Jesus in the Revelation of St. John the Evangelist. Its very name seems accompanied by a sublime association which reaches beyond this world, full of immortality with that unrivalled description of a new heaven and earth, "When God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes, and there shall be no more death." Although this is one of the most barren islands rising out of the sea, yet there cluster about it gems of immortal beauty and divine radiance more brilliant than the stars of heaven or the sun in its meridian glory.

LETTER FROM CHINA.

SHANGHAI, May 29th, 1858.

DEAR BROTHER MCTYEIRE: I have not forgotten my promise of writing every month, though sometimes I am pressed for time, having so many with whom I must correspond. Many who aid the China Mission, and love to support us while God spares our lives and health, I have now been able personally to write to them. My prayers are for them and the whole church, that God would mightily pour out His Spirit upon all the churches, as He is now doing upon the churches in the North. My heart is filled with love and gratitude, that the redemption of Israel draweth nigh. May it be the beginning of better days to the people of God and the dawning of that glory which shall fill the whole earth, and cause all nations to be "given to the Christ for His inheritance and the uttermost parts of the earth for His possessions." I hope soon to hear that the revival which is now going on in New York, has spread throughout the whole country, from North to South, and cause our people to be more closely united in the bonds of christian love and affection. It is indeed a great privation that we are not there to partake of joy and rejoicing. I am indeed thankful for the many privileges we have among this heathen people, and that we are able to say "Abba Father," and have many times sweet communication with God, and the pleasing influences of His Holy Spirit.

We are in good health and quiet at Shanghai. Still great interest manifests itself among the people. Day after day inquirers after truth present themselves and are attentive listeners to the word preached. A great interest is also manifest at Fuchaw among the natives and our Northern brethren have had during the last year many accessions to the church. We have had quite a number, and still others on probation. Bro. McTyeire, we need more laborers in China. Can you not send us more help? Send us five men filled with the love of God, and an earnest desire to communicate it to the heathen, and if conducted properly it will result in the best of consequences to the church of God.

I have also some news to communicate to you of the political state of affairs in China at the present time, though I am not at all anxious to communicate on such subjects, lest some may term me a political missionary. But knowing the interest felt by our people at the present crisis of affairs in China, I freely give the news. By my last, I referred to the departure of the Ministers of the four united powers for Peking, to form if possible a new treaty with the Emperor of China. After a delay of some days, several Mandarins of inferior rank made their appearance, but not invested with sufficient power to treat. They were seen by the American Minister, Reed, and the Russian Minister, but had been refused admittance into the presence of the English and French Ministers. Thus matters went on for several weeks, the American and Russian Ministers trying to bring about terms of peace between the two opposing parties. Thus they frequent visits ashore and conversations with the Mandarins, the Chinese making at the same time hasty preparations for war, throwing up batteries and planting guns over them. They were continually receiving reinforcements until their entire force was augmented to about thirty thousand men. They were sure of success. The American and Russian Ministers tried their power of persuasion on the haughty Mandarins and charged them not to fire on the English or they would certainly get themselves into a difficulty, out of which it would not be easy to extricate themselves. No, they supposed their superior force would be sufficient to subdue without any difficulty the small force brought against them. On the 20th by eight o'clock, the English conveyed word to the Chinese officer, that if the forts were delivered in to their hands, until the ratification of a treaty, they would be restored to them in the same order, but if not, in two hours measures would be taken to secure them by force. The two hours passed without any answer, when the English gun-boats immediately after 9 o'clock got under way to pass the forts and arrange themselves in order for battle. The first, when entering the mouth of the river which led under the forts struck a hawser, which had been previously placed there by the Chinese, which snapped, and instantly 40 guns were opened, the shot all passing above the deck, while the men were lying flat on their backs. Thus the first passed on up the river and turned round for action. The second came on in the same way until 12 gun-boats had passed and turned around for action. The Chinese were pouring in fire from several howitzers the whole time. The gun-boats then fired a fire of shell, hot shot and grape until a little after 12 o'clock. Frequently guns were knocked from the batteries but resolutely placed back again and manned. A little after 12 the forces landed, about 1400 men, but the Chinese fled to a man, and left many wounded and dead on the spot. Several Mandarins committed suicide. Many were horribly mutilated; one man was left dead with his match-lock in hand ready to fire. Another with his knee partly torn away, was unable to escape. When asked by a foreigner what he thought of the affair now. He replied he never knew what foreigners' guns were like before. He said he was afraid the English would come on him and kill him; but being told to make himself easy, that he would be taken care of, he was much rejoiced. The wounded were all taken on board the English ships for medical attention. The forces are to proceed immediately on towards Peking. They have sent for more forces, so the war is now commenced in earnest. I send you several papers by this mail. More in my next.

WILLIAM LAMBUTH.

NORTH CAROLINA CORRESPONDENCE.

TAR RIVER, August 10, 1858.

MR. EDITOR: Many years ago there was from this region of country a large emigration to various parts of the South and West, drawn mostly by the prospect of finding a more fertile soil and greater facilities for the acquisition of wealth.

Some of them have met with success in their efforts to become rich; others, only with that reward usual under ordinary circumstances to industry and economy; while others again, have carried with them and live under the burden of toil that pressed them in their old homes; and some perchance look upon that part of their lives spent in the Old North State as brighter than any they have known since. It is probable that this, Edgecombe county, contributed as largely as any other in the State to swell the tide that, drawn by glowing reports of rich lands and abundant crops, pressed to new and distant homes where industry would receive a more ample reward and enterprise a better field.

It would be an error, however, hence to conclude that this is one of the poorest counties in the State; for I have never seen more skill and diligence exhibited in draining, fertilizing and cultivating the soil than is to be found in this county, so, that it has now a wide reputation for excellence in agriculture. And they have attained results that once seemed impracticable here. For the present year, until a short time since they had fine prospects for crops, but they are now thought to be much injured by drought.

The whistle of a steam engine seems to be one of the best emblems of progress. Its sound is enlivening especially amid dull and languishing business scenes; and if a steamboat or railroad car does not come near enough, let us have that of a steam mill, so that we be reminded that the world is in motion.

In a large part of North Carolina these are not heard, yet she is not without her railroads. Indeed that from Weldon to Wilmington at the time it was finished was a great work, and I have heard that upon its completion Mr. Preston withdrew, or apologized for the stigmatizing application of Rip Van Winkle, which he, I think, had applied to his quiet old neighbor. She has now finished another line of road from Beaufort on the coast to Charlotte. By this I suppose there have been hopes of building up a large town at the former place, which is said to possess a very fine harbor. It is not strange that this should be attempted, as her commercial dependence upon Virginia and South Carolina has tended so much to prevent the development of her state character; a matter about which her citizens are not indifferent and concerning which, in the minds of many, she is not without some cause of gratulation. She claims the first declaration of independence, and, that in the rising of the spirit of resistance to oppression the first revolutionary battle was fought in her borders. She claims, too, something for her sons, who have become distinguished in other States; yet she ought not to claim too much for her system of common schools, whatever old her retired position may have furnished in keeping in check the spirit of extravagance and speculation, subsidiary to working out modest merit and true strength in the character of her citizens.

In this county for a long time the Primitive Baptists prevailed to the almost exclusion of every other form of christianity. They are Calvinists to the end, not only holding that God does all and that men can do nothing, but violently opposing all associated christian and moral effort. These people seldom ever make progress or organize a new church, yet the churches they have are worked into the habits of the community. The appointments for preaching are monthly and have not been changed in the memory of the present generation. They are always known and the habit of many is to go, so their congregations are always large.

Under the influence of such religious instruction it is not difficult to conjecture the religious character of the community. But we hope a better day is dawning, and some rising beams now shine in places. In Eastern Carolina there are very few Presbyterians. Through many counties together I suppose they have not a Church. The Episcopalians occupy their usual position and doing I suppose their usual work. Among the religious agencies best adapted to influence the people, stand prominently the Methodist ministry. And there is much to be done. Here is a field for the operation of itinerancy, and it is to be hoped that through this means the cause of christianity, under the blessing of its author, may be more widely spread and deeply planted.

GODLY MOTHERS.

Would that all the children had pious parents! No mortal can fully estimate the disadvantages attending the children of ungodly parents. Upon the other hand the advantages accruing to the children of pious parents, cannot be estimated while we are under the veil. The following cases will illustrate and make good the above positions.

The first case is that of a man who was cared for in this city by the Odd Fellows, who, judging that he must die, called to his assistance the minister of Christ. At the proper time and in a prudent way the minister introduced the subject of religion, which was not at all agreeable to the sick man. He became so impatient and excited that the preacher desisted and walked out, that he might calm down. On his return to the room for a moment or two his attention was diverted by conversation on other subjects, during which time he was composed and agreeable. But the moment his attention was directed to the interests of his soul, he became excited and impatient again, and asked to be "let alone" on that subject. The minister realising his perilous condition, informed him of the physician's opinion of his case, and insisted that he "lose no time in preparing to meet his God." His excitement increased; he became more impatient, and with vehemence said, to the preacher, "Go away from me and let me alone."

The second case is that of Mr. Joseph Breitling, who died in Mobile, 14th inst. Mr. Breitling was blessed with a pious mother, who died in Germany when he was about eight years of age. And so deep and lasting an impression did her early counsel, dying blessing, and happy death-make on his tender mind that it remained distinct, though he had wandered far from the home of his youth, lived many days, and most of them spent in disobedience and sin. So that when "bound in fetters" and "holden in cords of afflictions" by his mother's "covenant-keeping God," previous to his death, that he might "show him his works" of wickedness and acts of "transgression" and "open also his ears to discipline" and teach him "that he turn from iniquity," to the path of obedience and the mercy and blessedness of heaven."—Job. xxxvi, 8. Joyfully did he receive the ministers of God, and gladly did he listen to their counsels and prayers, songs and encouragements.

A knowledge of Mr. Breitling's condition was given to the writer seven days before his death, by a pious colored man of my charge. We saw him the next day and found him, as intimated above, fully alive to his situation and doing what he could toward a preparation for his change. He was seen by some of us every day till his death. His end was peace. His mind was clear to the last, and a short time before his eyes were closed in death they were bright with the hope of immortality and the society of the blessed in heaven. He faintly shouted praise to God his Redeemer.

THE LAWYERS TO BE CIVILIZED.

It seems to have been understood that lawyers when in the practice of their profession, were not expected to be gentlemen, but might bulldoze and insult witnesses in court to any extent. A better rule has been lately established by the highest judicial authority in England, the Lords of the Bench at Westminster. In a case referred to them, they declared that it was a principle of common law, that a counselor, in questioning a witness, should address him in ordinary tones, and in language of respect, such as is employed by one gentleman in conversation with another; that such lawyer has no right to question the private business or moral character of a witness, any further than it is apparent they absolutely affect his reliability, or touch the case in hand; and that a witness is not bound to answer questions put to him in an insulting or annoying manner. If forced to answer by the court, he will have his remedy in an action for damages.

REVIVALS AND THEIR CONNECTIONS.

While the golden sun is setting beneath the western horizon, painting with rose colors the silvery clouds that here and there repose on the surface of the celestial canopy, I take my pen to develope a few thoughts on the subject of revivals and their connections. I view them as of immense importance. And I think they should be sought by both christian and sinner. Oh! that we could have an old fashioned revival. What a glorious time we would have! Every one would be made exclaim, "What wondrous love is this, oh, my soul!" It was in ancient days that my grand-mother carried her slippers and ——— in her hand until she approximated the church. There she would sit down on some green and mossy place, put them on, and walk into the church as independently as if she had gone in the grandest style. Yes! it was then that a minister could be distinguished from a dandy.

Something whispers in my ear, that the pride and wealth of this world have largely taken the place of religion. "For what is a man profited, if he shall give the whole world and lose his own soul?" Good Lord, revive thy work and let us feast on heavenly manna. Yet, we have been blessed with some gracious revivals on this (Cuddo) circuit. We are also blessed with two excellent preachers, Bro. Hawkins, our preacher in charge, and Bro. Adams, his colleague; they are men of devoted piety and untiring perseverance. Jesus said: "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." God bless all the preachers; they share a large portion of my sympathy and ever will.

The human mind is adequate to the richest enjoyments of spiritual blessings, as well as of the varied attainments of classic erudition and philosophy. The astronomer may measure the disc of the burning sun, sport amid flashing stars that deck night's cloudless canopy, while the botanist may wander amid the aromatic blossoms, and speak to us in the mystic language of flowers; and the philosopher may develope the mysteries of the moral and natural world. So the christian may grow in grace and the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ Jesus and come nearer to the moral nature of his God. He may "press forward to the mark for the prize of his high calling;" as he thus increases in spiritual strength, the moral grandeur of the atonement, the stupendous exhibition of divine love for fallen man breaks full and clear upon his vision, until he can "comprehend the length, breadth, depth and height of redeeming love," and even, "know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, and be filled with all the fullness of God." Friendly reader, let us pray that the country may be illumined with "pure religion; pray without ceasing and in every thing give thanks unto God. Tupper, "defines prayer as a key of gold, that unlocks the door of mercy." And Jesus says, "Knock and it shall be opened unto you." My prayer is, that we may live so that when "the silver cord is loosed, and the golden bowl broken," that Jesus may guide our little bark across the dark waves of Jordan, and land us safe on Canaan's bright shore, there to live forever.

MONOTONY.

Monotony is pleasant in itself; morally pleasant, and morally useful. Living in the same house is monotonous; but three removes, say the wise, are as bad as a fire. I delight in that same monotony. It saves curiosity, anxiety, excitement, disappointment, and a host of bad passions. It gives a man the blessed invigorating feeling that he is at home; that he has roots, deep and wide, struck down into all he sees; and that only the Being who will do nothing cruel or useless can tear them up. It is pleasant to look down on the same parish day after day, and say, I know all that lies beneath, and all beneath know me. If I want a friend, I know where to find him: if I want work done, I know who will do it. It is pleasant and good to see the same trees year after year; the same birds coming back in spring to the same shrubs; the same banks covered with the same flowers, and broken (if they be stiff ones) by the same gaps. Pleasant and good it is to ride on the same horse, to sit in the same chair, to wear the same old coat. That man who offered twenty pounds reward for a lost carpet-bag full of old boots was a sage, and I wish I knew him. Why should one change one's place, any more than one's wife or one's children? Is a hermit-crab, slipping his tail out of one strange shell into another, in hopes of its fitting him a little better, either a dignified, safe, or graceful animal? The oftener one sees, the better one knows; and the better one knows, the more one loves. Fraser's Magazine.

MARRIAGES OF LITERARY MEN.

It seems to be a well-established fact that, as a general rule, literary men have been unfortunate in their marriage relations. Milton, from sudden fancy, chose a wife, who soon ran away from her studious husband; Dryden wished that his wife was like an almanac, to be changed every year; Moliere was cursed with a woman whose temper would never let him rest, at home or abroad; the Xantippe of Socrates is well known; the wife of Bishop Cooper, in the frenzy of the moment, one day, consigned to the flames the manuscript of his lexicon, which had cost him the labor of thirty years; Montaigne protested he would not marry a second time, even if the goddess of wisdom were herself to offer him her hand; Bishop Newton declared that he found the study of classic authors but ill agreed with the study of butchers' bills; and Rousseau married a woman who was of a most jealous tempor, and who turned out to be grossly illiterate. Of Shelley, Byron, and more recent instances, it is needless to speak; and we can easily understand why Bayle, Bayle, Hobbes, Hume, Gibbon, and Adam Smith made up their minds to celibacy. There is evidently a lurking meaning in the Arabian story of "Aladdin," which has hitherto escaped the notice of commentators.

Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.

REV. MR. GUINNESS.

The Irish correspondent of the N. Y. Observer says: This extraordinary young preacher is again in Dublin. He preached last Lord's Day at 3 o'clock, in the Rotundo gardens. There were no tickets required, but sufficient precautions were taken, at the gates on each side of the square, to prevent the entrance of disturbers; as well as outside, to prevent noise.

Mr. Harris having engaged the gardens for out-door concerts by the band of the Earls National Guard and some vocal celebrities, and having partially erected his orchestra, there was a suitable platform provided; and the space within hearing would have afforded room for 10,000 persons. There were, probably, between two and three thousand persons present; but, though the placard announcing the meeting specially invited "the working classes," few of them, except the regular attendants on their respective place of worship, attended. The majority seemed to have come direct from their different churches. So much are the Roman Catholic clergy on the alert, that it is most likely a warning against listening to a heretic, even if he uttered truth, was given from every altar in the former part of the day.

Mr. G. commenced the service by giving out the hymn, "There is a fountain filled with blood," etc.; which the great bulk of the congregation joined in singing. Mr. G. pitched the tune himself, sings well, and is fond of that congregational singing in which, when all unite with heart and voice, though it may want the perfect music of the choir, or the deep solemnity of the organ, you recognize, "as it were, the sound of many waters." He gave offence, when preaching in "The Primitive Methodist" chapel in this city—(he had been shut out from the chapels of the Conference Methodists by giving utterance, in one of them, to "his Calvinism,") by stopping the organ, as soon as it began to prelude, and saying he would give out the hymn and pitch the tune himself, and requesting the voices of the congregation, without the organ.

After the hymn, Mr. G. prayed extemporaneously; then read and expounded the 8th of Matthew; after which he prayed again, and then preached from our Lord's words, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness."

BRIDE AND GROOM A CENTURY AGO.

To begin with the lady. Her locks were strained over an immense cushion that sat like an incubus on her head, and plastered over with pomatum, and then sprinkled over with a shower of white powder. The height of this tower was somewhat over a foot. One single white rosebud lay on its top like an eagle on a bay stack. Over her neck and bosom was folded a lace handkerchief fastened in front by a bosom pin rather larger than a dollar, containing your grandfather's miniature set in virgin gold. Her airy form was braced up in a satin dress, the sleeves as tight as the natural skin of the arm, with a waist formed by a bodice, worn outside, from whence the skirt flowed off, and was distended at the top by an ample hoop. Shoes of white kid, with peaked toes, and heels of two or three inches elevation, inclosed her feet, and glittered with spangles, as her little pedal members peeped curiously out.

Now for the swain. His hair was sleeked back and plentifully bedizened, while his cue projected like the handle of a skillet. His coat was a sky blue silk, lined with yellow; his long vest of white satin, embroidered with gold lace; his breeches of the same material, and tied at the knee with pink ribbons. White silk stockings, and pumps with laces and ties of the same hue completed the habiliments of his nether limbs. Lace ruffles clustered around his wrist, and a portentous frill worked in correspondence, and bearing the miniature of his beloved, finished his truly genteel appearance.

NEGLECTING THE GREAT SALVATION.

Most of the calamities of life are caused by simple neglect. By neglect of education children grow up in ignorance. By neglect a farm grows up to weeds and briars; by neglect a house goes to decay; by neglect a sowing man will have no harvest; by neglect of reaping the harvest will rot in the field. No worldly interest can prosper where there is neglect, and why may it not be so in religion? There is nothing in earthly affairs that is valuable that will not be ruined if it is not attended to, and why may it not be so with the concerns of the soul? Let no one infer, therefore, that because he is not a drunkard, or an adulterer, or a murderer, that he will be saved. Such an inference would be as irrational as it would be for a man to infer that because he is not a murderer his farm will produce a harvest, or that because he is not an adulterer therefore his merchandise will take care of itself. Salvation would be worth nothing if it cost no effort—and there will be no salvation where no effort is put forth. Barnes.

THE ARITHMOMETER.

A Paris paper states that M. Thomas has entirely completed his calculating machine, called the arithmometer. It may be used without the least trouble or possibility of error, not only for addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division, but also for much more complex operations, such as the extraction of the square root, involution, the resolution of triangles, &c. A multiplication of eight others is made in eighteen seconds; a division of sixteen figures by eight figures in twenty-four seconds; and in one minute and a quarter one can extract the square root of sixteen figures, and also prove the accuracy of the calculation. The arithmometer adapts itself to every sort of combination. An evidence of the wonderful extent of its powers is, that it can furnish in a few second products amounting to 999,999,999,999,999,999,999,999—a marvellous number, comparable to the infinite multitudes of stars which stud the firmament, or particles of dust which float in the atmosphere.

PREACHING TO THE SLAVES.

An excellent Christian brother and minister from one of the Northern States, now settled in the South, says in a recent letter to the Editor:

"I feel quite happy in my new field of labor, and hope to be useful here. I left ——— in consequence of an abolition party, that considered me pro-slavery. My removal affords me the opportunity of doing more for the real benefit of the colored race than the abolitionists have ever done. I preached Sabbath before last to a large audience of slaves in the Church. The white people present took the seats in the gallery, usually occupied by the servants, [so as to leave the body of the church for the latter.] I expect to preach to them perhaps regularly, and in my opinion, it is the true way of blessing them."

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1858.

OUR ADVERTISING COLUMNS.

We wish to say a few words, to be read and [illegible] by all whom it may concern.

The time has not yet come when the [illegible] and support of newspapers are [illegible] to do without advertising. We [illegible] we affirm, for we speak not only [illegible] but also from experience [illegible] supported by the fact that the largest [illegible] supported of even the religious week[illegible] advertisements: The Christian Advocate and Journal, the New York Observer, and [illegible] for instance. It may not be desirable, [illegible] more practicable, to wholly exclude [illegible] from religious papers. Our [illegible] need a medium of this kind for the [illegible] of valuable interests, ecclesiastical, educational, and secular; and they do not [illegible] through any journal so much as [illegible] not be deprived of [illegible]. A paper of this kind should, if [illegible], answer all the newspaper demands of [illegible] constituency. And no other medium can [illegible] the people intended, nor circulate the [illegible] alluded to, so extensively.

This paper is the best advertising [illegible] in all the Southwest; indeed, in all the [illegible] of which New Orleans is the commercial center. It has a larger circulation than [illegible], and this advantage is continually increasing, for its circulation is enlarging more rapidly than that of any other paper, in the [illegible] named. If you wish to do well in your business, advertise well; and to advertise well, [illegible] New Orleans Christian Advocate your [illegible] medium.

We do not dispute our prices. We know [illegible] columns are worth, both to the advertiser, [illegible] increase of his business, and to the [illegible] in the way of what they will bring. To [illegible] who are sceptical on this subject, it should be sufficient to say, that, were we to go [illegible] market and make the effort, we could [illegible] more advertising than we now have, [illegible] and at higher prices than we now charge. This we do not do. Will any one say we should lower our prices under these [illegible]?

Do not delay payment. It is a cash [illegible]. When the money does not accompany [illegible] (as it should do) we immediately send the bill, and expect the cash [illegible]. Rather than wait, or be troubled about getting the money, we would prefer [illegible] an advertisement. Enough said.

We wish to say a few words to [illegible] who advertise their schools in the Advocate. They are advertised at considerably cheaper rates than is customary. And yet some of them complain of our charges, some delay payment most vexatiously, and some do both. These things should not be. Let them cease. Pay the bills at once, and without the bill.

One fact, if remembered, would surely change this feeling, and that is, that by the publication of notices and communications, and by editorial notices, the features of the schools are incontestably forwarded. These things are not [illegible] reading, except with those interested, and therefore, upon the whole, are not advantageous to the paper; and yet they are worth hundreds of dollars every year to the schools. We publish them cheerfully, when not too long, because they advance interests that we desire to [illegible].

We have even thought that the advertisements of school schools should be published free of charge by a church paper. Suppose we [illegible] that church schools should educate church children free of charge. Suppose you try to [illegible] Church books of Dr. McFerrin free of charge. The truth is, that as we often fill up our columns with matter pertaining to the schools, which, though advantageous to them, does not increase the popularity and readableness of the paper, they ought, both on account of service rendered, and for the good of their organ, to pay us double the customary rates. This we do not ask, but make the statement simply because it is the sober truth, and because there is a spirit of error abroad in regard to these things. We desire to advertise for the schools, and will do so cheaper than for other things; but, at the same time we wish them to do us justice, both in sentiment and in fact.

One or two suggestions. It would be better to advertise a school by the year, changing it, or modifying it, as may be desired. It would be cheaper upon the whole, more satisfactory, do more good to the school, and give us less trouble. Sometimes we are requested to notice, and sometimes to publish reports from, and [illegible] otherwise advance the interests of schools that neither advertise in, nor subscribe for, our paper. We shall do this no more.

This paper belongs to the Methodist Church, and is intended to advance all her interests, and all the interests of the christian religion, and the human family, in this country. It is to be supported by paying it, upon business principles, for all it does; by paying it for its subscription—$2 a year—and for the service it renders in advancing interests by advertising them. Let no man wish to procure the services of this paper without paying for them. It would be unfair to others, unjust to himself, and [illegible] to the paper. Support it, and [illegible] it will increase in size, beauty and power, and render service, accordingly.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

The number of deaths in this city by yellow fever for the week ending Sunday morning last was 402, an increase of 90 over the week preceding. There is no panic, but the epidemic is severe.

Carlyle's New Work.—Carlyle's Frederick the Great is at last definitely announced. It is to be out in September.

A PREACHER'S BEST "POINT."

Men have "points" as well as horses. A true Methodist preacher has peculiar points. None but men of peculiar points are suited for the itinerant ministry. It is a peculiar service. It is a select service, requiring select men. They must be fitted for it—adapted to it—by nature, grace, purpose, and practice. There are many points to be observed in a genuine Methodist preacher; but, leaving aside, for the present, all the rest, we desire to call attention to one, and one of the most important; indeed, indispensable.

No man is a true Methodist preacher unless he is successful in the promotion of revivals. This should be a test in the reception of men into full connection in the Annual Conferences. It matters not what may be his other qualifications; if revivals do not attend his preaching and labors, he is not the man for the itinerancy. The appointment of such a man to a district, circuit, or station, is an injury.

The work of Methodism, in great part, is revival work. Its aim is, by the faithful, earnest, pointed, and practical preaching of the gospel, to awaken sinners, and bring them to repentance and to a saving faith in the atonement of Christ. It is to arouse the slumbering consciences of luke-warm, and superficial, and backslidden christians, and bring them to an active and zealous discharge of duty. It is to unfold the beauties of holiness, the power of the blood of Christ to cleanse from all sin, the power of the grace of the Holy Spirit to apply that blood, and to fill the soul with purity and perfect love, and to mightily quicken and encourage the Church to go on to perfection.

A REMINISCENCE OF BISHOP CAPERS.

The Southern Presbyterian, Charleston, S. C., in a very happy notice of Dr. Wightman's Life of Bishop Capers, which we take occasion to say is now on sale at the New Orleans Branch of the Publishing House, says:

"These memoirs will possess no interest far beyond the bounds of the Methodist Church, for few preachers of any denomination have enjoyed so much love and respect, without as well as within their own communion. Very many besides Methodists who remember the noble yet benignant countenance, so well depicted in the frontispiece of this volume—the ardent and yet gentle spirit, which made him the powerful and persuasive preacher, who so long attracted alike the refined and the humble, will desire these fuller memorials of his active and laborious life. Nearly one-half of the volume is occupied with an autobiography, which bears on every page marks of sincerity and truth, and reveals to us the inner man more adequately than any second hand could do; while it abounds in instructive, sometimes racy and amusing sketches of the outer life. The Biography, from the cultivated pen of Dr. Wightman, supplies a fuller record of his public life and labors, which were neither few nor small. Dr. Capers filled a large space in the history of Southern Methodism, especially in this State, so that his memoirs possess considerable historical value. Would that his mantle might fall upon many of the rising Methodist ministry, who cannot too closely imitate his apostolic labors and large-hearted charity.

We cannot refrain in closing this notice from adding a reminiscence of our only personal interview with the old Bishop. A few years ago, soon after our first entrance upon the ministry, in returning from a preaching engagement, as we entered the cars, our eyes were greeted with a most imposing spectacle. There, seated side by side, in earnest, and evidently tender discourse, were two old men, both of most commanding appearance, their heads whitened with the snows of age, both high in position in their respective churches, and both ripening for the grave. One was the venerable Professor of Theology in the Seminary at Columbia; the other, the subject of this memoir. On being introduced by the former to the latter, as the descendant of a common friend and contemporary in the ministry then deceased, he remarked how pleasant it was to see the younger generation walking in the ways of the older. Then turning to the writer, he said, "Well my young friend, you may have a better head than your grandfather, (though he added archly, 'that is doubtful) but you can hardly have a better heart. However, you are young, and there is no reason why you should not attain the same stature in grace. In all generations the old religion remains the same, but though there is no improving on religion, there is great room for improving in religion." After this cordial introduction, it was doubly pleasant to listen to the mild and wise words which seemed to flow spontaneously from the heart.

Shortly after, we heard him preach, though in great bodily weakness, a characteristic sermon from the text, "Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity," breathing the sweetest spirit of Christian love and charity. We saw him preside at his last conference, (that of Florida,) and without disrespect to that body, we may say that his whole aspect, physical and moral, marked him instantly as the Ajax in the field. "Well," we thought, 'if there must be Bishops, may they ever in aspect and mien be such as this one.'

A QUESTION ANSWERED.

INFORMATION WANTED.—A correspondent of the Christian Index, Macon, Ga., proposed the following interrogatory. Who of our Pedo friends will answer? "I have been long acquainted with baby sprinkling, among the whites: why are not negro babies sprinkled?"

If the benighted correspondent of the Christian Index will read our Advocates, he will find in the reports of missionaries constant statements of the numbers of blacks baptized, enumerating both infants and adults. The baptism of colored infants, where the blacks are regularly served by a pastor, is as common as the baptism of white ones. We verily believe that, in a ministry of fifteen years, we have baptized more black infants than white ones.

EXTEMPORE SPEAKING.

An English writer on this subject says with great truth and propriety, that no amount of self reliance ought ever to lead any one to dispense with due preparation, and a well digested outline of what the subject should embrace. For thus it comes to pass that many men who fancy they have attained the acme of preaching when they can talk on any subject at a moment's notice, are the very men that the world points at when it wants to find illustrations for the theory that even clever men become tedious in extempore sermons, and that therefore it should be abandoned. One the greatest proficients in extempore speaking, whose reputation rested on many years' experience, bore testimony to this, saying, that homilies which seem to flow so easily from his lips as to appear to the listeners to be born of the occasion, had cost him many hours' laborious preparation and earnest prayer. "The coinage cannot be good if the mind be empty."

Dr. Arnold says the teacher's mind should resemble a lake, fed by a running stream; always acquiring fresh knowledge, and never allowing itself to lie stagnant. "If a full man," says Professor Blunt, "is required anywhere, it is in the minister of a church, who is fixed to the same spot the whole year round. Nothing short of a large magazine to draw from, will suffice for these frequent demands; without it the thread of his speech will soon run out: the staple of his argument, and, instead of a preacher, he will become a spin-text."

NEW ENGLAND METHODISM.

Methodism has a stronger hold in New England than is generally supposed, although many of the churches are suffering greatly by emigration to the West. Zion's Herald gives the following summary:

"Total membership in the six Conferences is eighty thousand four hundred and forty six. Total increase during the past year, eight thousand four hundred and seventy-nine. There are several towns in the Western part of Massachusetts and Vermont included in the New York and Troy Conferences; all of Connecticut West of the river is embraced in the New York East Conference, which would add to the membership about fifteen thousand, and to the increase probably about two thousand. In round numbers, the membership of the Methodist churches in New England is about one hundred thousand, and the increase the past year has been about ten thousand."

TEXAS.

Texas, although one of the youngest States of the Union, is one of the most flourishing. Her course, from the very moment of her admission as a member of the Confederacy, has been active, enterprising and onward. A correspondent under date of Houston, July 22d, gives the following graphic picture of the present and the future:—"Texas never saw brighter prospects than at present. Out of debt, with a full treasury, taxes merely nominal—lighter than in almost any other State—a full crop of corn and wheat already realized, cotton and sugar cane promising an abundant yield, railroads progressing rapidly, the cause of education receiving a good share of attention, the whole State is rapidly advancing in all that makes a great, good, happy, and prosperous people."

Nothing could more fully illustrate the energy and activity of the Anglo-Saxon race than the history of Texas. But the other day, comparatively speaking, it constituted a province of Mexico, was sparsely populated, and the white inhabitants were constantly annoyed by Indians. At last, despairing of the protection of the Home Government, the citizens revolted, assumed and maintained their independence, were soon after admitted into the United States, and so wonderfully has been the development of their resources since, that even the most enthusiastic of the early settlers have found their wildest expectations far more than realized.

VALENTIA HARBOR.

This place, hitherto comparatively unknown, is about to assume vast importance as the European terminus of Atlantic telegraph. The following description of the island and town we copy from Lippincott's Gazetteer:

Valentia or Kenmore, an island off the west coast of Ireland, Munster, county of Kerry, three miles S. W. of Cahirciveen, and separated from the main land by a strait one and a quarter miles in breadth, and which forms the most western harbor in the British Islands. Lat. 51 deg. 55 min. N., long. 10 deg. 19 min. W. Length of island seven miles, breadth two miles. It gives the title of Viscount to the Annesley family.

Valentia, or Valrucia, a town or village at the south-eastern extremity of the island of Valentia, Ireland, is beautifully enclosed among brown mountain slopes. Population of town and parish, 2482. The harbor is deep, capacious and completely land-locked, and, being the most western part of Europe, has lately attracted considerable attention in consequence of a proposal to make it the western terminus of railway communication and a principal station for Atlantic steamers.

HEALTH OF BISHOP McILVAINE.

The Rev. Dr. Butler writes to the Protestant Churchman, that "some of the notices which have recently appeared in reference to the health of Bishop McIlvaine, are calculated to leave a false impression; that the inference from them that there had been some failure of his mental powers, and an apprehension on the part of his friends that he would not be likely to be restored again to his usual ability for mental labor and physical endurance, is an entire mistake." He has resolved to make a brief tour in Switzerland.

The Boston Traveller says that Jared Sparks, just returned from Europe, has gathered fresh materials with which to enrich the history on which he is engaged.

LONDON.

An exchange well says of London: The history of London has never been fairly written. We have had it is true, extensive compilations, treating of the palaces of kings and noblemen, the civil and military quarrels of distinguished statesmen, the protracted struggle between the Red and White Roses of England, the loves and crimes of ancient British queens, the venerated dead of Westminster Abbey, the beautiful Cathedral of St. Paul's, the renowned bridge over the Thames, and the dark and fearful catalogue of the Tower; but, with the exception of "London Labor and London Poor," and some other productions of less significance, we can mention no works, furnished by the press worthy to be regarded, in any sense as practical histories of the great capital of the British Empire. The pens of British scholars, capable of discharging the herculean task in question, have been, it cannot be denied, in almost every instance, stifled by the strong arm of power, or paralyzed by the magic influence of gold. Expeditions have been fitted out, both in this country and in England, to explore the sources of the Nile and Niger; we have valuable charts of the Dead Sea; our travelers have toiled for many a year among the ruins of the oldest and most renowned cities of the world; the French Government has expended immense sums upon scholars who have volunteered to search for the tombs of the sages and heroes of antiquity among the gloomy and desolate remains of the great Temple of Serapis; our humanitarians have accompanied our vast exploring expeditions, and have startled the moral sentiment of all enlightened nations by their pictures of the sufferings and horrors of what are denominated the lowest tribes of men to be found upon the earth.

SOUTHERN MINISTER TO ENGLAND.

A writer in the Charleston Mercury very earnestly, and somewhat warmly, insists that in the event of the recall of Mr. Dallas, from the Court of St. James, a southern man, and one from the cotton states, of known fidelity, should be appointed his successor. The reasons given are that, since the time of Andrew Stevenson, no slaveholder has filled that post. Everett, Lawrence, Ingersoll, Buchanan, Bancroft, and Dallas, were all from the North. Another reason given is, that Great Britain has, of all the European governments, assumed the most unfavorable attitude toward the institutions of the South. Although Southern men represent the United States at the courts of France and Russia, yet, in view of their attitude of non-intervention in reference to Southern institutions, such double representation is not so important as a representative from the South at the court of St. James. In ridicule of British negro-philanthropy, the writer very pertinently asks: "Does any man, who has looked into the actual aggressive character of the British nation, doubt that if the climate of Africa permitted England to send out there her overseers, in the shape of her regiments, that she would not, under her mild rule—such as famine and persuasive bayonets—extract from African labor and soil that much coveted cotton to feed her looms at Manchester?"

MODERN GREEK.

The American Presbyterian, alluding to a singular freak on the part of the Bible revision movement, in sending a translator to Greece to study the living Greek language that he may learn the meaning of baptizo, says:

"We see it announced in the daily papers with considerable eclat, that Rev. Prof. Hackett, one of the immersionist Bible translators, has been commissioned by the Bible Union to spend a year in Greece, with a view to acquiring a through knowledge of the modern Greek tongue. It is intimated that this will be a new and extraordinary acquisition, and that it will give Prof. Hackett advantages as a translator, which no predecessor has had. This is about as great a piece of humbuggery as the Bible Union has ever attempted—which is saying a good deal. Why, there are at this moment, living in this country, highly educated ministers who have resided not one year, but years in Greece, who made the language their constant study, who were enabled to converse in it, and whose children were as familiar with it as with English. These brethren probably know now all that Prof. Hackett will be able to learn, and a great deal more. Whatever advantages in interpreting the word of God may be derived from a familiar knowledge of modern Greek, has been theirs for years.—Moreover where were are Drs. King and Hill? Do they know nothing of Modern Greek? The Bible Union will hardly be able to beguile the public with the idea that their new Bible is the result of extra light, and, peculiar advantages for getting at the meaning of the word of God."

WASHINGTON'S FAMILY BIBLE.

The agent of the Nashville Bible Society, Mr. R. M. Hawkins, has recently been distributing Bibles in Macon county, Tennessee, and while traveling through the country met with the old family Bible that found a place in Gen. Washington's chamber. Mr. Hawkins says:

I took it in my hands and examined it carefully, after which I read the 19th Psalm in family worship. I then asked the brother to tell me how he came in possession of it. He said that at the General's death his niece fell heir to the Bible. Previous to leaving Virginia, her son was taken sick and died. He waited on him until death. The old lady told him that she was getting old and must soon die, and that she had nothing to give him for waiting on her son save the old family Bible. He gladly received it and brought it to Tennessee with him on horseback. He told me that he would not take three thousand dollars for it. The gentleman lives in the town of Lafayette, Macon county, and his name is Col. Claiborne. You can't begin to imagine how I felt while turning over its leaves. I really felt and thought that I had found a precious jewel. It appeared to me that I would have given any price for it.

POPULATION OF THE GLOBE.

A distinguished professor of the University of Berlin, Herr Deitrich, has lately produced a paper in regard to the world's population, and it is generally believed that it is the most carefully prepared and most reliable work that has yet appeared on this subject. After some detailed estimates in regard to the five great divisions of the world, he arrives at the conclusion that the present population is about twelve hundred and eighty three millions, as follows: Population of Europe, 272,000,000; of Asia, 720,000,000; of America, 200,000,000; of Africa, 80,000,000; of Australia, 2,000,000.—Total population of the globe, 1,283,000,000.

The average number of deaths per annum, in certain places where records are kept, is about 1 to every 40 inhabitants. At the present time the number of deaths in a year would be about 32,000,000, which is more than the entire present population of the United States. At this rate the average number of deaths per day is about 87,761; the average per hour about 3653; the average per minute, 61. Thus at least every second a human life is ended. As the births considerably exceed the deaths, there are probaly 70 or 80 human beings borne per minute.

DEATH OF AN OLD DISCIPLE.

The Doncaster Gazette, England, says that "the last link between the venerable founder of Methodism and the present generation in Doncaster has been severed by the demise of Mr. Thomas Naylor, who lately expired at his residence in the Horse-fair, Doncaster. He associated himself with Wesley when the latter visited that town, and had heard from his eloquent lips the message of glad tidings, as delivered in the open air in St. Sepulchre-gate, and in the presence of the poorest of the poor. The rate-book of 1783 has the following entry, under the head of St. Sepulchre-gate without the bar, north side: 'Owner, Mr. John Wesley; occupier, William Aldam; description of the property, house, and stable. Rateable value, £1 6s. 3d.' This clearly identifies the spot where Wesley first preached the word of truth. Mr. Naylor had been a member of the society upward of seventy years, sixty of which were earnestly devoted to the duties of a local preacher."

THE TELEGRAPH CONTROVERSY.

A correspondent of the New York Times says there is another claimant for the honor of inventing the magnetic telegraph. The matter is thus stated:

The controversy between Morse and Henry is idle—the truth is, Wm. Frost, an humble individual, was the inventor of the electric wire medium. Morse, as before stated, occupied rooms in the University. When there, Frost exhibited his apparatus. Morse expressed his astonishment, and offered to get out the patent at his own expense and divide. Before this, Prof. Silliman had an interview with Frost, at which time he was informed that he had made this discovery, and divulged it to the Professor, who promised to experiment on it. Soon afterwards, in this city, he admitted to Frost that his experiments were favorable; he expressed himself in high terms of its wonderful utility. Besides, the Hon. T. Frelinghuysen, who also occupied apartments in the University, was advised and knew of Frost's invention. All these facts will be fully proved, and will be made public.

ITALIAN PROTESTANTS IN FLORENCE.

It is gratifying to read the following statement, made in the Report of the Colonial and Continental Committee to the late Assembly of the Scotch Free Church: "The converts are now permitted to meet in Florence in considerable numbers, without receiving any molestation from the police, which we trust, indicates a more tolerant spirit on the part of the Government. Protestants is spreading in all the villages around the capital, and, indeed, in all the cities of the dukedom. So much is this the case, that the Pope has issued orders that, in connection with a jubilee which is about to be proclaimed, two sermons shall be preached daily for a time to warn the people against the danger of Protestantism.

BEDFORD SPRINGS, PA.

A correspondent writing from Bedford Springs last week, says of the daily union prayer-meetings: "Our meetings here are as full of interest and as well attended as they were at the commencement. What the result will be I cannot say. The last of this week and the beginning of next will thin out the visitors. We have about three hundred here. The President is still here and most constant at the prayer-meeting, and also Sir Wm. Gore Ouseley and family. The latter are most excellent people." We trust that such of our Christian brethren as may remain, will unite in their efforts to continue these meetings until the last of the visitors shall return to their homes. May they carry with them the spirit of the revival.

AN INTERESTING ANNIVERSARY.

On the 4th of August, 1492 Christopher Columbus lost sight of the most western highlands of Europe, which he was not to see again till he returned to give to Europe his gift of this New World. Three hundred and sixty years pass away, and on the same day the noblest vessel in the New World's navy comes in sight of the most eastern of the highlands of North America; and as the sun goes down she connects with the American shores the thread which gives Europe and America to each other. A majestic celebration of the great hero's faithful endeavor, at the end of a year of years after it was made.

American Board.—The American Board of Foreign Missions holds it annual meeting for 1858 on the 7th of September, at Detroit, Michigan. The Society will then be in debt nearly or quite $100,000.

THE MARBLEHEAD BANK.

This Bank is kept in the venerable mansion of Col. Lee, built in 1762. A few days ago, during a heavy rain, it was noticed that the pavement in front of this house was laid with the date of 1768, represented in small white stones. For ninety years the stones have been daily traveled over, yet nobody had noticed the chronological mosaic under their feet until a careful soul looking down for the driest place to put his foot, happened to discover it. The building is still in good repair. This house is an interesting relic of old times. The entire woodwork, inside, including the doors, window cases, stair-banisters and ceiling, is of solid mahogany. A remarkable feature about the building is, that the same paper is about the walls in every room that was put on them when the house was built. The paper is of the most ancient and picturesque character. In the reception room where were received Gen. Washington, Lafayette, and other distinguished heroes of the revolution, the carving of the wood is magnificent.

THE ELECTORAL VOTE FOR 1860.

The electoral vote for 1856 consisted of 296 votes. The admission of Minnesota will increase that number to 300, and should Kansas and Oregon be admitted the entire vote will be 306, requiring 154 for a choice of President. Of this 306, there will be 120 from slaveholding States, and 186 from the non-slaveholding States. In the Charleston (Democratic) Convention, under the two-thirds rule, it will require 204 votes to make a nomination. It will require 84 Northern votes, even with the united South, to make a nomination.

CONSTANTINE'S SWORD.

The Artilery Museum at Turin, which contains the finest collection of Eastern arms in existence, has just added to it a sabre which belonged to the last Greek Emperor of Constantinople, Constantine XIV., surnamed Dracoses, and the blade of which, both as to material and workmanship, is now unique. It is a Damascus blade and curved. On one side is an inscription of a single line, written in Greek characters, to the following effect: "O, thou Invincible King, Word of God, Master of all things, give aid to the faithful learned Constantine."

A SOUTH AFRICAN REPUBLIC.

The French journals publish a letter from the Cape of Good Hope, which states that an independent State, composed of white men, has lately been established in Southern Africa, under the name of the Republic of Trans-Vaal. Its citizens are composed of men from various parts of Europe, who were chased away from the Cape in revolt and made a settlement, where they now are, as far back as 1836.

Hostility Between the French and the Pope.—In consequence of some recent row, General Guyon having intimated that he would declare Rome in a state of siege, Austria threatened to take off the Pope and Court to Ancona, under Austrian patronage. The French commander has been ever since on hostile terms with the clerical manager of secular affairs in that city.

Queen Victoria and the President.—The Courier and Enquirer takes Queen Victoria to task for "her neglect to give the President his proper title of His Excellency." It is surprising that the Courier should fall into such an error. At an early day of the first session of the first Congress it was decided that the title of "His Excellency" should not be given to the President.

M. de Montalembert.—The London Times says it has the best authority for stating that there is no truth in the rumor that M. de Montalembert is now engaged in writing a work on Protestantism in England, or that he at any time entertained the idea of writing such a work.

The 16th of August, on which the first telegraphic message was sent across the ocean, is a memorable day in American annals. On that day, in 1519, Cortez set out on his expedition to Mexico; in 1777, the battle of Bennington, and in 1780 the battle of Camden were fought, and in 1825 the Northern Sea was discovered by Capt. Franklin.

The climate of Cuba cannot be so unfavorable to longevity as is generally supposed. The last, previous, arrival from Havana reported the death of Isabel Gomez at the age of 110 years; and now we have the Villaclara Alborado announcing the decease, "in the full possession of her faculties," of Maria de Leon, widow of D. Jose Machado, aged 112 years.

Among other letters submitted to the last monthly meeting of the American Bible Society, was one from Rev. Dr. Goodell and others, Constantinople, in regard to the demand for the Bible among Mohammedans; hundreds of Turks in various parts of the country are now searching the Scriptures.

The North Carolina Christian Advocate earnestly calls for increased effort in the circulation and support of that paper. We trust our cotemporary is not hard pressed. Our brother Heflin is traveling at large through the State, and will, no doubt, wake up old Rip Van Winkle to increased activity. We wish him success.

The next session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Canada, will be held at St. David's, Lincoln county, C. W., commencing on Wednesday, August 18th, 1858, at 10 o'clock A. M.

The English Wesleyan Conference, which assembled at Hull on the last Wednesday in July, elected the Rev. John Bowers for president, and Rev. Dr. Hannah for secretary. The retiring president is Francis A. West.

Jubilee.—It is said to be in contemplation to inaugurate the emancipation of the Jews by a great political banquet in London.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

News from the Interior.

TEXAS.—The cutire democratic ticket is elected. Corn is selling at Austin at fifty cents. . . The Indians are troublesome on the San Saba and Llano, and rumored to have been on the Atascosa and Medina. . . The contract for boring artesian wells in Western Texas has been taken by Pinkham & Co., of Alabama. . . The Austin Intelligencer, of the 18th inst., learns from a gentleman in Burnet that Sup. Saba that a fight took place recently between seven white men and nine Indians, in which two of the latter were killed. When the informant left, a party was following on their trail. . . . Another, gentleman, from the same place, brought intelligence that the citizens of Richland's creek were forted in at Duncan's, for protection from the Indians. . . . The Galveston News of the 15th inst. learns from its agent, just returned from some of the eastern counties, that a great deal of sickness existed where-ever he had been. He scarcely stopped at a house where there was not some. The News has similar accounts from all parts of the State. . . . The same paper learns from the Hospital physician, that Galveston is healthier than has been known for eight years. . . . The Independent says that a little son of Mr. Jenkins, of Bellon, was bitten in the calf of the leg by a large rattlesnake, and that owing to a timely application of whisky, he is now getting well. . . . The Independent has heard from the Gold-Hunters who left Bellon, some time since. They were at Fort Stanton about 700 miles from home. They had a hard time of it—one half were coming home—the balance were going to stop at the Fort to prospect and the like.

ALABAMA.—Thos. McGraw, Esq., an old and respected citizen of Mobile, died recently. . . . The cotton crop seems to be doing well, but the rust and worm are making sad havoc in many places. . . . The Livingston Democrat says: We rode the other day through some of the richest portions of Sumter, and conversed with a number of our most intelligent planters, in regard to the cotton crop. They all complain greatly of the ravages of the boll worm. We have no idea that there will be an average crop made on the black lands. The worms, in many places, are as bad as they ever have been, and the rainy weather during the last week has been very favorable to them. We have heard several large planters say, within a few days, that they can not make over half a crop. . . . The Aplington Herald of the 19th says that the "black tongue" has appeared among the horses in that country. . . . On the receipt of the Queen's message in Selma, an impromptu celebration was gotten up—bells were rung, bonfires blazed, cannon fired and speeches made. Altogether there was quite a gala time. . . . It is a remarkable fact, says the Montgomery Mail, that a day or two since a well on the farm of Mr. Englehardt, in Montgomery, was discovered to be strongly impregnated with rhum. A gentleman who ought to know, tells us the water is quite as strong as that of the Virginia Alum Springs. For some time a peculiar taste has been observed in the water of this well, but it is only very recently that it was ascertained what occasioned the peculiarity.

MISSISSIPPI.—Major Barney has been appointed Superintendent of the Mississippi Central Railroad, in place of E. J. Wall, resigned. . . . The cotton crop in the region of Columbus is much injured. The corn is made, a good crop. . . . We gather from our exchanges very low prospects for the cotton crop. . . . We are writing from Lowndes county, and have been engaged in planting in this county since 1814 and I feel confident that the crop of the neighborhood is the poorest that I have ever seen grown. The boll worm appeared about two months since, and has injured the cotton to that extent in the black lands that half of an average crop cannot possibly be made, under the most favorable circumstances. . . . From Hinds county, reports from the cotton plantations in all parts of this county, are as discouraging as they can possibly be. The boll worm is committing awful depredations. On the old lands, especially, the devastation is terrible—and beyond precedent, we believe, in the memory of the oldest inhabitants." . . . . From Holmes and Carroll: "The only thing worthy of note is the sudden appearance of the boll worm in this section. They have already appeared very thick, and are doing immense damage to the young bolls of cotton. . . . Farmers are all complaining very much and fear it will be bad worse; cool nights have set in, accompanied by occasionally heavy showers. However, corn is fine, and there is a large supply made. . . . There is no doubt of the existence of yellow fever at Vicksburg. The Whig announces the death by that disease of Mr. John H. Walker. It also two other cases. . . . The Woodville Republican of Wednesday last announces a case of yellow fever in Woodville, and says: It was brought here by an Irish passenger who arrived on the railroad train a few days since. He who fell a victim to its fatal virulence on Sunday morning last. There can be no mistake as to the death of a man being caused by the yellow fever, as we are credibly informed that eminent physicians held a post mortem examination of the body, and have unanimously declared it such was the case.

GEORGIA.—The Savannah river flee crop is a good one. The State of Georgia is represented to be in such a state of financial health that she can snap her finger in the face of the money doctors, and ask them to just send their bills—in other words, she has sufficient money in her Treasury to pay all her debts, and then possess a reasonable balance for spending money. . . . The Columbus Ga., Sun estimates the cotton crop for the coming year at 3,300,000 bales and adds: We leave come to this conclusion from several expressions into the country recently. Most of the cotton now is well boiled, and continues to form and bloom. The exceptions to this were very few, and those not of a serious character. The worm posted in the upper part of the State of Georgia, that the yellow fever was present in Savannah, the Republican of the 16th inst. gives a flat contradiction, and says Savannah never was more healthy in August, than at the present time. There have been a few cases of bilious fever, but it readily yields to the usual remedies. . . . A report has been printed of the spinning mill enterprise, at Atlanta, Ga. The committee appointed by the late Southern Commercial Convention at Montgomery. The report gives in detail the mechanical arrangement, capacity, etc., of the mill. Should the enterprise be probable, thousands upon thousands of dollars which have been expended by Southern railroads, sending their old iron to the North to be rolled may be saved, through the instrumentality of the Atlanta enterprise.

FLORIDA.—A fine mineral spring has been discovered in Marianna. . . . The Montgomery Mail, of the 14th inst., says: The Pensacola railroad is opened to-day 30 miles. This brings it almost within sight of Fort Hoskins. . . . The President of the United States has received a Kipolito de Urinrte as Consul of Spain at Key West. Learn from the Tampa Peninsular that a colony of settlers established at Fort Myers, on the Caloosahatchee river; that several families are at that place, and that many more are expected to arrive soon. Fort Myers is in the heart of what was formerly called the Indian country, and is a fine opening in South Florida for industrious and enterprising settlers. . . . We notice the arrival in town this morning of a bale of new cotton from the plantation of Mr. J. D. Watts, and from the sample shown us by Mr. D. Griffin, his overseer, we judge it to be a fine article. Mr. Griffin informs us that he has about three bales picked. This is early.

TENNESSEE.—New cotton is coming into Memphis. . . . A reward of $300 is offered by the Governor for John and Sam Lewis, who murdered S. D. Quenner, and Francis Sam, sheriff and deputy sheriff of Campbell county. The mothers offer $1000. . . The branch of the Bank of Tennessee at Trenton, is now paying specie on its issues. . . . At Shelbyville Expositor says: A petition to the Postmaster General has been gotten up at Knoxville, Tenn., requesting him to discontinue the Sunday mail through East Tennessee. Similar petitions are said to be on foot between Richmond and New Orleans. "A general stirring up of the religious sentiment of the community seems to be determined on. The Memphis Eagle and Enquirer, of the 16th inst., says: We receive encouraging accounts of the corn and cotton crop from every State in the Southwest. East Tennessee the prospect never was so full of promise. The same may be said of Arkansas, except the bottom lands on the Mississippi river, which were submerged by overflow. Memphis will have a large increase of cotton over any former year.

LOUISIANA.—The Ouachita Register of the 19th, has the following: The river at this point is slowly receding, and will soon be down to low water mark. The weather is still a few days past, has been quite dry and hot, and we hear of more sickness on river plantations quitening large creeks than is usual. Crops are indeed fine. A corn already made is good, and cotton never did fairer for a large yield. The bill-worm is not as promising that on the bottoms, except in a few localities, where the rains have set in for four or five weeks. The rains, however, of the last ten days give promise of abundant crops.

SOUTH CAROLINA.—There were 13 deaths in Charleston in the week ending on the 21 inst., at which 28 were of yellow fever. . . . There have been several cases of the fever at Charleston for the week ending 14th August. The number was 220 of which was yellow fever. There has been an increase for the week ending 21st. The white cases much the Roper Hospital. In the city proper the most is among the Germans. This fact, however, is the fever is not an epidemic. There have been vague reports in the country as to the fever being raging, etc. This day, says the Southern Baptist, there have not been as many deaths from yellow fever as from typhus fever.

ILLINOIS.—A dispatch of the 20th from Chicago says: During the storm on Wednesday a fishing boat, with eight persons on board, capsized on the lake, five miles from Milwaukie. Three men, Cornelius Myer, Frederick Lessing, and another, whose name is unknown, were drowned. The balance were rescued by the steamer Traveler.

VIRGINIA.—The Richmond Enquirer says that John Stephenson, Esq., of Charleston, Va., has generously deeded to trustees, a lot of eight acres of land in the west end of that town, one-half of which is to be used as a cemetery, and the other half for the endowment of a female seminary.

Items from our Home Work.

To spread Scriptural Holiness over the Land.

As the Advocate is not large and the demand upon our columns is heavy, we condense the revival correspondence, except in the case of unusually interesting letters, which we publish. In this department, our readers may see at a glance the progress of the work. We trust the preachers and others will send us every item of progress, in the way of revivals, collections, church building, and the like. God grant a general revival!

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Union Circuit—

REV. R. A. SMART writes: "Inform your readers that we have just closed our Third Quarterly Meeting, held at Bailey Chapel, Scott county, Miss., commenced 31, July and continued nine days, resulting in the conversion of 29 souls, and the accession of 22 to the Church. The membership were abundantly refreshed. Rev. R. A. Jones, our P. E., was with us a portion of the time, in his usual zeal and power, and other eminent ministers. The good work seems to be extending. We have several other meetings appointed at which we hope to have further manifestations of the power of God. We have added nine to the Church since Conference."

Paulding Circuit—

REVS. W. PRICE and GEORGE JACKSON write: "We commenced a protracted meeting at Mount Zion, which continued five days; five persons professed religion, and four whites joined the Church on probation."

"Our third quarterly meeting was held at Price's Chapel August 14, protracted four days. We never saw a greater manifestation of divine power. The altar was crowded with mourners, and a goodly number were happily converted. Thirty-five whites joined the Church (two of the number by letter) and eleven blacks. We have now a new Church, fifty-five white members in full of blacks in the vicinity of Mount Ruser. Eighteen months ago we had neither a Church nor a society in that part of the Lord's vineyard."

Laurel Hill Colored Mission—

REV. J. C. SELLERS writes: "Gives a monthly mission of eighteen appointments. There are from 1,200 to 1,500 negroes preached to. The sum total membership is 593. There have been 105 accessions and 6 dismissions this year. There have been six deaths, among the members. Five of these I have buried, and in the full assurance of a blissful immortality. The sixth, of which I thought I would be burying, but I shall inter it only the 26 of one. His name was Moses. He was an old man, and advised, if not exceeded, his three score years and ten. He had been a disciple of Jesus for upwards of thirty years, and walked in loving Him who is invisible. The time had come for him to lay by his armor and go to be crowned. His weeping child ren and grand-children were around his bed. 'Children,' said he, 'don't cry about pa; pa's most home.' Then clasping his hands together he said, 'Into the arms of Jesus;' he gave children and died in the arms of Jesus; he gave children and died in the arms of Jesus; he gave children and died in the arms of Jesus;

LETTER FROM GREECE.

Smyrna—European appearance and activity—Genoese Castle and Turkish Cemetery—Giver Meles—Homer's Birth-place and Cave—Paradise—One of the Seven Churches—Polycarp's Death-place—Syros—Education—Arrival at Athens.

ATHENS, May 1858.

We passed a number of little islands in this Archipelago and reached Smyrna the first day of May, and had time to walk over this beautiful European looking city, with its clean streets, fine houses and bazaars, quite surprised to see such a highly improved place in this oriental world. People from different parts of Europe are merchants here, which gives the stores a different look altogether. The bazaars are crowded with oriental people and their goods and wares. The city is a large, active, busy place, and built upon an inclined plane, extending up the hill-side a considerable height. The streets, running down to the water side are very handsome: looking through the arches the effect was fine in the distant perspective. We entered one Greek church, highly ornamented with pictures and gilt; but it was dark and gloomy. They were lighting the lamps for vespers as we entered. We passed some beautiful gardens and an observatory or tower which affords a view of the whole city. The Greek quarters of the city are very beautiful. The houses are like palaces and the walks and courts are paved, with marble fountains amid orange groves and flowering shrubs; and the pavements were washed so clean and everything around looked so fresh and beautiful that it was perfectly enchanting. The most of the ladies we saw in the streets were dressed in the European style, though we did not meet many.

In the morning before we left we rode up a mountain to see the famous Genoese castle, built in the time of the Crusaders, which extends almost around its lofty brow, with its walls and towers. It is a noble ruin, majestically grand: and as we ascended the wall by flights of worn stone steps and stood upon their heights, we enjoyed one of the finest prospects of the city and its environs, its fine harbor and shipping with the surrounding mountain scenery that are seen any where. The whole city lay like a map beneath, with its numerous streets, residences and public buildings, and its Turkish cemeteries, amidst the cypress shades; the first we had seen with trees of any kind to adorn them.—But a Turkish cemetery is mournful at best, with the sculptured head-stone of a turban instead of the cross. It sends a pang through the soul at the thought.

The ancient river Meles runs like a silver thread through the city, wending its way to the sea, associated with the name of Homer, whom they claim to have been born upon its banks; and tradition has found a cave where, it is said, he composed some of his immortal poems. On one side of the river our guide pointed out a place they call Paradise; and if luxuriant vegetation and green trees along the road entitle it to the name, it may well be called so, for it was very fresh and beautiful with groves and gardens of oriental luxuriance. Not far off another spot, more interesting to us still was seen—one of the seven churches of Asia, upon the site of which a modern one has been erected to mark the place and fix the attention. "And unto the angel of the church in Smyrna, write; these things saith the first and last, which was dead, and is alive; I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, (but thou art rich) and I know the blasphemy of them which say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogues of satan. He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches; To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God"—Rev. ii, 7, 8, 11. Oh, how emphatic the voice which then spoke and still speaks in our ears! Associated with this place, yet they apply to all others.

From this ruin we passed down an inclined plane above the city, where are seen fragments of an ancient amphitheater, in some broken arches and piles of stone, stretching along its heights at a considerable distance and in a most elevated position on one side of the mountain overlooking the city. In this open amphitheater is shown a spot upon which tradition has fixed the martyrdom of Polycarp. Near its site is built a Mohammedan tomb. Oh! what is christianity without a martyr's spirit who can seal the truth with his blood? It is the blood of saints which has enriched the world. Their prayers and tears, through the intercession of Jesus, made its moral wilderness blossom as the rose.

May 2.—We left this evening for Greece, and were soon out at sea with favorable weather and a most delightful atmosphere; reached the island of Syros or Syra the next morning and spent the whole day anchored off the coast in its commodious harbor, with a fine view of the city of the same name and the mountain scenery around it. Old Syra is situated upon a conical shaped hill, with houses ranging one above another to its very top, and that is so small that the church of St. George covers it entirely. The new town extends around the coast and miles with the other. Some of our party went on shore and saw some traces of the old Greek city, but the walls are scarcely visible; every thing about the city is modern and has a flourishing aspect, with a multitude of Europeans thronging the streets and wharves. "In the middle ages the inhabitants retreated to the summit of this hill for security against pirates."

This city has a central position in the Ægean Sea, and is fast rising into importance. Here some of our passengers took shipping for Trieste and some for Athens. It is said that great attention is given to education upon this island, which numbers many thousand inhabitants; and that more than 2000 youth are taught in their various schools; that travelers would be surprised to find the venerable pages of Thucydides and Demosthenes in the hands of girls. "Pherecydes, one of the earliest of the Greek philosophers, who maintained the immortality of the soul—the instructor of Pythagoras—was born at Syros. It is the principal seat of Protestant missionaries, who have schools here, though we did not go on shore to visit them.

Here we changed vessels for Piræus, in Greece, where we arrived the next day in its fine, large harbor of the old Grecian port, with every thing new and modern about it. Carriages were standing upon the shore ready to convey us to the capital—a luxury we had not enjoyed for some time—which gave us home-like feelings of our own loved country. We availed ourselves of the privilege and were soon on our way to the renowned city of Athens, with all its ancient glory clustering around our thoughts, tinging with its varied hues the past and the present. The road was delightful and planted with trees on both sides all the way to the capital, which, in a few years, will form an agreeable shade and add much to the beauty of the drive of seven miles. The ruins of the Acropolis soon burst upon our sight, seen between its hills and lovely scenery around, which told us we were in a land of the poets who drew their inspiration from its classic shades.

CONFERENCE DEPOSITORIES.

To the Preachers and Members of East Texas Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: I am prompted, from various and important considerations, to avail myself of the columns of a newspaper to address you a few lines on subjects of vital importance to us as a part of the M. E. Church, South. It is proper for me to say that I heartily endorse the action of the late General Conference in regard to "local depositories." For the accommodation and convenience of Annual Conferences and brethren, to supply the growing demands of our people for a "moral religious literature," but there are a few Annual Conferences in the bounds of the M. E. Church, South, which, from their geographical position, have no commercial point of sufficient importance to justify them in raising the needed funds to establish such Depository. Among this class of Annual Conferences, I conceive that East Texas stands prominent.

Let us look at the facts in the case. In doing this, let us ask a few plain questions. And first: Is there any point on the gulf that could be relied on, for such Depository? Answer, none. Second: Are there any points, either on the Trinity or Sabine rivers, that would justify it, from their commercial central position? Answer, not one. Third: Is there a town or village, that forms a focal point for trade, where we could look with certainty of success in such an enterprise? Answer, no.

It is quite probable that some brother would answer the last question by pointing us to Marshall, Jefferson, or Tyler. I admit that, so far as the extreme northern portion of our Conference is concerned, Jefferson would be the most eligible point; but what facilities would it afford to all south of those counties?

I would say that not more than one-fourth of our territory would be accommodated. Look then to Marshall or Tyler, and what are the facts in the case? Suppose brethren from Nacogdoches, Shelby, Angelina, Trinity, and Houston counties wanted books from either place; what facilities would offer to them to get their "box of books?" How many wagons are passing to either place during the year? Further: Suppose one of those last mentioned places was our Depository. What chances would either afford for our northern counties? There is literally no trade carried on with any of those points from either South or North.—We deem these facts to be stubborn ones, not to be successfully controverted.

What are we to do, as a Conference, under these disadvantages? This question will admit of but one answer, as we humbly think.—True, some will say we should by all means contribute to raise a sum to build up a Depository at Galveston. But stop, my brother; take the map of Texas and look up and down it; look for Trinity river, and then ask yourself these questions. How far up Trinity do boats run; and how long do they make regular trips? Will the highest point reached on the river find a place sufficient in importance, to justify shipment of books to it? Would it answer for brethren on the Gilmer, Quitman, or Grayson circuits to rely on intercommunication between those points, for their supply of books? Not at all. They, in all probability, would remain at the place of landing for years, unless the additional expense should be incurred of hiring a teamster to go after them, especially.

Again: I ask, how many of our merchants and farmers do their trading at Galveston? I think I shall be sustained in saying, that nine out of ten do all their commercial business in New Orleans. Does not this afford a decided advantage over Galveston? Most assuredly it does. Preachers are, as a general thing, acquainted with this class of men, and can very conveniently make out their bills for books, put them into the hands of those friends, when they are leaving for the city, tell them to hand them to the book-agent, and have their bills filled and shipped with the merchant's or farmer's goods. This will give us a decided advantage.

Mr. Editor, my communication is getting too long, and I must ask your editorial clemency. Should you let this see the light of day, I shall be tempted to write on other subjects bearing upon the same point.

DEATH OF REV. PRESTON COOPER.

Preston Cooper is dead! A great man and a good man is fallen! His condition has been such that this event might have been looked for on any day for the last two years, and yet it comes with all the suddenness of a melancholy announcement.

The death of bro. Cooper was well known in Mississippi before it reached the ears of the writer, he being in a distant part of the country. He was well known to have been one of the most useful men in the Mississippi Conference for the last twenty years and more. He was a man of most extraordinary faith and piety. His confidence in the immediate presence and superintending providence of God, in all the details of practical life, was most extraordinary. He was well known and greatly beloved in all the territory of the Conference where he lived and labored so faithfully; he having filled successfully all the most prominent appointments of that field. There is probably no man in this Conference the living fruits of whose ministry are found so abundantly in all parts of the Conference, as those of Preston Cooper.

He was pre-eminently a self-made man. His early opportunities and advantages were very meager. And even when he entered the ministry his literary qualifications were at a very low point. In the ministry proper, from this time forward, he never failed to do the work of one or two men; he was a man of great industry, and yet he found opportunity to prosecute his studies—sometimes on horseback, sometimes before day in the morning—an hour here and a few minutes there—until he became a most finished grammarian, a very accomplished elocutionist, and a profound theologian. He was better acquainted with Watson's Institutes, so far as I have had an opportunity of judging, than any man I ever conversed with. He was naturally a logician of the first cast of mind; and as a practical and theoretical rhetorician, I have not known his superior. His preaching was popular, solemn, eloquent and convincing, while it carried with it a veinof originality and independence which gave him a high position as a pulpit orator. And withal, Mr. Cooper was a man of the most meek and humble spirit; he carried with him to his grave the elements of true greatness.

The biography of Mr. Cooper ought not to be lost to the Church. If properly prepared, as it is hoped it may be, it cannot fail to point out to our young men the sure path to elevation and usefulness, while it would give to the general reader a practical exhibition of faith and divine power exemplified in the common-places of life, which would be of rare interest.

It seems that the Mississippi Conference is losing her first class men most remarkably.—Nash, Fly, Winans and Cooper are no more.—But it is the Lord's doings.

It is to be hoped that before long we may see a more extended and satisfactory sketch of Mr. Cooper in the weekly prints; and that in due season some competent person will furnish the Church a more lengthened biography. This sketch is from a distant friend, who knew him and loved him well. Mr. C. leaves an amiable and interesting wife and family.

Farewell, brother! You knew this world well and knew how to place upon it the low estimate it deserved. You are now in the other world. Oh, how often, in public and in private, have we heard you discourse of that world!—And how familiar you had made yourself with it! How little a thing it was for you to die, for you lived almost in that world while you walked upon this! But you are not clean gone from us! Your memory is ours still!

METHODIST COMMON SCHOOLS.

MELROSE, Texas, Aug. 21.

I see, in your issue of Aug. 11, that the time has come when Methodists begin to think of providing for the education of the children of our people who are not able to send their children to boarding schools and colleges. I think I can suggest a plan by which primary Methodist schools can be made available for this purpose.

We have in East Texas Conference above ten thousand members, and are increasing very rapidly; and at least one hundred young men who are desirous to prepare for the ministry, but who have not the means to go through a collegiate course; and who, consequently, will remain ordinary members of the Church, if they do not become discouraged and return to the world and lose their souls. I hope it will not be the case, but I fear for many of them.

When God called Jonah to preach to the Ninevites, he refused, because he felt that he was not adequate to the work; and had it not been for the mercy of God he would have been lost. When God calls a man to preach, he must obey or act wickedly. Now, to aid these young men, let them make it known to the presiding elder or the preacher in charge of the work where they reside that they are desirous of preparing for the ministry; let them be recommended to Conference; let Conference take charge of them, allow them $150 per year, and require them to teach a common school in such neighborhood as the presiding elder may think best, and have at least three regular appointments to preach. I mean those who are qualified to teach the lower branches in common schools. And let the proceeds of the schools be paid into Conference as a young preacher's fund. As soon as they get through with the study of divinity, let them join the itinerancy, and there will be others to take their places.—By this means we will have a better educated ministry, and our children will be educated and established in the doctrines and usages of the Church. I believe that at the end of the first year there will be an overplus of the common school fund; and I would not be opposed to giving the supernumerary or superannuated employment of the same kind, when qualified to teach and undergo the labor, and at such salary as the Conferences may think proper to allow them. There is no class of men who could be of more benefit to the young. Their precept and example would be half an education. If we can get up a sound, christian common school system it will not be long before the prophecy will be fulfilled, that a nation will be born in a day.

I do not pretend to think that this is a complete plan, but merely give it as a suggestion. I think the Church needs stirring up on this subject; and I hope to see the ablest pens take hold of the common school system, as we need it in every community. WM. H. SWIFT.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE FUNDS.

Allow me to submit a few figures to the consideration of the brethren of the Alabama Conference. In our Conference, there are as claimants upon the Conference collection,

17 Superannuates,	average claim	$325 00	$5,525 00
11 Widows	"	200 00	2,200 00
4 Orphans	"	40 00	160 00
34 Traveling Preachers	"	150 00	1,500 00
15 Deficient Missionaries	"	150 00	2,250 00
			$11,635 00

The largest collection for this purpose was taken up last year, amounting to $5,950 00. Now, it is evident to our district stewards that if we pay our claimants their just demands, each Church will have to double its contribution, and those Churches not accustomed to pay, must make up for past deficiencies. And class-leaders and stewards must take up this collection where the preachers are derelict. Presiding Elders must inquire into this matter. Brethren, you may soon become superannuates, much sooner than you apprehend.—The friends of this cause must redouble their efforts, and those who have been indifferent must be indifferent no more. To each person that reads this: If you are a christian, as some one has said, raise your right hand to heaven. Now, put that hand in your pocket liberally, fill it with dollars, and then hand them to your preacher for your contribution to the Conference collection.

W. E. M. LINFIELD, Sec'y.

A PLAN.

For the establishment of Conference Depositories, and for the augmentation of the Capital of the Publishing House.

The scheme of Book and Tract operation marked out by the General Conference at its last sitting, including Conference Depositories and an increased capital for the Publishing House, contemplates the employment of an additional capital of not less than one million of dollars. Any thing below about this figure would not fill up the outline marked out by the Conference, but would be meagre, unpromising, and unsatisfactory. All out this sum to be raised in all the Conferences will, in a reasonable degree, answer the proprieties and necessities of the case, and will wake up the Church to the accomplishment of an enterprise worthy of itself.

This scale of operation, when connected with such an end and purpose as this, will likewise, by its very magnitude—its largeness in promise to the Church and country, the grandeur of its proportions, and the high claims to popularity and respectability which it must necessarily make—render its accomplishment easy and its success certain. If carried forward and managed prudently, it will, in the short space of a few years, stir the whole Church and country to their centres.

The Financial Secretary of the Publishing House, under whose superintendence this enterprise is mainly placed by the General Conference, has taken much pains to avail himself of the advice and counsel of leading intelligent and enterprising men of the Church, in and out of the ministry, with regard to the manner in which this enterprise can be put in progress, so that its course will be most easy, and its success most certain.

Several considerations are deemed to be obvious.

1. A plan of procedure must be marked out, and agreed upon as far as practicable, which will embrace the entire scheme, and look to a not far distant accomplishment. This plan must be such an one as will be most likely to be adopted by all the Conferences with not very much variation in detail. Harmony and oneness of action are not only vitally important to the success of the enterprise itself, but will tend greatly to preserve and perpetuate our bonds of ecclesiastical connection.

2. The plan must come reasonably up to the proprieties and necessities of the case. It must recommend itself, in elevation and expansion, to be something worth while—something worthy the Church, the times, and the latitude. Littleness, contraction, and consequent inability to promise largely and safely in moral and religious good, would not meet public expectation—would not spring the energies of the Church—would not stimulate a mutual and praiseworthy emulation—would not place us out in the foreground, where we belong, in respect to sister Churches—nor would they put us in a right position before the world—nor be satisfactory to ourselves, nor likely to succeed.

3. The plan must be plain and simple in its construction, easily understood and easily worked.

And lastly, there must be enough of newness about it to get us out of the old, cumbrous, heavy, and worn-out machinery, where we have heretofore labored so much and accomplished so little.

The following conclusions have been reached by a patient and careful examination of the subject in all its bearings and relations, assisted by the counsel of such persons as could be consulted; and, as far as they are applicable—that is, as far as the Conference Depository system is concerned—they are supported by a year and a half of experience in one of the Conferences.

First. The two parts of the enterprise—that which looks to the setting up of Conference Depositories, and that which looks to an increase of capital for the Publishing House—must be worked together—at one and the same time.—The two things are but two parts of the same thing, and they must certainly be accomplished about the same time, or we have very little use for either. The Publishing House, with its present capital, is very inadequate to the supply of the Conference Depositories with books at cost, or indeed, in adequate quantities, on any other terms. It would not, therefore, be worth while to set up a Depository without provision for the manufacture of its stock for the supply of its shelves. The rule prescribed by the General Conference is, that the Publishing House should manufacture books and supply the Depositories with them at cost.

Second. The contributors of the funds for this great enterprise should sustain continuously an intimate relation to the enterprise itself. This is not only right and just in these persons, but the success of the undertaking will be found to depend very much—especially in the case of laymen—upon their sympathy, labors, and co-operation. The laymen of the Church must be brought largely and intimately into the practical working of this enterprise.

Third. Let each one of the larger Conferences fix the sum to be raised at $100,000, the one half of which will constitute the capital stock for its BOOK AND TRACT SOCIETY, as hereinafter provided. And the balance of the remaining half, after deducting the expenses of a handsome and valuable bonus to the subscribers, as hereafter set forth, will be paid to the Publishing House, from time to time, to augment the capital stock of the Publishing House.

Fourth. Let the entire sum to be raised be divided into and be subscribed for in shares of $100. Each share will entitle its possessor to—first, a copy of the GENEALOGICAL FAMILY BIBLE, recently published, to be furnished by the Publishing House. This Bible contains a handsomely engraved pictorial certificate of membership in the corporation. Second, to perpetual membership in the Society, in himself and his successors; his posterity owning said Bible and stock, to enjoy for ever all the rights and privileges of the original shareholder. And third, to five dollars in books and tracts from the Conference Depository annually, at catalogue prices, for domestic use or distribution, for ever; the same to be applied for within the year.

Fifth. The share holders as above, and any others, as may be agreed upon by the Conference and the Society, will be incorporated according to law under the name of "THE BOOK AND TRACT SOCIETY OF THE ——— CONFERENCE." The corporation will be controlled by a Board of Managers, elected annually—half laymen and half ministers; the one half of whom will be elected by the Society and one half by the Conference, approved by the Society. The Board will elect its President. The Society will meet annually at the time and place of the meeting of the Conference. The Board should be from about eight to twelve in number. Care should be taken to secure, in the Board, the services of several well-known, substantial merchants or other business men at the place where the Depository shall be located. The Bishop at each Conference will, when desired by the Conference, appoint a traveling agent for the same.

Any other necessary or useful details of a legal or expedient nature will be incorporated in the charter and laws of the Society.

Feeble Conferences will work on a smaller scale, in the same way, in proportion to their ability. It is recommended, however, that our smaller and more feeble Conferences should have a Depository with a capital of at least $20,000 or $25,000. Some of the most feeble Conferences should be relieved entirely from any burden of furnishing capital to the Publishing House.

What is understood to be meant by two or more Conferences uniting in one Depository is that such Conferences as do not establish Depositories of their own, will purchase books on such terms as may be agreed upon, from the Depository of a neighboring Conference. This stipulation might be somewhat in the nature of a copartnership.

In this way it is very confidently believed that the entire scheme can not only be accomplished, but be accomplished easily, certainly, and in a way entirely satisfactory to the Church.

There should be, by all means, two agents to a Conference until the entire capital shall be secured, so that the whole matter may be wound up during the next Conference year. And care should be taken, too, to secure in this enterprise the very best and ablest men the Conference possess. For we have no Church enterprise in any of the Conferences, of any kind, save the regular pastorate of the Church, in which the great interest of morality and religion are, in any comparison, so largely embarked as in this.

Where any Conference does not establish a Depository, it is recommended that measures be taken to procure subscribers on the conditions above set forth, who will sustain the same relation to the Publishing House, including the annuity in books and tracts, as is herein contemplated in regard to the Conference Depositories.

Let any man imagine the moral and religious condition of the country in any Conference, and the state of Methodism there, where in five, ten, or twenty years there shall be distributed, by means of colporters and otherwise, among almost all the people, from twenty-five to thirty or fifty thousand dollars' worth of books, pamphlets, and tracts, of our selecting, every year, and he will foresee a state of things very pleasant to look upon. There are no other people in the land who could seriously meditate such an undertaking. We are appointed to it! The finger of God is in it!

The question whether this scheme of ecclesiastical benevolence, great and majestic as it is, shall be speedily and securely accomplished or not, is precisely the question whether we ourselves, ministers and prominent, intelligent laymen, shall be united in its support. One timid, indiscreet man, of some influence, who believes, as some do, that nothing can be done to-day that was not done yesterday, by doubtful and despairing expressions of feebleness and predictions of failure, can pull down as fast as many enterprising men can build up.

The amount of money to be raised by the several Conferences, being larger than we have been accustomed to handle for such purposes, so far from furnishing an item of discouragement, is, when considered in connection with the enterprise itself, its grandeur and its munificence in promise to the Church, the strongest guaranty of success. Let every man, minister and layman, especially men of standing and influence, say, It is to be done—and it is as certainly done as that the sun shall continue to rise and set a few times more. And, after all, the amount of money proposed to be invested in this enterprise is trifling when compared with the ability of the Church, and the high and important consideration that Christian Methodists have solemnly devoted themselves and their all to God. What is the wealth of the Southern Methodist Church? How many thousands of millions?

It is well known that the Alabama Conference occupies a prominent position in this matter, she having brought forward the scheme of enlarging the capital of the Publishing House, which was so well received and so favorably considered by the General Conference. The Secretary has recently visited that Conference for the purpose of advice and consultation.—He was fortunate in meeting a goodly number of her enterprising men, in and out of the ministry, and the result of this consultation—including, however, a similar consultation with many others in other Conferences—is the above plan.

That the Alabama Conference will work up to it fully, promptly, and certainly, may, it is very confidently believed, be regarded as a thing settled and determined upon. And that other Conferences will approve it and lead off in its practical, working, can but be believed.

The above Plan has been carefully examined by the Book Committee, and approved.

R. ANDEY, Financial Secretary.

Publishing House, Nashville, Aug., 24, 1858.

THE SPIRIT OF '76.

When the news of the fall of Ticonderoga reached Exeter, John Langdon, who was the Speaker of the Provincial Legislature of New Hampshire, then in session, seeing the public credit exhausted, and his compatriots discouraged, rose and said:—"I have a thousand dollars in hard money; I will pledge my plate for three thousand more; I have seventy hogsheads of Tobago rum, which will be sold for the most it will bring. Those are at the service of the State. If we succeed in defending our firesides and homes, I may be remunerated; if we do not, then the property will be of no value to me. Our friend Stark, who so nobly maintained the honor of our State at Bunker Hill, may safely be entrusted with the honor of the enterprise, and we will check the progress of Burgoyne."

It is well known that from this noble offer sprang the gallant little army of Stark that covered itself with glory at Bennington. These were the deeds that make our history venerable, and consecrated the Revolution.

COUNSEL TO PUBLIC SPEAKERS

ABOUT MAKING APOLOGIES.

Speeches are of four sorts: Long and short, good and poor. By combining these qualities, four other varieties may be obtained: Short and good, long and good, short and poor, long and poor. Now as to the matter of apologies, ("I did not expect to be called upon," "I am not prepared to make a speech," etc.,) be it observed that a good speech needs none, a poor speech deserves none. In a long speech there is no time for apology, in a short speech no occasion. If a speech is long and good, the excellence will atone for the length—if it is short and good, so much the better. If a speech is short and poor, the brevity will make up, in part, for the bad quality. But a speech that is long and poor is only made longer and poorer by any possible apology.

The rhetorical treatment of apologies, then, should be like that recommended for preparing cucumbers for the table, i. e. slice thin in good vinegar, salt and pepper ad libitum, adding any other condiment you like, and then—throw the whole out of the window.

PRAYER IN THE FAMILY.

It is pleasing to find in private houses an altar raised to God. Nothing rivets family attachments so securely as meeting every morning to pray for each other, when every petty difference must at once be laid aside, and misunderstanding forgotten before the sun goes down. What can be more pleasing also than for the absent to know precisely at what hour they are remembered, with the supplications and blessings of an affectionate circle? While those who remain together can enjoy no greater solace than in following them with prayers, and uniting, on their own account, in the expression of every anxiety, or pleasure, or sorrow, which each shares in common with all the others. There is, indeed, no pleasure more to be prized than that of raising a family altar, where those shall daily assemble on earth, who hope hereafter to re-assemble in heaven, with not a wanderer lost!

HEALTH PROMOTED BY FAMILY MUSIC.

Music, like paintings and statuary, refines, and elevates, and sanctifies. Song is the language of gladness, and it is the utterance of devotion. But coming lower down, it is physically beneficial; it rouses the circulation, wakes up the bodily energies, and diffuses life and animation around. Does a lazy man ever sing? We never heard it. Does a milk-and-water character ever strike a stirring note? Never. Song is the outlet of mental and physical activity, and increases both by its exercise. No child has completed a religious education who has not been taught to sing the Songs of Zion. No part of our religious worship is sweeter than this. In David's day, it was a practice and a study.

HOLINESS.

No gifts, no duties, no natural endowments will evidence a right in heaven; but the least measure of true holiness will secure heaven to the soul. As holiness is the soul's best evidence for heaven, so it is a continued spring of comfort to it on the way thither. The purest and the sweetest pleasures in this world are the results of holiness. Till we come to live holy, we never live comfortably. Heaven is epitomized in holiness; and, to say no more, it is the peculiar mark by which God has visibly distinguished his own from other men—Ps. iv. 3, "The Lord hath set apart him that is godly for himself." As if he had said, This is the man, and that the woman, to whom I intend to be good forever: this is a man for me. O, holiness, how surpassingly glorious art thou!—Flavel.

PASTORAL VISITING.

There is a charm in the week day services of a parish minister which has not been duly estimated, either by philanthropists or patriots.—His official and recognized character furnishes him with a ready passport to every habitation; and he will soon find that a visit to the house of a parishioner is the surest way of finding access to his heart. Even the hardiest and most hopeless in vice cannot altogether withstand this influence; and at times, in their own domestic history, there are opportunities, whether by sickness, or disaster, or death, which afford a weighty advantage to the Christian kindness that is brought to bear upon them. His week-day attentions and their Sabbath attendance go hand in hand. It is thus that a house-going minister wins for himself a church-going people.—Dr. Chalmers.

A NOBLE REPLY.—An officer of distinction and valor refused to accept a challenge sent him by a young adventurer, but returned him the following answer:—"I fear not thy sword, but the anger of my God. I dare venture my life in a good cause, but I cannot hazard my soul in a bad one. I will charge up to the cannon's mouth for the good of my country, but I want courage to storm hell."

SYMPATHY.

Human happiness depends more upon the known and manifest sympathy of our fellow creatures, and especially of those to whom we naturally look for it, than upon any thing else either from them, and outside of ourselves. Such a thing as happiness without sympathy has never been known. It is frequently affected; but it is never effected. Those who have "retired from the world," to enjoy "the sweets of private life," have generally managed to let that same curious world find out the secluded places where they enjoy their solitude, and they, and their residences, and their occupations, generally become more famous than the lives and affairs of persons who have never sought to retire from the battle-field of life. The boasted doctrine of entire, self-reliance and self-dependence, is simply the fruitfully evil doctrine of utter heartlessness and selfishness, which "neither fears God nor regards man." The most perfect representative of humanity, "the man Christ Jesus," illustrated most convincingly, the inability of human nature to be independent of sympathy, when, in his extremity of agony, he both complained that his disciples "could not watch with him one hour," and that even his "Father had forsaken him."

All blessings have their attendant abuses and evils. The progress of civilization, in the contemplation of which, as a whole, all wise men must rejoice, has many evils; but the evil most to be deplored—most fundamentally wrong, and most vitally pernicious, is the diminution of human sympathy, and the increase of human heartlessness. Growing out of the simple habits and manners of earlier times, the world also grows out of the sincere loving-heartedness of those times. Just as the fresh spirit of childhood is in danger of passing away with the age of childhood. And this evil progress is the more insidiously dangerous because of its unnatural but real connection with the common idea of virtues most valued and most sought to be promoted. All those virtues that pass under the names of dignity, propriety, prudence, refinement, and the like, are constantly imitated in name, garb, and manner, by heartlessness, selfishness, cruelty. The worldly wit and wisdom which have become famous for the success with which they have passed off imitations, adulterations, and counterfeits, for genuine articles of value for the supply of the material wants of man, have been no less successful in alloying and debasing the moral and spiritual virtues.

This evaporation of the dews of our spiritual youth is manifest in all classes of society, and in all departments of life, both secular and religious. The natural tendency of human nature is, to become less grateful, humble, and sympathetic, as we become richer, more luxurious, and more knowing. The more enjoyments we possess, the less we remember the privations and sorrows of others. The more we have, the more we desire; and the less time, and patience, and heart, we have to think, to feel, and to act, in reference to the happiness of others. A hard, shrewd, wide-awake devotion to the "main chance" absorbs attention and interest.

Many deceive themselves by beautiful theories and poetic sentiments in regard to human sympathy, when, in fact, they have no felt and practical sympathy at all. They are generally quite oracular on the subject, strong in their denunciations of selfishness, and attractive in their portrayals of the sentiment of human brotherhood. But as to any active manifestation, by word or deed, of the spirit of kindness, where it is really needed, they are utterly deficient. Others, less heartless, make almost as great a mistake, by satisfying themselves on this subject with the sympathy they feel and manifest toward their own particular friends—those who are congenial to them—those who make it their interest to sympathize with them. When, in most cases, it may be true that those of their own chosen circle may have less need of their sympathy than any others. "What thank have we" from God, or from the suffering world he has sent us to bless, for this well-paying investment of our miserly hearts! Human sympathy, as God intends it, embraces human nature, in all its extent, and all its wants.

But the greatest of all the mistakes made by those who deceive themselves into the belief that they possess proper sympathy, is, that they fail to manifest any kindly regard for the happiness of others. The great power and blessing of sympathy lies in its manifestation. Not merely in charitably ministering to the wants of the miserable and suffering. This may be done, and yet no kindly sympathy exist. We may "give all our goods to feed the poor," and yet have it not. True sympathy, in its heartful manifestation, in considerate counsel, in friendly greeting, and in the utterance of kind words, to all we associate with, is worth more than gold. It is more precious than "frankincense and myrrh." All men and women are surrounded, every day of their lives, with hundreds, sometimes thousands, to whom a kindly recognition and greeting—an interest manifested in their welfare—a readiness to give counsel and encouragement—would be received and enjoyed as the greatest of blessings. Homes, unchecked by the visits of those who can do good, lie thick around us, into which we may enter, and take with us the sunshine of joy and hope. Souls, struggling with the waves of difficulty and trial, with heads scarcely above water and ready to go down, are plentifully strewed over the surface of the sea of life, to whom words of encouraging sympathy would be as the gospel of salvation. Minds there are, not as enlightened as ours, but panting for knowledge, to which the impartation of that which is familiar to us would cost but little time and trouble, which would receive such help as light from heaven. And then, in all these cases, and in thousands of a similar nature, appearing in the pathway of every man and woman, the investment is so small and easily made, and the products are so large and so permanent in value. And the value to the giver is greater than to the receiver. A life heart-full and overflowing with love and happiness can be enjoyed in no other way. A life that is lean in sympathy, is the leanest of all lives.

A TRIP TO THE COUNTRY.

On Saturday morning of week before last, at a quarter past seven, the buggy of a city friend stopped with us at the depot of the "New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern Railroad," on the way to assist, the next day, at the dedication of a new Church at Brookhaven, Mississippi, one hundred and twenty or thirty miles from the city. Having to wait fifteen minutes for the starting of the cars, one of the morning papers was made available in beguiling the time. But some body evidently thought a larger or better literary breakfast was needed, for he first pushed a tract, then a book, then another book, and then another, between our face and the paper, in such provoking style as to cause a look upward to see who it was that thus persistently offended against our "peace and dignity." He was a colporteur of some of the religious publication societies, and manifested sincere desire for our religious enlightenment. His faithfulness was worthy of all praise.

This incident was suggestive. What a great field, thought we, is this New Orleans, for the labors of Missionaries outside of the regular churches, and for colportage! Is the field properly occupied? Is there any thing like an adequate systematic effort to disseminate sound religious reading, and other religious influences, among the immense masses of the poor, the neglected, the careless, the ungodly, the degraded, of this great city? What is the Methodist Church doing in this behalf? Is she doing her duty? Is she acquiring the territory, the strength, the power for good, to be attained in this direction? Are her members interested and active, both for the salvation of these souls, and for the welfare of the city? Could not a little united and vigorous effort, and a little money spent by all, for this purpose, circulate the Advocate, the best of all tracts, throughout the city, both among those who would pay for it, and those to whom it should be gratuitously distributed? On both these plans, could not a thousand subscribers be obtained? Could not Sunday-schools be established, and the people be visited and prayerfully admonished and encouraged, and much good be done? These were our mental questionings.

Why is it that these tract distributors in cities are nearly always diminutive, or ill-favored, or inferior looking men? Men of the finest personal appearance, and of the most dignified and attractive address, it seems to us, should be chosen for this work. And they should firmly, politely, tenderly and earnestly address all whom they meet, and offer their books for sale with a courteous confidence, at once accordant with the worth of their mission, and calculated to win the favor of those addressed. Instead of this, we often see them skulking about as if ashamed, or putting on a hard, vulgar, repulsive boldness.

Why are not intelligent, active boys engaged in this work, in every city, town and village? They would delight in it; they would not be embarrassed, and would be more industrious in such work, than men. And they would be more attractive than men. Let them "cry" their books, and tracts, and periodicals, like the city news-boys do the daily papers. "Crying" the titles and merits of these publications would call attention, advertise the work, interest many a man in something to read, and double the sales made in the usual way.—Churches, in towns, could, in the beginning of the year, subscribe for ten, twenty, or fifty extra copies of the Advocate, paying cash for them at first, and send them round weekly by boys, sell them at a dime a-piece, give away some of them, get nearly, if not quite, enough money for the next year's subscription, circulate the Advocate more widely, do much good, and train themselves to systematic habits of usefulness. Try it. We will help you by such suggestions, from time to time, as may be necessary. In this way, by the co-operation of the preacher on the mission, circuit, or station, and some, or all, of the members, male and female, an immense amount of good might be done in a short time; whereas, as it is now, thousands are wasting their lives, asking the question, "How shall I be useful?" Let us hear from our friends on this subject, whether in the church or out of it. We are going to make the Advocate, after a while, a much larger and more beautiful paper; and while we thus labor, shall we not have vigorous help to circulate it throughout the land? But we must hasten to Brookhaven, the cars are about moving. The colporteur did not get us to buy a book, but he came near making us write one.

The rich swamp land lying along the Jackson railroad will one day be very valuable, and it is surprising to us that, so near New Orleans, it is not all in a high state of cultivation. There is great lack of energy somewhere. For many miles the road runs between Lake Ponchartrain on the right, and the Mississippi river on the left. After awhile, Lake Ponchartrain comes in sight, at intervals, affording quite a pleasant view. Then we cross Pass Manchac, connecting Lake Ponchartrain and Lake Maurepas, at the end near the latter, which is in full view, the former, at that point, not being in sight. Lake Maurepas is a beautiful little inland sheet of water, some twelve or fourteen miles across, with its shore, nearly all round, plainly visible, fringed with beautiful forest trees.

After running near fifty miles through lowland and swamp, we reached the pine woods, and passed, first, Panchitoula, Osyka, Tanchapaho, Amite, Magnolia, Summit, and then came to Brookhaven. All these are villages, of greater or less size, immediately on the railroad. We may not have mentioned them in proper order, and may have left out some others; but it matters not. Brookhaven is quite a handsome and growing place, with a good hotel, a substantial looking population, and a beautiful church, just built, and now dedicated. It cost near $4000, and was built by one man, a worthy brother Whitworth, whose "liberal soul deviseth liberal things."

Here we met Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall, Rev. Mr. Nicholson, the pastor of the circuit, and Rev. Mr. Wellborn, a local preacher. Other local brethren were present. Service was held on Saturday, at noon and night. On Sunday morning the dedication service proceeded as follows: Solomon's Prayer at the dedication of the Temple was read by the writer: 2. The 325th Hymn, commencing,

"Blow ye the trumpet, blow,
The gladly solemn sound,"

Was read by the pastor, and sung by the congregation, with hearty and devotional spirit. 3. The opening prayer was offered by Dr. Marshall; 4. The 122nd Psalm was read by Rev. Mr. Wellborn; 5. The 887th Hymn, commencing.

"I Love thy Kingdom, Lord,
The house of thine abode,"

Was then read by the writer, and sung by the congregation. 6. After which an appropriate and able sermon was preached by Dr. Marshall, from the text, "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to see the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple," closing with the utterance of the form of dedication. 7. The dedicatory prayer was then offered by the writer. A collection was then taken to lighten Bro. Whitworth's burden in building the house, which resulted in pledges to the amount of about $100, which, with what had been raised before, made about $1000. No doubt the citizens will help Bro Whitworth still more. In the afternoon Rev. Mr. Wellborn preached. At night the writer preached, penitents were called, several came, and three found peace with God, among them the head workman who built the church. Three or four joined the church, among them a promising son of Bro. Whitworth. Next morning the writer preached again, until compelled to cease by the approach of the cars which were to take him home. The meeting was to be continued, and good results are hoped for. We were most kindly entertained in the amiable family of Bro. Whitworth, kindly treated by all whom we met, got a lot of new subscribers, and got home to tea on Monday evening, well pleased with our visit.

THE PITTSBURG CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The Pittsburg Christian Advocate, of the Northern Church, aiming its shot at the St. Louis Christian Advocate, of the Southern Church, says:

A word about this "driving" negroes—these "cheerless huts," and the "allowance of a single peck of corn per week" for their subsistence. Are we to understand that the writer, endorsed by the editor, denies the above allegations to be true? They were not in the article of our correspondent, nor do we lay any stress on these incidents of slavery, for the reason that they are trifles in the catalogue of evils to which the slave is exposed. But is the St. Louis Advocate prepared to deny that the field hands of the South are driven from early dawn till late at night; that many have but "cheerless huts to sleep in;" and that they are—this class of slaves—"allowanced," and often "to a peck of corn per week?" We suppose these things are not so managed in Missouri; but the editor, we think, as well as ourself, has been farther South, and he knows every word of this to be true—not of all masters, for many are humane; nor of all slaves, for house servants, mechanics, and those hold by small slaveholders, are exceptions; but of thousands upon thousands of "men and women" this is a true picture.

That there are some inhumane masters, no man doubts. There are brutal husbands, and cruel parents, and grinding employers, the world over. But the relation of husband, or of parent, or of employer, is no more to be spoken against than if these exceptions did not exist. So it is with the relation of master. The Pittsburg Advocate knows these things well. It knows; also, that our most unfeeling masters are not Southern born. It knows that the Southern Churches, and Southern patriotism, and the best Southern society, are all in opposition to inhumane treatment of the slave. It knows that these noble sentiments, known almost exclusively in Southern minds, are supported by every interest of the slaveholder. It knows that unkindness to slaves is no where so odious as in the South. It knows that real practical sympathy for the negro, is exhibited almost exclusively in the South, while Northern people have the bitterest prejudices against the color, even while encouraging the running away, and robbery, of slaves. It knows that the Northern employers of white men, will not compare for kindly care of their employees, with Southern owners of slaves. It knows that slavery is the most benevolent system of labor on earth, and the only one adapted to the black. It knows that it is ordained of God. And yet it sins against both conscience and God's law.

AN EDITORIAL "PRISONER OF HOPE."

Our friend and brother, Rev. Dr. Lee, former editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate, and still editing until the editor-elect, Rev. Dr. Rosser, can get ready to mount the tripod, is weary of waiting, and longs for deliverance. Such preaching at camp-meetings as the Doctor will do after his "release." Hear him;

To say nothing of our own short-comings, we have had to bear, on our shoulders, the short-comings of about five thousand people! It is an intolerable burden. It hasn't broke our back, but it comes very near breaking the back of the office; and has quite broke our respect for the newspaper-paying character of the aforesaid five thousand people. The day of deliverance will soon be here, and then—circuit, station, or district—which ever God please, and the Bishop appoint—hail and welcome! Open your arms to receive a willing worker! How gladly we'll ascend from the tripod to the pulpit. Scissors, paste, original communications, marriages, obituaries, more copy, proof-sheets, and the (printer's) devil, and worse, delinquent subscribers, with Bills payable, anything-over-to-day—I'm short, hard-up, and all such stuff, we'll defy you to disturb the grateful toils of the day, or, as now, to sit like frightful ghosts on our pillow through the slow hours of the wakeful night.

Come and see us, Doctor, when you are free. A kind ex-editor furnishes; we think, wholesome suggestions.

OBITUARIES.

This is the first time, during our editorship, we believe, that we have ever ventured to say anything on this difficult and delicate subject. We say difficult and delicate, and so it is. The insertion, in our Church journals, of numerous and long obituaries, is a difficult matter; for such things are read only by the friends of the departed, and are almost wholly overlooked by the great body of readers. And in proportion as a paper is filled up by unreadable matter, is it rendered unpopular, and its usefulness curtailed. And the refusal to publish them is a delicate matter; for, written, as they are, under the overwhelming inspiration of love and grief, such refusal appears, to these bereaved, as cold and heartless. When editors insist upon short obituaries, or refuse, or shorten, long ones, it is conceived, by many, that they look only at their own convenience, and have no sympathetic appreciation of the condition and feelings of the bereaved. But this is both a great mistake, and a great injustice. They have well considered all the bearings of the subject. And, we ask our readers, is it not remarkable that all our editors are agreed as to the folly and injury of long obituaries? Ought not this fact to have some weight?

Why are these long obituaries desired?—They are read only by the friends concerned. To the readers outside of that little circle, the deceased was a stranger, and they take no interest in the obituary. It can be of no interest to the friends, for they have, already, felt, and uttered in sympathetic conversation among themselves, more than can ever be penned, by even the most eloquent writer. The truth is, long obituaries are but some of the evidences of that common weakness, not to say vanity, which leads most of us to imagine that we are of more importance in the eyes of the world than we really are. Hence, many people here those with whom they are in company with most minute accounts of their wonderful children, their remarkable family connections, their own astonishing histories, their personal characteristic dispositions, principles, and practices. Just as if such people and such affairs had not been as common as leaves in autumn from time immemorial.

Upon the same principle, long obituaries are written. The bereaved feel that none ever suffered affliction like unto theirs; when, in fact, every family has. They feel that their departed ones were never equalled; such a noble and affectionate husband, or gentle and loving wife, or manly and devoted brother, or beautiful and lovely sister, or such dear and excellent parents, or such sweet angels of children, or such valuable friends, were never before snatched away by the ruthless hand of death. But the truth is, all the bereaved in the land feel the same way. And why do we, in writing obituaries, enter into minute details of the sufferings of the poor deceased one; or of the grief, and tears, and prayers, and despair of the attendant friends, and relatives; or of the touching scenes that occurred around the dying bed, or of the kind attentions paid by neighbors and friends; or of the number of relatives and friends left to mourn? These things are connected with every death-bed, more or less, and every body knows it. Why tell what every body knows? And as no body reads these things but the friends of the departed, why tell them what they all know, and what most of them witnessed in person?

And why pour out, in impassioned language, our feelings in reference to such things, upon the ear of a world that is a stranger to us, and, that has no interest in what we say? Is it modest to thus cast the precious pearls of the heart's most sacred and loving grief before the multitude of this strange, pre-occupied, and unsympathetic world? The fewest words are most delicately honorable to the dead, and most creditable to our own hearts and heads. And the practice, which, it must be confessed, is becoming too common with ambitious, poetical, and untrained writers, of extravagantly eulogizing the dead, is one to be carefully avoided.

There ought be nothing, beyond the ordinary announcement of the death, but a simple statement, if it be so, that the person died in peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Thus:

"Mrs. A. B., wife of Mr. C. B., of G. F., died in great peace, at ——, Sept., —, 1858, aged — years. She had been a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for —— years."

You may write a column, and yet you cannot better the above. Will not our friends adopt these suggestions? This matter of long obituaries is becoming a great evil, and where it will end, and how it will end, cannot now be foreseen. Suppose long obituaries of all the persons who have died in New Orleans this summer had been sent to this paper. What could we have done? Remember another thing: The idea that persons have a right to the columns of our journals for the publication of what they choose to write in this way, be it ever so much, is all a mistake. Meditate on this matter, and act accordingly.

Send us all the obituaries, especially of those who die in the saving faith of the gospel. We desire them. Be careful in writing them. Let them simply state the facts, in as few and modest words as possible. Let there be nothing extravagant. Such obituaries are really beneficial. When it becomes known that this is the prevailing style and length, they will be more generally read, and will be a means of grace to all pious people.

Amalgamation.—We said in a recent article that the first thing necessary to make the black man a free citizen was to change his color. A writer in Zion's Herald favors amalgamation, evidently with the design, in part, to accomplish the social equality of the blacks through the "bleaching process," thereby admitting the difficulty we mentioned; though he contends it is not a natural but an educational one. Ridiculous! He argues that "the legal and social equality of the races" is the only tenable anti-slavery position. We trust anti-slavery men will unite with him on that "plank."

THE SCHOOLS.

CENTENARY COLLEGE OF LOUISIANA,

Has, of late, been fully noticed in this paper, in the communications of Rev. R. J. Harp, "Gamma," and the board of Examiners. But we wish to say, further, that there is no reason why Centenary should not become the great Methodist Male College of the Southwest. It has magnificent buildings, a fine faculty, a healthy location, in the heart of the country, refined social surroundings, and all necessary appurtenances. Why send our sons away from home? Send them to our own Centenary.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE,

Is a popular and prosperous institution, very eligibly located, at Mansfield, De Soto parish, La., under the conduct of an excellent faculty, offering every inducement for the patronage of those who have daughters to educate. Give our Southwestern women a home education, in the midst of our own associations, under our own skies, and fanned by our own breezes.

MARION FEMALE SEMINARY,

Is located at Marion, Ala., in the midst of one of the finest regions in the South, has an excellent faculty, and is quite prosperous. It is among the best of the excellent Alabama female schools. There are many good reasons, aside from the character of the school, why we should desire its prosperity.

FELICIANA FEMALE INSTITUTE,

Is located at the same place with Centenary College, Jackson, La., and therefore is peculiarly convenient to those who have both sons and daughters to educate. It is under the very best direction, and worthy of the largest patronage.

MEMPHIS CONFERENCE FEMALE INSTITUTE,

Is located at Jackson, Tenn., and has become a deservedly popular institution, with a highly popular president, surrounded by a fine community, having every appliance necessary to the culture and comfort of young ladies.

CENTENARY INSTITUTE,

Located at Summerfield, Ala., eight miles from Selma, has been very fully noticed of late in these columns. It has both a male academy, and a regular female college, both of long and high standing, and great success. It is in a beautiful village, in the heart of the planting region of Alabama, and offers high inducements to those who are seeking a place for the education of their boys and girls.

CLARKESVILLE FEMALE ACADEMY,

Located at Clarkesville, Tenn., has a large and able faculty, and has made large and thorough preparations to take care of the minds, morals, and bodies of the young ladies who may be sent there. It is in a pleasant city of five thousand inhabitants, on the Cumberland river.

COLUMBIA FEMALE COLLEGE,

Located at Columbia, Tenn., is an old, well established, prosperous, and popular institution, worthy of large patronage.

MOUNT HERMON FEMALE INSTITUTE,

Near Clinton, Miss., is prepared, in the way of faculty, location, and social advantages, to give a thorough and elegant education to the young ladies sent there.

LA GRANGE FEMALE COLLEGE,

Located in one of the most desirable towns in Western Georgia, with splendid buildings, and a faculty of high reputation, may be ranked among the very best institutions.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE,

Is in that beautiful town, Huntsville, the centre of that beautiful region North Alabama, has an able and experienced faculty, and is highly successful and popular.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE,

Macon, Ga., is the oldest female college, we believe, in the United States, and has become noted for the education of many of the first ladies in the South. It has lost none of its ancient worth.

TUSKEGEE FEMALE COLLEGE,

Tuskegee, Ala., has a magnificent edifice, an able, scholarly and elegant faculty, is located in a beautiful town, containing the best society, and is remarkably prosperous.

CHUNNENUGGEE FEMALE COLLEGE,

Under the lead of Dr. Ellison, son-in-law of Bishop Capers, is handsomely located on Chunnenuggee Ridge, Macon Co., Ala., and is in a prosperous condition.

EMORY AND HENRY COLLEGE,

Washington county, Va., has become one of the best male colleges of the South, and is happily located for the patronage of all the low countries, being in the up country of Virginia.

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY,

Florence, Ala., is in a prosperous condition, is well located in North Alabama, has an able faculty, and is one of our best institutions. It is old, well known, and has long had a fine reputation.

SCHOOLS AT BATON ROUGE, LA.

We have noticed these quite recently, through a communication from Dr. Young. The male school, under Prof. Magruder, and the female seminary, under Mrs. Read, have a fine reputation.

REV. DR. WILLIAM A. SMITH.

Rev. Dr. Rosser, in a letter to his paper, descriptive of a glorious camp-meeting in Buckingham, in which the power of the Holy Ghost was made manifest after the primitive fashion, says of Dr. Smith:

Dr. Smith was with us to the last year—preaching once every day, except Tuesday, which was devoted successfully to the interests of the College. He handed seventeen hundred dollars for the College. His preaching was the elaboration of the profound principles and doctrines of the Cross—alike convincing to the intellect and animating to the heart—both instructive and persuasive. The sound principles of mental philosophy, moral science, evangelical life, were fused with logical symmetry and force in a current of fire that transformed the whole mind into conscience. His course is a path of light and a single truth sometimes is evolved so clearly that it flashes through all life and time into hell or heaven. He is mighty in doctrine. The motion of his soul is logic on fire, and his appeals are powerful.

The great work of endowing Randolph-Macon College goes on prosperously. In the same paper Rev. H. B. Cowles reports over $1200 raised for the same purpose. The honor and usefulness of the Southern Church, as well as Virginia, demand that Randolph-Macon should be fully endowed.

WE CAN DO WHAT WE WILL.

Certainly: with the blessing of God, we can do what we will. Our church has already done a great many noble and liberal things. The laymen are going to furnish the Publishing House with a free cash capital of $200,000. We hope it will be done soon. The Methodists of Alabama are raising near half a million to build and endow a magnificent Southern University at Greensboro', and a fine College at Auburn, East Alabama. We trust they will succeed. The Methodists of Texas are raising $30,000 to establish their Depository and paper. We hope to see them succeed. Mississippi Methodists are raising money, on a large scale, for their Depository, and are already far advanced toward final success. Alabama talks of raising $25,000 for a Depository, and will do it if she tries. Missouri proposes to raise $20,000 for her Depository.

And already a large four-story building has been purchased, and is now occupied, in New Orleans, for an Advocate office, and by the House of the Publishing House at Nashville, from which the people and Depositories of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas, can be supplied with all our books conveniently, and at as cheap rates as anywhere. And now the North Carolina Methodists are proposing to raise money to buy a press, etc., for their Advocate. Virginia is following Randolph-Macon College. And, in addition to the colleges, high schools, publishing and depositories already established, schools and colleges are being built by our people over the country.

And, after awhile, when we get ten thousand subscribers, which we hope to have before long, we wish to have a new power and beautiful new type, to bring out an improved paper. And we have no doubt that some of our friends will give us encouragement in that important purpose.

We can do what we will. Look at what we have already done. And yet but a few comparatively, of our numerous people, have done these things. And they have got rich by it. They can, and will, do a great deal more. And those who have done nothing in this way, (and their "name is legion") will begin to wake up, and instead of struggling for years to accomplish small things, we will do great things in a short time.

We can do what we will, by God's blessing. Let us begin to believe it, and feel it, and act upon it. Whatever we see ought to be done, let the first one that finds it out, begin to work at it, without waiting for another. Co-operation comes with labor. The people have the means. God has given it to them. He has given it that we might establish his cause over this great country.

We can do what we will. And who can do more than the favored people of the country of which New Orleans is the centre. Whom has God blessed more? Where is there more wealth? Ought we not to have a paper correspondent in size, power, taste, and beauty with the city and the country? And shall we not find enough support to furnish such type and press for such a paper, and sufficient circulation to sustain such a paper when it is brought out? Yea, we feel assured of it. And we shall count upon it, if we need it.

What can we not do, if we will it in the name of Jesus, with an eye single to the glory of God? And life is too short to be wasted. "What thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Build a monument for yourself while you live; not of dead marble, but in some good work, that shall live in its power for good to the end of the world.

ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate commences its eighth volume with the issue of August 5th. Its circulation is large and increasing. The editor is in earnest, and rightly so, about the collection of its outstanding debts. He also favors the enlargement of the paper, so that it will compare favorably with any religious paper in the land. He says that it has commenced its operations in the West.

They are also moving in St. Louis to raise $20,000 for the independent establishment of the Depository. The plan is to place copies of a circular, immediately to be sent out, in the hands of all the traveling preachers, and that for the preachers to engage one or more persons in each class to present the subject to the members and friends of the Church, and ascertain what each and every one will give, and have the matter settled at once. On this plan, if faithfully carried out, says the editor, the subject may be brought before the whole Church in Missouri, and their response obtained in one or two months, as easily and as well as in one or two years.

WESTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

A correspondent of the Richmond Christian Advocate gives a stirring account of a friendly but well contested pitched battle between Southern and Northern Methodist preachers at the lower end of Monroe county, in which the Southern cause lost nothing, but gained much. Rev. S. Hargiss of the Southern Church, and Rev. Mr. Phelps of the Northern Church, were the speakers.

The same correspondent thinks the Western Virginia needs more attention than either Kansas or Rio Grande Mission Conference. There is a large and commanding territory yet unoccupied, and men are greatly needed for it. The Baltimore Conference would be compelled to give back were this field properly manned. Nineteen twentieths of the population are true Southern men, and when converted they will join the Southern Church.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

The deaths from this disease in this city for the week ending last Sunday morning, were 94, an increase of 46 over the week before.

Abel Stevens' History of Methodism, first volume, is advertised in another column, to be issued on the 20th of this month, and will be for sale at all the Methodist Depositories, North and South.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

News from our Home Work.

"To spread Scriptural Holiness over these Lands."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Bayou Pierre Circuit—

Rev. H. V. Johnson writes: "We began a meeting at Pisgah, on the 13th of August, and the Lord was with us. But on account of wet weather and bad roads the meeting was broken up, having lasted four days. Several mourners, three accessions. We'll have another meeting at Pisgah.

On the 21st of August we commenced a meeting at Pleasant Hill, which lasted nine days, and the Lord was with us in great power. Many sinners awakened, eleven souls converted, three professed the blessing of sanctification, and the Church greatly revived. There were at the altar the last evening 28 mourners.

On the first Sabbath of the meeting we called for a conference collection, and received $72 15. The last Sabbath we called for a missionary collection, which ran up to the handsome sum of $311 5. Thanks to the ministers who helped us. Bros. Thomas Owen, Brandbrack and Benjamin Jones.

Sea Shore Circuit—

Bro. Samuel N. Martin writes: "On a recent visit among friends on Biloxi River in the bounds of the Sea Shore circuit under the pastoral care of Rev. Joseph Nicholson, I had the pleasure of enjoying with them the benefit of a great and glorious revival of religion at Codville. Mr. Nicholson had a two days meeting, commencing on Saturday, August 21, and preached, but had to leave to attend to other appointments, leaving the management of the meeting in the hands of Rev. Wesley G. Evans, assisted by Revs. H. P. Lewis and A. Scarborough. The Lord in great mercy and power met with us. Sinners were awakened, and many came to the altar for prayer. The meeting was protracted till Sunday evening, 29th. The Church was greatly revived and strengthened, backsliders reclaimed, the cold-hearted stirred up, mourners comforted and converted. On the last day the house could not contain near all that came. I have enjoyed many revivals, but this was one of the best. The result of the meeting is, forty-seven additions to the Church forty-seven whites and three colored and about twenty happy conversions."

Warren Colored Mission—

Rev. P. E. Green, writes: "Since my last communication, we have had two good meetings. One we had to close because of sickness and the extreme hot weather, and thought two or three times we would have to close the other for the same causes. But, thank God, we could not close; for it seemed that God would pour out his Holy Spirit upon the people, just at the time we were about to close the meeting, and then the people would say, "continue." And in this way we kept it up for thirteen days. Thirty-five or forty were happily converted; 30 whites and 27 blacks joined the Church. Thanks to the kind brethren who helped us."

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Lawndesborough District—

Rev. A. S. Dickinson, P. E., writes: "I have just closed my third round on the district. There is a revival influence at nearly every point. The preachers are at their posts, and working for the salvation of souls; and thank God, their labor has not been in vain. There have been some 600 added to the Church on the district this year, and among them a great many conversions. We are succeeding well in reviving class-meeting; the most of the preachers are getting back to the old plan, to preach and hold class-meeting. I have adopted the plan of holding class-meeting, where ever I can, myself. I find it works well, consequently I am more than ever convinced that the preachers have class-meetings in their power they can kill them, or they can keep them alive and at work. God help us to get back to the place of our fathers on that subject."

Jones' Valley Circuit—

Rev. Francis Walker writes: "Since the third sabbath in July we have been engaged in holding protracted meetings. It has scarcely ever been our privilege to witness such signal manifestations of divine power. Near eighty have professed to find peace in God; a goodly number of backsliders have been reclaimed; and seventy-nine received into the Church. We are looking forward with a great deal of interest to our Pleasant Hill camp meeting."

Grove Hill Circuit—

Rev. W. H. Carter writes: "At several appointments God is gloriously reviving his work—converting sinners and sanctifying believers. We had a meeting appointed to be held in a schoolhouse near Coffeeville, and as soon as our Baptist brethren heard of it they heartily invited us to occupy their church. God was with us. Prejudice gave way. Many in the church and out of it were converted, and some few were sanctified. A dancing master, who had been to Bladen Springs to get some of the latest touches, waudered into our meeting and was happily converted. We have just closed a meeting at Hopewell, at which some nine or ten were justified, and several cleansed from all sin. God has blessed the doctrine of sanctification in this circuit. It is almost as common for persons—responsible persons—to embrace this blessing as pardon. One of our class-leaders at Mount Zion was opposed to it last year—would not read the 'Guide to Holiness,' although a good sister subscribed to it for him—said he did not know any body could be so good in this life, etc. One day last spring I went home with him from church. After dinner we took a walk into the grove for private devotion. God blessed us; and while his soul was happy in God's love, I said to him, 'Brother S. you ought to embrace the blessing of sanctification.' He replied, 'People would talk about it if he professed to be seeking sanctification.' I told him that was just what he needed. He said, 'Well, I do pray for it.' I asked him how he could pray for it when he positively refused to seek it? This he could not answer; and with tears in his eyes he gave me his hand and promised me never to rest until he obtained it. In a few weeks I met him again, when he exclaimed, 'Glory be to God! I have got the blessing.'"

Chunnenuggee Camp-Meeting—

Rev. S. Armstrong writes: "The camp-meeting on Chunnenuggee Ridge closed on Thursday morning last. It was decidedly good. Some fifteen joined the Church and as many perhaps professed faith in Christ. The membership was greatly blessed."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Sparta Circuit—

Rev. J. W. Hearn writes: "The good Lord has again visited this part of his moral heritage, and powerfully revived his work. A meeting, commenced at Soulo Chapel last Saturday, and closed last night, holding four days, which resulted in five accessions, and twelve conversions; and never have I seen such a revival in this Church. Owing to sickness, Bro. Crowson, P. C., could not attend.—The meeting was conducted by Bro. Hodge, of the Jackson Circuit, assisted by Bro. Goodgion, and O. Howel. If they could have continued there is no telling when the meeting would have closed. The work is rapidly reviving on this Circuit.

Literature, Education and Art.

SOME OF HARPER'S PUBLICATIONS.

We have received through H. D. McGinnis of this city, the following:

King Richard the Second, also King Richard the Third, both by Jacob Abbott. These works are charming in style, and well adapted to interest the young in the study of History. Also,

Memoir of Joseph Curtis, by C. M. Sedgwick. This work is similar in style and adaptation to the two above. Also,

Mensuration and Practical Geometry, containing tables of weights and measures, vulgar and decimal fractions, mensuration of areas, lines, surfaces and solids, lengths of circular arcs, areas of segments and zones of a circle, board and timber measure, centres of gavity, etc., to which is appended a treatise on the carpenter's slide-rule and gauging. By Charles H. Haswell. Also,

Fred Markham in Russia, or the boy-travelers in the land of the Czar, by W. H. G. Kingston.

Arts of Design, Miss Julia A. Spear.

The Ladies' Repository for September maintains the "good report" previously won by this excellent magazine. The engraving of the "Missionary Cemetery, Fu-Chau, China" is beautiful to the eye, and beautiful to the heart. The paper, by Dr. Wiley, on the same subject, is interesting. The Repository is large, well filled with attractive reading, and tasteful in appearance.

The London Quarterly Review for July, sent us by Leonard Scott & Co., New York, who also re-publish the Edinburgh, North British, and Westminster Reviews, and Blackwood's Magazine, has the following articles: Admiral Blake, an excellent paper—History of Civilization in England—Iron Bridges—Life of Wycliffe, a very interesting article, and full of valuable information—Professor Blunt and his Works—Shipwrecks—British Museum—British India.

The Atlantic Monthly for September is an exceedingly interesting number. If Phillips, Sampson and company, would let sectional politics alone, and maintain a catholicity is broad as their whole country, and as genial as the spirit of literature should be, the success of the "Atlantic" would no longer be a question. The genius and taste of this number are of a high order.

The Home Circle for September has the Autobiography of Unus Clericorum—Widow Burning in India—Thomas Arnold—The Crocus and the Narcissus—The Summerfield Stories, by Rev. R. A. Roung—Capturing a Lioness—The Age of Saracen Learning—Social Position of Woman—A Mother's Influence—Trials of the Infidel's Faith—Facial Expression—Power of Habit—Poetry—Editorial Department.

Trench on Bible Revision, in connection with some recent proposals for the revision of the New Testament. Such a work, at such a time, by such an author, cannot fail to be read by all who have any interest in the subject. This work has been sent us by Redfield, New York.

The Education of Woman: An address delivered before the Ault Female Seminary, Liberty, Miss., by Rev. W. C. Duncan, Pastor of the Coliseum Place Baptist Church, New Orleans. This is a beautifully printed pamphlet, the argument is able, and the style easy, chaste, and eloquent.

The Printer, a monthly newspaper devoted to the interests of the "art preservative of all arts." Henry and Huntington Publishers, 9 Spruce street, New York.

News from the Interior.

LOUISIANA—

The Black Tongue, according to the Opelousas Patriot, has appeared among the Choctaw Indians of Bayou Chicot, and among the deer.

Crops.—The Lake Providence Herald says the cotton is being greatly injured by army-and boll worm in Carroll parish. Rain in abundance had fallen. The Plaquemines Pilot informs us that the cane is destroyed by high water, on the right bank as far down as the lower limit of Deer Range Estate—otherwise, the crop is promising.—Planters are cutting the rice crop, which will be very large—in some places 15 barrels per acre, of a superior quality. Lemons are abundant—100,000 were sold in Buras settlement last week. Gloomy accounts of crops about Shreveport, so also in Bienville, and Rapides. Fine corn and cotton in Carroll.

Health.—The Plaquemines Pilot says that the yellow fever has appeared at several points in that parish. It was reported that several deaths had occurred at the Balize and Quarantine. Yellow fever was reported at Shreveport, but doubted. Many deaths have occurred in Opelousas. Quarantine had been established.

ALABAMA—

The Cotton Crop, in many counties, is represented to have suffered great damage from rust and boll worm.—Over 1000 bales cotton have already been received at Mobile. The Chambers Tribune fears that the cotton crop will fall short about one-half, owing to the "red rust."—The corn crop is made, and is doubtless the most abundant ever raised in Chambers.

The Mobile and Ohio Railroad, says the Tribune, is finished on the southern part 232 miles, viz: from Mobile to West Point, in Lowndes county in Mississippi. It is also completed through Kentucky twenty miles, and also southward into Tennessee twenty-four miles, making forty-four miles. It is also laid northward twenty-five miles, from Jackson, Tenn., making sixty-nine miles completed on the north. This, with four miles of the Columbus branch, makes the whole amount of road finished 301 miles. Eighty miles have been laid during the past year, being the greatest progress since the commencement of the work.

The Railroad Convention held at Decatur on the 18th ult., passed resolutions in favor of the construction of a Central Railroad from Montgomery to Decatur, crossing the North-east and South-west Railroad at or near Elyton, so as to make it necessible to and form connections with railroads from Selma and Tuscaloosa.

ARKANSAS—

Crops.—Corn, says the Fort Smith Herald, has been greatly injured by drought.

Politics.—In the First Congressional the vote for Hindman was 18,255; for his competitor, Crosby, 2863; Hindman's majority 15,498. In the Second District, Rust received 15,362 votes, Jones 3104, and Drew 3452. Majority of Rust over both his competitors, 9746.

KENTUCKY—

Politics.—Returns of the vote in ninety-one counties have been received, giving Revill 64,590, and McKee 51,199; Democratic majority 13,391. Eleven counties are yet to be heard from, which last year gave a Democratic majority of 750.

Health.—The Louisville Courier says that chills and fevers are very prevalent in that latitude.

Crops.—The Hopkinsville Mercury reports that the planters have begun to cut their tobacco. The worms are unusually destructive.

MISSOURI—

Health.—There were 148 deaths in St. Louis in the week ending on the 23d ult.

A mineral spring, said to possess rare medical properties, has been recently discovered near Lexington.

GEORGIA—

Crime.—Dr. Wm. S. Harden of Bryan county, was killed in his own house by his son-in-law, Thos. R. Pittman, on 26th ult. Eight negroes, and two white men who stole them in Williamson county, have been captured.

Atlanta and West Point Railroad.—The Atlanta Intelligencer says: "We have before us the Report of the President and Superintendent of the above named road, from which we learn that the receipts for the current year have been $292,999 09, and the expenditures $132,999 65, making the net profits for the year $160,089 44.

MISSISSIPPI—

Politics.—Official returns from all the counties in Missouri, except six, show the complexion of the Legislature to be as follows: House, Democrats, 81; Opposition, 41; Senate, Democrats, 24; Opposition, 9. The remaining counties will probably give the Opposition 6, and the Democrats 1.... At the Democratic Convention at Brookhaven on the 26th, to select a candidate for Congress to fill the unexpired term of Gen. Quitman, the nomination was conferred upon Ex-Gov. John J. Mellen.

Crops.—The Holmesville Independent, announces that the cotton worm, in great numbers, is devasting the crops in Pike county.... The intelligence from the country gives cheering accounts of the luxuriant and abundant yield of the corn crop, but serious doubts are entertained about the cotton crop. The boll worm had made its appearance in many places and is making sad havoc.

Health.—Quarantine has been established at Port Gibson, Miss. The yellow fever is in Vicksburg, and in Jackson.

TEXAS—

Minerals.—Marble, pure and white has been discovered three miles from Austin. The Bell county gold hunters in New Mexico have discovered rich beds of silver and copper, but too far from water.

Trade.—The great bulk of Chihuahua trade is being gradually turned through San Antonio, instead of going by way of Independence and Santa Fe, it having been demonstrated that this route possesses marked advantages over that one. These Chihuahua trains pass through San Antonio, or are fitted out from there, every few weeks. The wagons used in this trade are enormous affairs, and may well be denominated the "great ships of the prairie," since the commerce carried on by them is second only in quantity to the commerce of the seas.

Indians.—Some nine persons, in charge of a drove of six hundred head of cattle, with some thirty mules and horses, on their way from Texas to California, were attacked by Indians at Leona Springs, between Fort Lancaster and Fort Davis, on the 11th ult., and four of them killed and scalped, two Americans and two Mexicans. The Indians also stampeded the cattle, and got $950.

OHIO—

Politics.—The Republicans of the Twenty-first District have nominated the Hon. J. A. Bingham for re-election to Congress.... The Democrats of the fifteenth district have nominated the Hon. Joseph Burns for re election to Congress.

NORTH CAROLINA—

Education.—The State of North Carolina disbursed from its literary fund for the support of schools and for the education of deaf and dumb children, during the years 1855 and 1856, the sum of $396,665.

ILLINOIS—

The Canvass for U. S. Senator between Judges Douglas and Lincoln, Democrat and Republican, is waxing hot. Douglas will beat.

Personal.

Sir Colin Campbell is now Lord Clydesdale.

Rev. H. W. Collins, Presiding Elder of Detroit District, M. E. Church North, and member of the Cincinnati Book Committee, is dead.

Dr. Ariel A. Codley, the inventor of Lucifer matches, died at Hartford, Conn., on the 18th ult., aged 76 years.

Rev. Dr. McClintock returned in the Arabia in improved, but not in established health.

Dr. Samuel Bowman has been consecrated Assistant Bishop of the P. E. Diocese of Pennsylvania.

Bishop Hamline has recently given five valuable lots in Chicago for the endowment of the presidency of the Methodist University at Red Wing, Minnesota.

Jenny Lind, in a recent letter to an American friend, expresses "an earnest desire to cross the ocean once more."

The Right Rev. J. H. Otey, D. D., Episcopal Bishop of Tennessee, has consented to act as Missionary Bishop of Arkansas, a post made vacant by the decease of Bishop Freeman.

The Sultan has ordered the reconstruction of the Roman Catholic Church at Djidda, and that a monument shall be erected at his cost to the memory of the murdered French Consul and his wife.

A Gipsy Clergyman.—An extraordinary life is announced by the Rev. Richard Cobbold, a rural dean of the diocese of Norwich, (Eng.) It is that of John Steggall, a Suffolk man, who has been a gipsy, a sailor, a soldier, and is now a clergyman." Mr. Steggall is incumbent of Great Ashfield, near Ixworth, Suffolk, to which he was presented in 1832, and for which he receives the liberal emolument of £55 per annum.

Ole Bull.—The violin which Ole Bull uses in his concerts is of very considerable value. It was made in 1562, by Gaspard de Salo, by order of Cardinal Aldobrandi, (afterward Clement VIII.,) and is ornamented with chasings by Benvenuto Cellini. The cardinal gave the instrument to the Treasury of Inspruck; but in 1809 it fell into the possession of a French soldier, who sold it to Dr. Paganina, brother of the celebrated violinist, and he bequeathed it on his death-bed to Ole Bull.

Robert Dale Owen, the American Minister at Naples, writes a letter to the New York Freeman's Journal denying its report that he had become a Catholic. Without belonging to any religious body, he holds to the Unitarian doctrine, and says he is writing a work which, though not on the subject of religion, will satisfy his readers what his religious views are.

Local Intelligence.

The Charity Hospital report for August 16: Admissions, 1501; discharges, 916; deaths, 497; discharges of yellow fever, 232; deaths from yellow fever, 425. Of the deaths, 127 were Germans, 82 Irish, 57 French, 31 Prussian, 20 English, 12 each Swiss and Sardinian, etc.; of New York 11, of Pennsylvania 4, Massachusetts 5, Maine 0, Tennessee and Kentucky each 3; Delaware, Wisconsin, Illinois and Alabama, each 1; Virginia 2.

For the corresponding month in 1853, the deaths were 941; for 1854, 300; for 1855, 536; for 1856, 9; for 1857 no returns are given.

A Fire occurred on Wednesday by which Messrs Pierson & Harrison lost about $5000—insured for $31,000; H. W. Reynolds & Co., lost about $8000—insured, for about $10,000; Messrs Dunbar & Co., lost about $10,000—insured for $20,000. The buildings, belonging to Mr. Montgomery, were insured for $25,000. It is believed to have been caused by an incendiary.

A Stone Road to Carrollton is proposed.

A New Bank has been formed by the river in front of the Second District, to the great injury of the wharves.

A Cave into the river of nearly an acre of ground occurred on the right bank, on the plantation of Mr. Sauve.

Drs. Sinclair and Deschamp have fallen victims to the yellow fever.

The Jefferson City Wharves have been leased for eight years for $12,000, the lessees to build three entire new wharves.

Benjamin Franklin's Tomb, neglected in Philadelphia, the printers, telegraphers, and editors of New Orleans have determined to set a worthy example. But they have also set a bad example, by calling their meeting on Sunday. If no other scruple existed, which we are sorry to admit, the reputation of New Orleans should have had some weight.

The Very Latest Intelligence.

DOMESTIC.

The Telegraph.—Sept. 1.—The London papers censure the last paragraph of the President's Message to the Queen, as in bad taste.... Cyrus W. Field received a despatch from London informing him that the directors are on their way to Valentia, Ireland, for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements for opening the line to the public. The celebration in New York in commemoration of the successful completion of the Trans-Atlantic Telegraph was conducted in magnificent style.... The procession of military and fire companies of the city and from various neighboring cities, including Montreal, Canada, with numerous Societies of all descriptions, made an imposing appearance.... Thousands of people were present from the surrounding country, and everything passed off in the most satisfactory manner.... The grand banquet to the directors and officers of the company and those who have been engaged in accomplishing the great work was to be given by the municipal authorities.... September 2. Glowing accounts are given of the celebration in Philadelphia, which passed off in the most enthusiastic manner.... The Washington Union has a despatch dated "Office Atlantic Telegraph Company, Trinity Bay, August 27th," which communicates the annexed interesting intelligence: Lord Derby has signified his willingness for the Government to amend the charter of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, so as to place the United States and the British Governments on a footing of absolute equality.

Dr. Hostetter's Bitters have received the warmest encomiums from the press and people throughout the Union. As a valuable bottle for the cure of Dyspepsia, Flatulence, Constipation, and general nervous debility it cannot be approached. Every day new cases of its great effect are chronicled through our principal public journals. There is nothing equal to the enjoyment which the afflicted experience when using this valuable specific. Its mild tone, its sure and vigorous action upon a disordered stomach, and the cleansing of the entire human body, should recommend it to all classes of our community. All that will be necessary to convince the skeptical of its healthy effects, is to purchase a bottle and be convinced.

Save the Children!—Of the multitudes of children that die before they reach their twelfth year, three fourths are believed to be the victims of internal worms, or of diseases arising from that cause. A medicine like Wiser's Canadian Vermifuge, which will infallibly cure rapidly cure the disease, is therefore of immense importance to every family. It is extolled in the highest terms by the faculty, and at this time when the mortality among children is greater than was ever before known, it is not safe or prudent for any household to be without it. Believing that the frightful increase of deaths among children is mainly attributable to worms and the disorders they produce, we recommend this specific to all whose have charge of young families.

EDUCATIONAL.

GREENSBOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL.

REV. J. W. N. MEARS, A. M. M. D.,

PRINCIPAL AND PROPRIETOR.

IN this School a thorough course is laid out for pupils in the Classics, Mathematics, French and English, and young men desiring to enter the Freshmen, Sophomore, or Junior Class in "The Southern University," or any other College, will have every necessary facility afforded them for that object.

A commodious building is now in the process of erection, with suitable play grounds attached, and a most delicious shade. New School room Furniture, of the most approved kind, consisting of Desks, Settees, Chairs, Large Black board Slates, Maps, Charts, Paintings, and a Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, has just been purchased by the Principal in New York; and indeed every thing reasonable has been done to render the school room as comfortable and attractive.

The object of the Principal is to make the School what its name imports, A High School, where young men can prepare for College, or for entrance upon business life. Instruction, if desired, can be given in all Latin and Hebrew. Those having charge of the education of young men, would do well to investigate the claims of this School.

Provision has been made for a limited number of Misses, who will be placed in a separate department, under a competent and experienced Instructress. They will be taught all the branches necessary to a finished education.

The Principal desires to urge upon the consideration of those who intend to educate their sons to the Southern University, the propriety of placing them at once where they can commence a course of study which will be carried on during their collegiate career.

The second annual session will commence (Providence permitting) on the 1st of September, and will continue nine consecutive months, including the usual vacation. It will be divided into three terms of three months each.

The tuition must be paid at the middle of each term, or interest will be charged. The justice of this claim will be at once acknowledged, when it is recollected that the Principal has incurred great expense for the benefit of the community, and needs the prompt payment of tuition bills to enable him to meet it.

No pupil will be admitted for less than a session. Any injury done to the house or furniture, or premises, beyond the legitimate wear of it, will be charged to the pupil in whose care the desk, &c. is.

No deduction will be made for the absence of any pupil; if, however, any pupil is absent on account of sickness for more than a week, the place of the absentee may be supplied by another.

In case of the expulsion of any pupil, the relinquishment of the claim for tuition to be optional with the Principal. The full pay must of the tuition in such case will be made, positively required where the Principal is not satisfied that he has had the entire co-operation of parents to the full extent of parental authority, "in bringing the disobedient to the wisdom of submitting to the powers that be." The Principal will decide this matter. It is his determination to throw the responsibility on the department of his pupils upon their parents, where it belongs. Children trained properly at home, will, as a general rule, behave properly at school. For the good of society, idleness, obstinacy and malice should never find even a temporary home in the school-room. They are a Pandora's box, out of which spring a multitude of evils.

It is desirable that pupils commence promptly with the commencement of the session.

For further particulars apply to the Principal.

Circular of Feliciana Female Institutte.

THE Undersigned has purchased the premises formerly owned by Rev. B. Jones, in Jackson, La., where he intends opening a Female Academy.

His design is to establish a Seminary of learning, to which the best facilities will be afforded Young Ladies for a thorough education in all the branches usually taught, both useful and ornamental.

None but competent and thorough teachers will be employed.

The buildings are commodious and well adapted to the purpose.—The grounds are extensive and pleasantly situated. The location for health is unsurpassed by any in the state.

Discipline will be maintained with kindness and firmness, and a strict adherence to the rules of the school required.

Close attention will be given to the wants, habits and morals of the pupils, and a due regard had for whatever tends to form the character of the true christian lady.

Such rules and regulations will be adopted as the good of the school will require.

Jackson, La., is situated in the edge of the pine lands east of the Mississippi, 12 miles from Bayou Sara and 30 from Baton Rouge. It is the site of a Centenary College, and for health, comfort and educational facilities is not surpassed in the South.

The academic year will consist of but one session, embracing ten months, from the first Monday in October to the Saturday before the last Wednesday in July; the first session beginning on the first Monday in next October.

It is earnestly requested that pupils be present at the opening of the session.

TERMS—PAYABLE SEMI ANNUALLY IN ADVANCE.

Board, Washing and Lodging per session	$150 00
Tuition in Collegiate Department	50 00
Tuition in Academic Department	45 00
Tuition in Primary Department	40 00
Music on Piano, Guitar, or Melodeon (extra)	75 00
Instruction in the Latin, Greek, or French	20 00
Instruction in Drawing and Painting	20 00

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer the Little Children to come unto Me."

CHILDREN'S EDITORIAL.

Since writing the children's editorial for last week the editor has been into the country to Brookhaven, Mississippi, to help dedicate a new Church—and he is about one hundred and thirty miles from New Orleans and yet we started after breakfast, and got there by dinner! Railroad traveling is quick traveling. We have a new and beautiful Church at Brookhaven, and the people are exceedingly pleasant people. We left a revival going on there; several had been converted, the man who built the Church was the first one converted. We forgot to inquire whether or not they have a Sunday school at Brookhaven. We hope some of our little readers will write us a letter and tell us. They ought to have a very large one. They gave us about a dozen new subscribers for the Advocate. We hope all the children and young people who read the children's column will try to get every body to subscribe for the Advocate. Show the children's column your little friends, whose parents do not take the paper, and perhaps their parents will take it. Let every little boy and girl in the land try to do good in some way. Try getting people to read the Advocate is doing a great deal of good. Let every little boy and girl try to get one new subscriber apiece. Your mothers or some of your friends will help you. We hope to hear shortly that our little agents have been quite successful in this good work.

IS FRIDAY AN UNLUCKY DAY?

Americans, at any rate, have no reason to be afraid of Friday. Mr. Timbs gives us this catalogue of fortunate circumstances occurring on thursday—On Friday, August 21, 1492, Christopher Columbus sailed on his first voyage of discovery. On Friday, October 12, 1492 he first discovered land. On Friday, January 4, 1493, he sailed on his return to Spain, which if he had not reached in safety, the happy result would never have been known which led to the settlement on this vast continent. On Friday, March 15, 1493, he arrived at Palos in safety. On Friday, November 22, 1493, he arrived at Hyspaniola, on his second voyage to America. On Friday, June 13, 1494, he though unknown to himself, discovered the continent of America. On Friday, March 6, 1496, Henry VIII. of England gave to John Cabot his commission, which led to the discovery of North America. This is the first American State paper in England. On Friday, September 7, 1565, Melendez founded St. Augustine, the oldest town in the United States by more than forty years. On Friday November 10, 1620, the May Flower, with the Pilgrims made the harbor of Provincetown; and on the same day they signed the August compact, the forerunner of our present glorious Constitution. On Friday, December 22, 1620, the Pilgrims made their final landing at Plymouth Rock. On Friday, February 22, George Washington, the father of American freedom, was born. On Friday, October 7, 1777, the surrender of Saratoga was made, which had such power and influence in inducing France to declare for our cause. On Friday, September 22, 1780, the treason of Arnold was laid bare, which saved us from destruction. On Friday, October 10, 1781, the surrender of Yorktown, the crowning glory of the American arms, occurred. On Friday, July 7, 1776, the motion in Congress was made by John Adams, seconded by Richard H. Lee, that the United States Colonies were, and of right ought to be, free and independent.

I WISH I WERE RICH.

"I wish I were rich, I would buy everything," cried Charlie.

"The sun, moon and stars," inquired William.

"No; everything that can be had for money."

"That's not happiness," said William.

"Get your hat, Charlie, and come with me to Mr. Morrison's," said his father.

"I think you would like to live with him!" said his father.

"I, papa? I would rather live down in a coal pit.

"With him you would have all that can be bought with money."

"I recant; I see it won't do," said Charlie. "Health cannot be bought with money."

"Nor good temper, nor friendship, nor Life," said William.

"Above all," added their papa, "the favor of God can not be bought with money. Be content with as much of it as God gives, and seek to use it aright."

"The fear of God and sweet content, Yield riches that will ne'er be spent."

THE POLITE BOY.

The other day we were riding in a crowded car. At one of the stations an old gentleman entered, and was looking around him for a seat, when a lad four or twelve years of age, rose up, and said, "Take my seat, sir." The offer was accepted and the infirm old man, sat down. "Why did you give me your seat?" he inquired of the boy. "Because you are old, sir, and I am a boy," was the quick reply. The passengers were very much pleased and gratified. For my part, I wanted to embrace the little fellow and press him to my bosom. It was a respect for age which is always praiseworthy.

Where a boy or [illegible] more respects than one, it is a sure sign that they are evil in more respects than one. We once saw a lad run after a lame old man in the street and hoot after him; but he was known as one of the worst lads in the village. He would swear, disobey his parents, rob orchards, and do other things equally bad. We feel quite sure that the polite boy in the cars never used wicked or vulgar words. His parents probably can trust him.—Child's Paper.

TRY.

There was once upon a time a good little dwarf named Try, who was so powerful that he undertook almost everything he attempted; and yet he was so small and ill-favored, that people laughed when they were told of his wondrous powers. But the tiny man was so kind at heart, and loved so much to serve his unfortunate fellow-creatures, that he would go and beg of those who knew him better to intercede for him, so that he might be allowed to help them out of their troubles; and when once he had made them happy by his noble deeds they no longer despised him or drove him from them with sneers, but loved him as their truest friend. Yet the only return this good dwarf sought for all his services was Ask! which they heard of any one who wanted a helping hand they would say a good word in his favor, and recommend them to—Try.

NAKED TRUTH.

A late eminent and eccentric Lawyer, in one of his addresses to the jury, explained the meaning of this phrase by relating the following fable, worthy of old Esop himself: "Truth and Falsehood, traveling one warm day met at a river, and both went in to bathe at the same place. Falsehood coming first out of the water, took his companion's clothes, having his own with contempt and went on his way. Truth coming out of the water sought in vain for his own proper dress; disdaining to wear the garb of Falsehood. Truth started after her in pursuit of the third, but not being so swift of foot has never overtaken the fugitive; and her name has been known as 'Naked Truth.'"

A MUSICAL CAT.

A short time since the wife of a tradesman in Nottingham, England, arose at an early hour, and was rather surprised to hear the notes of a pianoforte. She proceeded to the sitting room, but found no person there, and had scarcely left the room before the playing again commenced, even louder than before. Ascending quietly down her steps, and, peeping through the half-opened door, beheld the cat, apparently much pleased, gravely striking the notes of the piano with his fore paws, he having risen and resting on a chair in front of the instrument.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

WHAT IS HOME.

Home is not merely four square walls
Though with pictures hung and gilded.
Home is where the heart has treasures
Home is where the heart is found.

Home is not merely roof and room,
It needs something to call it;
Home is where the heart can bloom;
What e'er home will be, it must be
Home is where affection calls it.

Home is where the smile and welcome
Meet us when we come to it;
Where the fireside is the brightest
Where the voices sweetest greet us.

Home is where the heart is happy,
Where the children's prattle cheers us,
Where the sunlight ever dances
Where the fireside ever shines.

THE DYING MOTHER AND THE BIBLE.

An affecting story is related of a young sailor who died on board a whale ship in the South Atlantic. James Baldwin, such was his name, had been carefully reared, but impelled by a strong love of adventure and a ardent desire to see the world, had gone to sea. The ship had been [illegible] preparations complete, and was ready to sail, when James received a letter from his mother, which induced him to remain at home. The ship touched at Madeira, and at the Azores, and reached Lahaina. He had been ashore at Rio and Cape Verd Islands, and clambered up the rocky sides of one of the Falkland Islands, and he felt deeply his mother's loss, and heard the cordial welcome of friends at home, and saw their look of wonder, and heard their words of astonishment as he showed the shells and related his adventures. He had been absent two years, and was eighteen when he returned. He found the whole of the middle wall in the parlor [illegible] on partaking with enthusiasm the words the anticipated meeting and the scenes which would occur at home. Poor fellow it was only a waking dream with him; he never saw his mother again in this world.

The next day we went [illegible] towing down the coast. It was a rough sea, and the ship pitched high, so as to find it hard and dangerous work to handle the casks of oil. The last cask was stowed and lashed, and in ten minutes more the hatches would be down. Baldwin stood on the cask, inside the hatchway and was passing a few sticks of wood through amongst the water casks, when the vessel rolled deeply to the leeward, a cask of water broke from the lashings at the weather rail, and tumbled into the hatchway where he stood, and in one instant both his legs above the knees were literally jammed to pieces. The bones were broken into splinters.

We took him into the steerage, and did the best we could to bind up his broken limbs, and make him comfortable; but we knew, and he knew that his days were numbered. He must die. That night, as I sat by his berth and watched with him, he was constantly calling, "Mother! mother!" O! it was heart rending to hear him in his delirious ravings calling "Mother! mother!" and then he would weep like a child because she came not. In the morning watch, he grew calm, and spoke rationally to me. After giving me his parents' address and a message for them, he slept a little while. When he awoke he bade me go to the forecastle and open his chest, and under the fifth chest find his Bible. I brought it to him, and he opened it at the blank leaf, and looked long and eagerly at the name. His mother had given it to him when he left home, and on the fly leaf was written by her hand, "Presented to James Baldwin by his mother, Sarah Baldwin."

"Now read to me," said he, handing me the book.

"Where shall I read?"

"Where it tells us how to get ready for heaven."

I felt bewildered, and knew not where to read; but opening the book at random, my eye fell on the fifty-first Psalm, and I read to him from that Psalm till I came to the tenth verse. "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."

"Hold, there! That is just what I want," said he. "Now how shall I get it?"

"Pray God to give it to you for Jesus' sake," I suggested. "O, yes, Jesus is the Saviour. Shipmate, it is an awful thing to die; and I've got to go. O, if mother was here to tell me how to get ready!" and he trembled with earnestness. After a short pause, during which he seemed to be in deep thought, he said: "Do you know of any place where it is said that such sinners as I can be saved?" I quoted 1 Tim. 1: 15, "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief." "O, shipmate," said he, that is good. Can you think of any more?" I quoted Hebrew 7: 25, "He is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." "That's plain. Now, if I only knew how to come to God."

"Come like a child to its father," I suggested.

"How's that?"

"As the child tells that his father can help him in danger, so you are to tell God can help you now. And as the child trusts his father by saying to him, so you must trust Jesus by casting yourself upon him."

He lay a little time engaged in earnest pleadings with God, as was evident from the few words I overheard. Then the tears began to run down his face, his eyes opened, and a bright smile played like a sunbeam over his features. "He loves me, and I shall be saved," he said, with a voice like the sound of a flute for sweetness. The day dawned, then the sun arose in all splendor on the ocean. I felt his head to grow cold, and felt the death thrill, then he gathered all his energies to say, "He has come, said he, echo, he whispered, and he fell asleep.

On spoke the noble ship, it [illegible] bells in the afternoon, and then we laid the [illegible] to the mast, and buried [illegible] lovely corse in the [illegible] in the deep, deep sea.

THE LOST OPPORTUNITY.

Two or three years ago a young girl came to live in my family. She was amiable and faithful in all the relations of her duties towards us. But, as I soon discovered, was not a Christian. She had, while yet a child, during a season of unusual religious interest, united with a church, and for a time had given evidence of Christian life. As she grew older, however, and left her father's home and its religious influences, she gradually [illegible] to the world, and its pleasures, [illegible] to grow more and more absorbed in them, and to lose the power of religious enjoyment. Such is often the case with those who [illegible] Christian ordinances.

During a conversation on the subject of personal religion, I unexpectedly drew from her the little story of her early experience. In this moment of confidence how easily could I have [illegible] her prayers, have kept [illegible] over the good work which [illegible] had commenced in her soul, and led her to the feet of Christ. But the [illegible] which [illegible] whispered to me, that [illegible] away; that [illegible] shall be saved [illegible]

A GREAT ENTERPRISE!

Surely never was there in all the history of the Church a time so propitious as the present for the prosecution and accomplishment of great undertakings. Never, since apostolic days, has there been a more deep, a more widely prevalent, a mere divinely approved work of heavenly grace, than now pervades this entire land. From North to South, and from the Pacific coast to the shores of the Atlantic, the shout of victory rings along the serried ranks of God's anointed hosts. The Pentecostal revival, with its cloven tongues of celestial fire, can alone furnish an archetype of this great awakening. The dawn of millenial day seems streaking with its coming glories, the horizon of a moving, heaving, christian world. What time then, I say, so auspicious for the undertaking and accomplishment of great enterprises! Feeling the conscious strength of a good cause, and the inspiriting influences of this most gracious season; bearing with me the sanction of the Alabama Conference, and appealing to the aroused sympathies of a rich, generous, and liberal community, I greet, in this paragraph, my brethren in the kingdom and patience of Jesus, and confidently announce a mission, which need but be known to be appreciated, commended and assisted.

I am the Agent of the Tuskegee Female College. And now that I may the more readily reach your hearts, influence your judgments, excite your benevolent feelings, enlist your sympathetic co-operation, and receive help out of your abundance, I beg you to consider for a moment

HOW IT BEGAN!

In the year 1852, the Rev. C. C. Gillespie was stationed in Tuskegee, county of Macon and State of Alabama. To him, as I learn, is due the credit of originating the great enterprise of which I am the humble advocate. The Baptists, moved by a worthy zeal, had succeeded in erecting and starting in Tuskegee an Institution, whose high standard of scholarship, excellent management, and successful history, reflect great credit upon their liberality. At that time, there was no Methodist Institution of similar grade, with equal facilities for imparting the highest intellectual training to young ladies, in Eastern Alabama. The demand for such a College seemed imperative. There was ample field for two Institutions to cultivate in the spirit of christian emulation; there was in the community a disposition to foster such an enterprise. Brother Gillespie had the energy, the perseverance and the address to start the undertaking. Attention was invited to the subject; public opinion sanctioned it; popular sentiment was aroused in its behalf; a liberal spirit seized the friends of education; meetings were held, encouraging speeches were made, subscriptions were preposed; units multiplied grew to tens, tens expanded into hundreds, hundreds swelled to thousands, and soon the cheering intelligence was announced that sufficient means had been procured to justify the projectors in entering into active operations for the consummation of their plans. Ample, beautiful, healthful grounds were purchased; an architect was engaged; a model of great architectural beauty was secured; contracts were let; workmen were employed; and upon the 22nd. day of February, 1855, in the presence of a large concourse of people the corner stone of the present edifice was laid, with appropriate and impressive Masonic rites, with songs and prayers, and an eloquent oration from the lips of the Hon. H. W. Hilliard. And so the great enterprise began.

HOW IT WENT ON!

As the house grew towards completion, men marvelled at its beauty. Five stories high, one-half underground, surrounded by an open area, with its beautiful front, its great Norman tower, its half Gothic windows, its fine doorway, its long halls, its elegant rooms for recitations, its art gallery, its splendid chapel, its finest school hall in the southern country, its commodious airy bed-rooms, and its broad stairway, it stands to-day without a superior for beauty, tastefulness of structure, capaciousness, convenience of arrangement, and adaptedness to the wants of a great Institution of learning.

In furnishing this edifice with suitable fixtures, no expense has been spared to render its facilities equal to the demand of the public spirit that caused its erection. The Trustees had meanwhile provided for the organization of the College, a Faculty of Instruction whose names are well known to East Alabama, while some of them enjoy a reputation co-extensive with the South.

The President of the Institution is the Rev. A. A. Lipscomb, D. D., a christian gentleman of the finest scholarly culture, a powerful pulpit orator, a profound thinker, an admirable lecturer, and an experienced teacher.

With him they associated Rev. M. S. Andrews and Rev. G. W. F. Price, while all the departments of the Institution were filled with persons of acknowledged ability.

The first fragmentary session of the College opened upon the 11th February, 1856, with a degree of success perhaps without a parallel in the history of similar enterprises. One hundred and eleven pupils were enrolled during the first irregular term of its operations. The first regular collegiate year began October 1, 1856. So firm a hold upon public sympathy had this youthful candidate for popular favor, that immediately its halls were crowded with applicants for admission; the boarding department of this Institution was filled to overflowing, and within about twelve months of its organization more than two hundred and fifty pupils had entered the various departments of the College. Did I not justly entitle it a great enterprise, I do not know a case of more sudden, rapid, and substantial growth, in the history of Female Colleges.

Nor do these statistics fully exhibit the surprising degree of interest which this flourishing Institution excited in the popular mind so immediately upon its erection. I have been informed that nothing was wanting except enlarged means of accommodation to carry the number of pupils much above what appears in the first annual catalogue. Many were turned away from the crowded rooms of the boarding department, who declined on that account to enter the Institution. Many others were deterred from applying for admission to the College because the already exhausted capacities of the building forbade their securing places in the College edifice. It is the opinion of the President, that had not these causes interfered with its expansion, the number of pupils would have reached, perhaps, to three hundred, within the first eighteen months of its opening.

And thus this great enterprise went on.

"DR. DRAKE ON THE QUARTERLY REVIEW."

Mr. Editor: I was surprised when I read, under the above caption, in a recent copy of your paper, a communication from my old friend Dr. Drake. There is some "tall talking" about an "able committee," "death warrant," "reversing deliberate decisions," "enemies of the Quarterly," "execution of a favorite friend," "discretion," etc. All this is based upon something which the Doctor saw in the Nashville Christian Advocate, a short time since. He says he "noticed from the Book Agent a publication notifying the public, that if three thousand paying subscribers did not come in by the first of September, the Quarterly Review would be discontinued."

Will Bro. Drake please tell us in what issue of the Nashville Christian Advocate he noticed this publication? I have not had the good or *mis*fortune of seeing such publication. The Agent did, in the Christian Advocate of July 1st., publish as follows: "We are anxious to retain the Quarterly Review, in the Church, but it will be discontinued at the end of the present year, unless it meets a better support than heretofore. If we can procure three thousand paying subscribers at $2, by the first of December next, we will issue the volume for 1859. Surely that number can be easily obtained. If every traveling preacher will subscribe for it, and procure one additional subscriber, the work will be done and the Quarterly will be continued, and will be greatly improved in several respects; because we shall have the means of improvement. It ought to have five thousand paying subscribers, and will have if each will do his duty."

Now what does the Agent say in the above. 1. That he is anxious to retain the Quarterly as one of the publications of the Church. 2. That it will be discontinued if not better sustained than heretofore. So ordered the General Conference. 3. That he wants three thousand subscribers by the first of December next. 4. If he can get that number, the Quarterly will live and be improved. 5. That number can be easily procured. 6. That we ought to have five thousand subscribers.

If we can get two thousand paying subscribers we can publish the Quarterly, but with three thousand, we can greatly improve it. The Agent named the first of December, because by that time most of the Annual Conferences will have met, and will be able to report.

The Agent knows of no one who is an enemy to the Quarterly; all, so far as he knows, desire to see it live and prosper; but if a Church with half a million of members, will not sustain it, the present Agent will not sink the funds of Church in sending it gratis to those who are able but will not pay.

Brethren who wish to criticise the official acts of the Agent, will accommodate him, by considering well the text, before writing the commentary. Very respectfully,

J. B. McFERRIN.

REPLY TO WATCHMAN.

COLUMBUS FEMALE INSTITUTE.

Mr. Editor: I have been repeatedly inquired of at home and abroad whether a certain communication in a late number of your paper, over the signature of "Watchman," had any application to, or was intended for, the Columbus Female Institute. The said article—as well as I new remember—recorded the fact that the writer thereof had understood that there was a certain Female College in Mississippi, presided over by a Methodist, in which dancing was regularly taught—perhaps by a dancing master. The Alabama and Mississippi Conferences were exhorted to be on the alert for such "wickedness in high places."

In answer to the interrogatories which have been put to me on the subject, I reply that I do not know for what institution the allusion was intended; but I do know that it has not, and never will have, while I am connected with it, any applicability to the Columbus Female Institute. Dancing is not taught here, nor anything which bears the semblance of it. The efforts of all our teachers are directed to the imparting of more valuable and genuine accomplishments.

I am glad to be able to inform you that our institution is in a very prosperous condition.—It has doubled the amount of its students in one year and is now one of the largest Female Colleges in the United States. We attribute our success, under Providence, in part to the liberal salaries we pay our teachers, thus enabling us to retain the service of the best, and in part to the healthfulness and beauty of the locality. Other causes contribute, but these are prominent. Respectfully and fraternally,

Columbus, Mi. B. F. LARRABEE.

JEERS FOR ARGUMENTS.

I heard an anecdote told recently of a preacher, of a nameless persuasion, passing a grocery shop or bar-room in town. He saw a set of boys trying to keep time to an old fiddle. Priding himself upon his grace of motion and skill in a dance, he proposed to show the boys the step, and while so doing was seen by a member of his Church. He was duly reported and brought to trial. He denied the charge of dancing. A bro. Thomas rose to make a speech against the preacher. "Bro. Prime," said he, "if you was teaching school, and was to set a copy for a child to write after, would'nt you call that writing? Or, if you had a boy that was old enough, but had never ploughed, and you was to take the plough-handles and run a furrow to show him how, would'nt you call that ploughing?" Upon which bro. Prime rose and said, "Bro. Thomas, if I could'nt talk with any better sense than that I would'nt talk at all." The discomfitted bro. Thomas took his seat and never opened his mouth after, during the trial. The Rev. Mr. Prime was acquitted by the Church, for his skill in answering an argument.

There is a moral in this anecdote. It is easier to jeer at some arguments than to answer them; and very frequently skill at jeering is more admired than skill at argument. The public speaker who cultivates a sarcastic style is disposed to resort to such tricks; and though success may, and is often won by this method, yet it is far better, however much may be at stake for the cause of truth, that he be defeated than gain his point by use of sophism or ridicule, if he be in the wrong. In the end nothing is gained though he succeeds; rather much is lost. The bold and confident often overbears the man of modesty and good sense; but the victory thus gained is short lived. Truth will have its triumph, and terrible to the sophist is the retribution.

The scripture speaks of some men whose works will be burned up, but they themselves saved as though by fire. Of another class whose works will follow them and attest the truth, purity, and efficiency of their lives. It is for each of us to elect which of these classes we will belong to. If our boldness and confidence grow out of a profound conviction and a clear apprehension of the truth, we can be bold and confident, and error will retreat from the presence of truth. That man can build securely who lays his foundation in truth; not so the man, however zealous he may be and good his cause, who deals in illustrations and anecdotes; the truth of which he does not know, especially if the subject illustrated be equally obscure to his mind.

"Buy the truth." An article of such inestimable value will cost the possessor something, and he will knew how he came by it; and if truth is to be valued for its cost, so likewise and for this same reason it should not be sold for a trifle. He sells it for less than a trifle who abuses it for momentary success. That man ought to repent in sackcloth and ashes for years who had so little reverence for truth, in whatever form or however homely a garb, as to abuse it and desecrate it with sarcasm, ridicule or sophism. Gold is valued wherever found, and whether in particles or lumps; so truth should be reverenced, whether it kills or makes alive. Modesty is an appreciable merit, where subjects are in issue; but where truth is obvious—clearly discerned—then modesty should rise into confidence. This I think is the highest form of eloquence especially for the pulpit.

COMPRESSION IN ORATORY.

Eloquence, we are persuaded, will never flourish in America, or at home, so long as the public taste is infantile enough to measure the value of speech by the hours it occupies, and to exalt copiousness and fertility to the absolute disregard of conciseness. The efficacy and value of compression can scarcely be overrated. The common air we beat aside with our breath, compressed, has the force of gunpowder, and will rend the solid rock, and so it is with language. A gentle stream of persuasiveness may flow through the mind and leave no sediment; let it come at a blow, as a cataract, and it sweeps all before it.

It is by this magnificent compression that Cicero confounds Catalina, and Demosthenes overwhelms Æschines; by this that Mark Anthony, as Shakspeare makes him speak, carries the heart away with a bad cause; by this that Lady Macbeth makes us, for the moment, sympathize with murder. The language of strong passion is always terse and compressed; genuine conviction uses few words; there is something of artifice and dishonesty in a long speech. No argument is worth using because none can make a deep impression that does not bear to be stated in a single sentence. Our marshalling of speeches, essays, and books according to their lengths, deeming that a great work which covers a great space—this inordinate appetite for printed paper, which devours so much and so indiscriminately, that it has no leisure for fairly tasting anything—is pernicious to all kinds of literature, but fatal to orutory. The writer who aims at perfection is forced to dread popularity and steer wide from it; the orator who must court popularity, is forced to renounce the pursuit of genuine and lasting excellence.—Westminster Review.

A rather plain spoken clergyman once took for his text this passage in the Psalms: "I said in my haste, all men are liars."

Looking up apparently as if he saw the Psalmist standing immediately before him, he said:

"You said so in your haste, did you, David? Well, if you had been here, you might have said it after mature reflection."

LETTER FROM GREECE.

ATHENS, May 5, 1858.

We felt that we were near the ancient city which once held its intellectual pre-eminence over the whole world, and still retains its power in beauty and refinement of taste, in poetry and the fine arts. With modern Greece we had no particular associations or expectations, but were most agreeably disappointed in finding such a pleasant European city, with handsome houses, wide, clean streets, and a hotel with every comfort we could desire. And though all was modern, it did not detract from the splendor and magnificence of its ancient ruins, which stand out in bold relief in their elevated positions to meet the eye wherever it turns, "lovely in their age of woe." Its monuments, though few in number, are magnificent beyond description. They fill the mind with all that is lofty, great and grand in the grasp of thought, and with all that is beautiful, refined and chaste in the cultivation of taste in its most classic style. We drove to the Acropolis soon after our arrival, but did not ascend its height, but entered the lower part, the amphitheater, and saw a headless statue of Herodes, placed in a niche, which had only been excavated from its ruins a few days. The figure was almost entire, graceful in form and attitude, holding a drapery in the left hand, which passed over the shoulders and around the waist, falling with that ease and elegance, in graceful folds, at the side, which set off the figure peculiar to the Grecian costume, without destroying the symmetry of shape. They were still searching for the head among the rubbish, in hopes of finding it.

We drove round to the temple of Jupiter Olympus, with its fifteen Corinthian columns still standing, 55 feet from the pavement to the top—one having been blown down by a storm; but there it lies in its ancient grandeur, carefully preserved for future generations to see, fenced in with its beautiful blocks of marble, separated, torn asunder in glorious confusion to show what it had been in its day of splendor. We stood upon the ancient wall of Athens, which overlooks the river Ilissus, with its poetical associations, to contemplate this mighty temple, commenced in the reign of Pisistrates, in the first dawnings of its glory, and not finished until the reign of Hadrian, 650 years afterwards. The magnificence of this structure can only be judged by the beauty and splendor which surround it, now in its fading glory. The site of this temple is in perfect harmony with the landscape around, with the Ilissus rolling along in the valley beneath, walled up on one side to a considerable height, where we stood, with that endless variety of scenery on all sides peculiar to Athens. The ground over which we walked was literally covered with little flowers, and we could not step without treading upon their delicate petals, which filled the whole atmosphere with their fragrance, and we appeared to walk among the

"Odors of Paradise."

They had entwined themselves among the marble columns and wreathed the pedestals with their tiny forms, and embedded themselves in the broken pavements, nestled among their cracks, breathing a perfume so sweet as if to sympathise with scenes of departing glory.—Near this temple is the arch of Hadrian, through which it is entered. Nothing striking about it either for elegance or grace; interesting only for its antiquity. The tomb of Lysicrates, between it and the Acropolis, was truly interesting, being one of the first specimens of Corinthian architecture. It was built the same year that Alexander invaded Persia. The prison of Socrates was shown us, where tradition says he was confined—a circular arch, bell-shaped, hewn out of a rock in the side of a hill—a square chamber in one side of it, where our guide told us he slept. Upon the summit of this hill stands the monument of Philopappus. This is called the museum hill, in which their excavations are made: stairs hewn in the rock, and traces of the foundations of houses; also, indications of ancient walls, leading down into the valley in the direction of the Ilissus. The temple of Theseus we visited in this drive, still standing as a relic of ancient grandeur, more perfect in form than any one in Athens and considered one of the finest specimens of architectural beauty of the old Grecian world. It has been shaken by an earthquake and one of its columns jostled out of its perpendicular position, but not destroyed—the blocks of which the shaft is composed only shoved a little out of place; but all the columns are there, and its aspect, though crowned with the period of thousands of years, looks unchanged at a distance, and its form stands erect with symmetry and grace. It is isolated from all other temples, and stands alone in its glory upon a little neck of land running out from the Areopagus. Its hall within is filled with fragments of statuary, relics of art, one or two most beautifully sculptured sarcophagi, two forms of Apollo, and many other pieces of interest to the antiquarian and the artist.

The next day we drove to the Acropolis to enter its temples, where the perfection of sublimity and grandeur in nature and art are seen to harmonise with all that is beautiful and lovely upon which the eye loves to rest. Here the pride and glory of Athens seems to culminate, and around its brow is wreathed its chaplet of undying fame which still lingers around its matchless columns and fallen fanes. To ascend its summit, 300 feet above the level of the town, was no small consideration. Its extreme breadth is 450 feet, and built upon a rocky foundation of coarse, red marble. In some places we looked over precipitous rocks 150 feet high. Our minds expanded as we approached this magnificent scene and stood at the foot of the staircase composed of marble steps, by which we ascend to the portico of the Propylæ, the first temple, which covers with its wings the whole western side; and when we sat down upon its threshhold beneath the lofty columns of this gigantic temple and looked at the vast prospect spread out before the eye, wreathed with their historic, classic and poetic associations, connected with the greatest minds that ever lived, our hearts were full to overflowing.

"One vast world of wonders spread around,
And all the Muse's tale seemed truly told."

The distant mountains, the sea and straits of Salamis, the gem-like islands which stud it with that endless variety which beautifies Greece, the ancient world of true poetry written upon every thing that surrounds it,

"Thy vales of evergreen, thy hills of snow Proclaims thee Nature's varied favorite now."

And here Athens sits enthroned amidst creation's finest forms of transcendent beauty, unsurpassed by any place on earth. Four temples in this magnificent ruin adorn the Acropolis in the perfection of architectural grandeur seen in their decay. Before us the little wingless temple of Victory stood apart from the rest, a perfect gem of the kind, and still maintains its erect form and original position. We had to ascend an inclined plane to reach the Parthenon and the other temple called the Erectheum. But the Parthenon, with its lofty columns and broken walls, stands there still, unrivalled in beauty and grace; the admiration of the world. It occupies the highest position of Acropolis and towers above them all, commanding a prospect sublime and beautiful. Its beautiful shafts lie scattered about, and large blocks of Pentelic marble, which composed its walls, lie heaps upon heaps, yet enough remains to show its design and architectural grandeur.—Upon its pavement in the center of the building a place was shown us where the statue of Minerva once stood, 40 feet high, designed by the unrivalled genius of Phideas, who had the superintendence of the building, and covered it with gold and ivory to astonish the world with its beauty and splendor. Here, amidst the ruins of this august temple, we saw the sun setting behind the western hills in the distant perspective, which sent a thrill of pleasure, mingled with sadness, through the soul. We could not have chosen a time better suited to our feelings as we realised that poetical allusion so happily expressed:

"So sinks more lovely ere his race is run,
Along Morea's hills the setting sun;
Not as in northern climes obscurely bright,
But one unclouded blaze of living light."

The magnificent ruins were for a while tinged by its rays, and reflected its fading glories passing away in a soft subdued light in harmony with the scene. To look through the portals of the temple, in the solitude of such an hour, and contemplate the scene with its associations of the past, was sublime in the highest degree. To think of this edifice, as it once stood adorned by the creative genius of Phidias, whose artistic skill has never been surpassed and whose finishing touch never equalled, what beauty and grandeur must have burst forth upon the sight on every side—what majesty and grace. And then to think of the master spirits who assembled in these halls—philosophers, heroes, poets, orators, historians and statesmen, who have filled the world with their learning and wisdom, calls up recollections of the past full of all that is great in the intellectual world, inspiring to the human heart in the elevation of the noblest powers of man.

The temple of Erectheum, a little distance from the Parthenon, is entirely different. We approached it first by a portico, the roof of which is sustained by columns, whose shafts represent young maidens fully draped. These statues have been much injured by time but are of graceful proportions. One of them has been remodeled, and the face appears exceedingly beautiful in repose, with a noble expansion of brow and intellectual expression. This was an early religious sanctuary connected with the legends of Attica. Its ruins are not as imposing as the Propylæ and Parthenon, but equally as impressive from its association with their idolatrous religion, their national worship. It differs widely in its structure from the rest, situated north of the Parthenon, near the walls where we stood, which overlook the city. Its "Studious walks and shades.

Seen where the olive grove of Academe,
Plato's retirement, where the Attic bird

The prospect on every side of the Acropolis is extensive and magnificent. The eye cannot rest upon an object without its classic associations. Every mountain, hill and valley is tinged with their fadeless hues; and no landscape upon earth presents such an assemblage of the beautiful and sublime, connected with classic and intellectual pursuits, as that of Athens.—Although the glory of ancient Greece has departed and its master spirits fled from earth, "yet thy skies are as blue, thy crags as wild" as when the poets touched the lyre.

The street which passed the front of our hotel is called Eolus, from the temple which stood at its termination. Its form is octagonal, with four little porticos opening into the interior. The marble columns which supported them are fallen and scattered about among broken statues and blocks of marble. It had bas-reliefs illustrative of its design, with sundials upon its sides. It was enclosed by a wall and the earth removed 70 feet which gave ample room within the circular wall for trees and statues, which once adorned its walls, and which must have been a public resort from its central position.

The Stadium, the ruins of which we saw upon a hill rising from the banks of the Ilissus, with its grass-grown hollow retiring into the hillside, required a stretch of the imagination to rebuild it again for a race course, where 40,000 people sat to witness the games upon their steps of Pentelic marble, with which it was adorned. Although it was described of great magnificence, nothing remains but a few shapeless piles of stones on the side of the hill. On the east of the Stadium is the tomb of Herodes Atticus. On the opposite side of the Ilissus we were shown the gardens and sanctuary of Venus—a most delightful spot—a garden still full of trees.

"Where'er we tread 'tis haunted, holy ground;"

Not a spot but has some association attached to it connected with their literature or customs. The market place, with its marble columns, is a work of art, and the prices of provisions, once fixed by their ancient laws, is still read.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL INTEREST.

TO EVERY PREACHER IN THE M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

MY DEAR BROTHER: You are aware that the General Conference of our Church, at its late session in Nashville, passed the following resolution.

"Resolved, That it is deemed essential to the advancement of the Sabbath-school cause, that there should be a Corresponding Secretary for the Sunday-school Society, to travel through the Conferences to encourage the formation of Sunday-schools and to take up collections for the cheapening and distribution of Sunday-school literature."

The undersigned was elected to the office designated in the above resolution. His duties are therein distinctly specified. His field comprises all the territory embraced within the boundaries of the M. E. Church, South. You will see at a glance that it is impossible for him to visit every part of this field; and yet it is highly important that there be a Sunday-school wherever there are children enough to form one, throughout its bounds. How is this desirable end to be accomplished? Mainly, through your aid and co-operation. Without this, your Secretary can do but little. With it, this most important department of Christian effort may receive an onward impulse, never before known within our communion.

Are you on a station? It is at once taken for granted, as a matter of course, that there is a Sunday-school connected with the Church under your pastoral care, that you visit it frequently and give it your warm encouragement and hearty support. But is there not some part of the town or city where you labor, that is destitute of this blessing, and yet too far from your Church to render it practicable for its children to come to your Sunday-school, while it is sufficiently populous to warrant the establishment of one in its very midst? Will you not, my dear brother, immediately inquire into this matter, bring it before your congregation, induce some of the active and zealous young men and women of your charge to assist you in procuring a room in that locality and gathering in the neglected children by visiting every family in the neighborhood; then tell your own flock on the next Sunday what you have done and ask them for a few dollars to send on to Dr. McFerrin, the Treasurer of the Sunday-school Society, at Nashville, for a Library of suitable books and for a score or two copies of that admirable little paper for children, the Sunday-school Visitor. Fifteen or twenty dollars will procure the whole, and you will be sure to get what you ask for, your people will be delighted with your zeal in the cause—your own spirit will be cheered with the thought of thus enlarging your sphere of usefulness, and more than probable you will have planted the germ of a future church. Many a flourishing congregation with a comfortable house of worship has sprung from just such a beginning.

Are you on a circuit? If there be not already, there should be a Sunday-school at each of your appointments. Can you not persuade the class-leader or some other prominent man or woman in the society, with the help of the other members, to send for some books and "Visitors" as above suggested, and then assemble the children of the neighborhood on Sunday mornings for instruction? You may meet with difficulty and discouragement at first; but what great and good enterprise does not? Persevere. Try again, and again and again.

Are you a local preacher? Of course you have appointments for preaching on Sundays. In those parts of the country accessible to you. You can render valuable aid to the preacher on your circuit or station in his efforts to found Sunday-schools, and perhaps can yourself establish them in places that are out of his reach. There are 4700 of you in the local ministry of our church, and what can you not achieve in this most interesting field of labor. In the Church of God, if you will but take hold of it with earnest, resolute and prayerful zeal, and cease not your exertions till you see realized what is expressed in the following extract from the recent Pastoral Address of the Bishops.

"We hope to see the day when at every regular preaching place in the ample rounds of our itinerant ministry, there shall be a well organized Sunday-school, with an efficient corps of teachers a well filled library, and a public moral sentiment in the congregation on which the institution may rely for sympathy and support as occasion may require. We will only add, let the children in every charge be furnished with the Sunday-school Visitor, and the Editor may be allowed to feel that, in his labor of love, the Church accredits his agency as one potent for good in the present and future."

My address for the present, will be Spartanburg, S. C., but I shall be absent from that place most of the time during the next four months, in attending the sessions of Annual Conferences.

CHARLES TAYLOR.

GHOST STORIES.

While the Thirty-third or Wellington's Regiment was quartered in Canada, the officers of the mess table saw the doors open and a figure pass through the room. He was deadly pale, and was recognised as a brother, Wynard by name, known to be then in England, on sick leave. There being but one exit, and as he did not return, some one of the party looked into the room he entered, but found no trace. Not merely one, but all saw the figure. Some took notes of the incident; and in the 'log book' of the regiment (if a nautical phrase is admissible in matters purely military), may be read the written statement of the fact. News of his death, afterwards received, proved the hour of his dissolution and appearance to have been simultaneous. An instance similar to the Berresford case, and others could mention, where doubts have been entertained as to the possibility of a denizen of a higher sphere appearing to its beloved ones on earth, occurred to a friend of my own, and to a companion of his early youth who having obtained a cadetship, went to India. His story runs thus: Several years ago the former was going towards evening alone across a wide barren heath. Suddenly, by his side in the vehicle was seen the figure of his playmate. He knows not why, but he experienced neither surprise nor dread. Happening to turn his head from him to the horse, and on looking again, the apparition had vanished! And now an indescribable feeling of awe stirred around him; and remembering their conversation together, he doubted not but that his friend was at that moment dead; and that, in appearing to him, he was to come in the fulfilment of their mutual promise, in order to remove all pre-existing doubts. By the next India mail was received intelligence of his death, showing the exact coincidence as to the time of the two events, and bringing home at once the conviction to the mind of the bereaved. One conclusion is evident, from all I have hitherto gathered, that in our future and disembodied state our present identity is retained. More than twenty years ago, I was called, before daylight, to visit the late Mrs. S. living in Maryhead Cottage, and found her in a most excited state arising from an impression on her mind, as she stated to me, that she had seen her old friend, Mr. Adams, who lived near Tones, open the end curtain of her bed and look at her, and that she was concious that he was dead. A few hours after, a lady brought a letter announcing his death, at the very time that she said had seen him. I learned afterwards that her husband destroyed himself, and that she said she heard a pistol shot, and the ball roll along the floor—he being far away.

Notes and Queries.

NAMES OF TRADES.

The lexicographer Ray tells us that coop was a general term for a vessel to enclose anything, as hen-coop, probably meaning that such was the case when the vessels were made of wood. Hence the maker of all such vessels was called a cooper; saxon, corrupted from sacristan; milliner, derived from Milan, as the most costly ladies' caps were anciently made there; tinker, evidently formed from the sounds produced by their labor. Pegge, Johnson believes this to be an abbreviation of petty dealer; many believe, however, that the root is found in the Old German bedder, or in the Danish beldre; both signifying a beggar.

A young lady of more beauty than sense, more accomplishments than principle, more charms of person than grace of mind, more admirers than friends—more fools than wise men for attendants—is a coquette.

DISCUSSION AND DEVOTION.

...others have noticed, as well as our... that the majority of contributors to our ...ch journals incline to discussional rather ...tional articles. The principle excep... to this rule is to be found in the way of ...ndence. The number of profound, ..., and deeply spiritual contributions, ...ing upon experimental and practical piety, ... very small. Is there a decline in ...matter, or has it always been so? We sup... the former to be the case. And it may be ...table to inquire into the causes of this ... and spiritual tendency. It would seem ... not that "the deep things of God," in ...dings with the soul—the things that ... to life and salvation—practical and de... studies of the doctrines of redemption, ...as the divine power of the gospel—the ...saving influence of the Holy Ghost—the pre... efficacy of the atonement—evangelical ...repentance, faith, love and holiness—the ...blessed promise of the resurrection and a future ..., and the relations of all these to a spiritual ...and saving Christian experience, were not now, ...as in the days of Wesley and the early ...Methodists, subjects of daily, prayerful, and ...experimental study.

...The same thing is manifest in preaching and ...conversation, as well as in writing. The vari... forms and utterances of Methodist thought ...seem to lack, at the present day, the deep, ...evangelical, and spiritual tone of former times. ...Discussion, argument, the interchange and con... of opinions on ecclesiastical and economi... subjects, seem to have taken the place of ...the utterance of devotional and pious thought. ...Wesley and the early Methodists dwelt upon ...the things of God and of the soul; we dwell ...upon the things of the Church and of her ...economy. They studied, felt, and unfolded the ...plan of salvation, and the experience of the ...power of God; we study, and feel, and unfold ...the plan of our connection, and the philosophy ...and results of our various ecclesiastical institu... and enterprises. They read, and studied, ...and preached, the word of God, with the help ...of the ablest, most learned, and most spiritual ...doctrinal, and homiletical works; we read news... papers, and magazines, popular books, and the ...Bible, and our preaching is like unto ...and our thought.

The men... spiritual power and tone of our minis... and their preaching, and of our member... and their experience and practice, are in... volved in this matter. Devotional and experi... mental reading, study, preaching, and writing, ...are imperatively demanded of all who wish to ...avert such an evil from the Church, and from ...themselves. Discussions of Church economy, ...conflicting arguments and opinions of the ...advocates of different views, appeals and ex... hortations in reference to our great public en... terprises, though they are all important and ...valuable, should not be allowed to fill up our ...Church journals, to the partial exclusion of "the ...weightier matters of the law."

...We have too many ecclesiastical statesmen, ...and too few divines; too many debaters, and ...too few preachers of the everlasting gospel; ...too many learned doctors of ecclesiastical law, ...and too few real doctors of divinity; too many ...popular pulpit orators, and too few able minis... ters of the new Testament. TEXAS METHODISM.

...department of our great and growing ...south-western work is worthy of more atten... tion and interest than has ever been bestowed ...upon it by the Church at large. From the fact ...of the newness of its territory, its isolated ...position, and the numerical and pecuniary weak... ness of the pioneer bands which held it as an ...outpost of the Church, prevented it in earlier ...times from being largely productive in the ...support of general connectional interests, its ...real importance, as to size and wealth of terri... tory, and its prospective growth and power ...have never been fully appreciated. Both in ...Church and State has this been the case. Few ...and imperfect facilities, and feeble encourage... ments have been afforded, and Texas has been ...left to grow, for the most part, as a motherless ...child. But now she is developing the energies ...and putting forth the strength of a young ...giant. And she is yet only in her well-grown ...childhood. She has not yet reached the ...strength and beauty of her youth. A quarter ...of a century from now, Texas will be a young ...and growing country, and a half century hence ...her resources will not be fully developed.

...Hard and trying have been the struggles ...through which the Church there has passed, ...especially in regard to her financial interests. ...The financial history of the Texas Christian ...Advocate, commencing nine years ago and ...continuing without intermission to the present ...time, if faithfully and minutely written, would ...surpass, in thrilling interest, any thing of the ...kind in American Methodist Journalism. And ...the indomitable spirit which has sustained it ...thus far still reigns triumphant. Our old friend ...and brother, John S. Menefee, in a letter to that ...paper makes the following proposition.

...the capital of the joint stock company be $50,000, ...the subscription for the Texas Christian Advocate be ...three dollar per annum (strictly in advance) and the pay... ment of ten dollars constitute a life subscriber: the amount received for life subscribers to be invested in some profitable stock or put at interest, and the income or interest only to be used.

It may be contended that the paper cannot be published so cheap—not knowing anything about the cost of publishing a newspaper I make the following suppositions:

1st. That the capital would yield a profit of $5,000 to be appropriated to the paper.

2nd. By reducing the subscription to one dollar the circulation could be doubled and thereby double the amount of good would be done.

3rd. If with 5000 subscribers the paper can be published for $10,000, 10,000 copies can be published for $15,000, or 20,000 copies for $25,000.

If the above is a reasonable calculation the next question is, can the $50,000 be raised? It appears to me that said amount ought to be raised in Texas for the purpose alone of doubling, trebling, or perhaps quadrupling the circulation of the Advocate, and when we take into consideration that this is not the only object in view, but also the distribution of $50,000 worth of goods books annually, I think there should be but little doubt of success.

In addition to the itinerant ministers, let a lay member in each county or circuit be appointed agent to procure subscribers—in some things one who is not a preacher can do more than some preachers with some folks.

There are about one hundred and forty counties in the State. Jackson County is below an average in population and wealth, and I will ensure that five hundred dollars can be had from said county; that amount from one hundred counties would make the sum required. Many individuals in the State could afford to take $500 or $1000 in stock and no doubt would if they could be convinced that it was for a good cause."

While such a spirit as this lives in Texas, the success of the paper is certain. Two dollars is cheap enough for the paper; and it should not be lowered in price; but Judge Menefee's proposition is a noble and magnificent one, and should, and no doubt will be responded to. Our brother editor and successor, Rev. J. E. Carnes, gives a powerful encouragement to Texas energy, for he is making a noble paper. Genius, power, and beauty, fused and sanctified by devoted piety, sparkle in his columns.

The paper now has the largest circulation in Texas, by thousands, and is the best advertising medium in the State. If any of our friends wish a splendid Texas paper, or wish to advertise in one, let them address James E. Carnes, Galveston. All our Church papers, we think, should assist in increasing each others' circulation. They lose nothing, themselves, by it, and they can do each other great good.

We would say, in conclusion: if Texas can do such things, what cannot the Conferences patronizing the New Orleans Advocate do? "We can do what we will." Let us not forget it. Let us be provoked to zeal by our younger sister of Texas. Let every friend of the paper put a shoulder to the wheel, and let us have ten thousand subscribers as soon as possible.

THE NEW DISCIPLINE.

A copy of the new edition, as revised by the late General Conference—edited by Dr. Suarmers, and published by Dr. McFerrin—has just reached us. It is on sale at this Despository, and orders will be promptly filled. We shall not undertake to point out and review the late revisions. It would be inadequate and unsatisfactory. Nothing but a personal examination will enable our preachers and people to be fully informed as to the legislation and general tendencies of their own Church. We hope that every subscriber to the Advocate will immediately, personally or through a preacher, order the new discipline. In our opinion, it is the best arrangement of that important work that American Methodism has ever possessed.

Since writing the above, we append some extracts from an excellent notice in the Nashville Advocate.

"The type is slightly larger, and the page more open, than in the edition of 1854; and the volume is larger by fifty-four pages. Consequently, the Agent announces its price at thirty cents per copy. It is altogether the neatest edition we have ever seen of the Methodist Discipline. Copiously and carefully indexed.

"The increased size is due to other causes besides the mechanical one mentioned. The burial service was the subject of a very judicious recension by the late General Conference. The Ninetieth Psalm and 1 Cor. xv. (beginning at twentieth verse) are introduced in lieu of other matter occupying less space, and, we may add, less fit. Part ii, Section 8,—"Of the publication of books and periodicals,"—covers thirteen pages. Part i, Section 3,—"Of the Anaual Conferences,"—presents an improved and comprehensive order of business. The section that relates to Preachers in charge, has undergone a considerable change. Some duties were previously enjoined that are now left out; but new duties have taken their place. Page 30 of the old book is yet as it was—for an obvious reason.

"A glance at this edition will show one familiar with the Discipline that it has been amended, and, in many respects, for the better. A codist has been at work. Cumbrous sentences, heterogeneous paragraphs, redundant words, have disappeared before a compact and consistent arrangement. Where the sense remains the same, a fungous growth of verbiage, the accretions of successive legislations, has been lopped off. The text is improved in terseness, order, clearness.

"Take our Discipline as it stands, and there is, we cordially believe, no other book extant, among the books of men, so full of Bible truth, and containing such simple, efficient, and evangelical directions for building up and governing the Church of Christ. In what is Divine, it provides for no change, allows none. In what is human, it is flexible, yet conservative, capable of adaptation to the new demands created by time and circumstances, but guarded against hasty and hurtful revolutions. Its doctrines are permanent, because God changes not.—There can be no progress here. Its economy, within a certain compass, is variable, because the world and society change. With a lively Church it must be so. The Methodist Discipline is not the work of theorists, of constitutionmongers, who deliberately set themselves to making a plan for gathering, organizing, and governing a Church. It was not made, it grew. Empathically it is the creature of Providence; and the very defects that offend mere theorists, prove, and belong to, such an origin and growth.

KENTUCKY CONFERENCE.

Kentucky has furnished a large number of her members and ministers to the new Conferences, both in the Southern and Northern Methodist Church—is. This, according to a correspondent of the Nashville Christian Advocate, is the explanation of the apparently meagre results of ministerial labor there. The land in Kentucky being almost monopolized by the wealthy few, the great of the people are easily induced to seek homes on the lands of the West. The Church is prosperous there, however, yet they; need preachers, and a more promising field is hard to find than in old Kentucky.

Rev. R. Abbey, Financial Secretary, writes from Millersburg, the seat of the Kentucky Conference, as follows:

The Kentucky Conference is now in the second day of its session in this remarkably pleasant country town. Bishop Kavanaugh is in the chair—or rather, at this moment he is on his feet, delivering a lecture to a very interesting class of young men just now about to enter the ministry. God bless those young men—there are five of them.

The preachers are mostly here—the weather is pleasant and everything seems to wear the aspect of religion and cheerful life.

I have never met a more clever, dignified and pious company of Christian gentlemen than those Kentucky preachers. I am much pleased with Kentucky and Kentucky Methodists.

The Conference appointed a committee yesterday to consider the subject of a Book and Tract Depository. The committee meets again this afternoon.

This subject is attracting the attention of the Conference in the right way. It is looked upon as the great question of the Conference. I hope, before adjournment, to report a favorable movement in this direction.

Dr. Taylor, the Sabbath-school agent of the Church, and Dr. Hamilton, of Nashville, are in the house this morning.

I will drop you a line occasionally if I can get a moment of time to do so.

I never saw a more pleasant, kind, harmonious Conference than this. I am very much pleased with Kentucky, and Kentucky Methodism. A report is ready to be furnished to-day on the subject of a Book and Tract Depository, fully up to the published plan in all particulars. And there is little if any doubt, but the Conference will adopt it with encouraging omens. It is greatly to be hoped that Kentucky will set the key-note well.

This enterprise, if carried fully into effect, will not only furnish the country with moral and religious reading, to the amount of, little if any, short of a million of dollars a year, but it will tend greatly to expand, and lasen and elevate our entire scale and system of ecclesiastical finances. In this respect we are too low down. Our scale must be elevated, our system must be expanded. Only think of the idea of a Church being crippled in its progress and operations for merely the lack of a few dollars in money! This must not be, it is wrong. God frowns upon it.

The Church needs but little money at most. And in the name of Heaven let not the moneyholders withhold this little! Our preachers are poorly paid. They must be better paid. Our Sunday-schools are poorly supplied. They must be better supplied. We want more and better Church edifices, and we must have them. Our Missionary enterprises are poorly encouraged. They must be better encouraged.

Now sir, you take hold of this, and I will take hold, and we will all take hold, and, as a noble and large hearted Alabamian recently wrote me in regard to our Book and Tract enterprise, "it can, it must, it shall be done."

P. S.—The report is adopted!

DEATH OF REV. JAMES GRIFFING.

The South Carolina Conference met in Charleston, S. C., January 1st 1799, at which time Tobias Gibson, Brittain Capel, and Lewis Myers were appointed to Little Peedee and Anson, but it was doubtless with the understanding that at the opening of Spring Gibson should leave his circuit in the hands of his two colleagues, and go as a missionary to what was then called the "Natchez country."

From the printed minutes we are left to infer that he did not come here until 1800, but I have demonstrative evidence, from private family records, that he came in the Spring of 1799. Soon after the arrival of Mr. Gibson at Natchez, he visited the family of John Griffing Esq., near Selsertown, and was invited to make his house one of his regular preaching places. The Word preached, soon took effect on the family, and Mr. and Mrs. Griffing, and all their children of suitable age joined the Church, among whom was the subject of this communication, then about eighteen years old, having been born near Natchez, September 21, 1782. His conviction of sin soon became deep and thorough, and was accompanied with many discouragements, and feelings of despondency. So sincere, and yet so protracted were his struggles against sin and unbelief, that his case excited the sympathies and prayers of those who had already "tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost." But "weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." His long and dreary night of sin and sorrow was destined to pass away, and he succeeded by a long day of heavenly light, and love and joy. On his way to the usual place of worship, faith began to spring up in his hitherto desponding heart, and he felt a sweet assurance that deliverance was near at hand. He expected to get the long-sought blessing that day; and in this expectation, he continued to seek the Lord earnestly. His maternal grand-mother, Mrs. Hannah Curtis, was a woman of "unfeigned faith," and mighty in prayer, and while on that day she was leading the devotions of the Church, in one of her eloquent and prevailing prayers, an overwhelming heavenly influence came down upon the soul of young Griffing, under the impulses of which he fell backwards, and unconsciously pushed himself some distance over the floor. In this mighty struggle his faith took hold of Christ as an atoning sacrifice for sin, and he felt that "God was in Christ reconciling" to him. When the darkness of unbelief fled before the light of confiding faith in Christ as his willing, all-sufficient, and present Savior, he was filled with rapturous joy, and indulged his happy heart in loud shouts of "glory to God in the highest," and for more than fifty years, at short intervals, in the grove, at the family altar, and in the assembly of the saints, the same triumphant shout was often heard, and only ceased its reverberations on earth when he breathed his last on the 11th of July, of the present year. Shortly after his conversion, he felt "constrained by the love of Christ" to preach the great salvation to his fellow men, and was duly licensed; being the second, if not the first, licentiate of the M. E. Church, within what is now the State of Mississippi. He graduated to Deacon's and Elder's orders in due course, and long stood as a pillar of strength in the local ministry. He was urged by Tobias Gibson and Learner Blackman to enter the itinerancy; but after making the attempt, a spinal injury, which he received when a lad by the upsetting of a cart, discouraged the idea, and he married and settled in Claiborne county, near Big Black. About forty years ago he removed to his late residence, ten miles east of Port Gibson. He was my maternal uncle, and I have known him most intimately from my earliest recollection, and a purer and more conscientious Christian and minister, I have never known. He was not content merely to live religiously: he earnestly desired and constantly sought sensible communion with God, and in this he was greatly favored. His was a happy Christianity, realized in a long life of care and toil, and yet more fully, if possible, during his last illness. He reared a large family, and of his eight surviving children, seven are converted members of the Church of his choice. One of his sons, Rev. James Y. Griffing, has been in the itinerancy in the Mississippi Conference for sixteen years, and his son-in-law, Rev. E. A. Flowers, is also one of the leaders of Israel's host among us. Several of his other children are active lay members of the Church. How cheering to see the little vine planted by Tobias Gibson, our first missionary, near sixty years ago, still green and flourishing, and bearing luxuriant fruit from generation to generation! I cannot close this communication without expressing my gratitude to God, for the gift of such a pattern of piety, and such a safe counsellor as I so long enjoyed in my venerable uncle. Thirty-seven years ago he led my timid heart to give the first public expression of a determination to seek a saving interest in Christ. When, afterwards, I felt it my duty to enter the ministry, but was greatly oppressed and bowed down under a sense of my utter incompetency for the work, I sought his advice, he cheered me up by saying, "open your mouth wide, my son, and God will fill it!" I took his advice, and have realized the promise. Often in the itinerant wanderings of thirty-four years have I turned aside to spend a night with the sainted man, and always found so much of heaven in all he said, and especially in his religious exercises, that it had a uniform tendency to make me feel like trying to live a better Christian.—Farewell dear uncle! We shall soon meet above. May the Lord comfort and sustain the lonely widow and orphaned children until life's dangers are all past.

J. G. Jones.

REV. MR. CLEGHORN AGAIN.

Rev. L Ercanbrack, of the Mississippi Conference, writes us a letter for publication in reference to the course of the above-named gentleman, similar in statement and sentiment to that of our correspondent "Welchman," a few weeks since. Our brother had doubtless written before the paper containing "Welchman's" letter, and our comment, reached him. There is no necessity for the publication of his letter as a whole, as "Welchman" asked the same questions he does, and our answer has already been given. But he makes some statements which will be interesting. He says:

"He (Mr. Cleghorn) represents himself as sole agent for the "South Western Sunday-school Union," composed of four denominations, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, and Methodist. He has succeeded in getting considerable sums, I understand, from different members of our Church. One told me he gave him $50—I heard of another who gave him $25. He visits our protracted meetings, and asks the privilege of presenting his "Union" concern to our people. He takes up collections for the purpose of getting a house in New Orleans as a "Union" Depository.

Now, my brother, has our Church entered into any such Union? I know of no such compact. I understand that the Methodists have a Depository of their own in New Orleans.

By the above our readers will be reminded of the adage that "desperate diseases require desperate remedies," and will decide that the "treatment" we gave this "case" a few weeks since was not too "active," considering the "symptoms." While we have no opposition to offer to the "South-western Sunday-school Union," and are "in love and charity" with our brethren of other Christian denominations who are concerned in it, it is our duty to truth, to our Church, and to the interests of our Publishing-house and its Depository at this place, to say, that the Methodist Church has no connection, of any kind, with the above-named "Union," and any representation to the contrary is a wilful violation of the truth. And if such false representations are made, by a clergyman, for the purpose of deceiving our people, and of getting their money, every man, woman, and child will know how to characterize him. Has Mr. Cleghorn done this? We have no means of knowing, definitely. Will "Welchman," Rev. Mr. Ercanbrack, and others concerned, procure and send us the facts, and nothing else, properly avouched? They are needed, and needed at once.

BOOKS AT THIS DEPOSITORY.

Our readers, and especially the Preachers, will please observe the advertisement in this paper, of books of our Publishing House, on sale at this Depository. Send in your orders. "Spread the books." We need nothing more, at the present time, than the circulation of our religious literature. This is as much our duty as to preach the Gospel.

A TRIP TO FLORIDA.

Agency of the East Alabama Male College—Glennville Male High School—Liberality of a Baptist Judge—Pleasant Company—West Florida—The Blue Spring—A Good Example—Abbeville—Lawrenceville—Conclusion.

Mr. Editor.—College Agents—poor men—then do not always find sympathy in their great work, even from the good. Why? Because of the inability of the mind to lift the veil from future centuries, and see what the Institutions established by their labor, with the aid of the benevolent, shall have achieved. Only think of it, Mr. Editor, a single College in the United States has sent out, in a century and a half, fifteen hundred men to preach the Gospel, besides thousands of men of mark, whose work in all the departments of life has gone to make us the great people we now are. The Church of God still needs, and will ever need, in this, and in coming centuries, such sanctified intellect and learning as Paul, Luther, Melancthon, John Wesley, Chalmers, Hall and others wielded so powerfully and so successfully in the battle of faith. We must fight, again and again, the subtle foes of truth, until the powers of darkness shall reign no more in earth, and "the light of the sun shall be as the light of seven days." Indeed the necessity for cultivated intellect, developed under Christian auspices, is greater than ever before.

The grandest invention of time, the link which brings the world into closer connection than neighboring villages formerly were—the ocean telegraph, is a fixed fact; and will therefore bring upon us an instant rush from the four winds, of the ideas of all tribes, peoples, and languages. This instant blending of the thoughts of the world; the close intimacy it will establish with all lands, and consequently with their widely different customs, philosophies, literature, and religions; and the wonderful impetus thus given to mind, especially in literature, will demand imperatively the raising up of multitudes of strictly disciplined Christian intellects, able to separate good from evil, and to evolve from the chaos of thought light and order—men who shall rebuke error, lay bare sophisms, harmonizing truths, and make all of knowledge tributary to the spread of the Gospel.

Therefore those brethren who treat with indifference the calls upon them for aid of Church institutions, which must raise up these warriors of God; who exercises much ingenuity in finding reasons for not giving aid, rather than for giving it, and who look passively on while their brethren bear these great burdens, do not in my judgment show a spirit altogether lovely. Would it be hard, think you, to convince them of duty in this respect, if they had but a little more of that "wisdom from above which is gentle, easy to be entreated, and is full of good fruits;" and were they willing to admit that the views which prevail among the wise, the aged, the laborious and the holy men of all the tribes of God's Israel, were, possibly, more correct than their own? It does seem to me that humility can readily make this concession; and that when made, benevolence can as freely bring up its offerings to these vast and indispensable connectional enterprises, as to the more local and perishing interests around them.

In obedience to the Conference, I must attend, on my way to Florida, the examination of the Glenville Male High School. Sunday morning found me in the very neat school building, listening to a sermon from my friend, Dr. Dawson. The theme was, the insufficiency of human genius in the shape of mere education, to do what infinite genius in the form of the gospel proposes to do—make man what he should be. I like all of that kind of preaching which takes glory from man and gives it to God. I grow better under it; and I thank God for such gentle, humble, able, and great-hearted men as the Dr. to preach it to me.

For several days the exercises went on.—Those who know the principal—the Rev. James H. Wright, a gentleman, a scholar and withal a good Hebraist, and his associates, Saml. Wright, and James Chambers, are assured that the boys were well taught. And the boys, on their part, showed such a familiarity with the roots and terminations, and with the principles, of language, and such knowledge of their several studies, as was highly creditable to them. In the closing exercises, we heard several speeches, which were admirably conceived, and most impressively delivered. A beautiful chandelier was presented to the School by Major Browder—a man widely known for his liberality, with the distinct statement to the boys, that the gift was in consequence of their improvement. Many of them had been converted during the year. The commencement speech of Alpheus Baker, Esq., of Eufaula, was a clear, cogent, beautiful, and telling defence of the study of the classics.

The community of Glenville is so favorably known, it were superfluous to speak in further praise of it. We have some liberal subscriptions here—for instance, Col. Mitchell gave us $1000 last year, and God has given him religion this.

We must away to Eufaula, to fill an appointment for brother Ferguson. I know of no people who deserve the faithful labor of their pastor more than the brethren of Eufaula. They do kind things, in a generous way. I found Bro. Motley greatly refreshed at the promising class-meeting aspect of Methodism. This people, and their pastor too, have done generously by our College. Last year a clever man of the world, Maj. Treadwell, gave me $500; and this year, Judge J. Gill Shorter, a lovely spirit, and a pious Baptist, a man worthy of the highest honor, gave me another $500.

But we must on to Florida, with our good brother Ferguson, whom you wot of, and whose genial spirit you must have appreciated in your intercourse with him at Nashville, and our little brother Harris, of Marianna, who indeed "has not body enough decently to cover his intellect." The tedium of that hot wearisome July travel was lightened much by such companionship. Had we some means to fix the fugitive thoughts, poetic, philosophic, critical, and spiritual—now sublime, and then ridiculous, with which we beguiled the hours, it were indeed a master-piece of invention.

Now we are in Florida. "Live oaks," cried the elder, as we passed through a majestic grove. There they were, that solid forest growth, crooked, twisted, guarled, disdaining your regular curve, and straight precision. I honor them for their rugged independence of rule. They are a fit emblem of a man of conscious strength, who dares be what nature and heaven designed him to be—himself; whose growth like that forest tree is trammelled by artificial prescription. EXPULSION OF REV. SAMUEL ROBINS.

At the last session of the East Texas Conference, one of its members, Rev. Samuel Robins, had charges brought against him, and had a fair and patient trial, which resulted in his formal expulsion from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The editor of this paper was Secretary of the Conference, and was directed to have the Minutes of the Conference printed; but, for sufficient reasons, wholly of a private nature, and not necessary to mention here, it was not done.

By various private letters, we learn that Mr. Robius, who has, contrary to his penitent professions and pledges, publicly made before the Conference, endeavored to get up a party to assail and injure the Church, now denies that there is any record of his trial and expulsion, or, if there is, that it is purposely kept secret. And we regret to hear that some people are foolish enough to believe him. Rev. J. W. Fields, the Assistant Secretary, has the Conference Minutes, and will, when applied to, have the record of Mr. Robins' trial and expulsion published in the Church papers. We trust the Assistant Secretary will do so at once.

Carlton and Porter have an advertisement in this paper to which we call attention. Read it; it speaks for itself. Methodist Books, relating to Christian doctrine and experience, are valuable, whether Northern or Southern.

The Sunday School Secretary, Dr. Taylor, has an article in this paper, copied from the Southern Advocate, which should be read by all.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

DEATH OF CLARA WATKINS SUMMERS.

Opening the last Nashville Christian Advocate, we, and the brethren around us in the office, were deeply grieved to learn that our dear brother and sister, Rev. Dr. Summers and his wife, had been bereaved of their charming little daughter, Clara Watkins; the affliction rendered harder to bear by the manner, and suddenness of her death—she was drowned.—Walking with her mother and some ladies in the eastern part of the city, near the water-works, and hearing the fire-bell ring, she ran forward and ascended the wall to get a better view, lost her balance and fell into the reservoir, where she was drowned before help could reach her. She was eleven years old. Well do we remember the sweet little girl, and often has she been the subject of conversation in family recollections of our last visit to Nashville. The Lord is good, though he be inscrutable in his providences. O that we all, and our afflicted friends, may have the sufferer's, as well as the laborer's faith!

A GREAT CURIOSITY.

The Dalton (Ga.) Times says: "Last Sabbath, we met in this city, a man by the name of Meredith Hollaad a native of Mouroe county, Kentucky, who can certainly beat the world, Mathematically. He can answer any proposition which may be submitted to him, and do it without a moment's delay. We asked him how many seconds there were in four thousand years. Scarcely had the question been stated, when the answer was accurately given. This man looked like a country hoosier, and if it were not for the extraordinary mathematical gift with which he has been endowed, he would be regarded as almost an idiot. He has traveled in company with several gentlemen over a large portion of Europe, and is about to start on a tour through the United States. He declares that every answer is presented to his mind simultaneously with the question; and that therefore, he undergoes no mental efforts in these mathematical exhibitions."

SOUTHERN METHODISM IN DELAWARE.

From the correspondence of the Richmond Christian Advocate we learn that a camp-meeting was recently held in Delaware, at which upwards of three thousand people attended.—Although the rain fell in torrents part of the time, yet the people came in crowds. Seveaty were converted, and many were left serious.—Rev. Mr. Bennett defined the position of our Church on the subject of slavery, and the people were well pleased. We said, long since, in the Texas Advocate, that the position of our Church on the "vexed question" would be most acceptable to all earnestly pious people throughout the United States. The more rampant the abolitionism of the Northern Churches, the more we shall succeed.

Sunday Schools in France is a new measure, known probably to few of the thirty-five millions of that empire. But we rejoice to learn that they are making some progress, and that fifty-four new schools were gathered last year, making the whole number in France 474. The receipts and expenditures of the year were three-fold—more than in any previous year, amounting to 9000 francs. A meeting of the pupils of the Sunday Schools of Paris was attended by about 1900 children, belonging to twenty Protestant schools and to all denominations.

Condensed Communications.—Our friends who express dissatisfaction with our condensation of their communications, when we first took charge of this paper, will please remember that, at that time, the amount of matter which had accumulated before we arrived, left us no choice. Since then we have been able to be more accommodating. Surely this ought to be satisfactory. We said this then, we now repeat it.

Yellow Fever in Charleston.—The Southern Christian Advocate says: The Report of the City Register for 29th August—4th September and the Monday papers, shows that the fever has been greatly on the increase. We have yet a long period of sickness to look forward to, and can only pray that God be merciful to the people. Seventy-three deaths are reported for the period mentioned—an increase of nearly one hundred per cent. on those of the previous week.

Yellow Fever in Galveston.—We regret to learn that the yellow fever is in Galveston, and above, that some of our friends have already died of it. It is now epidemic, no doubt, and, until cold weather comes, will probably be severe. We trust, however, that God will stay the desolating hand, and mercifully preserve our friends. In the hands of good yellow fever physicians, the fever here is quite manageable, and we trust will be so there. But take care of even the best physicians, if unpracticed in yellow fever. Better have none.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

The deaths from yellow fever in this city for the week ending last Sunday morning, numbered 477, an increase of 23 over last week. No evidences of decline as yet. Many die for want of medical attention in time. The majority of those who have prompt medical aid, from skilful yellow fever physicians, get well. The fever is easily managed.

Mrs. Reed's Seminary.—This old and well known Institution, at Baton Rouge La., will be opened for the admission of pupils on the 13th of October next. If fever should prevail in Baton Rouge, the Seminary will open its session at Greenwell Springs, eighteen miles East of that place, where Mrs. R. has a delightful country retreat. There is a daily stage between Baton Rouge and the Springs. Such is the high character of this Institution, that no commendation is needed, with those who are acquainted with its history.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

The Grand Trunk Road in India, so often spoken of, is one of the best in the world. It is from 20 to 30 feet wide, well graded, slightly oval, and constructed of small broken stones, or metallic ore; it is quite straight, nearly a dead level, and most of it lined with beautiful trees. In India, the scenes and influences which inspired the mind of Bishop Heber, and produced his celebrated missionary hymn, are discernible almost every where. Trees and shrubs bearing the most beautiful flowers, groves, forests, gardens, fields, made green by irrigation, others ripening, others being harvested, and still others whence the crop had been taken already, and many being prepared, and many which had just been sown. Two and even three crops may be grown in a single year.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States has a promising mission in Bulgaria. One of the missionaries, meeting with a French gentleman, an acquaintance, asked him if he had any American news in his papers. "O yes, Monsieur," replied the Frenchman, "great news: the people are all going mad; they go to the churches and pray to God every day."

WASHINGTON VIEWED FROM ABROAD.

The Richmond Dispatch contains, in a recent issue, the following true remarks on the city of Washington:

"We suppose there is scarcely a city in the Union whose society surpasses that of the metropolitan of America in intelligence, refinement, accessibility, and above all, in freedom from narrow, contracted, and bigoted notions on all subjects. Great injustice has been done to the stable society of Washington, by the evil repute brought upon it by the floating population which is attracted thither by the assembling of Congress. The visitor must see Washington when Congress is not in session in order to appreciate its excellent, intelligent, and agreeable people. He will find there representatives of every section and every State whom connection with the public service had first brought to that city, and who have afterwards made it their permanent home. In the various avennes you meet men once famous in the councils of the nation, at the bench and bar, in the army and navy. The best and choicest elements of American society are harmoniously blended with the native citizens of the metropolis, a high-minded, refined community whom contact with all the world has liberalized and enlightened in its ideas and tastes, and whose chief political characteristic is the most catholic and intense spirit of nationality and patriotism."

"To spread Scriptural Holiness over these Lands."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Carroll Colored Mission—

Rev. H. W. Sehrist sends the following report: "I have added to the work, since my last report, two large plantations—making seven plantations where the Gospel is preached.—I find among them those sins that are so heinous in the sight of God, such as adultery, theft, lying, Sabbath-breaking, swearing and superstition; and yet the Church has cause to rejoice, in knowing that the Gospel of Truth is opening its way to the hearts of the poor creatures. I have received thirty on probation, and the congregations are large and anxious to hear the Word—which is truly gratifying. I can safely say the prospect is encouraging. I have a three weeks' circuit, in which I preach twice on a Sabbath.

"I have had the overflow to contend with for the last three or four months. I have gone to my appointments in a canoe made by my own hands, and paddled twelve miles to and fro, through rain and sunshine; and it is well for me that I am a Creole, or I could not have stood the snakes, alligators, spiders, mosquitos and sand. The country has suffered a great deal from the high water; and it may be the means of humbling the proud and haughty spirit of man, and make him quake and tremble at that Power which hath neither bounds nor limits. I ask the prayers of the Church for the Carroll Colored Mission."

Dugdemona Circuit—

Rev. John F. Bellamy, writes: "On Friday night, the 23d of July last, I began a protracted meeting at Bethel Church, which continued until the following Sabbath week. The interest increased at every service. I was absent three or four days during the revival. There were twenty-two added to the Church—seventeen on probation, five by letter—twenty-five or thirty conversions. This revival has done much to establish Methodism in this country. I was assisted by brothers Wuldripp and Cousins, local brethren, to whom I tender my thanks—especially the latter, for his very pertinent remarks on the subject and mode of Baptism, on Sabbath morning, the last day of the meeting.

"Rest assured of one thing, and that is, we have a corps of Local Ministers on this work, who will defend our Church."

TEXAS CONFERENCE.

Rev. H. W. South, writes, August 21st, 1858: "We have had many fine meetings. A few weeks ago we closed a meeting in Marlin, where we had thirty-five conversions and 31 accessions to our Church. I have just returned from the Bosque camp-meeting, near Waco, where we had about sixty conversions and fifty-four accessions.—Our entire Brazos country, up here, is pervaded with a revival spirit."

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Bladen Circuit—

Rev. J. F. R. Brandon writes: "Since I last wrote, I have held, at three Churches, protracted meetings. The Lord was with us in all of them. At New Hope, we held seven days: twenty-one professions, ten joined the Church. At Bethel, we held four days: nineteen professions, twenty-five joined the Church. At Mount Carmel we held six days: fourteen professions, seventeen whites and six six blacks joined the Church. All the Churches were as perfectly revived as I have ever seen Churches. The Ministers that helped me were brothers Williams, Jones, Tuberville, Spurlin, Grace and McCrary."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Buffalo Circuit—

Rev. J. W. McNeill writes: "We have just closed a most propitious meeting of nine days at Mount Carmel Church—there were some twenty-six accessions, eighteen conversions, and a number of back-sliders reclaimed. One circumstance worthy of notice concerning the new converts is that every one who is the head of a family has come out boldly on the side of the Lord, and taken up his cross—gone to work, both at home and publicly."

Crystal Springs Circuit—

Rev. A. J. Harris writes: "With gratitude to the great Head of the Church, I can report a decided improvement at several places in the Crystal Springs Circuit. We have recently held meetings of several days, at Utica, Cynyan, Spencer Chapel, and at Mount Pisgah (Bear Creek.)

"At Utica, we had three conversions, and three joined the Church. At Spencer Chapel, ten joined the Church, and several conversions. Cayuga, twenty-nine accessions and twenty conversions. Bear Creek, sixteen joined, and some eight or ten conversions."

Meadville Circuit—

Rev. H. M. Youngblood writes: "I have still more good news for the friends of our Zion. We closed a meeting at a place called 'Beach Grove' on yesterday, at which we had twenty-four accessions, and a number of conversions. This is a new place, where we had no members—the people have heretofore been under the Campbellite influence. But, glory be to God, several who had only been baptized unto 'Alexander's' baptism, received the gift of the Holy Ghost,' and we left them rejoicing in God their Saviour.

"We begin at a new place to-morrow. We have taken in one hundred and one members in Meadville Circuit. 'The Lord of Hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge.'"

Marriages.

"It is not good for man to be alone."

On the 26th ult., in Washington county, Mississippi, by the Rev. E. F. Mullins, Mr. David Frisby of Miss Catharine J. Hatcher.

On the 12th inst., by M. J. McDonald, Robert L. Majors to Miss Mary Dozier.

On the 9th inst., in the Methodist Episcopal Church, in Franklin, Parish of St. Mary, Louisiana, by Rev. J. T. Fontaine, Mr. Titos. W. Cook to Miss Samantha T. Brown, both of said Parish.

Literature, Education and Art.

The American Cotton Planter for September, Montgomery, Ala., Cloud and Peabody editors. Price $1 a year. An excellent and cheap monthly.

Blackwood for August, has been sent us by Leonard Scott, & Co., New York, who also republish the Edinburgh, North British, London, and Westminster Reviews, the whole for $10, or singly for $3 a year. "White's Eighteen Centuries," in the present number, is alone worth the price of Blackwood.

Rev. Dr. W. J. Sasnett's Address before the Carrollton Masonic Institute, Carrollton, Ga., is interesting to us not only on account of its intrinsic worth, but because it reveals the progress of a region of country, which, in our boyhood, was a wild, occupied principally by Creek Indians.

The Nashville Monthly Record of Medical and Physical Science, edited by Daniel F. Wright M. D., Prof. Physiology and Pathology, and Richard O. Curry, M. D., Prof. Medical Chemistry and Medical Jurisprudence, both of Shelby Medical College, Nashville, Tenn. The number for September is beautifully printed, and is highly spoken of by the Nashville Advocate, whose editor has had time to examine it.

New Publications.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF ITINERANT MINISTERS, distinguished, for the most part, as Pioneers of Methodism within the bounds of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South: Edited by Thos. O. Summers, D. D

Retail price, in muslin, ... $2 50
Roan, gilt edges, ... 3 00
Half Turkey, (library style) 3 25

These Sketches are full of interest. While they portray briefly the character, life and labors of some of the most distinguished Ministers of the New World, the historical reminiscences are very valuable. The volume is an octavo, containing nearly 400 pages. The type is large, the paper superior, and the binding substantial. It is ornamented by several engravings, and, we judge, is a work that will find an extensive circulation. We advise our friends to procure this valuable publication.

ANNALS OF SOUTHERN METHODISM.—A beautiful volume, of over 400 pages; very valuable and highly interesting—Price, $1: usual discount to wholesale purchasers. Single copies sent by mail (postage prepaid) for $1 00—when cash accompanies the order.

LIFE OF BISHOP CAPERS.—This highly interesting volume is now ready for distribution. Competent judges who have read the work, pronounce it excellent; every way worthy the distinguished author, Rev. W. M. Wightman, D. D., and the great and good Bishop, whose life and character are so beautifully and truthfully portrayed. Price, $1—usual discount to wholesale purchasers. Single copies sent by mail (postage prepaid) when orders are accompanied by the cash.

THEOPHILUS WALTON; or, The Majesty of Truth. A Reply to Theodosia Ernest. By a member of the Alabama Conference. This new book, though but recently announced, has reached an issue of 5000, and the demand for it is still active. For $1, sent by letter, we will send the book by mail and prepay the postage.

POST-OAK CIRCUIT.—This work has already reached a sale of 12,000 copies, and is wonderfully popular, as evinced by the notices of the press, both religious and secular, North and South. A full supply on hand.

"We went right through it. It is a gem of its kind. We hope a thousand hearts will grow warm at its fires." [Rich. C. Advocate.

"May the day come, when every Methodist will salute every other, saying—'Have you read Post-Oak Circuit yet?' and be answered—'Yes, twice.'" [South. C. Adv.

"It is full of sharp sayings, and each chapter is a battery of hot shot. We don't know the author, but guess some of our old stewards have got down into Red River Conference." [North. W. Chr. Advocate.

"A book of telling power and effect in many passages, and of living interest throughout." [Chur. Courier.

"A charming little volume. We cannot but recommend it with all our heart." [Dalnbridge Argus.

Beg leave to ask the attention of all METHODISTS, of whatever sect or party, in particular, and of the religious public in general, to their large stock of splendid ranging in price from $3 to $50 per copy. The best family and pulpit Bibles made in the country.

COMMENTARIES, BIOGRAPHIES, TRACTS, HISTORIES, TRACT BOOKS, SINGING BOOKS, BOOKS OF DEVOTION, —AND— SABBATH SCHOOL BOOKS,

embracing about twelve hundred volumes of the most thrilling and useful books in print, thus exceeding in number, any other Sunday-school library published in this country. They are emphatically and earnestly Christian, but generally less sectarian than those of the American Sunday-school Union or Tract Society. They are Arminian in doctrine, while most others, quoting these as the Union, are not so.

Mark this. They are cheaper, too. We know what we say. And we are adding continually to our list original works and works of the highest merit from the English press. We are just now bringing out

NELLIE RUSSELL; OR, THE TIMID GIRL.

WHISPERS FOR BOYS. By a Lady.

An anti-tobacco book, chaste, interesting, judicious.

ARNOLD LESLIE.

Just the thing to guard boys against the bad influence of skeptics.

FRANK HERON.

Frank was a model boy; the book is a delightful one.

AN HOUR AND A HALF IN A COUNTRY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

This volume is just the thing for country Sunday schools. The boys will read it, and no teacher or superintendent in country churches should fail to procure it.

THE TEMPERANCE BOYS.

A capital temperance story.

Permit us also to ask attention to some of our recent issues, to wit:

A fit present for every wife.

SMITH'S SACRED ANNALS. 4 vols $7 50

A learned work for preachers.

STEVENS'S HISTORY OF METHODISM.

Vol. I $1 00

Full of marvelous facts, that will have a ready sale, wide popularity, and show God and man in Methodism.

To these we might add, "The Living Way," "Gilbert Harland," "Historical Tales for Young Protestants," "Sunday Pictures," "Lady Huntingdon Portrayed," etc., etc., all of which are useful and taking books.

Clergymen of all denominations will receive liberal discount. Complete descriptive Catalogues sent gratis to them and to the trade on the receipt of the postage (three cents) in stamps. Special terms given to the trade.

Besides, we have in press a new work, the "THE PIONEER BISHOP; OR, THE LIFE AND TIMES OF FRANCIS ASBURY," by Dr. Strickland; also an illustrated quarto BIBLE, with new and splendid steel engravings.

Our Periodicals are the

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE AND JOURNAL,

Having the largest circulation of any religious weekly on the Continent. Price only $1 50. Four columns are devoted to advertising useful things, at twenty cents per line. A first family paper in all respects. Price to clergymen, $1 25.

QUARTERLY REVIEW.

Filled with sterling articles, for which we pay the highest price. Its "Synopsis of the Quarterlies," showing at a glance what is doing in this department the world over, is worth the price of the work. Circulation increasing. Two dollars per year.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ADVOCATE.

Orders for any of these works, accompanied by the cash, will receive prompt attention.

NOW, READER, HIGH!

We have said thus much for your information. If you desire to know more of us, write, and order a Catalogue. Our business is to supply the Methodist world and the rest of mankind, as far as possible, with the right kind of religious reading. Will you help to circulate it? No increase of business will enrich us to the amount of one dollar, though it will tax us with labor. We work for God and for you, each for the whole people. Shall we not have your sympathy and co-operation? We don't say that you must order of us. Supply yourself nearer home, at your own depository, if you please, but have the books and scatter them. Calvinists, and other errorists of all parties, are combining to diffuse their peculiar sentiments, and they are doing it with astonishing efficiency. In the providence of God the Methodists are called upon to resist them, and they alone can do it. Shall we be found equal to our trust?

We have recently opened up a promising trade with the West Indies, are doing something with Australia, more with England and the Canadas, and more with the general trade. And since Methodists have opened their eyes to the misconception they have been under in relation to the character and tone of the books of the American Sunday School Union, our sales have greatly increased. Let Methodists stand together in this work. If we print what you don't like, let it alone, and buy what you do like, and let us fill the world with our literature and religion.

Books sent by mail, postage paid, on the receipt of the retail price.—Short Catalogues sent gratis.

Please preserve this and speak of it.

Respectfully,

Dr. Hostetter's Bitters have received the warmest encomiums from the press and people throughout the Union. As a valuable tonic for the cure of Dyspepsia, Flatulence, Constipation, and general nervous debility it cannot be approached. Every day new cases of its great effect are chronicled through our principal public journals. There is nothing equal to the enjoyment which the afflicted experience when using this valuable specific. Its mild tone, its sure and vigorous action upon a disordered stomach, and the cleansing of the entire human body, should recommend it to all classes of our community. All that will be necessary to convince the skeptical of its healthy effects, is to purchase a bottle and be convinced.

SAVE THE CHILDREN!—Of the multitudes of children that die before they reach their twelfth year, three fourths are believed to be the victims of internal worms, or all diseases arising from that cause. A medicine like Wiuer's Vermifuge, which will infallibly and rapidly cure the disease, is therefore of immense importance to every family. It is extolled in the highest terms by the faculty, and at this time when the mortality among children is greater than was ever before known, it is not safe or prudent for any household to be without it. Believing that the frightful increase of deaths among children is mainly attributable to worms and the disorders they produce, we recommend this specific to all who have charge of young families.

☞ Be particular and remember the name "Wiuer's Canadian Vermifuge." This is the only article that can be depended on. Remember this. For sale by

GREENSBOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL.
REV. J. W. N. MEARS, A. M. M. D.,
PRINCIPAL AND PROPRIETOR.

In this School a thorough course is laid out for Pupils in the Classics, Mathematics, French and English, and young men desiring to enter the Freshmen, Sophomore, or Junior Class in "The Centenary University," or any other College, will have every necessary facility afforded them for that object.

A commodious building is now in the process of erection, with ample play-grounds attached, and a most delicious shade. New School-room Furniture, of the most approved kind, consisting of Desks, Settees, Tables, Large Black-board Slates, Maps, Charts, Paintings, and a Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, has just been purchased by the Principal in New York; and indeed every thing reasonable has been done to render the school-room comfortable and attractive.

The object of the Principal is to make this School what its name implports, A High School, where young men can prepare for College, or for entrance upon business life. Instruction, if desired, can be given in German and Hebrew. Those having charge of the education of young men, would do well to investigate the claims of this School.

Provision has been made for a limited number of Misses, who will be placed in a separate department, under a competent and experienced Instructress. They will be taught all the branches necessary to a finished education.

The Principal desires to urge upon the consideration of those who intend to educate their sons in the Southern University, the propriety of placing them at once where they can commence a course of study which will be carried on during their collegiate career.

The second annual session will commence (Providence permitting) on the 1st of September, and will continue nine consecutive months, including the usual vacation. It will be divided into three terms of three months each.

The tuition must be paid at the middle of each term, or interest will be charged. The justice of this claim will be at once acknowledged, when it is recollected that the Principal has incurred great expense for the benefit of the community, and needs the prompt payment of tuition bills to enable him to meet it.

No pupil will be admitted for less than a session. Any injury done to the house, or furniture, or premises, by, or in the legitimate use of it, will be charged to the pupil in whose care the deed, &c., is.

No deduction will be made for the absence of any pupil; if, however, any pupil is absent on account of sickness for a month in a week, the place of the absentee may be supplied by another.

In case of the expulsion of any pupil, the relinquishment of the claim for tuition is to be optional with the Principal. The full payment of the tuition in such case will be most positively required where the Principal is not satisfied that he has had the entire co-operation of parents to the full extent of parental authority, in bringing the disobedient to the wisdom of submitting to the powers that be. The Principal will decide this matter. It is his determination to throw the responsibility for the deportment of his pupils upon their parents, where it belongs. Children trained properly at home will, as a general rule, behave properly at school. For the good of society, idleness, obstinacy and malice should never find even a temporary home in the school room. They are a Pandora's box, out of which spring a multitude of evils.

It is desirable that pupils commence promptly with the commencement of the session.

For further particulars apply to the Principal.

Circular of Feliciana Female Institute.

THE Undersigned has purchased the premises formerly owned by Rev. B. Jones, in Jackson, La., where he intends opening a Female Academy.

His design is, to establish a Seminary of Learning, in which the best facilities will be afforded Young Ladies for a thorough education in all the branches usually taught, both useful and ornamental.

None but competent and thorough teachers will be employed.

The buildings are commodious and well adapted to the purpose.—The grounds are extensive and pleasantly situated. The location for health unsurpassed by any in the state.

Neither pains nor means will be spared to secure the comfort of the pupils.

Discipline will be maintained with kindness and firmness, and a strict reference to the rules of the school required.

Close attention will be given to the morals, habits and morals of the pupils, and a due regard had for whatever tends to form the character of the true christian lady.

Such rules and regulations will be adopted as the good of the school will require.

Jackson, La., is situated in the edge of the pine lands east of the Mississippi, 12 miles from Bayou Sara and 24 from Baton Rouge. It is the site of a Seminary College, and for health, comfort and educational facilities is not surpassed in the South.

The academic year will consist of but one session, embracing ten months, from the first Monday in October to the Saturday before the last Thursday in July; the first session beginning on the first Monday in next October.

It is earnestly expected that pupils be present at the opening of the session.

TERMS—PAYABLE SEMI-ANNUALLY IN ADVANCE.

Board, Washing and Lodging per session	$150 00
Tuition in Collegiate Department	50 00
Tuition in Primary Department	40 00
Rent on Piano, Guitar, or Melodeon (extra)	75 00
Instruction in the Latin, Greek, or French	20 00
Instruction in Drawing and Painting	20 00
Stationery	2 00

An additional charge of two dollars will be made for Vocal Music to each pupil who does not take lessons on some instrument.

Except bedsteads and matrasses, pupils will furnish their own bedding and towels, and have their apparel marked with their full name.

Hoping to be worthy the confidence of parents and guardians, and of the public, we remain respectfully
THOS W. BROWN.

FEMALE COLLEGE,
Columbia, Tenn.

WE return our grateful acknowledgments to our friends and patrons for the kindness and confidence they have ever manifested towards this Institution, by entrusting their dear daughters to us for instructions; and we are resolved that this trust shall never be betrayed. We will return them committed to our care with their minds accurately and thoroughly cultivated.

Please to consider—

1st. The IMPARTIALITY and THOROUGHNESS of our Examinations, and the superior scholarship of our pupils—their refined manners and lady-like deportment.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer the Little Children to come unto Me."

CHILDREN'S EDITORIAL.

READ THE WHOLE PAPER.—The editor wants the children to read the rest of the paper, as well as the Children's Column. You should read your own column first, and then read the balance. Reading fills our minds with knowledge, and if our practice is as good as our knowledge, reading fills us with wisdom as well as knowledge.

READ THE SCRIPTURES.—You should read the Bible, as well as the Advocate. The Bible is worth more to us than all the books and newspapers in the world. We should know nothing about our Heavenly Father, or about the heavenly world, or about our souls, or about the Savior and religion, if we had no Bible. Read some in the Bible every day.

BEAUTIFUL PLACES TO READ.—Did you ever read the history of Joseph and his brethren? How his brethren sold him, and how he afterwards rose to be governor of Egypt? Get your mother, or father, or some friend to show it to you, if you cannot find it.

Did you ever carefully read the history of the Crucifixion of Christ? It is described by four writers, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. Both these are beautiful places to read in the Bible.

And the Psalms of David are beautiful. You should read them. Turn to the twenty-third Psalm; see what beautiful and pious language. And the first Psalm, how beautiful that is. And there are many other places in the Psalms that are beautiful.

When you write to the editor, tell him what places in the Bible you like best, and give your reasons for it.

THE SOLDIERS.

"O papa! papa!" cried little Charley Reed, "just see the soldiers! How beautifuly they look in those pretty clothes, and hear what nice music! I wish I was old enough to be a soldier. I intend to be one when I am grown. Fred Holmes says it is a glorious thing to fight for your country, and I think so too. O! I will be a brave soldier; I should like to be a great conqueror, like Alexander, or Cæsar, or Bonaparte."

"We think very differently on this subject, my son," said Mr. Reed; "and I am grieved to find that you have such a desire. I should be sorry to be the father of an Alexander, a Cæsar or a Bonaparte; and I hope you may never even be called upon to defend your country, for I look upon war as a great evil. There is always a great deal of wickedness in an army, and the soldier is exposed to great temptations; and surely you would not wish to be where you would be constantly tempted to sin. Then think of the many happy families around us, that would be made miserable if their husbands, fathers, and brothers were in continual danger of being killed. And I think too, that it is wicked to desire to be in a situation in which you would be likely to take the lives of your fellow-men. But I suppose you never thought of these things before; and if it was the fine dress that pleased you, remember, my dear boy, that you may put on 'the robes of righteousness,' which indeed is the only dress that will never grow old. It is pure and spotless, and you may not only wear it on earth, but it will gain you an entrance into heaven. There is one warfare which I am anxious to see you engaged in; and a boy like you can fight in that, as well as a man. I am speaking of the Christian warfare; and you will come off 'more than conqueror' in it, if you have Jesus for the Captain of your Salvation.' You will have some hard battles to fight, for you have to wrestle with temptation without, and corruption within; but Jesus promises to be with you, and to deliver you out of all your troubles; and when the great enemy would distress you, 'the Spirit of the Lord will lift up a standard against him.' To fight these battles, you may put on the 'whole armour of God.' You may have your 'feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace;' you may put on 'the girdle of truth,' 'the breastplate of righteousness,' 'the shield of faith,' 'the helmet of salvation,' 'the sword of the Spirit, which is the word God.' If you are armed with these 'mighty weapons,' you can 'war a good warfare.'

"When you come to die, my son, it would give you no pleasure to know that you would leave a name like Alexander's, like Cæsar's, or like Bonaparte's, if your soul was lost. But if you pass through the world fighting against temptations and sins, looking to Jesus for strength and courage, then you will be happy; and when you die you will enter the kingdom of heaven, there to dwell for ever and ever. It would do you no good to know that you had conquered the world; but it would be joy to know that you had 'fought the good fight of faith.' The pleasures and honors of this world quickly pass away, and it would profit you nothing to 'gain the whole world, and lose your own soul.'"

And now, dear young reader, ask yourself seriously, If you are fighting the "good fight of faith." But if you are still "fighting against God," go at once to Jesus, who alone can save you. He has conquered your great enemies, and if you choose him to rule over you while you live on earth, "his banner over you will be love," and in heaven "your rest shall be glorious."

NOW IS THE TIME.

"Not yet," said a little boy, as he was busy with his ball; "when I grow older I will think about my soul."

The little boy grew to be a young man.

"Not yet," said the young man; "I am now about to enter into a trade; when I see my business prosper, then I shall have more time than now."

Business did prosper.

"Not yet," said the man of business; "my children must have my care; when they are settled in life, I will be better able to attend to religion."

He lived to be a gray-headed old man.

"Not yet," still he cried; "I shall soon retire from trade, and then I shall have nothing else to do but to read and pray."

And so he died. He put off to another time what should have been done when a child. He lived without God, and died without hope.

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

HULDAH, daughter of Henry and Delilah McDonald, was born in Washington county, Ala., Dec. 24, 1832, and died in Sumterville, Ala., (where she has lived since 1855) on the 19th of Aug., 1858.

It is sad to see one so amiable and lovely thus stricken down in the bloom of young womanhood. Her kindness and gentleness of disposition made her the idol of her family and a general favorite of the community. For several years she had been deeply interested upon the subject of religion; yet she never made an open profession until a few hours before her death. She told her friends she had been earnestly praying from the time she was taken, and that God had revealed himself to her as one who was able and willing to save. For hours before her departure she was inexpressibly happy, telling her friends not to weep for her; that she was not afraid to die.—While in the agonies of death she asked them to sing that familiar song, "What wondrous love is this?" joining in and singing as sweetly as she ever did. Thus she passed away to fairer worlds on high. Let the bereaved take comfort in her death and prepare to meet her in that world where parting is not known. A FRIEND.

AMANDA T. FOSCUE died near Coffeeville, Ala., on the 17th Aug. She was a member of the M. E. Church and a professor of religion for a good many years previous to her death. She was confined to her bed for some months, during which time she suffered greatly, but bore it with perfect patience and fortitude: not a murmur was heard to escape her lips. When convinced she must die, she talked triumphantly about death and expressed the full assurance that she had a home in the skies.

"Happy soul, thy days are ended,
All thy mourning days below;
Go, by angel guards attended,
To the sight of Jesus go." W.

MRS. LYDIA H. ANTHONY, consort of G. B. Anthony, died near Milliken's Bend, La., aged 24 years.—She was a lady highly respected and loved by all who knew her. She was a kind mother and wife; and notwithstanding she was not a member of the Church, she always took great interest in its welfare, and at times manifested much solicitude on the subject of religion. I know not her state of mind at death on that subject, as I did not get an opportunity of talking with her. We hope she obtained the Redeemer's salvation. J. A. M.

MRS. MARY THOMPSON, wife of James M. Porter, died near Opelousas, 21st August.

Mrs. Porter is dead! The saddest words that have saluted our ears for these many months. Society has lost one of its brightest gems. Our Church has lost one of its most ardent devotees. Our beloved brother has lost an ever faithful wife. Her five helpless little girls have been deprived of an affectionate mother. But the suffering loved one is now released from pain.

"No sighs can mingle with the songs
That warble from immortal tongues."

Sister Porter has been a member of the M. E. Church for about fifteen years, and a more consistent, faithful Christian I have never known. Her disease was protracted and attended with the most excruciating pains; but she bore it all with Christian cheerfulness and fortitude. She told us repeatedly that she was not afraid to die. She felt fully assured that she was going to "the better land."

J. J. LYONS.

AMANDA [illegible]LAND, wife of W. S. Wilkinson, died in Natchitoches Parish, La., August, 25. She was born in Amite county, [illegible] April, 1830, but had been a resident of this [illegible]cality many years. Joined the Methodist Church some [illegible] years ago and professed religion. Was twice married. In every relation of life she sustained the character of a modest woman. In to minister to the sick and afflicted, to care for the orphan, to comfort the sorrowing, to have charity for the weakness and errors of mankind, to be a dutiful and kind child, a fond sister, a devoted wife, a kind neighbor, and a firm friend, are the fruits of a Christian spirit, then our departed sister must reap the reward of the "faithful." She died a firm believer in the religion of which her life was a bright example. She lived beloved by all who knew her, and her death has created a void which her associates can but feel. We have hope in her death, and if faithful to the end expect to greet our friend and sister in a brighter and better clime than this. B. H. B.

McLEAN'S
Strengthening Cordial
AND BLOOD PURIFIER.
THE GREATEST REMEDY IN THE WORLD!!

THIS Cordial is distilled from a berry known only to myself, and chemically combined with some of the most valuable medicinal Roots, Herbs and Barks known to the mind of man, viz: Blood Root, Black Root, Wild Cherry Bark, Yellow Dock, Dandelion, Sarsaparilla, Elder Flowers, with others, producing the most infallible remedy for the restoration of health ever known.

IT IS NATURE'S OWN REMEDY,
curing disease by natural laws. When taken, its healing influence is felt acquring through every vein of the body, purifying and accelerating the circulation of the blood. It neutralizes any bilious matter in the stomach, and strengthens the whole organization.

McLEAN'S STRENGTHENING CORDIAL
will effectually cure Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Chronic or Nervous Debility, Diseases of the kidneys, and all Diseases arising from Disordered Liver or Stomach, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Rush of Blood to the Head, Sources or Sickness at the Stomach, Heartburn, Disgust of Food, Fluttering of the Heart, Swimming or Pain in the Head, Choking or Suffocating Sensations on lying down, Dimness of Vision, Night Sweats, Fevers, Dryness of the Skin, Yellowness of the Skin or in the Eyes, Pimples or Blotches on the Face or Skin, Inflammation of the Blood, Melancholy or Depression of Spirits, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Bloody Flux, Constipation of the Bowels, Inward Piles, Diseases arising from the use of Mercury, Pain in the Bones, Coughing, Debility, Nervousness, Gravel, Impure Blood, Loss of Memory, Bilious Cholic, Gout, Liver Complaint, and Fever and Ague, or Chills and Fever. It will also cure diseases of the Bladder and Womb, such as Seminal Weakness, Incontinence of Urine, Strangury, Inflammation or Weakness of the Womb or Bladder, &c.

THERE IS NO MISTAKE ABOUT IT.
This Cordial will never fail to cure any of the above diseases, if taken as per directions on each bottle, in English, German and French.

OVER HALF A MILLION OF BOTTLES
have been sold during the last six months, and in no instance has it failed in giving entire satisfaction. Who, then, will suffer from weakness or debility when McLean's Strengthening Cordial will cure you?

TO THE LADIES.
Do you wish to be healthy and strong? Then go at once and get McLean's Cordial. It will strengthen and invigorate your whole system, causing a healthy and pure circulation of blood to flow through every vein, and the rich, rosy bloom of health to mount to your cheek again.
EVERY BOTTLE IS WARRANTED TO GIVE SATISFACTION.

FOR CHILDREN.
We say to parents, if your children are sickly, puny, or afflicted with complaints prevalent among children, give them a small quantity of McLean's Cordial, and it will make them healthy, fat and robust.—Delay not a moment. Try it and you will be convinced.
IT IS DELICIOUS TO TASTE.

EVERY COUNTRY MERCHANT
should not leave the city until he had procured a supply of McLean's Strengthening Cordial. It sells rapidly, because it always cures. A liberal discount will be made to those who buy to sell again.
CAUTION—Beware of druggists or dealers who may try to palm upon you some bitter or Sarsaparilla trash, which they can buy cheap, by saying it is just as good. Avoid such men. Ask for McLean's Strengthening Cordial, and take nothing else. It is the only remedy that will purify the blood thoroughly, and at the same time strengthen the system.

One table spoonful taken every morning fasting is a certain preventive for Cholera, Chills and Fever, Yellow Fever, or any other prevalent disease.

Price only $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

McLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT.
THE BEST LINIMENT IN THE WORLD FOR MAN OR BEAST.
ANOTHER REMARKABLE CURE

Performed by McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment. Read for yourselves: Thomas Ford, a blacksmith, living near Cass avenue, on Tenth street, had a horrible running sore on his foot. He tried various Liniments, Salves, etc., but could do it no good. He despaired of ever being able to work at his trade again, because he could not bear any weight on his foot; and by one small bottle of McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment, he is now perfectly cured.

Rheumatism, paralysis, neuralgia, bruises, sprains, stiffness in the joints or muscles, swellings, sore throat, earache or toothache, wounds, fresh cuts, sores, burns, scalds, pains, etc., yield to the "magic" influence of this wonderful Liniment.

For Horses and Cattle it is an infallible remedy for cholics, galls, scratches, cracked heels, lameness, spavin, sweeny, spohl, fistula, bruises, swellings, wounds, rattlesnake bites, and various other diseases which animals are liable to from injuries or accidents.

Every country merchant should obtain a supply of McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment. It sells rapidly, because it always cures.

A liberal discount will be made to merchants who buy to sell again.

DR. T. McGOWN'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
IODINE OF POTASI,
THE GREAT
BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,
Prepared from FRESH ROOT, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a PANACEA or CATHOLICON than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Colnet, Baron, Gardiner, Manson, Rhoard, Gendrin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Goat, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy; diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions, Dice, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally); Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cachexy, Palsy, Tumors, Gonorrhœa, Gleet; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms, Sir Wm. Fordyce says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in conjunctions enfeebled and emaciated by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, healthy color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparations of Sarsaparilla."

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Amenorrhœa, Dysmenorrhœa, Irregularities, Suppression, Diseases of the Womb, Leucorrhœa, Tumors, Enlargement of the Uterus, Breasts; Chorea, etc.; Impurities of the Blood or System, and all diseases dependent thereon. Makes the skin clear and smooth—an object of interest with the ladies. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.

McGOWN'S ESSENCE TAR—A certain cure for Bowel Complaints, as Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Flux, etc.

McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.

McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.

McGOWN'S OINTMENT—Never known to fail curing old Sores, Cancers, Chronic Sore Eyes, etc.

THAT GREAT ENTERPRISE.

If you read my former article, you must admit that I have not exaggerated the importance of the educational movement in Tuskegee—began and prosecuted under such favorable auspices. But, gratifying as have been the results in the history of our Female College, its success has been hindered by causes which it is in your power to assist in removing. Now, I rejoice to believe that you recognize the binding force of Christian obligations. I am glad that nothing is wanting to spur your diligence, and to fan the flame of your zeal, but a proper showing of the manner in which you can lend your aid in pushing forward so worthy an undertaking. Follow me then for a moment, while I detail

HOW THE ENTERPRISE HAS BEEN HINDERED.

In the first place, although our College building is spacious, commodious and well-arranged, yet its size was inadequate to the demands of the large patronage which crowded upon us during Spring of 1857. We were compelled to refuse many applicants, because we were unable to furnish them with board in the Institution. This procedure, while it was unavoidable, tended to injure our prospects. It diverted public attention, cooled the ardor of our friends, and abated popular interest. Those who were refused admittance were lost to the College, and with them were also lost their family and social influence, their personal sympathy, and that peculiar solicitude for our welfare, which arises naturally in the minds of the delighted patrons of a successful Institution.

Again, the prevalence of the measles throughout the entire country during the early summer of 1857, and the fatal termination of a few cases in connection with our College, compelled us to suspend our exercises very unseasonably, and to dismiss our pupils to their homes. The popular apprehension was aroused, that our boarders were too numerous for the capacity of the house; and although the young ladies were not as much crowded as is frequently the case in similar institutions, yet the results engendered distrust of the health of Tuskegee, implanted prejudices which years will not remove, and effected our patronage in so very serious a manner, that the success of the enterprize has been greatly retarded.

Having thus shown you certain hindrances in the way of our success, let me now invite your attention to

THE WANTS OF THE INSTITUTION.

We need additional rooms at this moment for the accommodation of our Art Department. This is a most interesting feature of our plans. It is a regular school of design, in which young ladies are systematically educated in the arts of designing, of drawing patterns for useful domestic articles, for wall-paper, dress goods, carpetings, embroideries, and such purposes, together with studies in portrait-drawing, landscape gardening, and painting in water-colors and in oils; together with etching and engraving on wood and stone, if desired. About forty young ladies are now engaged in this department with the most flattering success. Owing to the necessary occupancy of the house for dormitories, we have been compelled to take our library-room and our College-parlor for the Art-classes—an arrangement rendered tolerable only by our necessities. We need a room to be specially devoted to instruction in embroidery and fancy needle-work, and to those beautiful arts of ornamentation in crape, lenther, etc., which are useful and elegant accomplishments. We need, furthermore, a gymnasium or play-room for our pupils. The physical education of young ladies we regard as very important. In the construction of the College edifice, long, open passages were left to afford the young ladies pleasant and convenient walks in inclement weather; but we need a room, large, airy and well-ventilated, fitted up in such a manner that the pupils may engage without rudeness in sports that tend to impart additional vigor to the physical constitution. Such a room there is already in the house, but we have been compelled to give it over to the uses of the boarding department.

We greatly need a library. Your daughter must be educated; then she must read. If so, it were better that experienced heads should select her books, until her own judgment has been reliably cultivated, and proper habits of reading confirmed. It has been a cherished design of the President and Trustees of our College to collect a library of choice standard reading, into which our Church literature should enter as a sanctifying element. A reading-room also is desired, where the young ladies of our higher classes may be permitted to read select current literature, and to keep themselves advised of the leading movements of the great outside world.

Again, we need a room to be specially fitted up for studies in Natural History, in which, by collections, exchange and purchases, we may place leading representations of the great Kingdom of nature; and, through the contemplation of which, we may lead our pupils to form proper conceptions of the character and glorious attributes of God.

These are our wants, or a part of them; and how can they be met? The answer is easy, obvious and satisfactory. We should have the whole of our spacious College edifice appropriated to educational uses. As it is, a large part of it is given up to the boarding department. We ought to have a separate structure, near at hand, capable of accommodating a large number of boarders. Such a building would relieve our straightness, increase our facilities, perfect our organization, and indeed, for the institution a capacity of far greater usefulness.

Shall it not be promptly erected by your assistance? Now, you know that great enterprises require great means, to impart to them the highest success.

The Trustees of the Institution, in carrying on this noble work, have contracted a debt of Eleven Thousand Dollars, over and above the amount of their available assets. Surely, no one can feel surprised at this announcement. The chief wonder is, how they have managed to secure, to render available, and to employ the large sum, Forty or Fifty Thousand Dollars, within the space of four or five years—especially, after an amount equally large had been pledged to the support of the flourishing Baptist College located in Tuskegee. It evinces in a striking degree, the liberality of our people; it furnishes a striking commentary upon their Christian appreciation of education, and it encourages me to cipher with renewed confidence upon the work of freeing this great enterprise from the last shackles of debt, and of placing it upon the broad basis of a certain and glorious prosperity.

Now, my brother, the cause is before you: see what has been done, and what assistance is needed of you before this great work can be perfected. Here we have erected a magnificent building, upon an eligible site, at a cost of nearly Sixty Thousand Dollars. We have called together a patronage of over two hundred lovely young ladies, from the bosoms of loyal Methodist families. We have already sent forth two classes of educated Christian women, to clear the fireside and to adorn the hearthstone, and to smile upon the labors of this weary world. A score of refined, intelligent young ladies stand upon the threshold, ready to go out, blessing and to bless. We have approached the lofty idea of true womanly culture. We pant to realize our hopes. A little assistance from you will give us increased power. Five Thousand Dollars, to build a boarding-house. Five Thousand Dollars to perfect our internal arrangements. Ten Thousand Dollars to free us from debt. This is the least that will suffice. Come to our help. God has blessed you, has given you increase of goods, and an enlarged soul. The Institution, if now assisted, is for ever after launched upon a strong tide of popular favor. It will be self-sustaining—amply so. Get ready your loans against my coming—for I purpose, De Deum, to see you in the flesh, as touching this matter. Let your liberality devise large things, that posterity may bless your name.

S. ARMSTRONG,
Agent Tuskegee Female College.

PRESTON COOPER.

Mr. Editor: There is an important chapter in the life of Rev. Preston Cooper, late of the Mississippi Conference, which no one can write as correctly as I can; and as a good deal of interest is felt just now about the life and labors of this departed servant of the Church, perhaps I ought to write it while I may. Of his parentage, and the place of his nativity, I recollect nothing; but with the time and circumstances of his accession to the household of Faith, I am familiar.

In 1827 I was Preacher in charge of Marengo circuit, in Alabama. In the western portion of the county there was a portion called the Flat, in which the Baptist was the predominant Christian denomination though we had several Methodist families among them, and I secured several preaching places at private houses. About the opening of Summer, some one east of Linden, handed me a letter directed to Preston Cooper, and directed me to call at the Baptist Church in the Flat, where he was teaching a rudimental school, and deliver it to him. Having no acquaintance with him, and surmising that he probably entertained the prejudices of the neighborhood against Methodist Preachers, I intended only to call at the door, hand him the letter, and pass on; but he met me with a smile, received the letter with a polite bow, and thanked me kindly for my attention to the matter. I immediately concluded that there was something lovely in the young man, and I would endeavor to cultivate his acquaintance, in view of becoming useful to him. I reined up my horse, and for a few moments engaged him in conversation—telling him my name and profession, and expressing a wish to have the pleasure of meeting him at my appointments. He seemed pleased with the interview, and promised to attend my preaching. The Calvinistic "points" had been so repeatedly brought before him, from the Baptist pulpit, and in private circles, that his uninstructed mind was bewildered with the doctrines of unconditional election and reprobation—which had a paralyzing effect on all his efforts to obtain a personal interest in Christ. He soon came to hear me speak, and could always recollect more about the sermon than I could. After he entered the Ministry he repeatedly told me, that I preached that day a pressing, free and full salvation for all who would accept of it on Gospel terms; and that I sustained my positions by legitimate quotations from the Bible and by Scriptural arguments. This was the means of removing the embarrassments of Calvinism from his mind, and encouraging him to seek, with the assurance of obtaining, "a knowledge of salvation in the remission of his sins." I soon had the pleasure of admitting him to the privileges of the Church, as a sincere seeker of religion.

Shortly afterwards, by his request, I baptised him by pouring, as he believed this to be the Scriptural mode. I felt an increasing interest for the conversion of my much-loved disciple, and in view of shedding him all the help in my power, invited him to attend our camp-meeting at Glover's, near Hillsborough. He availed himself of the invitation, and was early on the ground. The first time penitents were invited to the altar, he came with an earnest heart and without hesitation, and was the first one converted of fifty or sixty that were "born of the Spirit" during the meeting. He obtained the "great salvation, on the 27th or 28th of September, 1827. I well recollect his appearance, as he knelt bolt upright in the altar, and gave utterance to the extacy of his new-born soul, in a flood of grateful tears, accompanied with glowing words and sentences of praise to a sin-pardoning God. Then and there he was admitted into the spiritual family of God! O, how many he has been instrumental in bringing to it since that time! Now, he rests from his labors, and his works follow him!

Yours, affectionately,
B. [illegible] Sept. 1, 1858. J. JONES.

ARIZONA.

Sylvester Mowry, Esq., answers as follows the questions: "What are the agricultural advantages of the country? and what are the principal valleys, their extent and fertility?"

The principal valleys on the East and the Rio Grande, from lat. 35 deg. South to El Paso—about two degrees of latitude—including the well known Messilla. A population of ten thousand souls, mostly Mexican, occupy portions of this section, congregated in the Messilla, Dona Ana, Las Cruces, La Mesa and Santa Barbara. There is ample room here for thousands more. The soil is productive. Land lies well for irrigation and water is abundant. The climate although warm during the summer months, is healthy throughout the year. All the cereals grow well here, together with some of the semi-tropical fruits. The Grape grows luxuriantly. The Messilla and Rio Grande valleys are gradually acquiring population, and offer every inducement to emigrants in search of good soil, fine climate and pleasant homesteads. The market for produce is mostly confined to the supply of the army and to home consumption at present, but the development of the rich and untried mineral wealth in silver of the Organ mountains—across the Rio Grande and in the vicinity of the valley—will at no distant day, give a much more extensive and lucrative trade to the agriculturist. The country west of the Rio Grande, for two hundred and fifty miles to the San Pedro river, is the finest grazing country in the world.

The Mimbres river lies between the Rio Grande and the San Pedro. It is very variable in size at different periods of the year. Sometimes being so deep, wide and rapid, as to detain travelling parties days before they can ford it. There is a limited tract of good arable land on the Mimbres, and towards its upper waters there is considerable timber.

The famous copper mines known as the Santa Rita del Cobre, lie to the north of the Mimbres, and there is a village of six hundred souls, with its Mission-Church and priest, flourished for many years, until destroyed by the Apaches.

The Mimbres sinks before reaching the Mexican line. Lying partly in Arizona and partly in Mexico is the famous Bernardino Ranch, which formerly boasted its herds of cattle and horses—numbering one hundred thousand. The devasting hand of the Apache has scattered this wealth of stock, driven off the proprietors, and laid in ruins the extensive buildings which once sheltered a respectable population. At the foot of the numerous hills scattered over the mesas table lands of the country between the Rio Grande and San Pedro, springs are found, affording water for the cattle which once grazed all over the region.

The Valle de Sanz, between the Mimbres and the San Pedro, again affords a small agricultural region. The San Pedro, which is at present wholly in the power of the Indians, will sustain a population of several thousands. Most of the land on this river is unaffected by Mexican claims, and good inducements are here offered to emigrant parties for settlement. They should go in sufficient numbers, and settle in such proximity as to afford mutual protection. The silver mining region in the immediate vicinity, in the Santa Rita Mountains and the Santa Cruz valley, afford a market for the produce of the farmer at remunerative rates. In addition the influx of population for a new country, for several years after the earlier settlers, gives a constant market for the products of the soil. The Santa Cruz valley is perhaps the most desirable portion of the new territory west of the Rio Grande. The beautiful valleys and ranchos of Sopori Calabazas, Arivaca, Nogales, Tumacacori, San Xavier, and others, can not be exceeded, in every item, which makes a new country desirable.

Here grows luxuriantly every variety of grain. Every fruit, pleasing to the eye or delicious to the taste. The climate is healthy and agreeable. Cotton-wood grows upon the bank of the streams. Mesquit wood, the great fuel of the country, is abundant, and in the mountains there is a fine growth of oak. The silver mines in the vicinity of Tubac, at Arivaca, Sopori, San Xavier and other localities, although just being developed, give promise of a yield that will make Arizona as widely known as the Silver State, as California is as the Golden.

West of the Santa Cruz, except on the Gila river, until you reach the Colorado, the country is not inviting to the farmer, although rich in minerals. Throughout the whole length of the Gila—five hundred miles—there are many extensive and rich tracts of arable land; lying well for irrigation, with plenty of water.—Wheat, corn, cotton, melons, punkins, beans and millet, grow abundantly with little labor, and the soil seems inexhaustible. The Pimas Indians have raised all these crops for a long series of years on the same soil, without manure, and with no apparent diminution in the yield.

North of the Gila—completely in the possession of the Indians, are several large valleys, watered by bold streams—alive with fish, and magnificently timbered with oak, pine and cotton-wood.

There are some good mill-privileges on the Gila, and its northern branches, and it is believed by good authorities that all this region is rich in gold.

The Colorado River, navigable at all seasons of the year throughout the entire length of our Western boundary, is in many places well wooded. The soil enriched by the annual overflow yields abundant crops. Cotton, sugar, and rice can be cultivated to great advantage here—with a direct outlet to the sea and a market.

Silver and copper mines of great value have been opened on the Colorado, above Fort Yuma, giving additional testimony to the immense mineral wealth of this much abused territory. My letters inform me that the new town lately laid out opposite Fort Yuma, is progressing steadily, already having a population of [illegible] a large hotel, and those indispensable adjuncts of American civilization, a billiard-room and bowling-alley. The Pacific Railroad, when built, must cross the Colorado here. It is already a principal station of the San Diego and San Antonio, and the Memphis and San Francisco Stage Companies. Property is held here at high rates, and with reason. Two steamers ply regularly in the river, between the Gulf of California and Arizona City, doing a lucrative and constantly increasing business. This section of the country is perfectly protected by a large garrison, at Fort Yuma. I should say here, that in the summer months the heat is very oppressive on the Colorado, but not more so than on the Sacramento and the San Joaquin rivers of California.

The labor employed in the territory is almost exclusively Mexican. Thousands of laborers can be obtained across the line in Sonora, Chihuahua, at a cost not to exceed from $12 to $20 per month. Their capability is principally confined to mining and herding stock, but under intelligent American superintendence they can be made useful in any pursuit requiring manual labor. In a new country possessing undoubted resources which must make it a thriving State there is always a field for the mechanic, the farmer and the trader. Carpenters, blacksmiths and other artizans find constant employment at high wages, and they have beyond this the same opportunities for rapid money-making which the speculative character of a new country always affords.

The large amount of capital and labor employed in the mines will give an abundant market for the farmer. A little capital finds itself doubling, with ordinary caution in investing it; and the professional man, in addition to his well-warded labor in his profession, finds in a new country that every species of labor is honorable should he prefer some other.

THE YEAR ONE THOUSAND.

Just as this century drew to a close, various circumstances conspired to produce a change in men's minds. It was a universally diffused belief, that the world would come to an end when a thousand years from the Savior's birth were expired. The year 999 was therefore looked upon as the last which any one would see.—And if ever signs of approaching dissolution were shown in heaven and earth, the people of this century might be pardoned for believing that they were made visible to them. Even the breaking up of morals and law, and the wide deluge of sin which overspread all lands, might be taken as a token that mankind were deemed unfit to occupy the earth any more. In addition to these appalling symptoms, famines were observed from year to year in still increasing intensity, and brought plague and pestilence in their train. The land was left untilled, the house unrepaired, the right unvindicated; for who could take the useless trouble of ploughing or building, or quarrelling about a property, when so few months were to put an end to all terrestrial interests? Yet even for the few remaining days the multitude must be fed. Robbers frequented every road, entered even into walled towns, and there was [illegible] authority left to protect the weak, or bring the wrong-doer to punishment. Corn and cattle were at length exhausted; and in a great part of the Continent the most frightful extremities were endured; and, when endurance could go no further, the last desperate expedient was resorted to, and human flesh was commonly consumed. One man went so far as to expose it for sale in a populous market town. The horror of this open confession of their needs was so great that the man was burned, but more for the publicity of his conduct than for his inherent guilt. Despair gave a loose to all the passions. Nothing was sacred—nothing safe. Even when food might have been had, the vitiated taste made bravado of its deprivation, and women and children were killed and roasted in the madness of the universal fear.

Meantime, the gentler natures were driven to the wildest excesses of fanaticism to find a retreat from the impending judgment. Kings and Emperors begged at monastery doors to be admitted brethren of the Order. Henry of Germany and Robert of France were saints according to the notions of the time, and even now deserve the respect of mankind for the simplicity and benevolence of their characters. Henry, the Emperor, succeeded in being admitted as a monk, and swore obedience on the bangle of the gentle abbot, who had failed in turning him from his purpose. "Sir," he said at last, "since you are under my orders, and have sworn to obey me, I command you to go forth and fulfill the duties of the state to which God has called you." "Go forth, a monk of the Abbey of St. Vanne, but Emperor of the West." Robert of France, the son of Hugh Capet, placed himself, robed and crowned, among the choristers of St. Denis, and led the musicians in singing hymns and psalms of his own composition. Lower men were satisfied with sacrificing the marks of their knightly and seigniorial rank, and placed bridbnks and swords on the altars, and before the images of saints. Some manumitted their serfs, and bestowed large sums upon charitable trusts, combining their disposition with words implying the approaching end of all. Crowds of the common people would sleep nowhere but in the porches, or at any rate within the shadow of the churches and other holy buildings; and as the day of doom drew nearer and nearer, greater efforts were made to appease the wrath of Heaven. Peace was proclaimed between all classes of men. From Wednesday night till Monday evening of each week there was to be no violence, or enmity, or war in all the land. It was to be a Truce of God.

And now came the dreaded or hoped for year. The awful Thousand had at last commenced, and men held their breath to watch what would be the result of its arrival. "And he laid hold of the dragon, that old serpent, which is the devil, and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seale upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled; and after that he must be loosed a little season." (Rev. xx. 2, 3.) With this text all the pulpits in Christendom had been ringing for a whole generation. And not the pulpits only, but the refection-halls of convents, and the cottages of the starving peasantry. Into the castle also of the noble we have seen it had penetrated; and the most abject terror pervaded the superstitious, while despair, as in shipwrecked vessels, displayed itself amid the masses of the population in rioting and insubordination. The spirit of evil for a little season was to be let loose upon a sinful world; and when the observer looked round at the real condition of the people in all parts of Europe—at the ignorance and degradation of the multitude, the cruelty of the Lords, and unchristian ambition and unrestrained passions of the clergy—it must have puzzled him how to imagine a worse state of things, even when the chain was loosened from "that old serpent," and the world placed unrestrictedly in his folds. Yet, as if men's minds had now reached their lowest point, there was a perpetual rise from the beginning of this date. When the first day of the thousand and first year shone upon the world, it seemed that in all nations the terror of the past was to be thrown off. There were strivings every where after a new order of things.

The first joy of their deliverance from the expected destruction impelled all classes of society in a more honorable and useful path than they had ever hitherto trod.

THE HOLY GRAIL.

The Sangreal, or San Grail, or Holy Grail, was, according to the old legend, the cup from which Jesus Christ drank at the Last Supper with his disciples; the verse which "An Old Reader" so justly admires, is from the very beautiful poem, "Sir Galahad," by Tennyson. The "Blood of God," spoken of, is doubtless the wine, which the doctrine of transubstantiation makes to have been turned into blood at Christ's blessing.

"The Vision of Sir Launfal," by James Russell Lowell, is another poem containing something about the Holy Grail. The "Quest of the Sangreal" needs some little explanation. The tradition is as follows:

Joseph of Arimathea, after the death of his Divine Master, resolved to quit the sacreligious land of Judea. Selling all his effects, he sailed with all his household for the shores of Gaul, but was driven out to sea by a violent storm, and came at last to Britain in safety. Here he deposited the Holy Grail; (which he had brought with him, a memorial of his departed Master, and which he thought unsafe in his own charge,) in the ward of certain holy men of his company, whom he left in a wonderously built and inaccessible castle, guardians of the treasure. These warders were to be pure and chaste, in thought, word, look and act. If any should fail, the cup would vanish from their sight, and only by a perfectly pure and holy knight could the inestimable precious relic be recovered—nor then, without great toils, patience, and dangers from every side. Should the knight, even for an instant, in thought only, turn from the strictest chastity, should he even in the most fleeting, instantaneous wish, violate the stainless honor of knighthood, his quest of the Sangreal was ended—he could never hope to find it.

The holy men, with jealous care, preserved the goblet for many years, when the evil day came, and, tempted overmuch, one of them fell from his purity of desire, and the cup was gone. Then they came to Arthur's Court; they besought him to send his gallant knights, that this relic might not be lost for ever.

Over mountain and moor, through valley and pestilential fen, rode the brave warriors, each on a different route. Many and strange were the adventures of the searchers for the Holy Grail. Once Sir Launcelot arrived at a chapel, and there tying his horse, he entered and fell upon his knees, to pray for the happy termination of his quest. He fell into a trance, and while he lay kneeling in the trance, behold a train entered the chapel and approached the altar, where stood a grave man, with a long white beard, whom Launcelot knew to be Joseph of Arimathea. The old man gave the ghostly company the sacrament, and the cup with which he gave them the wine was the Holy Grail. One asked Joseph of Arimathea what was that knight lying there upon the chapel floor (for Launcelot could move neither hand nor foot, but lay as if bound,) while the holy sacrament was administered. Joseph told them that it was Sir Launcelot, and he should have had the Holy Grail, for that he was the bravest and greatest of the knights, only that he lived in adultery with his master, King Arthur's wife, Guenever. At which Launcelot groaned audibly, and the train passed with slow procession down the aisle, and through the door, and so departed. Launcelot got up, groaning and weeping, and mounted his horse and returned from his profitless search, with many tears. [New York Observer.

THE ABAR AND HIS STEED.

A Bedouin, named Jabal, possessed a mare of great celebrity. Hassan Pasha, then Governor of Damascus, wished to buy the animal, and repeatedly made the owner the most liberal offers, which Jabel steadily refused. The Pasha then had recourse to threats, but with no better success. At length, one Gafar, a Bedouin of another tribe, presented himself to the Pasha, and asked him what he would give the man who should make him master of Jabal's mare? "I will fill his horse's nose-bag with gold," replied Hassan. The result of this interview having gone abroad, Jabal became more watchful than ever, and always secured his mare at night with an iron chain, one end of which was fastened to his tent-pole, whilst the other, after passing through the tent-cloth, was attached to a picket driven in the ground under the felt that served himself and his wife for a bed.—But one night Gafar crept silently into the tent, and succeeded in loosening the chain.—Just before starting off with his prize, he caught up Jabal's lance, and poking him with the butt end, cried out, "I am Gafar!—I have stolen your noble mare, and will give you notice in time." This warning was in accordance with the customs of the desert, for to rob a hostile tribe is considered an honorable exploit, and the man who accomplishes it is desirous of all the glory that may flow from the deed. Poor Jabal, when he heard the words, rushed out of the tent and gave the alarm; then, mounting his brother's mare, accompanied by some of his tribe, he pursued the robber for four hours.—The brother's mare was of the same stock as Jabal's, but was not equal to her; nevertheless he outstripped those of all the other pursuers, and was even on the point of overtaking the robber, when Jabal shouted to him, "Pinch her right ear, and give her a touch of the heel." Gafar did so, and away went the mare like lightning, speedily rendering further pursuit hopeless.

The pinch in the ear and the touch with the heel were the secret signs by which Jabal had been used to urge his mare to her utmost speed. Jabal's companions were amazed and indignant at his strange conduct. "O thou father of a jackass!" they cried, "thou hast enabled the thief to rob thee of thy jewel." But he silenced their upbraidings by saying, "I would rather lose her than sully her reputation.—Would you have me suffer it to be said among the tribes that another mare had proved fleeter than mine? I have at least this comfort left me, that I can say she never met with her match." Rarey's Art of Taming Horses.

THE BENEDICTION.

For the origin of this we must go to the Old Testament. There we have the formula of a benediction to be pronounced on the Jewish people, Divinely prescribed, and the persons specified, who alone were authorized to pronounce it. The prescribed formula of benediction was: (Numbers, vi. 24-26,) "The Lord bless thee and keep thee; the Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee; the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace." The persons authorized to pronounce this benediction were Aaron and his sons. (1 Chron. xxiii. 13,) "Aaron was separated, that he should sanctify the most holy things, he and his sons for ever, to burn incense before the Lord, to minister unto him, and to bless his name for ever.

This priestly benediction was significant. The import of it was, The Lord confer richly upon you the bounties of his providence and his grace, and enable you to enjoy them; the Lord cheer and enliven you by kindly smiling upon you; the Lord give "that Heavenly calm within the breast" which he only can bestow. And undoubtedly this benediction thus prescribed by the Fountain of all good, and uttered by those who were appointed mediums between himself and his people, brought down mercies both temporal and spiritual upon those on whom it was pronounced.

The language of the benediction under the Gospel—the Christian benediction, is somewhat different. It is, (2 Cor. xiii. 14,) "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of the Father, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all." This formula was uttered by the Apostles, and has been used since, and is used now by the Church in conformity to their example. We have no just reason for believing that the ordinances of Jehovah under the Gospel have not as much virtue as his ordinances had in former days, and if they have this virtue, then this inspired formula is now made the vehicle of precious blessings. It should be so regarded, and instead of being lightly uttered, or considered, as it too often is, but a mere signal for the breaking up of the congregation—should be reverently and gratefully received. GUIZOT UPON LAFAYETTE.

I cannot think of M. de Lafayette without a feeling of melancholy affection. I never knew a character more generous, more kind to all, a greater friend to justice, one readier to risk all for his faith and his cause. His kindness, although banale toward individuals, was none the less true and profound for humanity in general. His courage and devotion were ready and serious, under appearances of a contrary character, and of as good alloy as of good grace. He had, in his life, a constancy of sentiments and of ideas, and days of vigorous resolution, which would do honor to the firmest friends of honor and of resistance. But he lacked political judgment, discernment in the appreciation of circumstances and of men, and he had a laisser-aller on his own declivity, a carelessness on the probable results of his actions, a permanent and indistinct need of popular favor, which made him float much beyond his intentions, and threw him often into influences of an inferior order, often even into influences as contrary to his moral nature as to his situation. Republican in his soul, without daring either to bravo or proclaim the Republic, he rejected as obstinately as vainly the return of royalty; and before the Chamber of 1815, irritated without being alarmed, he engaged himself, there to remain as long as the Restoration lasted, in the ranks of his enemies. From 1820 to 1823, he was not the real chief, but the instrument and the ornament of all the secret societies, of all the projects of revolution, even of those of which, had they succeeded, he would have disavowed and combatted the results.

LONG SERMONS.

I have a friend who vents his opinions in a terse and epigrammatic style, and by consequence, he is sometimes dogmatical. Discoursing about the length of sermons, the other day, he furnished me with the following scale, which I beg to transfer to you, for the benefit of your clerical readers.

Short sermons	25 minutes
Orthodox do.	35 do.
Long do.	50 do.
Preposterous do.	60. do.

I was very much struck with the small interval between the long and the preposterous; and upon expressing my surprise at this sudden shortening of the scale, my friend discoursed as follows:

"When a sermon reaches 55 minutes, it has passed the Rubicon; each additional minute is equal to two, until the hour is exhausted; thereafter the increase is in geometrical progression; and the English language does not furnish adjectives sufficiently expressive to describe sermons beyond the 60 minutes. Orthodox sermons may be either long or short, but never preposterous."—Presbyterian.

Dr. Merle D'Aubigne.—This venerable historian of the Reformation is now in Dublin, and a short time since addressed a large assembly of Roman Catholics. The Doctor spoke in English, with great clearness and force, urging upon all the Roman Catholics present the fulness of Christ to meet all their need, and showing how those who have the Savior already, possess all the Church can bestow. The venerable Genevan delivered a sermon in French, on the 1st inst., in the Presbyterian chapel in Adelaide-road, which was attended by foreigners residing in Dublin, as well as by some of the Dublin Episcopalian clergy and laity.

HEART-SEED.

The [illegible] British Review, in a notice of "Ser[illegible] Rev. John Caird," who became [illegible] world by the favor with which the [illegible] heard [illegible] sermon on "The Religion of [illegible] Life," has the following sentence:

"[illegible] another element of strength, which will ever be [illegible] characteristic of the great and successful preach[illegible] the multitude—we mean, much use of the very [illegible] of the Bible. Mr. Caird seldom quotes Scripture. [illegible] should never be forgotten, that however attractive [illegible] of God's words may be, these words are the [illegible] take hold of the heart."

The writer of this sentence understands the philosophy of "preaching the Word." And he has the rare faculty of uttering a great truth without circumlocution. He covers the whole ground in the fewest, fittest and most comprehensive words. A volume would probably fail to impress the truth taught more powerfully upon the mind, than the sentence quoted. It is well worthy of study, especially by all Ministers of the Gospel.

It is to be noted that our Saviour, when consoling his disciples in view of his approaching departure, with the promise of "the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost," said: "He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." "He will guide you into all truth, for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak." "He shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you." The Holy Ghost, Himself, has set us the example of speaking Christ's chosen words, instead of our own, whenever it is possible.

"The words that I speak unto you," said the Savior, in another place, "they are spirit and they are life." And he makes the believing, spiritual reception of his words into the heart, the eating of the flesh and the drinking of the blood of the Son of man, without which, "ye have no life in us." "The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." "The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." "The sword of the spirit, is the word of God." "The sower soweth the word," "the good seed of the Kingdom, the seed of Spiritual and eternal life. "The great and successful preachers to the multitude," in Apostolic times, were "mighty in the Scriptures."

The question is worth considering, whether or not absence of Bible language in a sermon is not indicative of the absence of Bible study, and of the thought and feeling of a mind thoroughly imbued with the ideas and spirit of the word of God. That taste is false, and, for a preacher, lamentable, which prefers words of [illegible] choosing before the living words in which the Holy Ghost has uttered the mind of God. And it is not only lamentable for the preacher, but it is more so for the hearer. He is defrauded of "the sincere milk of the word," and fed with dilutions of human fancy, sentiment, and, it may be, thought. "The engrafted word which is able to save the soul," is substituted by words which may have vitality enough for beautiful foliage and flowers, but not for living, satisfying fruit.

There is danger that, in straying from the use of Bible language in preaching, and in seeking for words more in accordance with perverted human fancy, we also stray from the truths of the Bible, and get to preaching something else. Can the mind, thought and spirit, of the Holy Ghost, in the utterance of the precious doctrines and promises of the Christian [illegible], as found in the terse and vital words of the Holy Scriptures, be expressed and conveyed to the heart and conscience of the hearer, in the ambitious verbiage so common among pulpit orators?

LETTER FROM GREECE.

ATHENS, May 5, 1856.

THE AREOPAGUS.—Our drive to that interesting place was exclusively chosen by our party for the interest felt in the narrative of St. Paul, in carrying the Gospel to the most refined and polished people upon earth. We had an acquisition to our party in the society of Dr. M. and lady, from Jerusalem. He was a physician, but belonged to the English Mission to the Jews, who had been interested in their situation for many years. He and his excellent and accomplished lady were devout and zealous Christians, wholly devoted to the cause of Christ. We ascended Mars' Hill, with deep emotion, and on the same steps, cut in the rock, which St. Paul went up perhaps 1800 years ago. Beneath the hill, was carved in a rock the form of the cross, to point out the place where he stood to declare to that wise people the knowledge of the true God.

We took our seats upon a rock near the summit of the hill, not far from where he must have stood; while our friend, the Missionary, read to us the chapter of Acts, 17, with much feeling, enforcing the sublime truths in the same place, with their own simple eloquence, in sight of the ruins of the same temples upon which St. Paul cast his eye, when he said his spirit was stirred within him when he saw the whole city given to idolatry.

There was the Acropolis in all its glory just above, with the statue of Minerva, the presiding deity whom they worshipped. On the one side the caves of Pan and Apollo; around him, upon the hill, statues of heroes and statesmen; the temple of Thesis on the left in full view standing before our own sight—and it required but little effort of the imagination to fill out the picture so impressive to our minds, in that position and place—St. Paul before us, surrounded by the most accomplished sophists of the age, who came to hear "what that babbler had to say."..... O! how sublime did those words sound, in his appeal to the understanding of those philosophers—"For, as I passed by and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, To the unknown God. Whom ye ignorantly worship, Him declare I unto you—God that made the world and all things therein. Seeing that the Lord of Heaven and earth dwelleth not in temples made with hands, neither is worshipped with men's hands, for in Him we live, and move, and have our being, as some of your own poets have said, And we are his offspring."

Here, amidst this august assembly of the most refined and accomplished scholars of the age, was delivered the most eloquent sermon that ever fell from human lips; which must have caused those mighty minds to quail beneath the power of such mighty truths, sent home with spirit upon their hearts and consciences. The poets and philosophers must have trembled before such irresistable eloquence from the tongue of St. Paul, upon Mars' Hill.

How his sublime sentiments, delivered with such power, cast into a shade their Pantheistic philosophy, with all its sophistry of intellectual wisdom.

What an audience was listening to that speech, which was to strike a sure blow to their idolatry and unfurl the banner of the cross, to wave in all quarters of the world, and for all nations to flock unto it like doves to their windows.

Never did the words of St. Paul sound more eloquent in our ears, than when read to us by our valued Missionary friend upon Mars' Hill, where they were first spoken; in sight of the very temples upon which he cast his eye and referred to. We were carried to the period when he stood before that powerful assembly which drew them forth, in the first establishment of Christianity in Greece—the preaching of Jesus, and the resurrection from the dead. The faces of these temples have fallen—the courts no longer filled with orators, sages or poets—but the rocks and ruins are there, breathing a solemn eloquence in their silent loneliness, more powerful than words. There was an echo for thought in that clear atmosphere, among ruins once radiant with beauty, and which now fill the world with admiration—and, as our friend observed after reading the chapter, so full of meaning; the place and circumstances all combined to render the truths more impressive, as we looked around and saw the judgment of God written upon the ruins of those idolatrous temples, where refined intelligence and intellectual wisdom worshipped images made with hands, and the unknown god.

Some of these great people, who listened to St. Paul's reasoning, said "we will hear thee again of this matter;" others mocked, and departed from him; but some believed, and among them Dyonisus, the Areopagite, and honorable women not a few—one who must have been distinguished, named Damaris. O! how full of interest was that place! We walked over the rocks which crown the hill, in front of the Acropolis, and took the last view of the lofty temples which stand as beacons of the past, with rays of departing glory lingering around their walls and broken columns. The air was fragrant with sweet odors, and although the harp was still that once breathed forth notes of unrivalled melody in immortal song, yet strains come up from the past like a funeral, sad and pensive, as their accents died away in mournful numbers upon memory's ear.

Before we left Athens we visited the schools of the American Missionaries, the Rev. Mr. Hill and his lady, who have been successfully laboring to advance the education of the youth in Greece. Mrs. Hill had about 400 females under her charge, between 200 and 300 of the poorer classes, and others, of the most distinguished families in Greece, who patronize their institution; and many more who have entered into the most responsible stations of life have been entirely educated by them; the maids of honor to the Queen—and we met one young lady at their home, who was to supply the place of one lately married. She was a Greek girl of sixteen, of beautiful countenance and accomplished manners, dressed partly in the European and Grecian costume. She wore the scarlet fez, with a tassel falling gracefully on one side over her beautiful black hair, handsomely arranged, neater and more becoming than a bonnet on the back of the head. But the ladies of Greece, whom we have seen, adopt, most generally, the European costume, which destroys their classic grace. We saw but a few faces which bore much resemblance to the antique statues of beauty. The children in the schools were favored with remarkably fine eyes, expressive of intelligence; and Mrs. Hill said they were very precocious, and acquired knowledge with ease and rapidity, and loved learning. Their infant schools were very interesting; they sang for us some hymns in modern Greek, perfectly charming, their beautiful black eyes sparkling with delight. The poor children are taught in all the useful branches of education—learn to read the Bible, sew, and make garments with great neatness: They were dressed so clean and looked so neat, in school-rooms airy and suitable, that it was perfectly delightful to look at children so well cared for in every respect. The establishment is worthy of all praise.

If we were to judge of Greece by modern Athens we should think the country was in advance of all others we had seen in these parts, with an appearance of intelligence and sound happiness, that we should hardly think we were in a foreign land. But the country is said to be in a wretched condition, and government very bad.

We visited the palace of the King, situated on a beautiful elevation, with a fine view of the Acropolis and other ruins. We reached the palace-yard just as the King and Queen came out for their evening ride on horse-back, which they take every day. King Otho was a tall man, with a fine figure, dressed like the Albanians, with white kilt or shirt, with ample folds just above the knee, drawers and long embroidered gaiters, embroidered tunic, with shawl around the waist, and the Turkish fez. The costume is perfectly graceful and picturesque. The queen was dressed in a black cloth riding-dress and hat—European in style. She was a woman about forty, of a noble and commanding look, fine figure, with a countenance expressive of great decision of character, which she exhibited in all her movements, with an air much superior to the King. She is said to be his superior in intellect. She mounted her horse with spirit, and rode off with an air of perfect ease, on a fine horse. They passed within a few feet of us, which gave us a perfect view of their persons. They have no children, much to their regret—no heir to the throne.

After their departure, we entered the palace and saw all the apartments, which were large and airy, but plainly furnished. The King's Throne-room was draped in crimson velvet; her's with drab color, very neat—very little gilding about them. Their gardens were very beautiful, laid out in picturesque style, with gravel walks among flowering shrubs and trees of luxuriant growth. There are many fine buildings and beautiful gardens in modern Athens, which shows a state of improvement truly pleasing.

We left this beautiful city of classic shade, where the

"Illisus rolls
"His whispering streams within its walls."

The school of ancient sages, full of reminiscences of the past, which every one feels like the sweet strains of music to the soul. The Hymettus is there, with its flowering hills,

"And sound of bees, industrious."

Their honeyed sweets were placed upon our table, and we partook of the banquet, fresh as in the days when their bards sang of its praise Helicon and Parnassus too, with all their charms of ancient inspiration, for which no modern lyre is tuned.

We were treated with great politeness by our American Consul and Missionary friends. We were invited to take tea at the Rev. Mr. Hill's, and also at Dr. King's; but had not time to accept of their hospitality. Dr. King, married a native Greek lady, and has an interesting family of children. He showed us his little Church, much like a Wesleyan chapel, built with great neatness and simplicity, attached to his house—where he preaches every Sabbath to a small congregations. There are but a few converts who have joined the American Churches; the Greek prevails.

We bade adieu to scenes immortalized by undying genius; and went on board a steamer bound for Constantinople, at Pirasus. We had, in our company, Bayard Taylor and his most amiable wife, who left Athens at the same time we did. We were highly favored in our sea-voyage, with fine weather and good company. We passed by the beautiful island of Mytilene or Cestos, spoken of by St. Paul; the birth-place of Sappho; Terpander, the musician and poet; Hellanicus and Theophanus, historians; and the philosophers, Thsophrastus and Phanias. What an inspiration in names; and what a charm they give to places which otherwise would have but little interest. Mountains, rivers and lakes in the old world, with the sunny islands, are identified with them—which lends enchantment to every view. The river Illissus is but a tiny stream, like a little brook, but invested with poetical and imperishable beauty, which the mighty rivers which encompass the globe never possessed. We passed the island of Tenedos, near the Hellespont, but were disappointed in entering the Strait of the Dardanelles at night, and were deprived of the sight of the two vast continents, which appeared within a mile of each other. The once ancient Sestos and Abydos—where Xerxes threw across his bridge of boats, and wreaked his vengeance on its waters by casting in his iron fetters.

S. B. THOMAS.

THE RELATION OF CHILDREN TO GOD AND THE CHURCH.

THIS is a question eliciting interest and discussion; and it is important that the relation of children to God and the Church should be clearly defined.

The recent discussion reaches to this point, viz: that children, being in a sinless state before years of accountability, by proper religious instruction and training, continue in a salvable state, or, in other words, grow up to be Christians without conversion or the necessity of a new birth, and entitled to Church membership. From this opinion we dissent, and assume:

1st, That all men are conceived in sin, and brought forth in iniquity.

2d, That all such as die before years of accountability, are saved; not by any faith of theirs, or works of obedience, but purely by the free grace and atonement of Christ, through the mercy of God.

3rd, That when a child arrives at years of accountability it becomes a sinner by actual transgression, unless it becomes a Christian by some act required of and done by it, as a co-worker with God, and receives adoption by the witness of the Spirit. Sin was entailed on our race by the transgression of Adam. Mr. Wesley, in his sermon, No. 45, first volume of sermons, on the new birth, page 401; part of first division, No. 4, uses this language: "Every man born into the world now, bears the image of the Devil, in pride and self-will; the image of the beast in sensual appetites and desires;" hence it is, that being born in sin, we must be "born again;" hence, every one that is born of a woman, must be born of the Spirit of God.

We must all admit this to be the true Scripture doctrine.

The innocency of the child before accountability is not because of any inherent good, but the absence of all actual sin; for in its youthful immaturity it is incapable of sin, until old enough to know good from evil or arrives at years of accountability. Therefore, in the subject's mind and heart there is no good, no Christian foundation, upon which at discretionary years to pass into the love and service of God, without some change being first wrought by God upon the heart. Mr. Wesley in the same sermon quoted, on page 402; under fourth head, second division, in speaking of a child born into the world, says: "hence he has no knowledge of God, no intercourse with him, he is not at all acquainted with him;" with other remarks equally strong, and to the same point. We all admit that the proclivities of a child are of a sinful nature; and many things done by them in immature years, would be sin, if committed in mature years; children many times take the name of God in vain, they will tell falsehoods, will steal, evince anger, evil passions, and such like; but these are not sins in them, because they do not know that they are such; and if they die when young, they are saved; and that salvation is alone through the merits of Christ's death, and the merciful provisions of God, and not from any compliance on their part with the Gospel requirements.

The child, in his minority and without the knowledge of sin and the law of God, is truly represented in Romans, 7th chapter, and latter clause of the 8th verse: "For without the law sin was dead." When he arrives at years of accountability, he is truly represented, in the 9th verse of this same chapter—"For I was alive without the law once, but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died." In minority he was dead to the law, not knowing it or its obligations; and, dying in that condition, is saved through the merits of Christ, for he said "Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven;" when, however, he becomes old enough to obtain a knowledge of the law of God and the nature of sin, then the commandment exists and he at once becomes a sinner.

We think the question susceptible of the plainest and most satisfactory solution, by bestowing upon it some reflection.

1st, The child dying in infancy, is saved not from its compliance with the terms of the Gospel, but through the merits of Christ's blood, and the mercy of God.

2d, That when a child arrives at accountability, being a sinner by nature and prone to evil, if it does not then, and just then, before actual sin is committed by him, exercise faith in God, and enter upon a Christian life, it, from necessity, becomes a sinner by actual trangression, and must repent and believe the Gospel, or it cannot see the Kingdom of God in peace.

We will favor you with No. 2, upon this subject, soon.

SPECTATOR.

ALABAMA, Sept. 4th, 1856.

CLAPTRAP NAILED TO THE COUNTER.

IT IS THE custom of Baptist Ministers in walking down into the water to perform the ordinance of Baptism to repeat the 38th verse of 8th chapter of Acts; "And they went down both into the water, both Philip and the Eunuch, and he baptized him!"

The speciality of the mention here made, of both going down into the water, is deemed an argument conclusive in favor of immersion; and perhaps the ad captandum manner in which this has been used, has influenced some minds. Now it is evident, that if this special mention of both administrator and subject going down into the water proves by implication, anything, it is against exclusive immersion. How? Well, let's see: Luke affixes no other idea to the act performed than that of immersion, say the Baptists. If this position be true, why mention so specially that both went down? If Baptism was by immersion alone, simply to state that the chariot was stopped near the water and that Philip baptized the Eunuch, would have covered the whole idea or fact of their having both gone down into the water.—But we see it specially stated, that both went down into the water, and the particularity with which the fact is thus mentioned, of both going down into the water, implies that those for whose immediate benefit St. Luke wrote, would not know that both did go down, by a simple declaration that the baptism was performed.—That is, it might have been performed without both going down into (or to) the water, Philip might have gone down to the water with a cup or bucket, and procured water to baptise him in the chariot; or up above the water, at some place agreeable to the Eunuch; but the humility and anxiety of the Eunuch is indicated by his getting out of the chariot and going to the water with Philip; and hence, particular mention that both went down. If the question arises, "Does this disprove baptism by immersion?" We answer, no! It simply disproves the use (misuse) which is made of the text. The whole force of the passage, as the Baptists use it, lies in the special mention of both going down into the water. And we contend, that if there be any special force in favor of immersion, in the mention that both did go down into the water; just in proportion to the intensity of that force, does the argument that baptize means Immerse, and nothing but immerse, become weakened. Here, there, is a dilemma. If the fact stated, that Philip baptized the Eunuch, was as strongly expressive of the two going down into the water as it could be, how does this special mention that both went down, strengthen it? If this special mention does strengthen the argument, then the word baptize is surrendered as not being perfectly expressive of immersion.

LIVINGSTON ALABAMA.

PLEASANT HILL ACADEMY.—We call attention to the advertisement, in another column, of "Teachers wanted." This is a fine opening for a gentleman and lady. The Male Academy, though entirely separate, is to be preparatory to "Pierce and Paine College."

WELL DONE KENTUCKY!—The Kentucky Conference, at its recent session, the first after the General Conference, by a vote of thirty-six to twenty-four, concurred in the recommendation of the latter body to expunge the General Rule on Slavery, from the Discipline.

PROF. KOHLMEYER.—We call attention to the advertisement of Prof. Kohlmeyer's School for Boys. We know him, personally, and can recommend him heartily. And some of our friends in this city, who have availed themselves of his services in the study of the Greek and Hebrew languages, speak of him as a most excellent Teacher.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY.

A CORRESPONDENT says the Southern Christian Advocate, requests the republication of the facts respecting the correspondence that took place shortly after the division of the Church, between a committee of the Georgia Conference and the Executive Committee of the American Tract Society, in reference to the possibility of our Church being represented in the Publishing Committe. We are not aware says the editor, that the correspondence was published, but we can give from the best authority the substantial facts of the case.

In 1850, the Revs. W. J. Parks and J. E. Evans, were appointed by the Georgia Conference to open a correspondence upon this subject. They called the attention of the Tract Secretary to the fact that there was no representative of Arminian theology in the Publishing Committee; and that, independent of this fact, it was proper that so large a Church as the Methodist should be represented in a catholic society. They stated that the Southern division of that Church was now without a Publishing House, and that if a favorable answer were given, it might result in the bestowing of its patronage on that Society.—They suggested, therefore that the next vacancy in the Committee be filled by a Methodist.—To this measure, several objections were urged; among others, that it had been a custom in filling a vacancy, to offer it to the denomination to which the former incumbent belonged. It was then suggested that, in a matter involving so weighty interests, it might be well to add another member to the Committee; and if they could not find one, perhaps the General Conference would be able to direct their choice. But there were sundry objections made to this proposal; and, when finally our committee inquired of the Secretary if he could suggest any plan by which the Methodist Church could be brought into a closer relation, by representation, with the American Tract Society, he answered that there was no way open to reach that object. And here the correspondence was dropped.

Our correspondent informs us, the editor adds, that he desires these facts to meet misrepresentations that are made in his section.—Any representation, that in any way connects the Methodist Episcopal Church, South with the Society, is a misrepresentation; one to which we hope even Mammon cannot tempt a Christian agent.

LETTER FROM REV. H. H. MONTGOMERY.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi Conference:

BRETHREN: Will you awake, to see and act? "What now?"

Why, a great deal: We want to engage every one of you as colporteurs in our bounds.

We have at our Depository at Vicksburg a large stock of very valuable books, etc.—just such as you ought to have been selling to the people of your charges all this year.

I would urge every one to engage in this work, because I know the destitution is very great. Very few congregations have one half as many Hyma-books as they ought to have. Very few families, comparatively, have a supply of books such as their circumstances, wants, and the times require. The youth are not supplied with books suitable for them—interesting to them—that would enlist them in reading. By sending to us you can get books suitable for small children, youth, grown persons, middle-aged and aged. We have every variety, from the pictorial primer to the quarto volume. Books suitable to awake sinners, for the awakened; young convert; the advancing Christian; those coming up to the ripeness of men in Christ Jesus; suitable for the afflicted; bereaved; of travels, etc, etc. But they will not do good unless active men put them into circulation—then people read them. I appeal to you, then as men who profess to be striving to do good, to send in your orders, and try to supply your people. Some of you may not be able to sell very many, yet you might dispose of $20 to $50 worth very readily. Will you try it, my brother? Good will be accomplished by it—great good, too. I see reports of many conversions in some of your charges; those lambs of the flock need books to read on doctrines, on Christian duty, etc. Don't neglect them and thus lose your labor. Unless you put the right sort of books into their hands the wily proselyter will decoy them into sterile grounds; and they may be for ever lost.

Only act, and our whole stock may be sold out by conference. This would encourage the Board of Managers in their efforts to keep a good stock on hand. Brethren, will you act? The Depository was established that you might be able readily to supply the people with such literature as will do them good.

Our clerk, brother W. H. Nelson, will fill orders with dispatch. Send on.

Yours in the Work.

H. H. MONTGOMERY, Agent.

"VARIOUS READINGS" OF SCRIPTURE.

Dr. Kennicott's testimony respecting the Hebrew Scriptures has often been quoted. When he had an audience of his sovereign to present his great work, His Majesty asked him, "What, upon the whole, had been the result of his learned and laborious investigation?" To which he replied, that he had found some grammatical errors, and many variations, in different texts, but not one which in the smallest degree affected any article of faith or practice. Similar is the following testimony, recently borne by a distinguished Biblical student, James Smith, Esq., of Jordan Hill, F. R. S.: "It may be satisfactory to those who look with suspicion upon the numerous various readings appended to critical editions, to know that, in that very considerable portion of the Gospels which I have copied, I have not been able to detect a shade of difference in the meaning, either doctrinal or historical. But the difference between the earlier and the later MSS., although unimportant as to the matter, are of great importance in an inquiry like the present," (Origin and Connection of the Gospel,) "where so much depends upon verbal expression."

"ANNUAL CONFERENCE JOURNALS."

"The Book Agent has inserted an appeal for patronage in behalf of the Nashville Christian Advocate, in a late number of that paper, to which we take exceptions.

"He says all the other papers are mere 'Annual Conference Journals.' So they are; but they are also definitely, indisputably church papers, published for the Methodist Episcopal Church South."

The above is from the North Carolina Christian Advocate. Our brother Heflin, it seems to us, gets up a contest without an issue. Our Church papers are all General Conference Journals; not one of them is an Annual Conference Journal. The North Carolina Advocate was once an Annual Conference Journal, but since the last General Conference, being adapted by that body, it is no longer such. In the language of the Discipline, the Church papers are all "organs of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." Can any but a General Conference Journal be thus designated?

THEOPHILUS WALTON.

WHILE watching at night with a sick child down with the prevailing epidemic in this city, we have found the only time to be spared for the reading of this book. We have fully high an opinion as that expressed some time since by Dr. Mitchell. It is a book of power and that power well directed. It needs only be read, to destroy Theodosia "and all her works."

Our old friend, Rev. Wesley Smith, of the Texas Conference, writes to the Texas Advocate as follows: "I have given this work two careful readings, and to say that I am pleased expresses not half of my feelings, in regard to its worth. I am truly delighted. Since the introduction of the unfortunate and uncalled for controversy, which has been forced upon the Christian Church by exclusiveists, no work in my estimation, has more fully met the wants of the times than Theophilus Walton. The author, Rev. William P. Harrison, has sifted this whole question to the bottom, and has exposed in a masterly manner the deformities and absurdities of anti-pedoism, and baptism, by immersion, close communionism, and Bible revisionism. Let every lover of truth at once procure a copy and read it—read and circulate—pass it around."

There is very little of the novel about it, says the Southern Presbyterian, but a great deal of strong, unanswerable argument, in favor of infant Baptism and against the exclusive claims of immersionism. As an offset to Theodosia Earnest, it is complete and satisfactory, and we advise our friends who have seen the latter to get the book. They will find it as effective extinguisher of the boastful, arrogant pretensions of the much vaunted Theodosia.

THE YELLOW FEVER is not abating. Deaths for the week ending last Sunday morning, about 400. Deaths for thirty hours, ending yesterday noon, 107.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

VALENTINE COOK.

The following letter, to JAMES SMITH, Preacher in the Lakes' Circuit, will show what Methodist preachers endured in early times:

VERY DEAR BROTHER:—These hints may enable you to form some idea of my circumstances. I have now walked near sixty or seventy miles, and am within ten miles of the head of the Lakes, at Mr. Wethern's, who I somewhat expect will lend me a beast as I am obliged to leave my horse, with but small hopes of his recovery. Yesterday I walked upwards of thirty miles in mud and water, being wet all day without, yet heaven was within. Glory to God! I had three tempters to encounter, the devil, the mosquitoes, and my horse; and the rain and my wet clothes were my lament; and God my comfortor; and victory my white horse. Hitherto, O Lord, has thou been my helper, and I trust thou wilt save to the end.

Brother Fleming is to take my appointments through Tioga. I mean to overtake him if possible, and get him to attend the Quarterly Meetings downwards in my stead, and so return to the Lakes' circuit in a few weeks, all which I shall have to do afoot if I can't get a horse. You can fix your circuit as you think best, but only appoint for yourself till I come myself or send one. If Brother Fleming's horse should not be recovered, I shall have to go on. My trials are furious, but I am not discouraged. I hope you'll pray for me. It would be necessary when you meet the classes to examine closely and urge union, and give a close exhortation at the end of the meeting, enforcing and pressing the several duties of the members. That class-leader at Appleton (not brother Baily) has been intoxicated. I would not admit him, even on trial, without verbal obligations that he will not drink another drop, excepting in cases of medicine, and that himself shall not be physician in the case. If you can get a class, it would be well to make brother Baily leader. I thought the Discipline would stir them. Satan is not willing they should be Methodists, for he knows their sins will get no rest amongst us. I am as ever, sincerely and affectionately in Christ.

VALENTINE COOK.

UNION SCHOOLS.

"A Welshman," in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, says: "Of the hundreds of Methodist Churches with whose origin and history I have been familiar, I have yet to find the first one that originated in a Union Sabbath School." We suppose the reason to be, that the Bible, when its doctrines are taught without sectarian note or comment, does not lead to Methodism. Religious Herald.

No; it is because, 1. There are those make their living by seeking "the Lion's share" in all co-partnerships of this kind, while Methodists never do. 2. The so-called "Union Schools" are generally gotten up by those who are not Methodists, and, getting a few Methodists into them, call them "Union," for the sake of getting Methodist strength. The "Union" men are generally the most deeply-dyed sectarians and prosolyters in the land, and seek entrance into other folds, for their own special purposes, under an assumed character.

Methodists doctrines, as will be seen by the XXV Articles of the Discipline, have no sectarianism in them. They teach the saving fundamental truths of the Gospel, and leave the sectarian and controverted tenets to others. A Methodist "comment" cannot be a "sectarian" one, while of few others can this be said.

PROF. DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID, advertised in another column, and for sale at Drug Stores in this city, is highly recommended by several papers in Alabama and Georgia, and by many of our personal friends, as being very valuable.

The Southern Christian Advocate speaks very highly of it. We understand that the Howard Association of this city is using it. We know nothing of the medicine, but we know that Prof. Darby is a scientific man.

QUARTERLY REVIEW FOR OCTOBER.

After our paper for this week was about full, we received the Quarterly. This promptitude, as to the time of issuing it, we venture the opinion, is doing immense service in the, at present, very important work of sustaining it. We have neither time nor space, this week, for a notice of its contents, further than to say they are excellent, and will be eagerly read by all capable of being interested in such things.

COMMUNICATIONS must be accompanied by the real name of the writers. They can exercise their own choice as to whether the real, or a fictitious name shall appear in the paper. But the editor must know the name of the writer, whether it is to appear or not; otherwise the communication will not be published.

SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS.—John Dory, of the Western Christian Advocate, says that he has never yet heard of a school examination in which the pupils did not "acquit themselves creditably," and "met the most sanguine expectations of those present."

CORRECTION.—"You will please correct the mistake you made in the publication of my last communication. You say Warren Colored Mission. It should have been, "Warren Circuit, Mississippi Conference." The meetings were held in two very important neighborhoods."

P. E. G.

DR. HIRAM COX, a Chemist, of Ohio, states that during two years he has made Five Hundred and Seventy-Nine inspections of various kinds of liquors, and has found nine-tenths of them poisonous concoctions.

It is the intention of the Galway Company to place six steamers on their line, four of which—the Prince Albert, the Indian Empire, the American Empire and the British Empire—have already commenced running.

THE NEWS OF THE WEEK is mostly comprised in the report that the Atlantic Cable is about to prove a failure; we decline publishing the dispatch.

ORDER OF MALTA.—It is not generally known that the once famous Order of Malta is still in existence; but such is the fact, and a gentleman named Calloredo is at the head of it, with the title of lieutenant. The Pope has lately authorized it to establish at Jerusalem, or its environs, an institution in which a certain number of members can reside and follow the rules of the order, and has sanctioned certain regulations for the internal government of this institution. These regulations impose on the members of the order the necessity of receiving and assisting pilgrims, and authorize them to receive young men as candidates for admission to the order.

BULLIONS EX CATHEDRA.

In order to write any language with grammatical purity, three things are required.

First, That the words be all of that language. The violation of this rule is called a barbarism.

Second, That they be construed and arranged according to the rules of Syntax, in that language. A violation of this rule is called a solecism.

Third, That they be employed in that sense which usage has annexed to them. A violation of this rule is called impropriety. BULLION.

REV. DR. F. MONOD.—We are gratified to perceive that notwithstanding Dr. Monod's anti-slavery sentiments, which led him, before his visit to this country, to give his signature to the celebrated Swiss letter on slavery, he has taken strong ground in his own country in favor of the conservative course of the American Tract Society, for which he is severely called to account by the New York Independent.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Monroe and Trenton Circuit—

REV. T. B. WHITE, writes: "At a meeting of five days duration which took place in the Colony near Monroe, a number of souls professed faith in Christ—twenty-four united with the Church and the Church was much revived. Among the number who joined us, was a grocery-keeper who says the grocery shall stop. Twelve children were dedicated to God in baptism. Bros. Manly and H. H. Williams assisted, their labors were blessed. "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace and good will to man."

"P. S.—Southern Christian Advocate, please copy."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Brookhaven Circuit—

REV. A. B. NICHOLSON, writes: "Believing you would be glad to hear the result of our meeting in this place, I will give you a few lines in regard to it. We closed on Sunday night after you left us on Monday; twenty-seven whites and some blacks joined; a goodly number were converted, could not tell how many. We would have continued through the next week if we could have procured preachers. Bro. S. L. L. Scott, stayed with us during the meeting, preached with great acceptability, taking all into consideration it was a good meeting. Yours and brother Marshall's visit to us was one of the greatest treats we ever had, and left good impressions. You know this piny woods country is just coming into notice, and our best preachers never visit this part of the country. I hope you will not forget to come again some time. Our Quarterly Meeting, the last one for this year came, off yesterday and day before, our P. E., was with us in his usual health, he is with us to-day, one man joined which makes fifty-three whites received on probation in Brookhaven this year, and about that number at all the rest of my appointments. There is quite a religious interest through this country. Bro. Jones, our P. E., speaks very favorably of his whole district, the Methodist Church is doing a great work in this part of Mississippi. We hope to see you at Otopaso camp-meeting, eight miles from Summit Station, on the New Orleans and Jackson railroad. There will be a hack running from there to the camp-ground every day."

Meadville Circuit—

REV. H. M. YOUNGBLOOD, writes: "We closed a five day's meeting at Mount Vernon, last Wednesday night.—We had fourteen accessions and fourteen conversions, and the Church was greatly revived; eight of the fourteen who joined, were heads of families, an unusually large proportion.

"God is still with us in power and great glory, blessed be his holy name, forever and ever, Amen.

"I have just returned from a meeting, on brother Charles McNiel's work, Buffalo Circuit at Mount Carmel; up to Wednesday night there had been about twenty-five or thirty conversions and reclamations, and fifteen accessions and brother McNiel designed to continue the meeting, perhaps, till Sunday.

"We have more good news, we held a meeting of three and a half days, at Little Spring, which closed on yesterday, we had ten accessions and several conversions. The Lord is still with us, Glory and honor to his holy name."

Scotland Circuit—

REV. J. B. ROWEN, writes: "We held a meeting of six days at old Mount Nebo, which resulted in the accession of eleven whites, and several clear conversions. Nearly the entire membership have been powerfully revived, many backsliders were renewed again unto good works. Such is the spirit of the work that they ask for another protracted meeting; which we give them, embracing the fifth Sabbath in October.

"We have held a meeting of two days at Brandywine Spring; two joined the Church, all made happy in God. We have lately gained a membership of thirty; they intend building a large Church.

"A meeting of great interest has just been closed at Sweet Water, Copiah county, of nine days continuation. I have never seen a deeper work in the membership, a meeting of such power to this large and entire membership; twelve joined; five whites—six or seven clear conversions. As a brother remarked: they did not have the preacher to tell them that they had religion. Five made a profession of "perfect love." One of them, a young preacher of promise, who is recommended to the Annual Conference. Our congregations were large and serious; we hope this meeting will yet result in the salvation of many who were present.

"To Bros. Ercanbrack, Gloss, Johnson, Mortimer, Harty and our much loved P. E., John G. Jones, we are deeply indebted for their help."

Wilkinson Circuit—

REV. E. A. FLOWERS, writes: "That at one of his appointments he held a meeting of three days, resulting in twelve accessions to the Church; and at another, continuing from the 5th to the 9th inst., twenty were added to the Church and about as many converted. At both, the membership were greatly revived. Bros. Sellers, Jones and Wheat assisted.

The Third Quarterly Meeting for Concord Circuit, Miss Conference, commenced August 28th, and was protracted until September 12, resulting in the conversion of thirty-four whites and three blacks, and an accession to the Church of forty whites and eight blacks. Of the whites, some six or seven were from the Baptist Church.

Warren Circuit—

REV. P. G. GREEN, writes: "We have just closed another very interesting meeting. This meeting we began on the 4th at Mount Albon, and closed it on the 13th inst. We had dinner on the ground every day but the last. And here let me say I never saw my people support a meeting better. Methodists, Baptists, and those that did not belong to any branch of Christ's Church, all brought up their good things and offered them willingly to the Lord. And thank God, the result was, the Church was revived, backsliders reclaimed, sinners convicted, many mourners happily converted to God, and eighteen white persons—some heads of families, some young men and ladies of great promise—joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Others will join the Church in Vicksburg. Thanks to our brethren in the ministry for their faithful services."

Bayou Pierre Circuit—

REV. V. H. JOHNSON, writes: "You can say to the friends of Zion, that we have just closed a very pleasant and profitable meeting at Pleasant Valley, eleven joined, about the same number professed religion; baptised four adults and one infant. The Church generally revived, left about fifty mourners at the altar. Missionary collection, one hundred and ninety dollars."

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Black's Bend Circuit—

REV. A. WEST, writes: "The Lord has graciously revived his work on my Circuit, I held a meeting some time since at the Academy, at which a number professed conversion—eleven white and seventeen colored persons joined our Church. What astonished me was, that when we called for mourners, members of the Baptist Church came forward and asked us to pray for them. At Gravel Creek Church we had a meeting that lasted one week, at which fourteen were converted, sixteen white and two colored persons united with us. It was a time of refreshing, from the presence of the Lord." Brother Ramsey and brother Moody assisted me. We have just closed a meeting of seven days at Palmetto Church, at which eight were converted—ten white and fourteen colored persons joined the Church. It was a time long to be remembered. The P. E., was with us on Saturday and Sunday, it being his Third Quarterly Meeting; brother Perry was with us, and did us faithful service. Brother Moore and Dr. Farish gave us a sermon each."

Black Oak Circuit—

REV. E. R. MCCLELEN, writes: "Showers of blessings from "clouds of mercy" have been watering the vineyard of the Lord in the bounds of Black Oak. Since the first of August, about sixty souls have escaped from the city of destruction to the Mount of God, and found a refuge from the coming storm. Of the converts and penitents, forty-two joined our Church. Among the men converts there were a number of heads of families; and some of them were far advanced in life. The Church, too, was gloriously revived. "The Lord has done great things for us whereof we are glad." Thanks to the local brethren. May God bless the local preachers everywhere."

Talladega District—

W. D. MATTHEWS, P. E., writes: "I write a few lines to inform you and the friends of Zion, generally that the great hand of the Church has not forgotten us in these ends of the earth; we have had prosperity, more or less generally, through the year thus far. Protracted personal affliction has kept me from the upper portion of my field of labor, for some time, and I desire to speak now more particularly of the Southern portion of the District.

SOCAPATOY CIRCUIT, is in a better state than it has been for years past, and a general revival spirit pervades the entire charge, and many have been added to the Church recently.

TALLAPOOSA CIRCUIT, is in a healthy state, with some accessions, and good prospects ahead.

ROANOKE CIRCUIT, is all alive with hallowed love, and upwards of one hundred gathered into the Church during the last quarter, and prospects cheering.

ARBACOOCHEE MISSION, while mourning the loss of her excellent young pastor, Rev. J. W. Mabry, who left the scenes of labor upon earth for the rest of Heaven but a few weeks ago, is nevertheless enjoying almost unparalleled prosperity. Brother Mabry had made a fine beginning, and his new charge gave him up with much regret, but we were very fortunate in securing a "supply," brother Lasiter, and can say, "while the workmen fall, the work goes on gloriously." Nearly one hundred reported for last quarter, and prospects brighter than ever before. And now let me tell you of an old fashioned, camp-meeting which we have just closed here."

WHITE PLAINS CIRCUIT. It has been a long time since I witnessed the like, a plain simple old fashioned camp meeting; it was plain that the people came to get and do good, no parade nor ostentation; simplicity characterized every thing, and forty ladies could get into the altar at one time and not be crowded, nor were they in danger when they kneelt. And the preachers preached, and the Church prayed and sang the songs of Zion, and got happy and shouted, as in days of old. "O it was good to be there," and if the fodder, had not been wasting, and we could have spent a day or two more, I think we should have made a clean sweep. On the last day and night there were very few sinners on the ground, that were not in the altar.—Conversions were clear and powerful, thirty-five were added to the Church. We have had recently some very extraordinary cases of conversion, one man at the age of seventy-five years, and others not far from that age.

LEWIS A. REED, P. E.

Waterproof, September 17, 1858.

Died

One of the most touching incidents of the prevailing epidemic is the death of MR. J. A. TRICE. Blessed with a most devoted wife, who on account of feeble health had left him for their former home in Clarksville, Tenn., with great reluctance and many fears, more than usual interest was felt by their friends for his preservation. He took the fever, got well, and telegraphed to his wife. But exposing himself before his strength was fully regained, he relapsed, and the next news to his poor wife was, that he was dying. His loss is regretted by many friends.

Marriages.

YELLOW FEVER! YELLOW FEVER!
TO THE AFFLICTED CITIZENS OF NEW ORLEANS!
Read Carefully and Thoughtfully.

DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID.—The greatest known agent for Purifying the Air. It is a new and important discovery. It is a triumph of scientific skill. It is the result of learned inquiry. It is the fruit of patient research.

This invaluable Agent is now presented to the people of New Orleans, for the first time. It is a Chemical union of materials, provided by Nature herself, for rendering the air we breathe pure and healthful. It is not a mixture, but a true Chemical compound. Its action is in obedience to fixed laws, quick, sure, powerful. It purifies dwellings, sewers, sinks, privies, kitchens. It removes all offensive odors immediately. It cures burns, bites, and stings of insects. It relieves boils, cleanses ulcers, heals sores. It cleanses teeth, sweetens breath.

It has been used with most remarkable success in Typhoid Fever, Scarlet Fever, Measles; indeed, in all contagious diseases it is invaluable.

In the City of Charleston, S. C., it is now in constant use by Leading Physicians, in Yellow Fever.

Orders from that City represent it, as in the most active demand: it has not been advertised there but one month, yet orders for hundreds of bottles, have been filled for that City.

In the City the HOWARD ASSOCIATION, is now using it in the treatment of Yellow Fever.

TRY IT—It can be had at, J. WRIGHT, & CO'S, Drug Store, 21 and 181, Chartres Street. Price 50 cents. s 22

Dr. Hostetter's Bitters have received the warmest encomiums from the press and people throughout the Union. As a valuable tonic for the cure of Dyspepsia, Flatulence, Constipation, and general nervous debility it cannot be approached. Every day new cases of its great effect are chronicled through our principal public journals. There is nothing equal to the enjoyment which the afflicted experience when using this valuable specific. Its mild tone, its sure and vigorous action upon a disordered stomach, and the cleansing of the entire human body, should recommend it to all classes of our community. All that will be necessary to convince the skeptical of its healthy effects, is to purchase a bottle and be convinced.

The Great Drawback to persons emigrating to the extreme Western country, is the great fear they have of the Fever and Ague—the most direful of all diseases. Every day we hear of persons attacked by this disease, and made helpless in a short time without any means of affording relief. In view of the great demand for a remedy, Dr. HOSTETTER has presented his celebrated "Bitters," whose curative powers for all diseases of the stomach have been universally acknowledged. The "Bitters," prepared after a long experience and deep study, have received the encomiums of the most eminent physicians, as well as all classes, fr m every part of our country. To those who doubt their many virtues, all we can say is, to try them, and judge for themselves respectively.

EDUCATIONAL.

GREENSBOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL,
REV. J. W. N. MEARS, A. M. M. D.,
PRINCIPAL AND PROPRIETOR.

IN this School a thorough course is laid out for Pupils in the Classics, Mathematics, French and English, and young men desiring to enter the Freshmen, Sophomore, or Junior Class in "The SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY," or any other College, will have every necessary facility afforded them for that object.

A commodious building is now in the process of erection, with ample play grounds attached, and a most delicious shade. New School-room Furniture, of the most approved kind, consisting of Desks, Settees, Chairs, Large Black board Slates, Maps, Charts, Painting, and a Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, has just been purchased by the Principal in New York; and indeed every thing reasonable has been done to render the school-room comfortable and attractive.

The object of the Principal is to make this School what its name imports, A High School, where young men can prepare for College, or for entrance upon business life. Instruction, if desired, can be given in German and Hebrew. Those fearing charge of the education of young men, would do well to investigate the claims of this School.

Provision has been made for a limited number of Misses, who will be placed in a separate department, under a competent and experienced Instructress. They will be taught all the branches necessary to a finished education.

The Principal desires to urge upon the consideration of those who intend to educate their sons in the Southern University, the propriety of placing them at once where they can commence a course of study which will be carried on during their collegiate career.

The second annual session will commence (Providence permitting) on the 1st of September, and will continue nine consecutive months, including the usual vacation. It will be divided into three terms of three months each.

The tuition must be paid at the middle of each term, or interest will be charged. The justice of this claim will be at once acknowledged, when it is recollected that the Principal has incurred great expense for the benefit of the community, and needs the prompt payment of tuition bills to enable him to meet it.

No pupil will be admitted for less than a session. Any injury done to the house, or furniture, or premises, beyond the legitimate use of it, will be charged to the pupil in whose care the desk, &c. is.

No deduction will be made for the absence of any pupil; if, however, any pupil is absent on account of sickness for more than a week, the place of the absentee may be supplied by another.

In case of the expulsion of any pupil, the refunding ment of the claim for tuition to be optional with the Principal. The full payment of the tuition in such case will be most positively required where the Principal is not satisfied that he has had the entire co-operation of parents to the full extent of parental authority, "in bringing the disobedient to the wisdom of submitting to the powers that be." The Principal will decide this matter. It is his determination to throw the responsibility for the department of his pupils upon their parents, where it belongs. Children trained properly at home, will, as a general rule, behave properly at school. For the good of society, idleness, obstinacy and malice should never find even a temporary home in the school-room. They are a Pandora's box, out of which spring a multitude of evils.

It is desirable that pupils commence promptly with the commencement of the session.

For further particulars apply to the Principal,
Greensboro', Ala., Aug. 6, 1858. sep 8-ol.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF ITINERANT MINISTERS, distinguished, for the most part, as Pioneers of Methodism within the bounds of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South: Edited by Thos. O. Summers, D. D.

Retail price, in muslin	$2 50
Muslin, gilt edges	3 00
Half Turkey, (library style)	3 25

These Sketches are full of interest. While they portray briefly the character, life and labors of some of the most distinguished Ministers of the New World, the historical reminiscences are very valuable. The volume is an octavo, containing nearly 400 pages. The type is large, the paper superior, and the binding substantial. It is ornamented by several engravings, and, we judge, is a work that will find an extensive circulation. We advise our friends to procure this valuable publication.

ANNALS OF SOUTHERN METHODISM.—A beautiful volume, of over 400 pages; very valuable and highly interesting—Price, $1: usual discount to wholesale purchasers. Single copies sent by mail (postage prepaid) for $1 00—when cash accompanies the order.

LIFE OF BISHOP CAPERS.—This highly interesting volume is now ready for distribution. Competent judges, who have read the work, pronounce it excellent; every way worthy the distinguished author, Rev. W. M. Wightman, D. D., and the great and good Bishop, whose life and character are so beautifully and truthfully portrayed. Price, $1—usual discount to wholesale purchasers. Single copies sent by mail (postage prepaid) when orders are accompanied by the cash.

THEOPHILUS WALTON; or, THE MAJESTY OF TRUTH. A Reply to Theodosia Ernest. By a member of the Alabama Conference. This new book, though but recently announced, has reached an issue of 5000, and the demand for it is still active. For $1, sent by letter, we will send the book by mail and prepay the postage.

POST-OAK CIRCUIT.—This work has already reached a sale of 12,000 copies, and is wonderfully popular, as evinced by the notices of the press, both religious and secular, North and South. A full supply on hand.

"We went right through it. It is a gem of its kind. We hope a thousand hearts will grow warm at its fire." [Rich. C. Advocate.

"May the day come, when every Methodist will salute every other, saying—'Have you read Post-Oak Circuit yet?' and be answered—'Yes, twice.'" [South. C. Adv.

"It is full of sharp sayings, and each chapter is a battery of hot shot. We don't know the author, but guess some of our old stewards have got down into Red River Conference." [North. W. Chr. Advocate.

"A book of telling power and effect in many passages, and of living interest throughout." [Char. Courier.

"A charming little volume. We cannot but recommend it with all our heart." [Balabridge Argus.

THE GREATEST
Medical Discovery
OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,

From the worst Scrofula down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of blles.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One or two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corns and running ulcers.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the rhoum.

Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed growing on the pastures, and along old stone walls, should cure every humor in the system; yet it is a fixed fact. If you have a humor, it has to start. There are no IFS nor ANDS, home nor has about it suiting some cases, but not yours. I peddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts. I give it to children a year old, to old people of sixty. I have seen poor, puny, wormy-looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to a perfect state of health by one bottle.

To those who are subject to a sick head ache, one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief in catarrh and dizziness. Some who have taken it had been costive for years, and have been regulated by it. Where the body is sound it works quite easy, but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it will cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed; they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad result from it; on the contrary, when that feeling is gone you will feel yourself like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever man listened to.

KEEPING BIRTH-DAYS.

One perhaps is bounding over the trackless ocean, with nought around him to mark that other human beings, save his shipmates, are connected with him. But he has been accustomed to keep his birth-day, and knows that his brothers and sisters, his father and mother do the same, and are at that moment thinking of him. He knows, he feels, he joins the family in wishes and prayers, for mutual blessings and protection. The family circle, the firesides of his house, and the festal board—the kind thoughts and recollections of his kindred, are all present to his mind's eye. His soul and theirs are joined, though their bodies are far asunder, in love and affectionate remembrance, and in communion with the Universal Parent. Another is far away, east or west, immersed in business, and might forget and be forgotten by those whom years of absence have divided from him, unless there were some fixed period for renewing the family tie—the bands of mutual interest, the memory of the games, the loves of childhood. What pe... would be lost if the birth-day was disregarded?—Christian Churchman.

LADIES SHOULD READ NEWSPAPERS.

It is one great mistake in female education to keep a young lady's time and attention devoted to only the fashionable literature of the day. If you would qualify her for conversation, you must give her something to talk about, give her an acquaintance with this actual world and its transpiring events. Urge her to read newspapers and become familiar with the present character and improvement of our race. History is of some importance; but the past world is dead, and we have nothing to do with it. Our thoughts and our concerns should be for the present world, to know what it is, and how to improve the condition of it. Let woman have an intelligent opinion, and be able to sustain an intelligent conversation concerning the mental, moral, political and religious improvements of our times. Let the gilded Annuals and Poems on the centre-table be kept a part of the time covered with weekly and daily journals. Let the family—men, women and children—all read the newspapers.

REASONS FOR EDUCATING OUR DAUGHTERS.

1. A good thorough education is the richest patrimony we can give them.

2. The education of your daughters is the first step towards family education and elevation. How often has the education of an elder daughter educated all the younger children, sent a brother to college, and raised the whole household from obscurity to the highest position in society?

3. Such an education saves our daughters from the painful regrets of a whole life.

4. With such a fortune, let the wealth of your daughter take wings and fly away, as it often does, and she is still independent, and as an accomplished instructor, can do more than retrieve all her losses.

SOUTHEY'S OPINION OF WOMEN AND MARRIAGE.

"A man may be cheerful and contented in celibacy, but I do not think he can ever be happy; it is an unnatural state, and the best feelings of his nature are never called into action. The risks of marriage are far greater on the woman's side; women have so little the power of choice, that it is not perhaps fair to say they are less likely to choose well than we are; but I am persuaded that they are more frequently deceived in the attachments which they form, and their opinions concerning men are much less accurate than men's opinion of their sex. Now, if a lady were to reproach me for having said this, I should reply that it was only another mode of saying that there are more good wives in the world than there are good husbands, which I really believe. I know nothing which a good and sensible man is so certain to find, if he looks for it, as a good wife.

A SERENE OLD AGE.

The venerable Rev. John Angell James, in a volume on "Christian Hope," just issued in England, says: "In the seventy-third year of my life, and the fifty-third of my ministry, I have no need of a special revelation to assure me that 'I must shortly put off this my tabernacle;' by the course of nature this cannot be far off. The shadows of evening are gathering fast and thick around me, and I find it most consoling on the border country of the world unseen, to go forward into what would be otherwise a dark unknown, guided and cheered by a hope full of immortality."

GET A HOME.

Get a home; rich or poor, get a home, and learn to love that home, and make it happy to wife and children by your presence; learn to love simple pleasures, flowers of God's own planting, and music of his own, the birds, wind and waterfall. So shall you help to stem the tide of desolation, poverty and despair, that comes upon so many through scorn of little things. O, the charm of a little home! Christians dwell there that shun the gilded halls of society. Live humbly in your little house, and look to God for a grander one.

OBEDIENCE TO THE MOTHER.

"Come away; come instantly, or I will call your father," I heard a mother say to her child, who was playing in the street before her window. I did not stop to learn the result; but I pitied the poor mother who had not power enough within herself to control her child, and who so unblushingly declared her inefficiency.

A mother should never thus appeal to the father's authority to strengthen her own, nor should she admit, by thought, word or deed, that her power is inferior to his. God never made it inferior; and he requires as prompt obedience to the one as to the other. The mother who allows herself thus to appeal to another is continually weakening the authority she should exercise over her children. She is herself teaching them to disobey the "command-ment with promise"—for what child can honor a mother too weak to govern him.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer the Little Children to come unto Me."

CHILDREN'S EDITORIAL.

We have some beautiful reading for the children this week. The piece headed, "Collect a Library," may make some boy a wise man, or some girl a wise woman. The next one, headed, "The Poor Boy," will keep some boy from being too proud to wear a patched coat. The next should keep you all from using tobacco. The next one, about the "Sunday School Flag," should encourage every Sabbath School. The one about "Pictures" will help to direct and refine the taste of the boys and girls.

"BY-AND-BY."

There's a little mischief-making
Elfin, who is over nigh,
Thwarting every undertaking,
And his name is By-and-By.

What we ought to do this minute,
"Will be better done," he'll cry,
"If to-morrow we begin it;"
"Put it off!" says By-and-By.

Those who heed his treacherous wooing,
Will his faithless guidance rue;
What we always put off doing,
Clearly we shall never do:

We shall reach what we endeavor,
If on Now we more rely;
But unto the realms of Never,
Leads the pilot By-and-By.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS.

As a young friend was standing with us noticing the pedestrians on the sidewalk, a very stylish and elegant girl passed us. "What beautiful hands Miss ——— has!" exclaimed our friend.

"What makes them beautiful?"

"Why, they are small, white, soft, and exquisitely shaped. The fingers taper down most delicately, and there is a roseate blush on the finger nails that no artist could imitate."

"Is that all that constitutes the beauty of the hand? Is not something more to be included in your catalogue of beauty, which you have not enumerated, to make the hand desirable?"

"What more would you have?"

"Are they charitable hands? Have they ever fed the poor? Have they ever carried the necessities of life to the widow and the orphan? Has their soft touch ever smoothed the irritation of sickness, and the agonies of pain? Do the poor bless those rosy-tipped fingers as their wants are supplied by them?"

"Are they useful hands? Have they been taught that the world is not a play-ground, or a theater of display, or a mere lounging-place? Do those delicate hands ever labor? Are they ever employed about the domestic duties of life—the homely, ordinary employments of the household? Or does the owner leave all that to her mother, while she nourishes her delicate hands in idleness?

"Are they modest hands? Will they perform their charities or their duties without vanity? Or do they pander to the pride of their owner by their delicacy and beauty? Does she think more of their display than of the improvement of her intellect and character? Had she rather be called 'the girl with the beautiful hands,' than to receive any other praise for excellency of character?

"Are they humble hands? Will their owner extend them to grasp the hand of that old school-fellow, who sat at the same desk with her, and on the same recitation bench, but who now must earn her living by her labor? Or will they remain concealed, in their exclusiveness, in her aristocratic muff, as she sweeps by her former companions?

"Are they religious hands? Are they ever clasped in prayer, or elevated in praise? Does she remember the God who has made her to differ from so many of her sex, and devote her mind, her heart, her hands to his service? Does she try to imitate her Savior by going about doing good? Or are her hands too delicate, too beautiful to be employed in good works?

"These are the qualities that make the hand a beautiful one in my estimation. There is an amaranthine loveliness in such hands superior to the tapering slenderness of the fingers, or the roseate hue of the nails."

PICTURES.

A room with pictures in it and a room without pictures, differ by nearly as much as a room with windows and a room without windows. Nothing, we think, is more melancholy, particularly to a person who has to pass much time in his room, than blank walls with nothing on them; for pictures are loop-holes of escape to the soul, leading it to other scenes and other spheres. It is such an inexpressible relief to a person engaged in writing, or even reading, on looking up, not to have his line of vision chopped off by an odious white wall, but to find his soul escaping, as it were, through the frame of an exquisite picture, to other beautiful and perhaps heavenly scenes, where the fancy for a moment may revel, refreshed and delighted.—Thus pictures are consolers of loneliness; they are a sweet flattery to the soul; they are a relief to the jaded mind; they are windows to the imprisoned thought; they are books; they are histories and sermons—which we can read without the trouble of turning over the leaves.

A SERMON FROM AN UNEXPECTED QUARTER.

Recently the officials of one of our Sabbath-breaking Railroads were expecting the Postmaster General A. V. Brown, to pass over their line of road. And in order to make demonstrations becoming the reception of so important a personage, cedars, roses, ribbons, buckhorns and banners were brought into requisition to adorn the iron horse and the train of cars that were to be drawn after him. In the confusion and haste of getting a flag for the occasion, one was taken from a stack of Sabbath School banners that was standing near by, and when it was unfurled, lo and behold there was displayed in blazing capitals the following ominous motto, "Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy!"

Of course when this was discovered the banner was quietly folded up and laid away, and one procured with an inscription more suitable to the principles and practice of the company.

THE EFFECTS OF TOBACCO.

The Dublin Medical Press asserts that the pupils of the Polytechnic School in Paris have recently furnished some curious statistics bearing on tobacco. Dividing the young gentlemen of that college into two groups, the smokers and the non-smokers, it shows that the smokers have proved themselves in the various competitive examinations far inferior to others. Not only in the examinations on entering the school are the smokers in a lower rank, but in the various ordeals that they have to pass through in the year, the average rank of the smokers had constantly fallen, and not inconsiderably, while the men who did not smoke enjoyed a cerebral atmosphere of the clearest kind.

THE POOR BOY.

Don't be ashamed, my lad, if you have a patch on your elbow. It is not a mark of disgrace. It speaks well for your industrious mother. For our part, we would rather see a dozen patches on your jacket, than hear one profane or vulgar word escape your lips. No good boy will shun you because you cannot dress as well as your companions. We know many rich and good men who were once poor and friendless boys; and if you are poor and upright, you will be respected a great deal more than if you were the son of a rich man, and addicted to bad habits.

COLLECT A LIBRARY.

Begin in early life to collect libraries of your own. Begin with a single book; and when you find or hear of any first-rate book, obtain it if you can. After a while get another, as you are able, and be sure to read it. Take the best care of your books; and in this way, when you are men, you will have good libraries in your heads as well as on your shelves.

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

MRS. SARAH R. NORTHCUT, daughter of John and Polly Robbins, formerly of Conecuh county, Ala., died at Indian Springs in Monroe county, 27th ult., in the 29th year of her age. She had been a member of the Baptist Church until a few days before she was taken sick, when, at a protracted meeting at Pineville, she with her husband, John Northcut, joined the Methodist Church. This meeting closed on Thursday night; on Saturday following, she was taken sick, and on the next Friday she breathed her last.

She met death with calmness, resignation, and a consciousness of her acceptance with God. She spoke of death as the end of all her troubles, and her entrance upon joys eternal. Made arrangements, and gave directions for the raising of her little daughter, her only child, charging her sister to whose care she committed her, to teach her to "love God, and that she had a mother in heaven." Exhorted her weeping husband to be steadfast in the cause of religion that he had so recently espoused, saying to him, "be faithful and meet me in heaven." Which he promised to do. Her sisters, relations, and neighbors, all received from her dying lips, a charge "to meet her in heaven." And while they in their distress were weeping around her she told them "not to weep for her, she was going to heaven; that she had wept over her sins, and felt they were all pardoned, and that now she did not feel like weeping, but rejoicing, that she felt peace with God."

In this happy frame of mind this good sister bid farewell to all below to join the blessed above. A. C. RAMSEY.

Allenton Ala., August, 31 1858.

SIDNEY ANNA, youngest child of Capt. D. R., and Mrs. Mary Wadsworth Matgah, died at Pattersonville Sept. 6, after four days illness of yellow fever, in the sixth year of her age. She has gone to join a younger sister, and the glorious band of infants, in that better land.

And shall our bleeding hearts arraign
That God whose ways are love,
Or vainly cherish anxious pain,
For those who rest above?
No—let us rather humbly pay
Obedience to his will,
And with our inmost spirit say
The Lord is righteous still. A FRIEND.

MRS EMILY A. ALFORD, wife of E. M. Alford and daughter of J. S. and E. H. Pritchard, died in Madison county, Miss., 7th August. She was born January, 26, 1858, married Nov. 1st, 1853, converted October 1856.—Much might be said with regard to her noble and amiable qualities of heart and mind, as manifested to the various relations she bore to society, as daughter, wife, mother and neighbor. In her death the Church has lost one of its most consistent members, her husband, a loving and devoted wife, and her two little sons, a most affectionate mother. But she died in peace with God and all the world, and rests in heaven. J. A. LIGUT.

McLEAN'S
Strengthening Cordial
AND BLOOD PURIFIER.

THE GREATEST REMEDY IN THE WORLD!!

THIS Cordial is distilled from a berry known only to myself, and chemically combined with some of the most valuable medicinal Roots, Herbs and Barks known to the mind of man, viz: Blood Root, Black Root, Wild Cherry Bark, Yellow Dock, Dandelion, Sarsaparilla, Elder Flowers, with others, producing the most infallible remedy for the restoration of health ever known.

IT IS NATURE'S OWN REMEDY,

curing disease by natural laws. When taken, its healing influence is felt coursing through every vein of the body, purifying and accelerating the circulation of the blood. It neutralizes any bilious matter in the stomach, and strengthens the whole organization.

McLEAN'S STRENGTHENING CORDIAL

will effectually cure Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Chronic or Nervous Debility, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all Diseases arising from Disordered Liver or Stomach, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Rush of Blood to the Head, Sourness or Sickness of the Stomach, Heartburn, Disgust of Food, Fluttering of the Heart, Swimming or Pain in the Head, Choking or Suffocating Sensations on lying down, Dimness of Vision, Night Sweats, Fevers, Dryness of the Skin, Yellowness of the Skin or in the Eyes, Pimples or Blotches on the Face or Skin, Inflammation of the Blood, Melancholy or Depression of Spirits, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Bloody Flux, Constipation of the Bowels, Inward Piles, Diseases arising from the use of Mercury, Pain in the Bones, Coughing, Debility, Nervousness, Gravel, Impure Blood, Loss of Memory, Bilious Colic, Gout, Liver Complaint, and Fever and Ague, or Chills and Fever. It will also cure diseases of the Bladder and Womb, such as Sexual Weakness, Incontinence of Urine, Strangury, Inflammation or Weakness of the Womb or Bladder, &c.

THERE IS NO MISTAKE ABOUT IT.

This Cordial will never fail to cure any of the above diseases, if taken as per directions on each bottle, in English, German and French.

OVER HALF A MILLION OF BOTTLES

have been sold during the last six months, and in no instance has it failed in giving entire satisfaction. Who, then, will suffer from weakness or debility when McLean's Strengthening Cordial will cure you?

TO THE LADIES.

Do you wish to be healthy and strong? Then go at once and get McLean's Cordial. It will strengthen and invigorate your whole system, causing a healthy and pure circulation of blood to flow through every vein, and the rich, rosy bloom of health to mount to your cheek again.

EVERY BOTTLE IS WARRANTED TO GIVE SATISFACTION.

FOR CHILDREN.

We say to parents, if your children are sickly, puny, or afflicted with complaints prevalent among children, give them a small quantity of McLean's Cordial, and it will make them healthy, fat and robust.—Delay not a moment. Try it and you will be convinced.

IT IS BELIEVED TO TAKE

should not leave the city until he had procured a supply of McLean's Strengthening Cordial. It sells rapidly, because it always cures. A liberal discount will be made to those who buy to sell again.

CAUTION—Beware of druggists or dealers who may try to palm upon you some Bitter or Sarsaparilla trash, which they can buy cheap, by saying it is just as good. Avoid such men. Ask for McLean's Strengthening Cordial, and take nothing else. It is the only remedy that will purify the blood thoroughly, and at the same time strengthen the system.

One table spoonful taken every morning fasting is a certain preventive for Cholera, Chills and Fever, Yellow Fever, or any other prevalent disease.

Price only $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5

McLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT.

THE BEST LINIMENT IN THE WORLD FOR MAN OR BEAST.

ANOTHER REMARKABLE CURE

Performed by McLean's Vulcanic Oil Liniment. Read for yourselves:

Thomas Ford, a blacksmith, living near Cass avenue, on Tenth street, had a horrible running sore on his foot. He tried various Liniments, Salves, etc., but could do it no good. He despaired of ever being able to work at his trade again, because he could not bear any weight on his foot; and by one small bottle of McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment, he is now perfectly cured.

Rheumatism, paralysis, neuralgia, bruises, sprains, stiffness in the joints or muscles, swellings, sore throat, earache or tooth ache, wounds, fresh cuts, sores, burns, scalds, pains, etc., yield to the magic influence of this Wonderful Liniment.

For Horses and Cattle it is an infallible remedy for chafes, galls, scratches, crooked heels, lameness, spavin, sweeny, splint, fistula, bruises, swellings, wounds, rattlesnake bites, and various other diseases which animals are liable to from injuries or accidents.

Every country merchant should obtain a supply of McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment. It sells rapidly, because it always cures.

A liberal discount will be made to merchants who buy to sell again.

Dr. Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters have proved such a certain cure for all diseases of the Stomach, that no can for a moment question its efficiency in the most dreadful and alarming cases. For many years we have watched its steady progress in public estimation, and its beneficient effects as a cure for all complaints arising from the stomach, of a morbid nature, and we are free to say that it can be relied upon as a certain relief and remedy. Its proprietor has made the above preparation after years of careful study and sifting, and which he so richly merits. It is the only preparation of the kind that is reliable in all cases, and it therefore demands the attention of the afflicted.

MOTHERS who see with alarm their children wasting away, and becoming listless, feverish, and debilitated in consequence of the presence of worms in the stomach or bowels, can remove all the trouble immediately by administering Winer's Canadian Vermifuge, which discharges them without pain and leaves the digestive organs in a vigorous condition. There is no mineral ingredient in this preparation.

GREAT MORTALITY AMONG CHILDREN.—The papers teem with speculations upon the amazing mortality among children; but they fail to indicate the true cause, the presence of worms in the stomach and intestines. At least half the fatal diseases to which childhood is subject are attributable to worms. This was the opinion of Abernethy and Sir Astley Cooper. What mother, then, would risk the consequences of this terrible disorder, when a few doses of Winer's Canadian Vermifuge will always sweep away the vermin and the nuisances in which they are imbedded, leaving the system in a healthy condition and secure against a return of the complaint?

WORMS LAY THE FOUNDATION of epilepsy, apoplexy, dropsy in the head, sore eyes, strabismus, palpitation of the heart, cough consumption, rheumatism and hopeless debility. All these fearful consequences however, may be averted by a course of that safe and genial laxative and alterative, WINER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE. It reaches at once the seat of the disease and expels its disgusting cause. Its operation is thorough. No relapse need be apprehended.

NEGRO CHILDREN IN THE SOUTH.—The army worm is not more destructive to southern crops than intestinal worms are to southern negro children. Thousands are swept off annually by the complaint which is not only directly fatal in many cases, but even in its milder forms is the parent of a variety of deadly diseases. Every planter, therefore, if only from motives of self-interest, should keep on hand a supply of Winer's Canadian Vermifuge, which inevitably destroys these disgusting creatures and the mucus in which they are generated. In fact, no family, North or South, should be without this safe, certain and speedy remedy.

SARSAPARILLA
AND
IODINE OF POTASI,
THE GREAT
BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,

Prepared from roasar noor, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a PANACEA or CATHOLICON than any; and its compounders have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Coindet, Baron, Bardsley, Munson, Ricord, Gendrin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy; diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Ulcers, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally;) Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cachexy, Palsy, Tumors, Gonorrhea, Gleet; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Fordyce says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in constitutions enfeebled and emaciated by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparations of Sarsaparilla."

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Irregularities, Suppression, Ulcers of the Womb, Leucorrhea, Tumors, Enlargement of the Uterus, Hernia or Rupture, Chorea, Dyspepsia, etc. Makes the skin clear and smooth—an object of interest with the ladies. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.

McGOWN'S ESSENCE TAR.—A certain cure for Bowel Complaints, as Diarrhea, Dysentery, Flux, etc.

McGOWN'S BOGWOOD AND IRON.—A permanent cure for Chills, Ague Cake, Night Sweats, Debility, Dyspepsia, etc.

McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL.—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.

McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS.—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.

McGOWN'S OINTMENT.—Never known to fail curing old Sores, Cancers, Chronic Sore Eyes, etc.

LETTER FROM CONSTANTINOPLE.

THE morning we entered the harbor of this magnificent city—of Oriental grandeur—it burst upon us in all the gorgeousness of its western splendor—unlike any other place we had seen. Its mosques and minarets rising in their beauty and grandeur, like pearls and emeralds—with light and shade in matchless splendor. Constantinople has nothing to compare with it in Europe, Asia or Africa. It has the lustre of a diamond among other jewels—sparkling with its own radiance. The mosques, with their multitudes of domes and graceful minarets, are so situated, towering among gardens and evergreen trees, high and elevated, that they meet the eye at a glance, and make the impression of an Oriental Paradise. St. Sophia stands out in bold relief, surrounded by palaces and gardens of beauty. The Seraglio of the Sultan extends along the shore to the water's edge, and looks out upon the sea, surrounded by tropical trees of evergreen foliage, and the cypress with its dark shade, towering above the rest in its cone-shaped spires, gave variety as well as beauty to the scene. The waters were filled with little skiffs of delicate form, most neatly carved and cushioned, in Turkish style; they are as light as an Indian's bark canoe, and look as fragile and as easy to capsize; but they glide along the water, with oars used by these Turkish boatmen, in their Oriental costume, with the swiftness and lightness of a bird in the air.

We entered the far-famed Golden Horn, and took a boat to pass over to the opposite shore of Stamboul, to our hotel upon Pera, the summit of a hill—passing through the most narrow, badly paved, and dirty streets we ever entered; sad, tiresome beyond all, we had no experience, no conveyance, except by a palanquin carried upon men's shoulders.

We met some of the Sultan's wives riding out in their coaches, which moved as heavily as carriages without springs. They were gaily dressed, and closely veiled, but with such transparent materials as to show their features—some were pretty, and others were not. They wore a muffler over the chin, mouth and nose, and then a kerchief tied over their foreheads down to their eyes—quite different from the veils of Cairo and Syria.

The contrasts in Constantinople are great, as the two extremes—magnificence of Oriental grandeur, and meanness. It was dreadful to look at poor human beings occupying the place of mules or beasts of burthen—they wear pack-saddles, and carry enormous piles of goods and trunks upon them, which seems almost incredible; by constantly bearing them they become bent, so that they cannot walk erect any more; all our baggage was carried to the hotel this way—the first time we had seen this substitute for horse-porter.

Our hotel, in Pera, was most delightful, commanding a beautiful prospect of Stamboul, and the marble domes of St. Sophia, with the Seraglio—reflecting the rays of the sun from its gilded pinnacles, amidst its groves of perpetual verdure; but their charms vanish when we walk about the streets—as reality dissolves many a charm in this poor world.

We were fortunate to be in Constantinople before the Ramozan was ended. Before it closed, there was a great illumination, which we were privileged to see. This was called the night of power, in commemoration of the time when the Koran was delivered to Mohammed by an angel from Heaven; and the people said, that every year at this celebration, the Sultan was presented with a new bride—selected for her youth and beauty. By the courtesy of our American legation, we had access to the Pasha's residence upon the shores of the Bosphorus, where we enjoyed a prospect of the whole scene to the best advantage, from large windows opening upon the Bay, and, on the other side, the mosque into which he was to enter, as he came down upon the water from his palace. Ships and boats in the harbor were strung with lamps, and the little caiques with large Drummond lights—which were mirrored in the waters, reflecting rays of superior brightness. After waiting some hours, the firing of cannon announced the approach of the Sultan, and three illuminated barges were seen floating down the Bosphorus, with rowers dressed in white; in the central one the Sultan sat, beneath a pavilion; his person we could not see distinctly. The above were guarded by a military corps, with a band of music, which was very good. He landed directly in front of us, amidst a blaze of light. The barracks extended from the shore to the mosque, along which he was to pass, were wreathed with lamps of every form and color, perfectly dazzling. The minaret of the mosque was encircled with lights, and a constellation in the form of the barge he occupied was thrown out horizontally from the side of the minaret, as if fixed in the Heavens, with its pavillion of red, blue and green lights. He stayed some time in the mosque at prayer, and came out under the fire of cannon and additional flashes of light which burst from a thousand stars of artificial rays, which lighted up the ground. The harbor was full of boats, with thousands of people who came to witness the scene. The carriages of the ladies of the Harem were ranged along before our window, made visible by the glow of lamps, which threw their lustre around them; at times bursting forth in some new place, like the rising of the sun, then died away again. We passed by the carriages as we came into the court-yard, and had a glimpse of the fine ladies, most richly dressed.

After his departure, a most splendid display of fire-works filled the air, throwing up their meteoric light in the form of serpents and other images, very brilliant—making every object visible upon the ground and on the surface of the water. It was a fairy scene, like a tale of the Arabian Nights. The streets were crowded with people, and the military escort of the American legation was quite useful in working our way through them, as Mr. Williams was with us, it afforded protection at the late hour, from his official position. Messrs. Brown and Williams, both, treated our party with great kindness.

Constantinople is a great place, where all nations of the earth meet, of great external beauty, with many dark shades to detract from its charms. We visited the Seraglio, the splendid palace of the Sultan, extending so far along the shores of the Bosphorus, where it looks out upon the sea of beautiful blue waters. The ladies were absent and we were shown every room by the keepers. Its halls were capacious, but much plainer than we anticipated from what we had seen of oriental splendor. The floors were covered with matting, and the windows latticed and barred with iron. There was a perfect labyrinth of rooms, almost countless in number, with marble baths and other appendages of elegance and comfort. One room, with a large bow-window looking out upon the sea, was finely furnished—with splendid curtains, mirrors, divans, and mattrasses piled one above another in a corner of the room. A Winter-room, with a fire-place, was nicely carpeted, with cosy-looking furniture, implements of needle-work, and a stand with shelves and drawers, covered with mother-of-pearl. This room looked out upon a garden with high walls, full of fruits and flowers, beautiful hedges of evergreens, and creeping vines running over the walls many feet high. Reservoirs of water, marble fountains, and every thing to delight the eye and taste, where the inmates of the Harem could enjoy these luxuries with no eye to see them—shut out from the gaze of mortals. We walked all through this earthly paradise, very thankful we were not confined there, notwithstanding all its beauties of nature and art combined. Turkish despotism is horrible, and his religion repulsive in the highest degree, there is no redeeming merit in it nor out.

We visited the Sultan's audience-room, where he receives the Ambassadors—it was neither beautiful nor splendid, though costly; the chair of state, with its canopy of velvet and gold, looked dingy, and the coraice of an enormous bedstead was dim, the frame was piled up with mattrasses in one part of it, enough for a party to sleep upon.

The Mosque of St. Sophia, with its lofty domes and towering minarets, did not affect us as we expected, with its architectural grandeur, so imposing in appearance. It is so vast within, that its height does not appear so great as it really is, and its gilding looks so dingy, the walls so dark and cheerless, that it strikes one with gloomy sensations; its floors are covered with faded carpets—but no one may walk upon them without taking off their shoes and putting on slippers at the door, it is such a "holy place."

It was once a Church; we ascended the gallery by winding pavements, up which a carriage could be driven with comparative ease—there are no steps, like St. Peter's Church at Rome, but the passage is about the same width. In looking down from the gallery we had some conception of its height, for the people below looked so small. The pictures of saints, which once adorned the Church, are perfectly covered, with folded wings over the head and face and then down to the feet; we did not know what the figures meant, until told they were our saints. On the end of a dome in the gallery, the face of our Savior is discernible though the gilding, which has been washed over it.

The borders of Constantinople are places of interest, where the character of the Turk can be seen in perfection, and a multitude of Eastern nations represented in their peculiar costumes. It is a place to study character in all its developments of individuality, in a money-loving community—where to take advantage of strangers is a principle of merit. To look at the crowd of people in their different costumes, which crowd the Bosphorus is quite interesting: the Persian, with his cone-shaped cap, rising like a pyramid from his head, made of skins or felt; and the wild Bedouin, with his shawl tied about his head with a rope of camel's hair, and his coarse striped cloak loosely flowing from his shoulders; the Albanian, with his elegantly embroidered gaiters, tunic and vest, with a white kilt, full and flowing; with Armenian and Turk, in velvet and satin, and all variety of vests; with the poor porter, his back bent double, carrying loads like a mule, from one shop to another, in the bazars or down in the city—afford variety and contrast for a reflecting mind to study.

The bazars are the most comfortable and elegant we have seen in the East; and supplied with most splendid and costly goods—those of Damascus do not compare with them—they are kept in order by a military corps, who walk up and down with their arms. Every thing can be bought which is desirable, and their goods are most beautifully arranged. All the shopping is mostly done in these places, where every variety is found, useful or elegant. We saw more women in these bazars than we expected, who use their eyes and tongues, for they talk a great deal, although muffled with a veil, and seem to enjoy the scenes and sights to perfection. The most remarkable feature in these Oriental women, is their eyes, which are exceedingly beautiful, and almost universally black, with a soft sweet expression, but a look of that intelligence which secures an interest beyond the period of youth. We met in this city our old friends, Mr. J. K., wife and daughter, from Natchez.

The environs of Constantinople are magnificent, and Bayard thinks them unsurpassed by any in the world; but Athens, with its classic associations, has the pre-eminence in some of our minds.

On leaving the city, and passing up the Straits of the Bosphorus, the scenery is most splendid—with a view of Olympus in the distance—crowned with evergreens, and adorned with palaces, embowered among orange groves and Tropical trees, radient with beauty; where the landscape is varied with rocks, hills, and vales, with villages scattered along the coast, with ships in their harbors, fill out the picture—forming an assemblage of all that is lovely upon which to gaze. On both sides of the Strait, leading to the Black Sea, is crowned with the beauty of nature and art, sweetly blended. The Sultan's palaces, along the water's edge and rising from its surface, were most splendid; and the residences of private families, for a Summer's retreat, were like palaces among orange and myrtle groves, which appeared to surround them.

EUFAULA DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: All your readers may not know that this District covers that portion of Alabama State, found in parts of Russell, Macon and Pike counties, the whole of Barbour and Henry, and the greater part of Dale; with Jackson, Calhoun, Washington and Holmes counties, in Florida. This District, in its greatest length, is about 200 miles, having an average breadth of 50 miles, covering an area of territory of nearly one-fifth of the size of the whole State of Alabama!

In the upper portions, the face of the country is somewhat hilly, embracing some of the best cotton lands in the State; lower down, are long stretches of level pine lands, rather poor, but with good cultivation and plenty of rain, the industrious generally make enough and to spare. Henry and Dale, are among the original counties of the State, and have been settled about forty years—but, except on the rivers, mostly by hunters and stock-raisers. Therefore, for many long years, but little improvement was made in the social and industrial condition of the people. But, through these years, the faithful itinerants of Methodism have "sowed in tears, and reaped in joy;" so that God has had a people in these regions who spake often one to the other, fearing God, and thinking on his name. This they did in their own humble dwellings or pine-log houses, sometimes called Churches; but, poor as they were, they gave the cause of God a local habitation and a name, until by the Gospel's elevating power—together with emigration, which has brought a better class of citizens—these deserts begin "to blossom as the rose."

Schools are more abundant, and better; books and reading matter, more in demand; in a word, the spirit of improvement is abroad. This I found upon my entrance upon the work, nearly two years ago; and, that it has not abated, the following facts will show.

In Lawrenceville, we have a new commodious house of worship, costing, when finished, about two thousand dollars. In Columbia and Woodville, each, a neat framed house—when finished, worth eight hundred dollars each. In the town of Newton, the county site of Dale, we have put up the first house for God ever in the place—worth, when done, about seven hundred dollars. Perote is a small village, in the eastern portion of Pike, rather of recent date, yet old enough to have out-grown its first Church-house, so our friends have, this year, done themselves the credit of building a very neat house, worth over two thousand dollars! Clayton, the county site of Barbour, has a new house nearly ready for dedication—worth three thousand dollars. Union Springs, a growing town—the anticipated terminus of the Girard and Mobile Railroad—has had a Baptist Church many years; and early this year the Presbyterians completed a house; now the Methodists are about to put one under contract, they say, to cost six thousand dollars.

Here, dear brother, is another instance and proof, that just in proportion to the performance of regular Sabbath ministrations, we increase our chances to live and do good; therefore, whenever one, two or more, congregations are willing to support a Preacher, let them have him, even if we do lose large circuits and week-day preaching. I speak that I do know. I have not space to give the facts and figures. But to return from this episode to the subject of Church-building, I have just to add, that I will not undertake to tell of all, of different sizes and qualities, up and down, in the various country places where the great God is worshipped in spirit and truth.

So much for this item of improvement, which gives an unmistakeable evidence that, in this regard, our Church is neither dead nor dying. Once more—last Spring, our people were visited by the Rev. Dr. Neely, Tract-agent, and the aggregate of his collections amounted to over twelve hundred dollars; nor have our College-agents called in vain—for, first and last, I suppose the subscriptions to Auburn College from this District, amounts to more than thirty thousand dollars!

But all the foregoing, is mere scaffolding to the main design, the building up of a temple to God, composed of "living stones." What there, and for the inner as well as the outer life? "By their fruits ye shall know them." The latest gathered, has been in the professed change of hundreds from nature to grace and additions to the Church, reported during the last quarter, rising largely over five hundred! The Holy Ghost is still calling some to preach the Gospel; and, in due time, we hope to see them equipped for the war. In a word, we are rich, and need nothing but more humility—deeper piety before God. With our Church government, our preachers and people, are more than content; they really feel that, when properly understood, it is so in accordance with the Scriptures, and brings all to such continual dependence upon God, that they are inclined to praise Him for the very best form of Church polity the world ever saw. Our doctrines, we claim to be pure and true as the Bible itself, for we teach nothing as being essential salvation, but what may be be found and proven from God's holy word. What I have said of Eufaula District, I presume, may be said, more or less, of every District of Methodism.

Where is the decay, the defection, the want of power, or, if you please, an excess of power? about which some complain; and others, simply hearing those complaints, are in a panic. In all charity, I must say, the rottenness, if any, is in the complaining brother's head or heart, or both. Methodism is a living power, a power for good and not evil—needs only that its friends be wise and faithful; and, with the continued smile of God, we say to its foes, be they who or what they may, "Let them mock on." These are my sentiments. Allow me then to have what contempt I please for any man, claiming to be a Methodist, who can write and publish in one of our Church papers—"I am tired of old Methodism." Yours, truly,

F. G. FERGUSON.

PRACTICE VERSUS PREACHING.

IN THE New Orleans Christian Advocate, of 15th September, instant, the leading editorial is filled with wisdom and piety. An extract: "Wesley and the early Methodists dwelt upon the things of God and of the soul; we dwell upon the things of the Church and of her economy. They studied, felt, and unfolded, the plan of salvation and the experience of the power of God; we study, and feel, and unfold the plan of our connection, and the philosophy and results of our various ecclesiastical institutions and enterprizes..... Appeals and exhortations in reference to our great public enterprizes..... should not be allowed to fill up our Church journals." This is the preaching!

Now for the practice. Look into the same paper, and see the first chapter on the first page. "A Great Enterprize" is to the writer, no doubt, a great thing. But to much the largest portion of the readers of the "Advocate," it is only a sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. "I am the Agent of the Tuskegee Female College." That fact is recorded on the minutes of the Alabama Annual Conference, and did not require more than a column in a large newspaper, to make it known to the world. But it is not Methodist after all, for it began "with appropriate and impressive Masonic rites." It seems that the Church cannot go alone. "And so the great enterprize began." But we must look over these things, as the writer goes on to tell "How it went on!" Men marvelled at the house, and well they might, when it was "five stories high, one-half under ground!" That house is worth seeing; but the chapter is contrary to the text.

The second chapter, from Dr. McFerrin, is upon a kindred subject; and is as uninteresting to the great mass of readers as Mr. Armstrong's production. Of what interest to us is the squabble with Dr. Drake? Just about as much, as to know the color of the hair on the head of the man in moon.

Mr. Larrabee's reply to "Watchman," has one good characteristic—it is short; but is condemned by the text, as a contraband article. All the other articles on first page are allowable, save "Ghost Stories."

On the second page, Mr. Editor has broken his own rules, in his chapters—"Texas Methodism," and "The New Discipline." Hope he will not transgress again.

The closing paragraphs of Mr. Ahbey's "Kentucky Conference," is also a transgression. He is a large offender against the rule, in the Nashville Advocate.

Also, the rule against "long obituaries," is broken by Mr. Jones, in his "Death of the Rev. James Griffing."

"Mr. Cleghorn," and the "Book Depository," will pass; but what can be said of Mr. Hamill and his two columns of dead language? Could Colonel Mitchell have obtained religion without the Thousand Dollars? Who should take charge of this question—casuists or metaphysicians? Does the recital of the $1000, $500, and $300, correspond with the teachings of Christ, in Luke, xxi. 1-4? Were there no widows mites in all that route? The grand result: Mr. Hamill is at home with $5000—and makes the following entry: "Conclusion—Methodism is a great Institution!" Well, did you ever! We thought every body knew that!

The third page will be passed by with the remark, that Dr. McFerrin broke the rule on short obituaries, by a chapter on the subject of the first item on this page.

EQUALITY.

BE GENEROUS TO YOUR FELLOW-MAN.

A man may possess untold riches, and yet he is no less a dependent being—dependent in health upon his fellow-man for aid in protecting his civil rights, his life and his property—in sickness dependent for care and skill in warding off the fearful assaults of disease—and, in death, dependent upon his fellow-man to be borne to his last resting-place. Be generous, then, to thy brother man, for sooner or later he will be called to render you service such as gold can not purchase.

CAREFULNESS OF SPEECH.—We should walk through life as through the Swiss mountains, where a hasty word may bring down an avalanche.

THE RELATION OF CHILDREN TO GOD AND THE CHURCH.

In our first article upon this subject, we denied that children in infancy are in such a state of purity as to become Christians at years of accountability without a change of heart or new birth, as is claimed by some writers.

Mr. Wesley remarks, that the Church of England did not claim that infant sprinkling or baptism, regenerates the child; and, we suppose, no orthodox denomination will claim such to be the result of infant baptism.

Does baptism change the child's relations to the Church? We answer, not; since no change has been affected by this ordinance.

Children unbaptised are not considered fit subjects for Church membership whilst in years of infancy or unaccountability.

The falacy of introducing children, baptised or unbaptised, at such an age into Church membership, would result in the necessity of turning ninety-nine hundreths of them out of the Church when they arrive at mature years; for we suppose we are in the bounds of reason, when we alledge that less than one in every one hundred of that class, baptised or unbaptised, exhibit such a state of piety as to justify their being recognized as Christians, after attaining years of accountability, without being first converted.

This being true, it is evident that children, baptised or unbaptised, are not proper subjects for Church membership, until they arrive at accountable years and are converted.

Duty then seems to indicate to every father, mother, guardian and friend, that as children "are conceived in sin and shapen in iniquity" that they should be most sacredly, watchfully, and prayerfully, instructed—in this young, tender, and innocent state, that a foundation may be laid, upon which a structure at years of accountability and in after years may be built upon by each child; whereby the proclivities to sin may be overcome, and the peace, pardon, and favor of God early sought and found.

Then we should have the pleasure of seeing thousands of the children "Seeking first the kingdom of Heaven and its righteousness," and the world brought under the mild and peaceful influence of our blessed christianity.

Let a different system obtain, as maintained by some, that children have a nature sinless, and may be trained and educated into Christianity, without the necessity of a change of heart in maturer years. And you at once sap the foundation of the Christian religion; thousands will readily embrace such sentiments, for they are suited to the carnal mind, and will no longer seek to be "born again. A few centuries alone would suffice so to engulf us in the fogs and quagmires of the dark ages, as to require again the coming forth of such spirits as Calvin, Luther, and Wesley, to arouse the world from her sleep of death.

SPECTATOR.

September, 14th 1858.

SCANDINAVIANS IN THE UNITED STATES.

A recent writer estimates the entire Scandinavian population of the United States at 180,000. Of these, he supposes, 150,000 are Norwegians, 25,000 Swedes, and 5000 Danes. The Northmen are supposed to have been the first discoverers of this country, in A. D. 996. The Swedes were among the first European settlers on the Delaware and the Schuylkill, where a colony was first planted by the illustrious Gustavus Adolphus in 1624, though it was not settled in America till after his death in 1637. After the subjection of this colony by the Dutch in 1655, Swedish Emigration to America ceased for almost two centuries. In 1825 the Norwegian emigration began to set in toward the Continent first discovered by their countrymen nearly two thousand years before. The first Norwegians who came to the United States at this time acted as the pioneers of that host now so steadily extending its settlements from New York to Minesota, Kansas Utah, and California. It was only in 1841 that a few Swedes began to settle among the Norwegian emigrants in Wisconsin. They are said to be most numerous in Illinois, but large settlements of them are to be found in Wisconsin and Minnesota. The Norwegian population of Illinois is estimated 50,000—nearly six thousand of them residing in Chicago. These figures are probably too low; but they furnish a basis for the indiction of the duty of Christianizing this foreign population of the north west. For the most part the Norwegians, in their own country, are Lutherans; but here they have to a great extent, been brought under the influence of the Methodist Episcopal Church, through her missionary operations.

THE MARSEILLAISE HYMN.

The name popularly, though erroneously, given to the national anthem of France. The origin of this song, which has played so important a part in the revolutions of France, was long involved in obscurity. The following statement respecting it may be relied on as authentic. The Marseillaise was the production of Rouget De Lille, an offices of engineers in the French army quartered at Strasburg, in the year 1791. Marshal Luckner commanded the army, at that time composed of young conscripts. Late in the evening, previous to an important march, the Marshal inquired if there was any one in the army of a poetical genius, who could compose a soul-inspiring song to animate the young soldiers. Captain De Lille was named, and immediately ordered into the presence of the Marshall to receive his commands. He promised that a song should be ready the following morning; went to his quarters; and during the night he wrote the song and set it to music. Never was a success greater. The pen of De Lille won victories on the battle-field. The armies of France marched over Europe to the Marseillaise, carrying every thing before them, with an enthusiasm amounting to absolute frenzy.

The song is said to have received its current name from the circumstance that it was first made known at Paris by a body of troops from Marseilles, who marched into the capital to the stirring sounds of the martial hymn.

OLD HUNDRED.

In a rustic Church opposite, while we write, a company of worshipers are singing the old, old hymn, "Be thou, O God, exalted high." The air is old also, the immortal "Old Hundred."

The solemn strain carries us back to the times of the reformers—Luther and his devoted band. He, doubtless, was the first to strike the grand old chords in the public sanctuary of his own Germany.

From his stentorian lungs they rolled, rivratting, not through vaulted cathedral roof, but along a grander arch, the eternal heavens. He wrought into each note his own sublime faith, and stamped it with that faith's immortality.—Hence it cannot die! Neither men nor angels will let it pass into oblivion.

The blue-eyed girls of old "fader-land" sang those same strains with all the enthusiasm of a new and holier religion. They had been bound down to priest, prayerbook, and rosary. They had raised adoring eyes to the spangled image of the Virgin, and bent unbashingly before the carved semblance of the Savior of sinners. They had kneeled at the dark confessional, and placing their lips to its cunningly-wrought portals, told the choicest and most sinful emotions of their hearts into the ears of the father confessor, whom sometimes they feared more than they feared God. But Luther, in the face of the fathers, had thrown down his rosary and refused to acknowledge any intercessor save Christ. Luther had, as it were, nailed his anathema over the openings of the confessional. Luther had laughed to scorn the holy relics, pretended miracles, and saving power of the priesthood, and with daring, burning eloquence denounced their sensuality and their idolatry. First the mother heard and then the maids—they went to listen, and remained to pray; ay, and to sing with throbbing hearts and tearful eyes, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Can you find a tomb in the land where sealed lips lay that have not sung that tune? If they were gray old men, they had heard or sung "Old Hundred." If they were babes, they smiled as their mothers rocked them to sleep, singing "Old Hundred." Sluher and saint have joined with the endless congregations, where it has, with and without the pealing organ, sounded on sacred air.

The dear little children, looking with wondering eyes on this strange world, have lisped it. The sweet young girl, whose tombstone told of sixteen summers, she whose pure and innocent face haunted you with its mild beauty, loved "Old Hundred," and as she sung it, closed her eyes and seemed communing with the angels who were so soon to claim her. He whose manhood was devoted to the service of his God, and who with faltering feet ascended the pulpit steps with white hand placed over his laboring breast, loved "Old Hundred." And though sometimes his lips only moved, away down in his heart, so soon to cease its throbs, the holy melody was sounding. The dear white-headed father, with his tremulous voice, how he loved "Old Hundred!"

Yes may fill your Church choirs with Sabbath prima donnas, whose daring notes emulate the steeple and cost near as much, but give us the spirit-stirring tones of the Luthern hymn, sung by young and old together. Martyrs have hallowed it; it has gone up from the dying beds of the saints. The old Churches, where generation after generation has worshiped, and where many scores of the dear dead have been carried, and laid before the altar, where they gave themselves to God, seem to breathe of "Old Hundred" from vestibule to tower-top—the very air is haunted with its spirit.

Think for a moment of the assembled company who have, at different times and in different places, joined in the familiar tune! Throng upon throng—the stern, the timid, the gentle, the brave, the beautiful, their rapt faces all beaming with the inspiration of the heavenly sounds!

"Old Hundred!" king of the sacred band of ancient airs! Never shall our ears grow weary of hearing, or our tongues of singing thee! And when we get to heaven, who knows but what the first triumphal strain that welcomes us, may be—

"Be thou, O God, exalted high!"

CASPAR HAUSER AGAIN.

The London Critic says that "the mystery which has been hanging over the fate of Caspar Hauser seems likely to be at last dispelled. It may be in the recollection of most of our readers that, about thirty years ago, a youth, contracted in mind and body through long imprisonment in, as it turned out afterward, a moist cellar, turned up at Nuremberg, in Germany, in a very mysterious manner. The circumstances created an immense sensation at the time, which extended over the whole world; and there is hardly a country in the world boasting a literature which has not had its say on the case. The boy was adopted by the Nuremberg municipality, and was placed under the best teachers. Kings, princes, noblemen, criminal jurists interested themselves for him. The most careful investigations were instituted about the origin of the child, but to no result. The most curious rumors became current, and most startling hypotheses were set afloat. For a long time it was devoutly believed that the youth was the heir-apparent to the south German ducal throne, and had been removed off the scenes for certain dynastic reasons. The youth grew to the estate of man, manifested considerable mental power, when all of a sudden the poignard of an assassin put an end to his existence, and the deed of darkness was thus crowned through the aggravated crime of murder. The unfortunate man and his fate have since fallen into complete oblivion, but the world is now to be startled again by the revelations of Professor Daumer, of Nuremberg, a gentleman to whom the education of Hauser had been intrusted for years. A singular circumstance connected with the history of Caspar Hauser is the poor victim's early relations to a British nobleman, the late Earl Stanhope. Lord Stanhope, some time after the appearance of the foundling, adopted him, and for years manifested the most lively interest in his fate, but dropped him afterward in a most unaccountable manner, apparently leading countenance to the rumors then afloat of Hauser being an idiot and impostor. But however that may be, Professor Daumer will undertake to prove that the sources of the horrible double crime are to be looked for not in Germany, but in England. There is no doubt if anybody is able somewhat to lift the veil hanging over the mystery, it is Professor Daumer, as he enjoyed most uncommon facilities through his long continued intercourse with Hauser, and the high personages who patronized him. The volume is shortly to be published at Frankfort under the title of 'Revelations on Caspar Hauser,' with the addition of new documents concerning the history, original home, and origin of the foundling, Count Feschricht and Stanhope."

[illegible] OF GOD.

Thus [illegible] idea which we may thus express, [illegible] with due reverence. David said: "[illegible] are thy thoughts unto me, O God! [illegible] of the Lord standeth forever, the thoughts of his heart unto all generations. How many, O Lord, are thy wonderful works which thou hast done, and thy thoughts which are to us-ward." In Isaiah, God says: "My thoughts are not your thoughts." "My ways are higher than your thoughts." In Jeremiah He says: "For I know the thoughts that I think toward you—thoughts of peace, and not of evil." In Micah, He says, speaking of the enemies of Zion: "They know not the thoughts of the Lord, neither understand they His counsel." And although none can "know the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct Him," yet, through the teaching of the Scriptures, and the grace of the Holy Ghost, we may not only know, but also "have the mind of Christ."

In the teaching of every complete and distinct passage of Holy Scripture, there is a definite meaning—a living idea, a spiritual truth, a thought of God. In preaching upon a text, this meaning, which is clothed in its words, should be the germ of the sermon. Its exposition and development, so as to convey to the mind of the hearer the intention of the text—the mind of God contained in it, the thought of the Holy Ghost uttered in it—should be the aim of the discourse. Instead of using the text merely as a motto, nearly or remotely suggestive or corroborative of "points," "divisions," or "topics," which, however strained into conformity with the general tenor of the Christian religion, are more than half created by the ingenuity of human logic or fancy, it should be the preacher's first labor to discover, in all its reality, intensity, and comprehensiveness, the truth contained in the text.

Instead of splitting, halving and quartering the mere verbiage of the text, like the splitting of a log of timber preparatory to converting into fence-rails, its thought should be planted in the mind and heart of the preacher, as a living, earnest, solemn conviction; so that his views of the truth under consideration, may become, as nearly as may be, harmonious with that of the Holy Ghost, and his feeling in regard to it, as much as in him lieth, as mighty as that with which it was uttered by the inspired writer.—In the first case, the sermon is manufactured out of the ruins of the text; in the second case, the sermon grows out of the living seed of the text. The one is a broken cistern, which will hold no water; the other is a fountain of living waters. If it may be said with propriety and reverence, it should be the aim of the preacher not only to make the thought intention and desire of the divine author of the text his own, but also to view the subject from the same stand-point as that of the Holy Ghost in uttering it.

By the illumination of a prayerfully studied Bible, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, he should be one with Christ, as Christ is one with the Father; and this oneness should not merely be oneness of spirit, but also, as nearly as may be, oneness of view, in the interpretation and exposition of the Holy Scriptures.—The vital saving power of the preaching of the Gospel is essentially connected with this unfolding of the very idea and intention of the text. This thought of God in the word, is the good seed of the kingdom contained in the covering of its language. And in proportion as the preacher fails to understand, or to clearly and simply develope, this thought, in that proportion is the Gospel, as delivered by him, weakened or deprived of its native vital force.

This is true, in the first place, because no merely human thought, drawn from an erroneous interpretation of the text, however pious, or true in itself, can possess any thing like the pungent quickening power of God's own thought. And, in the second place, while the unction of the Holy Ghost may, and will attend all earnest preaching of the Gospel, and still more so if the ideas be unmixed with error; yet its full measure of accompanying power is only to be expected in connection with a just and clear exposition and enforcement of the real meaning of the Holy Ghost in the text. The meaning of the Holy Ghost is in the text, and the more vivid and forcible the exposition of that meaning, the more powerful will be the accompanying unction. Indeed, the unction of preaching is three-fold. It consists, first, in the power of the Holy Ghost conveyed in the illuminating, quickening truth of the text. It consists, second, in the grace of the Holy Ghost accompanying that truth. And it consists, third in the power of both truth and grace upon the soul of the preacher, sanctifying human intellect, passion and sympathy to the more natural and powerful conveyance of both to the minds and hearts of the hearers.

A preacher, in praying for the "unction of the Holy One" to give saving efficacy to the word as preached by him, should not merely have reference to the quickening and softening of his heart, but also to the illumination and vitalizing of his mind. Indeed, mental illumination is emphasized by the Apostle St. John, as the principal blessing bestowed by the heavenly unction.—"Ye have an unction of the Holy One, and ye know all things." "The anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you." Of course the miraculous as well as the ordinary illumination of the Holy Ghost is included in the meaning of these passages; but its application to the present day, as to the ordinary illumination of the understanding, is clear and undoubted. The unction necessary for the heart is not to be considered as left out. A true preacher of the Gospel, in the present day, is regenerate and a child of God before he becomes a preacher.—Moreover, the same unction of the Holy One which enlightens his understanding as to the meaning of the sacred word, is also a "baptism of fire." While it gives him a "cloven tongue, like as of fire," that he may "preach the unsearchable riches of Christ," it also "endues him with power from on high." Furthermore, the discovery of the thought of God in the text, has upon his mind, the same intrinsic power, and is accompanied to his heart by the same grace of the Holy Ghost, which are connected with its exposition to the mind of the hearer.

DEGENERATE METHODISM.

Once upon a time, the writer of this spent a pleasant evening with the family of a brother in the ministry, who, himself, was absent from home. He had once, for several years, been an itinerant preacher in the regular work, and quite useful, but at the time in question, was local. What caused his location, we knew not. He had been engaged in business for many years, and had been very successful. He lived in a spacious mansion, handsomely furnished, and was surrounded with every comfort, and every luxury he chose. His wife was a most agreeable lady, and he had a pleasant family of children. One, a handsome girl, was just stepping upon the threshold of womanhood. As was natural, in a family of affluence and social position, especially where a promising young lady adorned the house, there was no lack of lively young company. At the time mentioned, a very gay young gentleman paid very assiduous attention to the daughter of our friend, to which she was far from being insensible.

At the tea-table, more than one minister being present, and in a minister's family, the conversation naturally turned upon ministerial life, and the relative advantages and disadvantages of the itinerant and local ministry. The young company, especially the preacher's own children, were decided in their preference for the local ministry, that is, if a man would be a minister at all, which calling they did not seem greatly to admire. The hardships and privations, so-called, of the itinerant life, were not to be thought of. Usefulness was urged as an argument for the superior charm and obligation of the itinerant ministry. But "when any one heareth the word and understandeth it not," what good is there in hearing? The salvation of souls was thrown into the scale in favor of the itinerancy. But "what is that to us?" "Am I, my brother's keeper?" Obligation to devote all the minister's life to the glory of Him "who counted him faithful, putting him into the ministry," was mentioned. But "the heart of this people is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing."

Extreme cases of hardships were referred to on the other side, and the itinerancy was judged by them. Ludicrous pictures were drawn of the lives, families and circumstances, of "circuit-riders;" and vulgar jokes were uttered, in contempt of the very calling of the man of the house, in his own house, and by his own children. One of the ministers present, pleasantly mentioned, that for the first two years of his itinerant ministry, he had received but seventy-five dollars a year; his board, as he sojourned among his members round the circuit, costing him nothing. The preacher's daughter tossed her pretty head, crowned with golden hair, and casting a significant look upon her young suitor, said: "That amount would not be enough pocket-money for me for one week." The young fellow having supported her side of the question from the first, was obliged to stand up to this view also; nevertheless, a shade of sad thoughtfulness passed over his countenance.

"Ah!" thought we, "this good sister has suffered evil counsel to find access to her children." Turning a questioning look upon her face, we were disappointed to observe that she too was supporting "the counsel of the ungodly." Drawing her into the conversation, we soon penetrated, in part at least, into the philosophy of her husband's location. Said she, "I told my husband he might travel and preach as much as he pleased, but that I would not go with him. I would not agree ever to move. I would not leave my house, nor move my family, for any body." The children—the daughter leading, and the young company seconding the motion—all applauded the determination of the mother.

Tea being over, we bade our friends a courteous adieu, and walked away, perplexed and pensive, to the Church where we were to preach that evening, and took for our text, the exhortation, "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

How widely such sentiments as those entertained by our friend's family may be prevalent among our people, we know not; but one thing we know, that when a Methodist preacher's wife and children become imbued with them, they are about half ruined. And in proportion as such sentiments prevail in Methodist families—whether preachers, or laymen's—family religion has degenerated in the same proportion. God is blasphemed, Christ is denied, the Holy Spirit is grieved, faith is dead, duty is forgotten, and Methodism is libeled and shamed by her own children.

Harper's Magazine for October, has been sent us by H. D. McGinnis, of this city. Harper is, emphatically, the American people's Magazine. Sound in religion, conservative in politics, elegant in taste, varied in matter, overrunning with sympathy and humor, and gilded all the time by a sturdy common sense, it has no rival. Nor will it have soon. We rejoice in its prosperity. And Harper's Weekly is as worthy as the monthly.

Wesleyan University, at Florence, Alabama.—We hear a fine report of the opening of the present session of this, one of the very best of our literary institutions. The largest and most promising class of young men—mostly from eighteen to twenty-one years of age—is now in the College, that it has yet had. Dr. Rivers, with his able Faculty, will do them justice.

THE TRIAL AND EXECUTION OF JOHN HUSS.

From a paper in the last number of Harper's Magazine, we condense the following account of the trial and execution of John Huss.

The traveler who visits to-day the old, half-decayed city of Constance, will meet, not far from the place where he lands on the shores of the lake, a huge, warehouse-looking building, a careful inspection of which will reward his curiosity. More than four hundred years ago it presented scenes toward which the eyes of all Christendom were directed with varied but intense interest. Mounting the stairs leading to the second story of this immense structure—the old Kauf-house, or Market—the visiter enters a vast chamber, where the Council of Constance was once assembled, and which has been rendered ever memorable by the trial of John Huss and the thrilling eloquence of Jerome of Prague.

There are the wax figures of Huss and Jerome, the first hearing the following record: "John Huss, of Hussinetz, in Bohemia, born July 6, 1373, Rector of the University, and lecturer at Prague; burned alive at Constance, in consequence of the order of the Council, in the forty-second year of his age. His last words were, "I resign my soul into the hands of my God and my Redeemer." Even there, in the hall which was the scene of his trial, the martyr's memory is honored.

Near four centuries and a half ago (1414) kings, princes, nobles, prelates, priests, soldiers, and merchants were congregated there. The buildings of the city could not accommodate the guests. Booths and wooden structures of all kinds were erected outside the walls, and thousands were encamped in the adjoining country. The whole neighborhood presented a curious and novel scene. It was a miniature Christendom.

He had exposed pretended miracles; but the Archbishop of Prague had sustained him in it. He had rebuked the sale of indulgences; but so had Gerson. He had laid bare the rottenness of pontifical and ecclesiastical corruption; but Cardinal d'Ailly had done the same. He had denounced pontifical canonizations and Church festivals characterized by bacchanalian orgies; but, with more caustic sarcasm, Clemengis had set him an example. He had poured forth torrents of eloquent and indignant rebuke upon the papal crusade against Ladislaus; but Palatz, his former room-mate, now his accuser, had been his abettor. His crime—save that, philosophically, he was a Realist—was narrowed down to this: He would not bow down and acknowledge as infallible the image of its own authority, which the Council had set up in the place of the vacant pontificate.

His whole career, from the hour when his widowed mother, with her cake and goose as a simple present for the rector, set out with him on the journey from Hussinetz to Prague, enlists our sympathy. Huss, like many of his less distinguished compeers, was a charity student. But the poor boy was rich in the noblest gifts of mind and heart. To his dying day the malice of his enemies could not charge him with a mean or wicked act. Calumny left his private character wholly untouched.

He was not long in rising to distinction. Among the thirty thousand students of the University he soon took the foremost rank. At twenty-six years of age he became the Queen's confessor, and preached before the court. He was little more than thirty when he was chosen rector of the University. The liberality of two citizens of Prague built for him the Bethlehem Chapel. It was crowded to overflowing with an eager auditory. The preacher spoke with an authority and eloquence that carried all before it. At this juncture the widowed Queen of England brought back with her the writings of Wicliffe. Huss was slow to approve them; but the more he read, the more he liked them. The spirit of the two men was sympathetic. He commended the writings of the English reformer. Copies were multiplied. Scores, elegantly bound, were soon in circulation. But the University took the alarm. The archbishop demanded that the books should be brought him, and he made a bonfire of them. The people were exasperated. The King remonstrated with the archbishop; but the large secession of students, dissatisfied with the patriotic zeal of Huss, who demanded that the University should be subject to Bohemian instead of German control, made him many enemies. He was accused of heresy. The Pope sustained the charge on a prejudiced trial, and forbade Huss to preach. He was forced, at length, to leave the city. But he would not be silent. He was still busy with tongue and pen. In different parts of the kingdom his voice was heard. At last he was permitted to return. The popular demand for his presence bore down all opposition. Again Bethlehem Chapel resounded with his bold denunciation and eloquent invective. A weaker man filled the Episcopal Chair. As inquisitor of the faith he certified to Huss's orthodoxy. The University commended him. Secure in the confidence of his integrity, Huss welcomed the approach of the Council. The Emperor sent him a safe-conduct, and he set out on his journey to Constance.

Almost at the same time with the Pope he reached the city. The first conference passed amicably. John XXIII. assured him that he should not be molested. "You are safe," said he. "Even if you had killed my own brother no injustice should be done you."

But his enemies were not idle. They first spread the report that Huss could read their secret thoughts. Some were terrified; but others were drawn toward him. And now the arts of his enemies were directed to his arrest. The reckless and unprincipled Pontiff was persuaded that it would be a good stroke of policy, and give him credit for zeal against heresy, if he should arrest Huss. In violation of the Emperor's safe-conduct and the Pope's assurance, it was done by his order. Huss was thrown into prison.

Worn down by sickness and anxiety, Huss felt impelled to claim the criminal's right, and apply for a legal defender. But this was refused him, on the plea that the canons make it a crime to defend a man suspected of heresy. "I besought the commissioners," said he, "to grant me an advocate. They at first granted my request, but afterward refused it. I therefore placed my confidence in our Savior Jesus Christ. May He be at once my Advocate and my Judge."

A congregation, embracing the prelates, doctors, and most of the members of the Council, met to hear the articles against Huss. They were read, and the assembly was about coming to a decisive vote, when the notary, Maldonicwitz, a friend of Huss, hurried out to inform his countryman, De Clum. The latter hastened to the Emperor. Sigismond was indignant, and gave immediate orders to suspend proceedings in Huss's absence, and to send him the objectionable treatises, which he would put into the hands of learned doctors to examine. The last direction, the Council refused to observe; to the former they yielded, and ordered Huss to be brought before them.

He was first presented with his books, and asked if he acknowledged their authorship. He replied that he did; and added, "If any man among you can point out any mistaken proposition in them, I will rectify it with the most hearty good-will."

The first of the series of articles containing his objectionable views was then read, with the names of the witnesses who supported the charge. Huss commenced to reply, but the clamors of the assembly drowned his utterance. According to the account of an eye-witness, the members behaved more like wild beasts than sage doctors. As the tumult subsided Huss appealed to the Holy Scriptures in his defense. "That is not the question," was shouted from all sides. Some accused him; others laughed him to scorn. Calmly glancing over the excited assembly, Huss exclaimed, "I anticipated a different reception, and had imagined that I should obtain a hearing. I am unable to make myself heard in such a noise, and I am silent because I am forced to it. I would willingly speak were I listened to."

"I did not come here, excellent Priace," said Huss, recovering himself, and speaking in a tone more than usually mild, "with the intention of defending any thing with stubbornness. God is witness to the truth of what I assert. Let any thing better or more holy than what I have taught be shown me, and I am perfectly ready to retract."

This was the utmost concession which Huss could make. He could not submit to any human authority. First of all, he demanded to be convicted of error from the Word of God.

Scarcely had Huss spoken when at a signal from the cardinals, the soldiers dragged him away by his chains; not, however, till his faithful friend, De Clum had exhorted him, "Noble Professor, sacrifice thy life sooner than abandon the truth." With a tearful eye Huss smiled his hearty assent.

On the following day, June 8, Huss had his third and final audience. Thirty-nine articles, ostensibly extracted from his writings, were laid before him. Some of these he acknowledged. Others he rejected, as incorrectly stated or as absolutely false.

A series of charges was based on Huss's vindication of Christ to the sole headship of the Church. In explanation of these Huss had a manifest advantage. "What is there," he asked, "to prevent Christ from governing the Church now, as at first, by his true disciples; without these monstrous chiefs, this triple head? Yet how do I ask? The Church has now no visible head. Yet Christ reigns."

The reading of the articles was closed, and Huss was asked if he would recant. He replied that he could not do it. To abjure was to renounce errors that had been entertained. But many of the articles charged against him he had never held. How could he abjure them!"

Persuasion and argument were employed in vain. One inflexible doctor of the Council, maintaining its infallibility urged unqualified submission. "If the Council," said he, "should affirm that you have but one eye while you have two, you would be obliged to assent to it." "As long as God shall preserve my reason," replied Huss, "I shall take good care not to say any such thing—no, not if the whole universe should endeavor to force me to it."

Bribes even were held out to him. The enemies of Huss urged him to recant and save his life. His friends encouraged him to be faithful to his conscience even unto death.

On July 6th he was summoned before the Council to hear his sentence.

The Bishop of Lodi preached the sermon. As a literary production it had some smartness. Its sentences were short and pithy. It was evident that the Bishop was more familiar with Seneca than with the New Testament. His text was, "That the body of sin might be destroyed." As he concluded, he addressed the Emperor: "Destroy errors and heresies, and especially," pointing to Huss, "this obstinate heretic." Such a work he pronounced "holy," and besought the Emperor to do it, and make his glory immortal.

The sentence against the writings of Huss was then read. It consisted of ninety articles. Huss wished to reply to each separately, but was not allowed. He was told that he might answer all at once. "So great an effort of memory as that would require," said the prisoner, "is absolutely impossible." He was proceeding to say more, when the ushers were ordered to seize him and force him to be silent. Huss was indignant. In a loud voice, and with hands uplifted to heaven, he exclaimed, "In the name of Almighty God, I conjure you to allow me an equitable hearing, that I may clear myself before all whom I see around me from the reproach of these errors. Grant me this favor, and then do with me what you will." But again his request was denied. Kneeling down, therefore, and raising his eyes and hands toward heaven, he solemnly commended his cause to the Sovereign Judge of the universe.

His disregard of the Papal excommunication was mentioned. Huss defended himself. He exposed the injustice that had been done him, and then declared that he had on this very account voluntarily and freely come to the Council, "relying upon the public faith of the Emperor here present, who assured me that I might attest my innocence and give a reason of my faith."

As Huss said this, he fixed his eyes steadily on the Emperor. A deep blush suffused the Imperial brow. Sigismond felt the shame and meanness of which he had been guilty, and on his own previous confession of the granting of the safe-conduct, stood condemned. The fact was not soon forgotten. A century later Charles V. called it to mind at the Diet of Worms. His Spanish honor revolted at the proposal to violate his pledge. "No!" said he. "I should not like to blush like Sigismond!"

The so-called "definitive sentence" was then read. Huss again wished to be heard; but the violence of his guards and the shouts of the assembly drowned his utterance. Again, therefore he knelt down, exclaiming aloud, "Lord, of thy unspeakable mercy forgive my enemies. Thou knowest they have falsely accused me, and have condemned me on the testimony of false witnesses; yet, O thou All-merciful God, I beseech Thee, lay not this sin to their charge!"

At last the scene of execution was reached. It was to the west of the city, outside the Gotlehen Gate, surrounded by green fields and gardens. As the procession reached the place, Huss kneeled and repeated in prayer the language of the penitential Psalm. "Lord Jesus, have mercy on me!" "O God, into thy hands I commit my spirit!" were supplications repeatedly uttered by him. "What this man may have done before," said some among the crowd, "we know not; but now certainly we hear him speak and pray in a godly and devout manner."

The stake was now driven into the earth, and Huss was bound to it by wet cords and the sooty chain borrowed from a cottager who had used it to hang kettles over the fire. Huss looked at it, and said, "Christ, for my sake, was bound with a harsher and more cruel one. Why should I blush or shrink, for His sake, to be bound with this?"

The fagots were then piled around the victim. Once more Huss was asked to recant. Again he refused.

The executioners kindled the flames. Amidst the smoke and blaze Huss could still be observed engaged in prayer. Repeatedly was he heard to say, "O Christ, thou Son of the living God, have mercy on me!" He bowed his head, or from exhaustion it fell toward his bosom. But his lips still moved. At last all was still. The charred carcass was motionless and the spirit had fled.

Thus perished, at the early age of forty-two, in the full vigor of his faculties, and in the strength and promise of opening manhood, one of those men whom after centuries have been constrained to acknowledge well worthy of the martyr's crown. His real crime, in the eyes of the Council, was his refusal to submit his conscience to their authority.

THE GREAT WEST.

Under the head, "A New Balance of Power," the Picayune has an interesting editorial, on the rapid growth and prospective power of "The Great West." Speaking of Texas, it says, that no "State in any section of the Union, exhibits a more rapid growth or greater evidences of singular prosperity. In eight years it has more than doubled the number of its inhabitants, while its productive capacity has been developed in still higher ratio. The same impulse, which sends a ceaseless tide of emigration into the north-western States and Territories, is giving an extraordinary vitality to this vast south-western region, outlying on the borders of Mexico.

"The moral influence of this prosperity upon the adjoining Mexican States is already apparent. Tamaulipas, Nueva Leon and Coahuila, begin to feel the contrast between their condition and that of Texas; and dimly, perhaps, to perceive the happy result of its union with the great North American Confederacy. Their allegiance to the central government is growing weaker and weaker. The civil commotions which continue to paralyze their enterprise are but warning signals of their desire to adopt the policy which has produced upon their borders so rich a harvest. And, as the wave of population rolls nearer, gathering strength and volume, even the antagonism of race and the pride of nationality will give way before it.

"The extension of American territory and Southern institutions is therefore inevitable, in this direction. Gravity does not with greater certainty decree the attractions of the lighter body towards the heavier, than the example of the prosperity of the State of Texas is sure to prepare for the annexation of the frontier Mexican States to our Federal Union. Men are now living who will see the American flag floating from every city and stronghold of these already semi-independent Provinces.

"The course that emigration begins to take, and the works of improvement in progress to link the extreme North-west with the extreme South-west, suggest the speedy appearance of a new balance of political power in the Republic. The commercial and industrial interests of the States bordering upon, and west of the Mississippi river, are almost identical. They have a common, natural outlet to the ocean. They feel a common interest in the policy which controls the public domain. Their people have little sympathy for the follies and the prejudices that prevail in the older States. A freshness and originality of character, a strength and vigor of purpose, and a restlessness of enterprise, mark the inhabitants of all these States. They are progressive and aggressive."

"Practice versus Preaching"—on our first page—is a tolerably clever exaggeration, and quite pleasant. We hope to hear from the writer again. Devotional articles should not be crowded out, but they should not monopolize the paper. A Christian's life is made up of worship, business, social and domestic intercourse, friendship, love, hard every-day work, misfortune, good fortune, and a wonderful mixture generally. A Christian newspaper should represent true Christian life.

THE FEAR OF GOD CONSERVATIVE.

"I fear not God, nor regard man.—Luke, xviii. 4.

The result here stated by the unjust judge, as his experience, is a necessary and inevitable consequence of the premise—"he, who fears not God, will not regard man." Love to our neighbor is the legitimate result of supreme love to God. Multitudes who do not fear God, manifest some regard for their neighbor; but it is, because they are neither above nor below public opinion, as that opinion may be embodied in legal sanctions or social anathemas. The prudential motives of conventional life—pride, interest or fear—move them to regard their neighbor.

But, put such, by official position, by vast wealth or superior knowledge, above public opinion or its modes of expression, and they are dangerous citizens—regardless of the rights and feelings of others. Or put them, by their hopeless obscurity and degradation, below public opinion, where neither law nor public sentiment can reach them nor harm them, and they will certainly exhibit a reckless disregard of the claims of other men.

Such men are always the victims of an all-dominant selfishness; neither patriotism, public spirit, nor benevolence, can find a lodgment in their hearts, or make a practical exhibition in their lives. All the good citizenship and neighborhood-comity of the men who "fear not God," we owe to their pride, their interest or their fears—as these emotions may be excited or appealed to, by civil or conventional laws.

The men who "fear not God," are devoid of the enlightening, and refreshing power of conscience. They have no rule of action but their interest. They cannot be expected to regard the rights of others; but will treat them with injustice, cruelty or indifference, as may best suit their taste, convenience or interest.

Such men can have no elevated estimate of their fellows; they cannot "honor all men," because they see no real dignity in man. Man, in their account of him, is but a superior animal—and, under the best auspices, but a civilized animal. Why, then, should they honor man as a brother—the child of a common Father; as a subject of the Divine government, and an heir of the splendid or awful possibilities of eternity? Why should they regard their fellow-men as immortal beings, with whom they must stand side by side and confront the tremendous judgment-seat of God—and answer for their behavior towards them, while they consorted and tabernacled in time? No such reasons for a just and benevolent consideration of their fellow-men in their relations towards them exist in their minds; as, then, they do not "fear God," they will not "regard man."

If we admit the legitimateness and truthfulness of the above reflections and conclusions, we shall, at least in some approximate measure, appreciate the vast importance to civil and social life, of the cardinal ideas of revealed religion. For, though the mass of a population may not become experimentally religious, yet if the great dogmas of the Gospel are received into the conventional religious creed of the people, they cannot fail to exercise an elevating and powerfully controling influence upon the daily life of that people.

Every patriot, then, and every friend of good order and good morals, should rally to the support of the institutions of Christianity, especially to the Sabbath—as the public and institutional recognition of the great duty of worship—to the preaching of the Gospel, as the great and divinely-authorized means of promulgating and propagating revealed truths; and to the Sabbath-school, as the great instrument of enlightening the children—the future citizens—and educating their consciences to a practical and reverential recognition of God; and the great duties we owe to Him, to ourselves, and to our fellow-men; teaching them to "fear God," that they may justly and kindly "regard men."

WESTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: The Western Virginia Conference has just now closed the second day of its session, in this town. Bishop Kavanaugh is presiding. The preachers are generally present, the weather is fine, and every thing is progressing in harmony and good condition.

Yesterday a committee was appointed on the Conference Depository, as recommended by the General Conference. They are now ready to report. The committee take hold of this enterprise in good earnest. Where this matter is well understood, I have not as yet met a person who is not in favor of an independent Conference Depository. The Western Virginia Conference preachers are decidedly in favor of a Depository of their own, without any partnership with any other Conference.

The expurgation of slavery from the Discipline will pass, perhaps unanimously, in this Conference. Yours, etc.,

Greensburg, Ky., Sept. 16, 1858. R. ABBEY.

God's True Church.—A sermon preached by the Rev. William P. Miller, on the Monroeville Circuit, Alabama Conference, at the request of the Quarterly Conference—being a reply to the exclusive views of the Rev. W. C. Morrow, held forth in a sermon preached before the last Bethlehem Baptist Association. We deprecate all warfare between the Christian Churches; but when it is forced upon our people, we are rejoiced to find the much-abused "Circuit-rider" able to contend successfully for the faith. Mr. Miller we know well; and have often labored side by side with him in many a glorious revival.

Bishop Janes Shot.—The Central Christian Advocate, gives us this unpleasant intelligence: "We learn that Bishop Janes had a narrow escape from death in Indianapolis, on Thursday, the 2d inst. He was passing along the street from the residence of Bishop Ames, when he was struck in the face by a shot from a gun, carelessly fired by some boy, and painfully wounded. The shot entered the left cheek, and penetrated the side of the nose. A surgeon soon extracted the shot, and we suppose the Bishop is now doing well."

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

TURE GREATNESS OF NEW ORLEANS

IN CONFIRMATION of views presented in this r some time since, we copy the following acts from the Boston Herald.

"Give, therefore, to New Orleans the cool healthy climate of London, and it would surpass London in the vastness of its commerce. Such one day it will be, when the ns of securing health shall be obtained. w how, with the undrained swamps that round it, and the death-bearing miasmas cloud it, making it richer in grave-yards it is even in natural advantages, it rapidly eases in population. In 1840 it numbered ,000 souls, and now it has 225,000.

Its commerce shows a still more prosperous dition—so growing that the late revulsions cely checked it. The statement of its trade, ich is annually made up to September 1st, use that is the point separating between old and new cotton crops, has just been lished in the papers of that city. It appears that more than half the entire cotton p of the country comes to this depot.

After enumerating the present receipts of uce from the West, it concludes with the owing picture of the future that opens before us:

'Every year the trade is increasing, and as country above becomes settled it will continue to increase, till the annual crop that floats the Mississippi shall cover the tide with ts, from the falls of St. Anthony to the Baltill the ships that congregate to bear off fruits of the harvest shall find no levees to tain them; and still this grand depot and epot at the mouth of the river, shall contain illions of people, who will be kept busy by labor it creates, and made rich from the fits of its commerce.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

THE OCTOBER number has been sent us by the blishers, Phillips, Sampson & Co., Boston. It of the very highest grade of Magazine literature; but is sectional in its politics. A question in point: "Nay, it is best that even anness should ripen. The slave-holder of uth Carolina must avouch n false principle cover his false practice; must affirm that very is a Divine institution."

We judge that the "Atlantic" must be infidel well as abolition—for the Bible avouches the nciple which it puts into the mouth of "the ve-holder of South Carolina." Wonder if of the geniuses of the "Atlantic" would dertake an article on Smith's or Bledsoe's k on slavery? What is very rare in a magae, the "Atlantic" has some good poetry. The Cup," has the true body and flavor. "The tocrat of the Breakfast-table," presided r, we understand, by the Wit and Poet, Dr. ver Wendell Holmes, is "worth its weight gold." Gossiping about common-places, he r and anon says some of the grandest things the language; as if n beggar, poking with stick among the ashes of a burnt house, uld, every few moments, with that same k, punch a hole in the sky, and give you mpses of many square miles of glory. Upon whole, the "Atlantic" is full of genius, scendentalism, sound philosophy, elegant e, a little religion, and some scepticism.

LIKENESSES OF THE BISHOPS.

JAMES M. EDNEY, of New York, has sent us a dsome lithograph, containing the likenesses the Southern Methodist Bishops—including of Bishops Bascom and Capers. The eccesses are as good as any we have seen. will be sent, free of postage, to any who may re it, for one dollar—either from New York from this depository. We repeat, that the enesses are excellent. Most of them present Bishops as they appeared to our own eyes the last General Conference.

Since writing the above, we have seen "The uthern Christian Advocate," in which, Dr. yers expresses n very different opinion of the enesses from our own. He calls the picture "caricature;" "a libel upon our Episcopacy." Well! Well! Get it and judge for yourselves. ou will find it as we have said. Our good friend, Dr. Myers, is in such good humor at not being caught by the correspondence, which was intended, as he truly says, to advertise the picture, that his judgment may be a little warped.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS come in regularly, and our list is constantly enlarging. They come from all quarters. Letters of encouraging approval are abundant. The epidemic, requiring all the ministerial labor we can muster in the city—with our own sufficiently pressing engagements—have caused us to neglect our correspondence sadly. But, though their letters are not answered, let our friends not conclude they are unappreciated. Encouraging letters with substantial support, are balm to the wearied and troubled soul of an editor. We hereby return our thanks for every kind word sent us. God bless you, friends, wherever and whoever you are. Continue the good work. Let now paying subscribers pour in—ten thousand is the figure. A lift from every preacher would fetch it up almost at once. At all your meetings, Camp, Protracted and others, get the people to subscribe, especially the converts and new members.

THE NEW DISCIPLINE.

The Book Editor desires the editors of our Church papers to say that a small edition of the Discipline for the present necessity has been issued. So soon as returns from the Conferences shall authorize the expunction of the rule, provisionally cancelled by the General Conference, the Agent will issue a large edition of the Discipline, in which the rule in question will be cancelled, as well as the name of Bishop Capers, which by an oversight, has been retained in the Discipline since his death.

A GOOD PAPER.—One of the best newspapers in the State of Texas is, the Crockett Argus. For a interior paper, it is excellent.

ROMANISM IN FRANCE.

The old and long-tried French correspondent of the New York Observer gives his impression in regard to the condition and prospects of Romanism in France at present in the following words: "There are in the Roman Catholic clergy of France many men sincere in their faith, exemplary in their life, zealous in the fulfilment of their ministry. To judge from appearances, the Romish Church is more flourishing in our country now than it has been for sixty years. The seminaries are filled with pupils; religious services are almost everywhere attended by a large number of persons. There is especially in aristocratic families an increase of zeal and devotion. The descendants of those nobles who in the eighteenth century applauded the impious sarcasms of Voltaire, are now careful docilely to obey the ordinances of Popery. Perhaps this bigotry of the French nobility is prompted by worldly interests rather than by conscience; but the fact is plain; there is a return to the Romish Church in the high aristocracy."

STATISTICS OF BOOKSELLING.

In Ireland there are seventy-four towns, each with a minimum of 2500 inhabitants, (census 1841,) not one of which contains a bookseller. Scotland, with a third of the population, has three times the number of booksellers, being in the proportion of nine to one. The seventy-four towns without one of the "trade" include the following: Dungarvan, 12,302; Carrick-on-suir, 11,049; Youghal, 9939; Carrickfergus, 9379; Cashel, 8027; Newtownards, 7621; Lisburn, 7524; Kiasale, 6918. More remarkable still, there are six counties which cannot boast of even one bookseller, or a single circulating library, and we shall name them: 1. Donegal; 2. Kildare; 3. Leitrim; 4. Queen's; 5. Westmeath; 6. Wicklow. These may be considered strange, and most assuredly they are very startling facts, says the Literary Gazette; but is not the explanation to be found in the circumstance that Popery is essentially the enemy of education and of human progress?

DR. RALSTON.

The Episcopal Recorder says: "Dr. Ralston, the eminent divine, late of the Methodist denomination, was admitted to the sacred order of Deacons, by Bishop Smith, in Ascension Church, Frankfort, August 8th, and preached in the evening to a gratified audience. The Rev. Dr. has received and accepted a unanimous call to the depressed but important and promising parish of Trinity Church, Covington. It cannot be doubted but God's blessing will accompany the pious, earnest efforts of so good, so faithful, so learned, so urbane a clergyman as Dr. Ralston." It seems that the Methodist Itinerancy is a capital theological seminary for the supply of first-rate clergymen to "the Church." In the present case, however, the honor must be shared with the Cumberland Presbyterian "society," in which the Doctor was a minister before he joined "the Methodist denomination."

AN ANCIENT CHURCH.

The "First Church in Hartford," Connecticut, (Congregational,) must be a model of its kind. It has been in existence two hundred and twenty-five years, and has never dismissed a pastor. It has had ten in all, nine of whom have lived and died among their people; and the tenth, the venerable Dr. Hawes, has now been in charge of it for forty years, and seems likely to remain, as his predecessors did, till death.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Farmersville Circuit—

REV. D. P. CULLEN, writes: "Our second quarterly meeting commenced Saturday before the third Sabbath in July, and was protracted until the following Friday night, some twenty-five professed religion, eleven joined the Church. On the following Saturday we commenced another meeting that closed the following Monday, eight accessions to the Church, some thirty penitents were at the altar on Sunday night. I never have seen God's people manifest greater desires for the prosperity of his cause, and sinners for their salvation."

This letter should have been published long ago, but was mislaid. We crave Bro. C's. pardon"—Editor.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Clayton Circuit—

REV. L. P. GOLSON, writes: "Since my last communication, the Lord has visited us in great power. At Faulk's Church, a meeting of nine days, embracing the fifth sabbath in August. It was truly a time to be remembered; first a great revival in the Church, next among outsiders, sinners were made to mourn and were converted. Twenty-four were added to the Church at that point, closed on Saturday. Sabbath morning commenced a meeting in Louisville, continued eight days, congregations unusually large day and night; the Lord was with us in convicting and converting power. Twenty-four accessions to the Church, closed on Saturday night. Next morning commenced a meeting in Clayton, six days continuance, a good meeting. Eleven added to the Church with a prospect of many more—we commence the meeting again to-night. Brothers Crowell, and Tyson were with us in Clayton, and Father McLendon at the two former places. I cannot close without letting the world know that all the drinking shops, in Louisville and Clayton, closed their doors during the services at Church, day and night, and their keepers attended Church.

Our Missionary and Conference collections, will I think, come up right."

Black's Bend Circuit—

REV. ANSON WEST, writes: "I have just closed a meeting of eight days, at Union Church, at which God abundantly blessed us; there was a good number of conversions, and thirty-seven whites and twenty eight colored persons united with the Methodist Church. Father Hearn, Brothers Peavy, Gillis, and Locke, did us faithful service. I have now closed my round of protracted meetings. The Lord has blessed us at every Church in the work, blessed be the name of God. Black's Bead Circuit is a small work of five appointments, all within a mornings ride of any part of the work. There is some wealth and intelligence in the bounds of the work. I esteem it a good Circuit."

Prairie Hill Circuit—

REV. S. H. COX, writes: That at one of his appointments, recently forty-three professed religion, and forty-six joined the Church, most of them adults, and heads of families. That was a productive revival. They should all have the Advocate.

Lebanon Circuit—

REVS. J. J. PIGMENT, AND B. L. SELMAN, writes: "We have quite a revival influence on our work, over one hundred persons have been added to the Church in the bounds of our work during the last quarter, probationers generally of course."

DeKalb Circuit—

REV. WM. J. POWERS, writes: "The revival has come to us. Several protracted meetings have been held, all of which were successful. Our camp-meeting, was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. This year, one hundred and ninety-eight white persons and thirty-seven blacks have joined the Church, on this Circuit, and fully as many converted; such times I have hardly ever witnessed. In this number many young men and women have joined the Church, and several old persons. The Church has improved in other respects, her borders are enlarged. In a new place where I have preached several times, I succeeded in getting our third quarterly meeting. I promised that a shelter would be prepared. The time came ample, provision was made, at the close of the meeting we organised a Church with thirthy members—made a speech, handed round a paper, and got five hundred dollars subscribed to build a Church. Others have subscribed, and next Wednesday they are to let out the house to be built. In another place a gentleman who is a Universalist, requested me to preach in his neighborhood, represented it as destitute. I sent an appointment and on Thursday, had a good attentive congregation. At a convenient season held a meeting for them, and now have a Church at that place with some twenty-five members. There is another Church with twenty members, that we have organized, and in all these places there is a great opening for large Churches to be raised up. 'A great and an effectual door is open.'

The cause of Missions has not been forgotten, eight hundred and thirty-two dollars have been subscribed, and fully that amount will be collected. The superannuated preachers and the widows will be remembered, this collection we have commenced, and from what has been done I can say that our assessment will be raised, and much more I trust. This Circuit was divided last Conference, and while we retain the name, six of our appointments were left off, leaving us eight. We have a good parsonage, and if all our Circuits would build good parsonages and furnish them well, our Bishops and Presiding Elders would have no trouble in sending men any where.

And now Mr. Editor, I will give you proof that our Advocate has some attention. I send you eighteen new subscribers, and by Conference I think that the old claims, that are collectable, you will have."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Sea Shore Circuit—

REV. J. NICHOLSON, writes: "My fourth quarterly meeting came on last Saturday at this place, Handsboro,' but we were disappointed by the failure of our Presiding Elder. God is with us in great power and glory; we are in the midst of a glorious work all around this Sea Shore Circuit, except at Pass Christian."

Livingston Circuit—

REV. E. H. STRICKLAND, writes: "Within a few weeks past, twenty-four acres of beautiful beach and magnolia land has been given to the Methodist Church, in this Circuit for building Churches, at different places, all good stands for Churches. Two Churches will soon be finished, and three more begun; a goodly number have joined the Church; religion is advancing here."

The Very Latest Intelligence.

HALIFAX, Sept. 27.—The shore-end of the Atlantic telegraph cable was being shipped for Valentia....The quotation of the price of shares in the Atlantic Telegraph Company was unchanged—£500.

It was reported that a conspiracy in Turkey against the Sultan had been discovered.

Accounts had been received of a threatened rupture between Turkey and Persia.

Rumors were afloat of the discovery of a new Republican conspiracy in Spain.

The French Government, it is said, intends increasing the squadron in the China Seas.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The steamship City of Washington, which left Liverpool on Wednesday, 15th inst., reached her dock at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Report the cotton market active and prices in favor of the seller....They report the sales for the three days at 43,000 bales, of which speculators and exporters took 14,000....Middling Orleans, quoted at 7 5-16d.; Middling Mobile, 7¼d.

Six persons were crushed to death in the Music Hall, in Sheffield, as they were attempting to escape, on the supposition that the building was on fire.

A malignant fever was raging at Basle, in Switzerland. Many persons had died of it.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The bark Lotus brought the twelve passengers saved from the burning steamship Austrin to Halifax. They were taken from the French bark Maurice, which saw the Austria on the 14th, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, rescued forty persons from her bowsprit. The passengers at Halifax report that the fire commenced on the afternoon of the 14th in the steerage, and the ship was immediately put at half speed, but soon after the magazine exploded, and the engineers were instantly suffocated. The fire then spread fearfully, and the ship was quickly enveloped in flame. A large number of passengers were instantly suffocated in the cabins and smoking room. Nearly all the first class passengers jumped from the poop into the sea and perished. Several ladies remained aboard until their garments were in flames and then leaped overboard. One boat was launched and crowded, and quickly swamped, and thus many souls perished. The life boat of the Austria, containing twenty-three persons, including the first and third officers of the ship, was picked up. Four men in a broken boat were also picked up. The second officer of the ship was picked up after he had been swimming six hours. He was severely burned. Only six females were saved. Three of them were considerably burned. The total number of persons known to be saved is sixty-seven (? 68.) The remainder, nearly six hundred, it is feared, all perished. The sacrifice of life by this dreadful calamity is greater than has occurred by the loss of any previous Atlantic steamship. J. Bogel and wife, of New Orleans; Anna Paypers and three children, and Maria Perkins, of St. Louis; Wilhel Stachel, of Cincinnati, were among the passengers.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—The Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company are to have a meeting soon, to determine what further steps shall be taken under the circumstances. .....They have ordered the suspension of the shipment of the large cable for shore-ends to Valentia.....De Santy, the chief electrician of the Atlantic cable, reports from Trinity Bay that nothing intelligible has been derived from the cable since 1st instant, except that a few signals were felt on the 23d.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 25.—The Kansas papers state that the Pike Peak gold excitement is very intense.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 22.—Gen. Wm. Walker arrived here incognito last night, and left for Louisville to-day at noon.

YELLOW FEVER! YELLOW FEVER!

TO THE AFFLICTED CITIZENS OF NEW ORLEANS!

Read Carefully and Thoughtfully.

DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID.—The greatest known agent for Purifying the Air. It is a new and important discovery. It is a triumph of scientific skill. It is the result of learned inquiry. It is the fruit of patient research.

This invaluable Agent is now presented to the people of New Orleans, for the first time. It is a Chemical union of materials, provided by Nature herself, for rendering the air we breathe pure and healthful. It is not a mixture, but a true Chemical compound. Its action is in obedience to fixed laws, quick, sure, powerful. It purifies dwellings, sewers, sinks, privies, kitchens. It removes all offensive odors immediately. It cures burns, bites, and stings of insects. It relieves boils, cleanses ulcers, heals sores. It cleanses teeth, sweetens breath.

It has been used with most remarkable success in Typhoid Fever, Scarlet Fever, Measles; indeed, in all contagious diseases it is invaluable.

In the City of Charleston, S. C., it is now in constant use by Leading Physicians, in Yellow Fever.

Orders from that City represent it, as in the most active demand. It has not been advertised there but one month, yet orders for hundreds of bottles have been filled for that City.

In this City the HOWARD ASSOCIATION, is now using it in the treatment of Yellow Fever.

EDUCATIONAL.

GREENSBOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL.

REV. J. W. N. MEARS, A. M. M. D.,

PRINCIPAL AND PROPRIETOR.

IN this School a thorough course is laid out for Pupils in the Classics, Mathematics, French and English, and young men desiring to enter the Freshmen, Sophomore, or Junior Class in "THE SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY," or any other College, will have every necessary facility afforded them for that object.

A commodious building is now in the process of erection, with ample play grounds attached, and a most delicious spring. New School room Furniture, of the most approved kind, consisting of Desks, Settees, Chairs, Large Black board-slates, Maps, Charts, Paintings, and a Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, has just been purchased by the Principal in New York; and indeed every thing reasonable has been done to render the school room comfortable and attractive.

The object of the Principal is to make this School what its name imports, A High School, where young men can prepare for College, or for entrance upon business life. Instruction, if desired, can be given in German and Hebrew. Those having charge of the education of young men, would do well to investigate the claims of this School.

Provision has been made for a limited number of Misses, who will be placed in a separate department, under a competent and experienced Instructress. They will be taught all the branches necessary to a finished education.

The Principal desires to urge upon the consideration of those who intend to educate their sons in the Southern University, the propriety of placing them at once where they can commence a course of study which will be carried on during their collegiate career.

The second annual session will commence (Providence permitting) on the 1st of September, and will continue nine consecutive months, including the usual vacation. It will be divided into three terms of three months each.

The tuition must be paid at the middle of each term, or interest will be charged. The justice of this claim will be at once acknowledged, when it is recollected that the Principal has incurred great expense for the benefit of the community, and needs the prompt payment of tuition bills to enable him to meet it.

No pupil will be admitted for less than a session. Any injury done to the house, or furniture, or premises, beyond the legitimate use of it, will be charged to the pupil in whose care the desk, &c. is.

No deduction will be made for the absence of any pupil; if, however, any pupil is absent on account of sickness for more than a week, the place of the absentee may be supplied by another.

In case of the expulsion of any pupil, the relinquishment of the claim for tuition to be optional with the Principal. The full payment of the tuition in such case will be most positively required where the Principal is not satisfied that he has had the entire co-operation of parents in the full extent of parental authority, "in bringing the disobedient to the wisdom of submitting to the powers that be." The Principal will decide this matter. It is his determination to throw the responsibility for the deportment of his pupils upon their parents, where it belongs. Children trained properly at home, will, as a general rule, behave properly at school. For the good of society, idleness, obstinacy and malice should never find even a temporary home in the school-room. They are a Pandora's box, out of which spring a multitude of evils.

It is desirable that pupils commence promptly with the commencement of the session.

For further particulars apply to the Principal.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF ITINERANT MINISTERS, distinguished, for the most part, as Pioneers of Methodism within the bounds of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South: Edited by Thos. O. Summers, D. D.

Retail price, in muslin	$2 50
Muslin, gilt edges	3 00
Half Turkey, (library style)	3 25

These Sketches are full of interest. While they portray briefly the character, life and labors of some of the most distinguished Ministers of the New World, the historical reminiscences are very valuable. The volume is an octavo, containing nearly 400 pages. The type is large, the paper superior, and the binding substantial. It is ornamented by several engravings, and, we judge, is a work that will find an extensive circulation. We advise our friends to procure this valuable publication.

ANNALS OF SOUTHERN METHODISM.—A beautiful volume, of over 400 pages; very valuable and highly interesting—Price, $1: usual discount to wholesale purchasers. Single copies sent by mail (postage prepaid) for $1 00—when cash accompanies the order.

LIFE OF BISHOP CAPERS.—This highly interesting volume is now ready for distribution. Competent judges, who have read the work, pronounce it excellent; every way worthy the distinguished author, Rev. W. M. Wightman, D. D., and the great and good Bishop, whose life and character are so beautifully and truthfully portrayed. Price, $1—usual discount to wholesale purchasers. Single copies sent by mail (postage prepaid) when orders are accompanied by the cash.

THEOPHILUS WALTON; or, THE MAJESTY OF TRUTH. A Reply to Theodosia Ernest. By a member of the Alabama Conference. This new book, though but recently announced, has reached an issue of 5000, and the demand for it is still active. For $1, sent by letter, we will send the book by mail and prepay the postage.

POST-OAK CIRCUIT.—This work has already reached a sale of 12,000 copies, and is wonderfully popular, as evinced by the notices of the press, both religious and secular, North and South. A full supply on hand.

"We went right through it. It is a gem of its kind. We hope a thousand hearts will grow warm at its fires." [Ilich. C. Advocate.

"May the day come, when every Methodist will salute every other, saying—'Have you read Post-Oak Circuit yet?' and be answered—'Yes, twice.'" [South. O. Adv.

"It is full of sharp sayings, and each chapter is a battery of hot shot. We don't know the author, but guess some of our old stewards have got down into Red River Conference." [North. W. Chr. Advocate.

"A book of telling power and effect in many passages, and of living interest throughout." [Char. Courier.

"A charming little volume. We cannot but recommend it with all our heart." [Bainbridge Argus.

THE GREATEST

Medical Discovery

OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered to one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,

From the worst Scrofula down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of blles.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth and stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One or two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corns and running ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruptions of the skin.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.

Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed growing on the pastures, and along old stone walls, should cure every humor in the system; yet it is a fixed fact. If you have a humor, it has to start. There are no IFS nor ANDS, humbug has nothing to do with suiting some cases, but not yours. I peddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts. I give it to children a year old, to old people of sixty. I have seen poor, puny, wormy-looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to a perfect state of health by one bottle.

To those who are subject to a sick head ache, one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief in catarrh and deafness. Some who have taken it had been costive for years, and have been regulated by it. Where the body is sound it works quite easy, but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it will cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed; they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad result from it; on the contrary, when that feeling is gone you will feel yourself like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever man listened to.

Manufactured by DONALD KENNEDY, No. 120 Warren street, Roxbury, Mass. Price $1 per bottle.

THE DYING CHILD.

"Sweet mother, I seem gentle music to hear."
"'Tis but fancy, my child; turn to slumber again."
"Nay, surely 'tis music; hark, mother! 'tis near;
It floats round my couch with its gladdening strain."

"'Tis but fancy, my child; let me moisten thy lips:
Thine dreams will temper thy feverish brow;
Some hot tisane by its nectar it sips;
'Tis nothing, my child; thou wilt rest better now."

"Then, 'tis nothing, dear mother, and yet sure 'tis sweet;
It comforts my soul, for it whispers of bliss;
Were I dying, and angels my spirit would greet,
They could not bring welcomer music than this.

"And do you not hear it? and do you not see
You seraph that beckons me hence to the sky?
Perhaps, dearest mother, 'tis sent but to me;
May I go if it calls? may I yield it reply?"

Gentle babe, I come for thee;
I did come to hear thee home,
Far from mortal agony;
Come, then, gentle infant, come.

Cool shall be that fevrid cheek,
Every tear be wiped away;
Ere the orient morning break
Thou shalt be [illegible]

Yes, meek babe, 'twas I that sang;
Heavenly anthems thou didst hear,
Strains to sooth thy dying pang,
Hymns thy parting soul to cheer.

Tell her on whose tender breast
Soft reclines thy fainting head,
Thou shalt shortly be at rest—
Say not, numbered with the dead.

No; while o'er thy mouldering dust
Falls the tear of earthly love,
Thou shalt live amidst the just,
Brighter life in heaven above.

Bid her, then, sweet babe, rejoice
That to her the boon is given,
To resign, at Jesus' voice,
One more cherub saint to heaven.

MAKE YOUR MARK.

The beautiful sentiment embodied in the following stanza forcibly presents itself to the understanding of every young man or woman. We insert it for their benefit:

Life is fleeting as a shade—
Make your mark;
Mark of some kind must be made—
Make your mark;
Make it while the arm is strong,
In the golden hours of youth;
Make it with the stamp of truth—
Make your mark.

THE FIRST-BORN.

The baby that first peeps in the household is a great institution. As soon as it begins breathing it starts new feelings in the mother's heart, and the father's too. Let Alaric Watts speak:

"My sweetest, my sweet one, the tears were in my eyes
When first I clasped thee to my heart, and heard thy feeble cries;
For I thought of all that I had borne, as I bent me down to kiss
Thy cherry lips and sunny brow, my first-born bud of bliss!"

How many times and how fervently your lips were pressed against that babe's lips when first it lay unconscious in your arms; and what strange beauty rejoiced on the cheeks and in the eyes, and how your frame thrilled when its first cry broke on your ear! People there are, not fathers and mothers, who will talk loud and largely about the training of children, about this thing being right and that being wrong, and so on, but who know nothing in regard to real parental emotion. The moment that little immortal was first pressed to the mother's breast, was a moment, as we have said, unfolding a new world of feeling to the mother, not a world such as discoverers tell of, and not feelings such as they detail; but a world that lips can not paint nor pen portray.

By and by the first-born will know the sound of mother and father's voice, and will distinguish between them. By and by the first-born will run to meet father at the gate, as he comes in the evening from his day's toil, and clambering on his knee will give him his little heart in a tiny warm kiss. By and by he will go to school, and the big world will begin to open to his view, and the fact will press on him that this world, big and strange as it is, is only the door-step to a life where his being will be immortal. Happy mother! while you kiss and admire, remember that you have a duty to perform. As that bud of promise unfolds, it is yours to see that all its unfoldings shall be those of virtue, and goodness, and heaven. The impression you make on that young mind and heart will last, not through time only, but through eternity. Can you be too anxious or too prayerful in executing the great work which God has committed to your hands?

TEDIUM VERSUS TE DEUM.

The Christian Register, an ably conducted Unitarian paper, published in Boston, has this passage: "We must insist that the great want in our Protestant Churches is a want of hopefulness. We sing few Te Deums. If we attempt it, the usual dragging heavy spirit of Protestant music prevails, and changes the second e into an i. The heart of childhood is the quickest test of joy. Apply that to our public worship. Do children love it? Far enough from it. But we have seen it otherwise elsewhere. We need not be ashamed to confess that we might learn something from the Catholics. Their churches are full in summer as well as in winter. We never hear of their vacations. The most jubilant holiday is found in going to Church. We need not imitate any doctrine or practice inconsistent with our principles, and yet we might learn from them how to make public worship attractive to the multitude. Especially is this desirable for the young. Every association of joyfulness with religion does their souls a wrong which all life may not wear out."

A PROTESTANT QUEEN.

A correspondent of the Presbyterian, writing from Paris, says: "The Queen of Holland, who is now here on a visit to the imperial family, attended the American chapel on the Sabbath. Immediately on her entrance, she kneeled with great apparent devotion on the velvet cushion which had been provided in front of her chair. Her responses in the service were hearty and distinct, clearly audible above the voices of those around her. The entrance and presence of the queen created no sensation, though all felt gratified with the preference she had exhibited in attending Divine service with us Americans."

A LOVE OF A BONNET.

The Fall fashions for bonnets, if the Philadelphia North American is properly informed, provide artificial fruits as a substitute for flowers. The latter will pass entirely out of use. Instead of roses, Jonny-jump-ups, and daffy-down-dillies, the bonnets of our belles will be graced with clusters of artificial currants or grapes, cherries, and other fruits, done in glass, of the least possible thickness. The new bonnet is a unique affair, and resembles a cabbage-leaf trimmed with tomatoes. The price is cheap, only thirty dollars.

AN OLD FASHIONED MOTHER.

Ah, how much meaning is comprised in that simple expression, the old-fashioned mother! It carries our thoughts back to those whose home influence was pure and elevating; who taught their daughters to render themselves blessings to society by their goodness, their diligence and their useful knowledge. We think of the lofty heroism, the brave endurance, the thousand virtues they inculcated, and sigh at the contrast between the past and the present.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer the Little Children to come unto Me."

MOTHERLESS.—BY C. HENRY ST. JOHN.

We miss'd her when the morning sun
Its floods of beauty poured;
We missed her in the matin hymn,
And round the humble board.
And wand'ring 'mong the dewy flowers,
Sweet voices filled the air,
But something seemed to murmur still
Of one that was not there.

And when our little playmates came
They came not as of old—
Their clouded brows and whispered words
The same sad story told!
And e'en the idle village group
Respected our distress—
And mirth grew silent on the lips
That sighed—"The motherless!"

When at the evening's peaceful close,
We breathed the evening prayer,
Oh, how each aching bosom felt
One voice was wanting there!
One gentle voice, that ever fell
Like sweet angelic strains,
Or mingling with our merriment,
Or soothing in our pains.

We missed her when the autumn leaves
Went rustling o'er the ground,
We missed her when the ice-king raved
In storm and darkness round.
Nor have the rolling years effaced
The wound thus early made—
Full oft we feel the aching void,
In sunshine and in shade.

CHILDREN'S EDITORIAL.

THE AUTUMN SEASON has commenced—the nights are beginning to be cool. Soon we shall have cold weather and fine rousing fires, and long nights. Now is the time to prepare for the Winter's reading. Every Winter that Providence gives to a boy or girl, should be improved. Begin now to get good books to read during the long nights. The Summer nights were too short to allow of much reading before bed-time. The Autumn nights will allow of some reading; and the Winter nights will allow of much reading. An industrious person, who loves books, can read a great deal during one Winter. We trust all our young readers will take the hint, go to work, and be much wiser upon the opening of next Summer than they are now. We have plenty of books at this office, and there is plenty of them elsewhere. Get your father, or mother, or friends, to provide you with books. They are worth more than money or fine clothes. And while you are young is the time to read. If you neglect it now, you can never be as wise as you should be. Plant the seed of truth in your mind in the Spring-time of youth.

MEXICANS IN TEXAS.

In my last communication I gave my young friends an account of a novel camp-meeting in Texas. In this I will give them some account of a numerous class of people in our midst, I mean in the city of San Antonio and its environs. They are the Mexicans. I will confine myself, however, pretty much to the youthful portion of this people. They are mostly of a copper color; varying, however, in this respect, from the very dark to the white man, and in appearance, the larger portion resemble the American Indians. They have resided here for many years, and have been, I may say, partially civilized and christianized by the Romish Church. Those who reside in these parts are nearly all, I believe, taught to read in their own native language (the Spanish,) and I am disposed to believe their priests do not encourage them to learn the English language, for it is rarely you meet with one who can converse in what they call in Americano, although all the business, nearly, is done in this language. On account of the Mexicans speaking the Spanish the Protestants, who are Americans, can have but little opportunity to instruct these people in the true faith of the Christian religion. Their priests prejudice the old and young so much against the Bible, that although we have Testaments translated into Spanish, and offered gratuitously for circulation, I do not believe they are but rarely, if ever, read by these priest-ridden and ignorant people.

During the week-days you may see scores of the boys engaged in various sports and amusements, such as swimming, fishing, playing ball, raising kites, &c. &c., a few you may see returning to town in the evening with their donkeys (a very small Jack) loaded with hay that they have cut and gathered upon the prairies. This they very ingeniously tie up in two large bunches, then connecting them together with a rope, they swing them across the backs of their donkeys, a little fellow mounts his long-eared animal, and seating himself securely between the two, equally balanced; being nearly hid, and without a bridle or anything to guide these docile creatures except a stick in the hand, which is unsparingly applied to first one side of the head, and then to the other, of these little Mexican beasts. In this way they manage to keep them in the track; and for miles these boys will go in a jog of a pace with their day's labor, until they reach the city where they soon dispose of it for about four bits; with this they can purchase an ample supply of provision for a day, for they are usually very small eaters. Again, you may see another of these little yellow Mexicans on his donkey with a load of wood, cut up in short sticks of about three feet in length, tied up pretty much in the same manner they do their hay; this they cut from the muskeet bushes growing likewise on the prairies. And having about as much as can be fastened on the back of one of these patient little beasts of burden, away they jog to town. In this case, however, the boy either sits behind the wood or walks and drives his little living cart before him. This is also sold for about four bits, or they drive it to their father's or mother's jackal (called hackal) for the purpose of cooking, for these Mexicans, even in cold weather, rarely ever attempt to warm themselves by the fire, but sit on the sunny side of their houses or huts; indeed they appear quite comfortable there wrapped up in their blankets, and seated during a Norther. The American boys call the Sun the Mexican's fire.—Exchange.

INFLUENCE OF SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

About a year since, a gentleman in Rochester purchased a building that had been used as a tavern, and converted it into a Sabbath School house. Children were gathered there from week to week in crowds. This part of the city (Bull's Head) had been much neglected, there being no Protestant house of worship there. On the first day of January the Bethel was opened for preaching.

A little boy, ten or twelve years old, came home from a neighbor's house one day, and said: "Ma, I wish you would ask Pa to do one thing for me; will you?" "What is it my son?" "Say, Ma, will you ask him?" "What is it?" inquired the mother again, who was not a Christian. "I want you to ask him to take the Bible, and read and pray, as Mr. M. does." "O," said the mother, "you must ask him." When the father came, the boy went to him with his request: "Pa, I want you to do one thing for me; will you? say, Pa, will you?" "What is it, my son?"—"Say, will you do it?" "I don't know till you tell me what it is." "I want you to read and pray, as Mr. M. does"

Soon the father began to visit the house of God, and in a short time the request of the son was granted. "Out of the mouths of babes," etc.

A German family, consisting of parents and six children, were living in the most degraded state of intemperance. Some tracts were left there, and a few days afterward the family were visited again when, to our surprise, the father told us that he had stopped drinking, and was going to be beastly no more. He asked for a German Bible, with which he was supplied, and he became a careful reader of the word of God, attended meetings, and prayed in his family. His children are regular at the Sabbath School, the house is furnished with chair and beds, etc., and has now the appearance of a dwelling of intelligent beings.—Zion's Herald.

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

MARY CASSELS, wife of Reuben Cassals deceased, whose former name was Sojourner, was born in South Carolina on the Cumberland river, February 2, 1792; and died in Wilkinson county, Miss., August 2, 1858, being sixty-six years and six months old.

For the want of proper data, I cannot give all that would be interesting concerning the life of our departed sister, but enough to be encouraging to all who are trying to serve God. Mother Cassels, as the most of her acquaintances were accustomed to call her, united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in her eighteenth year. She lived, amid trials, temptations, and difficulties, a faithful and consistant member of that Church, forty-eight years; and died in the full assurance of faith and eternal happiness. At what time our sister was converted I have been unable to learn; but often have I heard her praise God in Class-meeting, and express her hope of being one day in the full enjoyment of that better world, "from whose bourne no traveler returns." Many were the days and months of affliction, she had to suffer, but all appeared to work for her, "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." When well, she was a regular attendant and assistant of the sick and needy, ever ready and willing with a generous heart, and a liberal hand to give, as far as she was able to the advancement of the Redeemer's Kingdom. She has left many friends and relatives to mourn her departure; but with one consoling thought, that many of them have been converted and are now following her footsteps. A greater legacy she could not have left to her friends and relatives, than she has, that of a religious life and good example. Her home was ever a home ready for the reception of the Christian minister—to which Bro. Drake and many of our ministers can testify. One of her greatest pleasures seemed to be to have them around her, sharing her comforts and, no doubt; many of them will be caused to weep when they learn of her death. Thus she lived; now, alas she is gone and while we are left to mourn, we have one consoling thought, that she is numbered among the blood-washed throng of Christ's redeemed. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord; yea saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." J. W. MCNEIL.

AMELIA ROBERTA, aged two years ten months and twenty-four days, daughter of T. F. and Alathia A. Haynes, after a long and severe illness, in Wilkieson county Miss., August 26, 1858. The Lord has seen proper to transplant this lovely and interesting child from this world of trouble and sorrow, to one where there is no barren soil or wintry blast—but to one of joy and happiness. Her parents are left to mourn her departure, but may her loss to them prove their spiritual gain. Sleep on sweet child, in the arms of him who hath said, "Suffer little children to come unto me."

"Christ died, my child, to set you free
From sin and hell and misery;
And none of all thy lovely train,
Has ever sought his face in vain."

McLEAN'S
Strengthening Cordial
AND BLOOD PURIFIER.
THE GREATEST REMEDY IN THE WORLD!!
THIS Cordial is distilled from a berry known only to myself, and chemically combined with some of the most valuable medicinal Roots, Herbs and Barks known to the mind of man, viz: Blood Root, Black Root, Wild Cherry Bark, Yellow Dock, Dandelion, Sarsaparilla, Elder Flowers, with others, producing the most infallible remedy for the restoration of health ever known.
IT IS NATURE'S OWN REMEDY,
nursing disease by natural laws. When taken, its healing influence is felt coursing through every vein of the body, purifying and accelerating the circulation of the blood. It neutralizes any bilious matter in the stomach, and strengthens the whole organization.
MCLEAN'S STRENGTHENING CORDIAL
will effectually cure Liver Complaints, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Chronic or Nervous Debility, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all Diseases arising from Disordered Liver or Stomach, such as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Rush of Blood to the Head, Sourness or Sickness of the Stomach, Heartburn, Disgust of Food, Fluttering of the Heart, Swimming or Pain in the Head, Choking or Suffocating Sensations on lying down, Dimness of Vision, Night Sweats, Fevers, Dryness of the Skin, Yellowness of the Skin or in the Eyes, Pimples or Blotches on the Face or Skin, Inflammation of the Blood, Melancholy or Depression of Spirits, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Bloody Flux, Costipation of the Bowels, Inward Piles, Diseases arising from the use of Mercury, Pain in the Bones, Coughing, Debility, Nervousness, Gravel, Impure Blood, Loss of Memory, Bilious Cholic, Gout, Liver Complaint, and Fever and Ague, or Chills and Fever. It will also cure diseases of the Bladder and Womb, such as Seminal Weakness, Incontinence of Urine, Stranguary, Inflammation or Weakness of the Womb or Bladder &c.
THERE IS NO MISTAKE ABOUT IT.
This Cordial will never fail to cure any of the above diseases, if taken as per directions on each bottle, in English, German and French.
OVER HALF A MILLION OF BOTTLES
have been sold during the last six months, and in no instance has it failed in giving entire satisfaction. Who, then, will suffer from weakness or debility when McLean's Strengthening Cordial will cure you?
TO THE LADIES.
Do you wish to be healthy and strong? Then go at once and get McLean's Cordial. It will strengthen and invigorate your whole system, causing a healthy and pure circulation of blood to flow through every vein, and the rich, rosy bloom of health to mount to your cheek again.
EVERY BOTTLE IS WARRANTED TO GIVE SATISFACTION.
FOR CHILDREN.
We say to parents, if your children are sickly, puny, or afflicted with complaints prevalent among children, give them a small quantity of McLean's Cordial, and it will make them healthy, fat and robust.—Delay not a moment. Try it and you will be convinced.
IT IS DELICIOUS TO TAKE.
EVERY COUNTRY MERCHANT
should not leave the city until he had procured a supply of McLean's Strengthening Cordial. It sells rapidly, because it always cures. A liberal discount will be made to those who buy to sell again.
CAUTION—Beware of druggists or dealers who may try to palm upon you some Bitter or Sarsaparilla trash, which they can buy cheap, by saying it is just as good. Avoid such men. Ask for McLean's Strengthening Cordial, and take nothing else. It is the only remedy that will purify the blood thoroughly, and at the same time strengthen the system.
One table spoonful taken every morning fasting is a certain preventive for Cholera, Chills and Fever, Yellow Fevor, or any other prevalent disease.
Price only $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5

McLEAN'S VOLCANIC OIL LINIMENT.
THE BEST LINIMENT IN THE WORLD FOR MAN OR BEAST.
ANOTHER REMARKABLE CURE
Performed by McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment. Read for yourselves:
Thomas Ford, a blacksmith, living near Cass avenue, on Tenth street, had a horrible running sore on his foot. He tried various Liniments, Salves, etc., but could do it no good. He despaired of ever being able to work at his trade again, because he could not bear any weight on his foot; and by one small bottle of McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment, he is now perfectly cured.
Rheumatism, paralysis, neuralgia, bruises, sprains, stiffness in the joints or muscles, swellings, sore throat, ear ache or tooth ache, wounds, fresh cuts, sores, burns, scalds, pains, etc., yield to the "magic" influences of this wonderful Liniment.
For Horses and Cattle it is an infallible remedy for chafes, galls, scratches, cracked heels, lameness, spavin, sweeny, ephint, fistula, bruises, swellings, wounds, rattlesnake bites, and various other diseases which animals are liable to from injuries or accidents.

Dr. Hostetter's Celebrated Stomach Bitters have proved such a certain cure for all diseases of the Stomach, that no one for a moment question its efficiency to the most dreadful and alarming cases. For many years we have watched its steady progress in public estimation, and its beneficent effects as a cure for all complaints arising from the stomach, of a morbid nature, and we are free to say that it can be relied upon as a certain relief and remedy. Its proprietor has made the above preparation after years of careful study and sifting, and is now reaping the reward claimed by this valuable specific, and which he so richly merits. It is the only preparation of the kind that is reliable in all cases, and it therefore commands the attention of the afflicted.

MOTHERS who see with alarm their children wasting away, and becoming listless, feverish, and debilitated in consequence of the presence of worms in the stomach or bowels, can remove all the trouble immediately by administering Winer's Canadian Vermifuge, which discharges them without pain and leaves the digestive organs in a vigorous condition. There is no mineral ingredient in this preparation.

WINER'S CANADIAN VERMIFUGE has established its superiority over every other preparation for worms, by the rapidity, number and thoroughness of its cures; although literally a vegetable compound, its remedial action is much more summary than that of the Vermifuges containing Mercury. It has the merit of unerring efficiency and of perfect harmlessness, so far as the human system is concerned.

SAVE THE CHILDREN!—Of the multitudes of children that die before they reach their twelfth year, three fourths are believed to be the victims of internal worms, or of diseases arising from that cause. A medicine like Winer's Canadian Vermifuge, which will infallibly and rapidly turn the disease is therefore of immense importance to every family. It is extolled in the highest terms by the faculty, and at the time when the mortality among children is greater than was ever before known, it is not safe or prudent for any household to be without it. Believing that the frightful increase of deaths among children is mainly attributable to worms and the disorders they produce, we recommend this specific to all who have charge of young families.
☞ Be particular and remember the name "Winer's Canadian Vermifuge." This is the only article that can be depended on. Remember this. For sale by

LETTER FROM AUSTRIA.

KLOSTERNEUBURG, the romantic retreat of Lady Montague—the authoress of those celebrated letters from the East—was pointed out to us; and she could not have chosen a more picturesque spot, where a mind like hers dwelt, and revelled in outward and ideal beauty—and who could not wear, in her declining years, to look in a mirror to see her faded charms.

An old plane tree was shown us, growing upon the banks, under which Geoffry Boullion wrangled the Crusaders.

The passage through the Black Sea caused but little interest—out of sight of land until we entered the Danube, the scenery along its shores was exceedingly dull and flat. This river is as circuitous as the Mississippi; and its waters are of the same color. Some little villages, mean in appearance—low huts, with thatched roofs, and without windows, a chimney in the middle, and a door—make up their dwellings. As we ascended the river it became more interesting. Along its shores were hills resembling Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota, on the Upper Mississippi; and some cities with a more flourishing aspect. We entered a pass called the Iron Gate, in Hungary, of a most romantic character; natural walls of rock rising perpendicularly from the bed of the river, which is very narrow, between 300 and 400 feet high, crowned with a few trees growing out of the crevices. A road has been cut upon the base of one side, with military posts along the way. A castle was built upon one ledge of rocks rising perpendicularly from the bed of the river: an isolated cliff, well suited for such an edifice as a place of defence. On one side of the mountain we saw the cave of refuge, where many Hungarians hid themselves in the revolution, and made their escape.

We passed some fine cities, with some interest, with houses and lofty spires running up amid green trees. The strong fortress of Peterwardin where the Hungarian revolution was commenced, situated upon a hill-side, looked almost impregnable—it was united to the town by a bridge of boats. It was a beautiful green spot.

PESTH, CAPITOL OF HUNGARY.—The approach to this city is very fine, relieved of all monotonous dullness by its elevated banks and beautiful hills crowned with verdure—a fortress upon one and the palace of the Governor upon another, opposite the city, united by a splendid suspension bridge of elegant workmanship. The city was large and well built, extending along the shores; with commercial houses, similar to those of our American cities, with much the same appearance; but the spires of their Churches were different and of singular effect, some, covered with metal, reflecting the rays of the sun in the distance. We had a drive around the environs, and through the most beautiful avenues, lined with shade trees of horse-chesnut, in full bloom; and parks, with streams of water, bridges, and fanciful gardens—with all kinds of summer-houses; cafes for refreshment; tables in the open air, with groups sitting around them. The drives were full of carriages—of beautiful equipages; and beauty and fashion were seen crowding the avenues, promenades and gardens, everywhere within the city and its environs; for people in Europe appear to love the pure air, and avail themselves of these retreats for healthful exercise—which contributes, no doubt, greatly to its preservation.

The city was so clean, and free from a throng of beggars, that it looked like a place of prosperity and comfort compared to many we had seen.

We drove over the suspension bridge, guarded by four collossal lions of granite, placed upon pedestals at the entrance on both sides. Opposite, a tunnel, with a magnificent arch and columns, in the form of a Grecian temple, at the entrance of the passage, which extended under the hill upon which the palace stands. We drove up the heights and walked around the gardens, which were beautifully terraced up its sides, with a magnificent view of the Danube, which rolled beneath; the city, opposite; Buda, between the two hills; the palace and castle. Every thing about this place bore the marks of beauty and prosperity; and the people had an American look, quite unlike other places.

VIENNA.—We left in the morning for this place, on the railway, a distance of 170 miles. The country through which we passed was exceedingly fertile and highly cultivated. Not a spot was barren; industry marked the soil, which was waving with fields of grain all the way. The lands were perfectly level along the valley through which we passed, and very wide, relieved by mountains in the distance. Below Peath they resembled the Mississippi, with land-slides, sand-bars and islands, with the alluvial soil and growth of trees, and the color of its water—but not its interminable forests. All the villages we passed through at the railway stations were remarkably neat; every cottage had flowers planted around their dwellings, and placed in their windows—giving an evidence of a love of the beautiful in the humbler walks of life—so desirable to witness. The people who labored in the fields looked neat and well-clothed, characteristic of the German; however oppressed, he will make an interest out of perseverence and industry, which other nations neglect, and live in idleness and poverty, like the poor Italians, and beg rather than work. The country is thickly settled, and large villages were seen in the distance all the way.

The River Danube is full of mills; wherever there is a settlement or city, they grind their meal by the force of the current, and so thick, that they look like a village rising out of the water.

We passed through Wagram, in sight of the battle-ground of Bonaparte. A beautiful plain covered with vegetation.

We entered Vienna by a bridge, deriving a splendid view of the city, with its houses, churches and palaces. Its streets are broad, with a fine display of stores, and as splendid goods as are found in Europe. There is great wealth among the aristocracy. That of Prince Esterhazy is immense; and his palaces wonderful, like those of a King.

The Belvidere-palace of the Emperor was thrown open on Friday, for the people to see the picture-galleries, filled with the chief works of art of all the schools—with many fine specimens of each—an extensive collection. The statuary, though limited, was very exquisite—Jason, with the golden fleece, and Medea, was a lovely group; Jacob and Rachel, a work of exquisite beauty.

The halls of the palace were beautiful, and its site commanding. Upon its terraces, above the gardens, we had a view of the whole city. The gardens, with which it is surrounded, were laid out in straight walks, with shade trees and hedges, open squares, with statuary and fountains; and little borders, with hedges of lilacs in full bloom, fragrant with sweet odors; statuary along its walks, emblematical of the four Seasons; classic groups, in various positions—the whole laid out with elegance, taste and beauty. In the lower part of the garden, was another palace, called the Lower Belvidere, containing paintings, a collection of sculpture, ancient armor; an Egyptian museum, with an endless variety of mummies and idols of worship, little and big, of every form.

The Cathedral of St. Stephens, is a noble and imposing building, in the purest style of Gothic architecture—with a spire 222 feet high, diminishing in size gradually, from its base to the top, in regular retreating arches and buttresses. The way is covered with colored tiles, forming a collossal mosaic of the Austrian eagle. The columns, inside which are fluted, have small niches for statues, so designed as not to destroy its harmony. The chapels, along its sides, are very rich—the paintings and statuary around the altars, very fine. The Church of Vienna has a modern aspect, with few antiquities.

S. B. THOMAS.

N. B. I hope my package of letters, mailed at Athens, Greece; with our travels through Syria, from Jerusalem to Damascus, have reached you. Also, I mailed one from Egypt. I must confess I feel doubtful as to the interest they give my friends. So much goes out from every quarter of the globe, for the whole world of readers. I have not heard from my friends in America since last November. I am anxious to get to Paris, so as to hear once more. S. B. T.

We are publishing all we receive, in the order of reception. Our readers will be pleased to learn that the talented writer has returned to the United States. The letters will appear for some time to come. EDITOR.

AN EXPOSITION.

I SAMUEL XXX. 24. "But as his part is, that goeth down down to the battle; so shall his part be, who tarrieth by the stuff."

THE JUSTICE of this decision of the son of Jesse will, we apprehend, be approved by every well regulated mind; but it is not the equity of the decision that we now propose to urge or discuss, but to apply it to some cases to which we think it is applicable; the consideration of which, we hope, will prove instructive and encouraging.

We are too much inclined, in according praise and bestowing rewards, to have in view only those who take the more prominent and conspicuous part; and to forget or overlook those who may not have led on the enterprize, and yet, without whose efficient co-operation, the enterprize could not have been led on at all.

We admire and honor Washington and his brave compatriots in arms (and justly so), whose valor won our independence; but the mass of the people are apt to overlook Robert Morris, without whose successful financiering Washington could not have kept the field. We are in danger of forgetting the mothers and wives, fathers and brothers, who took care of the homes—raised the crops and tended the flocks, which subsisted the army of independence; and, without which, it could not have kept the field a single campaign.

We are not only prone to overlook the uses of unobtrusive instrumentalities, but those instrumentalities are in danger of putting too low an estimate upon their agency in promoting the common stock of truth and virtue. Just here a little incident occurs to us, which will aid in the illustration of the matter in hand. Some years ago, Dr. G——, as Presiding Elder, was attending a camp-meeting in Tennessee. One night, towards the close of the meeting, the air being a little cool, he approached a camp-fire to warm. At this fire was an old colored woman, attending to some culinary operation. Dr. G——, as he approached, said, in his bland way—"Good evening, Aunty." Rather gruffly, she replied, "Good evening, Master." Said the Dr., "How are you enjoying the camp-meeting!" "I aint enjoying it at all." "Why, not?" "Cause I'se got no chance to go to meetin. Da's all out dar listenin to de preachin—serving, prayin and gettin happy; and I'se here, workin and sweatin, round dese pots and ovens. I aint happy, none; I wish I was home; I aint doin no good here. Dars no use in me bein here at all."

The old woman seemed so sad and discouraged, that it moved the benevolent heart of the Dr., and he set himself to the pleasant task of enlightening and cheering her a little.

"Why, Aunty," said the Dr., "you are altogether mistaken about being of no use, and doing no good at the camp-meeting. We could not get on without you a single day; without the cooks, the meeting would have to break up. Why the cooks and the preachers are the mainstays of the meeting. The meeting could not get on without us at all; you are doing a great deal; and be sure the Lord will not forget you; in all your cooking and toiling, he will bless you for it all.

The old lady listened with pleased attention; a new light dawned upon her—and she broke out in reply—"Why, sure enough, I never tink of dat before. Bless de Lord, it makes me happy to tink about it."

In the requisites and furnishing of the gilded coach, that sustains on its silken cushions the persons of Imperial Majesty, the humble linch-pin meets the claim of an imperative necessity; and, without which, all the utilities and ornaments of the splendid equipage, would be useless.

When we are descanting upon the sacrifices and devotion of the Missionary to the distant heathen, we are in danger of overlooking the claims of many of the humble, but generous and self-sacrificing poor, whose gifts are sustaining the Missionary in his far off and glorious toils. Let those who give, for their encouragement remember, that those who "tarry with the stuff," shall share alike with those who go forth to war.

In our admiration of the devoted and eloquent Minister, we are in danger of losing sight of his faithful and modest wife, whose extra attention and devotion to the domestic interest of his home, enables him, with a mind comparatively free from care, to give himself "continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word." The wife of such an one is in danger of failing to recognize the importance and blessedness of her position, and her agency in the great work of recovering the world to God. She is tempted in a painful and disparaging way to contrast her position with her husband's, in the glorious toil. He, it may be, is gifted, acceptable and successful—his "praise is in all the Churches;" a hundred hospitable doors welcome him to enter in; a hundred generous bounds are spread for his refreshment. But she is in an humble house; she moves in a narrow circle; her lot is one of privation and self-denial. She may forget that Job, the sufferer, was as great in his way as Paul, the worker. Double domestic and parental care devolves upon her, and she may be easily tempted to think her lot a hard one; that her humble but wasting toils are unseen and unappreciated, and will go unrewarded.

No, no! the eye that never sleeps, that is in every place, looks down benignantly upon you. God sees your patience under trial—your resignation under privations. And though your husband may be far away, urging the glorious strife and snatching brands from the burning, you shall share his "vast reward;" for "they who tarry with the stuff," keeping faithful watch, and they who win the fight, shall alike share the spoil and share the fame.

Let not such "be weary in well-doing, for, in due season they shall reap if they faint not;" for with such sacrifices God is well pleased. And let not the Church, in rendering "honor to whom honor is due," forget these women, who are such efficient, yet self-denying helpers in the Gospel of Christ. J. B. WALKER.

BENSON A PLAGIARIST.

MR. EDITOR: If you will give me room in your columns I will state what I regard as the most remarkable instance of plagiarism to be found, so far as I know, in the whole circle either of secular or religious literature. It is this: Benson's commentaries to the 58th of Isaiah is taken almost entirely from Pool's Annotations. I discovered this fact sometime since by consulting the two works on different passages in the several books of the Old Testament. Recently, however, I have made an examination sufficiently through, I think, upon which to base the charge of plagiarism. I have compared the two commentaries on the following chapters of the following books, carefully examining every verse, viz; Lev. 28; Num. 5,26 and 35; Deu. 3, 13, 17 and 34; Josh 5, 14 and 24; Judges 3, 9, 17 and 21; 1 Sam, 5, and 19; 2 Sam, 7; 1 Kings 9; 2 Kings 10; Job. 14 and 30; Ps. 2, 77; Prov. 1 and 22; Ecc. 1 and 12; Isa. 1 and 58. I had not time to make the comparison on every chapter of the Old Testament, and therefore I selected at random the portions cited above. Pool's notes on all these have been appropriated by Benson, with scarcely any change in the language whatever. Sometimes Benson adds a line or two of his own; sometimes condenses a long note, and sometimes curtails; and now and then makes a quotation from another author. He makes no acknowledgement to Pool that I have seen, either in his preface or in the body of the work. For the benefit of those who have not access to the two books, I submit a few specimens of the plagiarism.

Ps. 2. 7. Thou art my son; this day have I begotten thee.

POOL.—This is also applied by some to David, and so this day is the day of his inauguration, when he might be said to be begotten by God, inasmuch as he was then raised and delivered from all his troubles and calamities, which were a kind of death, and brought forth and advanced to a new kind of life, of royal state and dignity; and so this was the birthday, though not of his person, yet of his kingdom, as the Roman emperors celebrated a double birthday; first the emperor's when he was born, and then the empire's, when he was advanced to the empire. But this is but a lean, and farfetched, and doubtful sense; and therefore not to be allowed by the laws of interpretation, when the words may be properly understood concerning Christ: and so this may be understood either, 1. Of his eternal Generation. This day; from all eternity which is well described by this day, because in eternity there is no succession, no yesterday, no tomorrow, but it is all as one continued day or moment without change or flux. Or rather, 2. Of the manifestation of Christ's eternal Sonship in time; which was done partly in his birth and life when his being the Son of God was demonstrated by the testimony of the angel, and of God the Father, and by his own words and works; but principally in his resurrection, which seems to be here mainly intended, of which day this very place is expounded, when Christ was in a most solemn manner declared to be the son of God with power, etc, etc.

BENSON.—This is also applied by some to David, understanding, by this day, the day of his inauguration, when he might be said to be begotten by God, inasmuch as he was then raised and delivered from all his calamities and troubles, which were a kind of death, and brought forth and advanced to a new kind of life, of royal state and dignity; and so this was the birthday, though not of his person yet of his kingdom; as the Roman emperors celebrated a double birthday, first the day on which they were born, and then the day when they were advanced to the empire. But this it must be acknowledged, is a farfetched and doubtful sense; and therefore not to be allowed by the rules of legitimate interpretation, since the words may, much more properly, be applied to Christ: and, so applied, may be understood, either, 1. Of what has been termed his eternal Generation or Sonship, this day signifying from all eternity, which may be considered as well described by this day, there being no succession, no yesterday, no to-morrow in eternity; but all being one continued day or moment without change or flux. Or, 2nd. Of the manifestation of Christ's eternal Sonship in time, which was done both in his birth and life, when his being the Son of God was demonstrated—by the testimony of the angel, by that of God the Father, and by his own words and works; and in his resurrection, which seems to be here chiefly intended, of which this very place is expounded, when Christ was in a most solemn manner declared to be the son of God, with power, etc., etc.

Ps. 1, 2. But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night.

POOL.—In the study and practice of it, as appears from the context. The law of God may be here understood of the whole doctrine delivered by God to the Church: consisting of doctrines, precepts, promises, and threatenings; or, more particularly, the preceptive part of it, which is commonly so called; and so this is noted as the peculiar character of the good man, that he delighted himself not only in the promises, which a bad man may do, but even in the commands of God—which are unwelcome and burdensome to a wicked man.

BENSON.—In the study and practice of it, as appears from the context; having described the character of the truly blessed man negatively in the preceding verse, he in this, speaks positively. The law of God may be here understood, of the whole doctrine delivered by God to his Church: consisting of doctrines, precepts and threatenings, etc.; or, more particularly of the preceptive part of it, which is commonly called his; and so this is recorded as the particular character of the good man, that he takes delight not only in God's promises, which a bad man may delight in, but even in his commands, which are unwelcome and disagreeable to the wicked.

JOB 28, 8. For what is the hope of the hypocrite, though he hath gained, when God taketh away his soul?

POOL.—There is no reason why I should envy or desire the portion of wicked men; for though they oftimes prosper in the world, as I have said, and seem to be great gainers, yet death, which hasteth to all men, and to me especially, will show that they are far greater losers, and die in a most wretched and desperate condition, having no hope either of continuing in this life, which they chiefly desire, or of enjoying a better life, which they never regarded. But I have a firm and well-grounded hope, not of that temporal restitution, which you promise me, but of a blessed immortality after death; and, therefore, am none of those hopeless hypocrites, as you account me.

BENSON.—There is no reason why I should envy or desire the portion of wicked men; although they oftimes prosper in the world, and seem to be great gainers; yet death, which hasteth to all men, and to me especially, will show that they are far greater losers, and die in a most wretched and desperate condition, having no hope either of continuing in this life, which they chiefly desire, or, of enjoying a better life, which they never regarded. But I have a firm and well-grounded hope, not of that temporal restitution which you promise, but of a blessed immortality after death; and, therefore, I am not a hopeless hypocrite, as you think me.

ESTHER 4, 16. And, if I perish, I perish.

POOL.—Although my danger be great and evident, considering the expressness of that law, and the uncertainty of the King's mind, and that severity he showed to my predecessor, Vashti; yet rather than neglect my duty to God and to His people, I will go to the King and cast myself cheerfully and resolutely upon God's Providence, for my safety and success.

BENSON.—Although my danger be great and evident, considering the expressness of that law, the uncertainty of the King's mind, and that severity which he showed to my predecessor, Vashti; yet rather than neglect my duty to God and to His people, I will go to the King and cast myself cheerfully and resolutely upon God's providences, for my safety and success. If I should be condemned to lose my life, I cannot lose it in a better cause.

ISAIAH 12, 3. Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation.

POOL.—Your thirsty and fainting souls shall be filled with divine graces and comforts, which you may plentifully draw from God, in the use of the Gospel ordinances, which was oft signified by water, both in the Old and New Testament. He seems to allude to the state of Israel in the wilderness, where, when they had been tormented with thirst, they were greatly refreshed and delighted with those waters which God so graciously and wonderfully afforded them in that dry and barren land.

I do not charge that Benson has copied Poole on the whole of the Old Testament, for I have not had time, as stated elsewhere, to make a comparison so extensive; but I charge that into whatever book or chapter I have looked, I have found the stolen goods of Poole. It is proper to remark that Genesis, so far as I can judge from the very slight examination I have made, has no traces of plagiarism. Pool lived to carry his annotations only to the 58th of Isaish. The remaining portion was finished by others. Much of this Benson has plagiarised.

Pool was born in 1624, died in 1679. He was a Presbyterian.

I have never seen but one copy of his annotations, the one which I have in my possession; but it is published by the Carters of New York. Benson's Comaentaries, according to the preface, were published in 1815. J. J. WHEAT.

TUSKEGEE ASSOCIATION.

A MEETING of this body was recently held at Cubahatchie Church, in Macon County, Alabama; which commenced on the 17th of this month, and adjourned on Monday the 20th instant. Among the Delegates there assembled, was the Rev. J. B. Thomas, formerly of Salem, Russel County, Alabama, but then on his way to Camden, Wilcox County. The reverend gentlemnn made several speeches before that body (for he appeared to love to speak, and spoke as though he felt confident that he could enlighten that intelligent body upon any subject that came up before it.) In one of his speeches, he was advocating a Resolution to have a Sabbath-school organized at or near every Church belonging to the Association. In that speech he informed the body, that he had been called to take charge of the Baptist Church at Camden, as its Pastor, and that he was then on his way there for that purpose; also, to take charge of the Female Institution at that place, as President of the same. He further said, that when he got there, if only two others would join him, he would have a Sabbath-school there. He farther said, that he would use the books published by the Baptists in that Sabbath-school, and no others, and that he intended to teach Baptist Doctrine too; "for," said he, "we are the Church and the only Church," as he verily believed; "and," said he, "while we believe it, we ought to preach it;" and indeed he said he would be dishonest if he did not preach it.

All of the above I heard with my own ears; and yet, this same Mr. Thomas no doubt expects to get into his school, children, whose parents belong to other Denomitations; and yet he intends to teach them Baptist Doctrines.

NANA SAHIB.

AS WE have no doubt that many of our readers would be glad to be acquainted with the parentage and other antecedents of the man who bears this blood-stained name, we propose, in this present article, to give a brief sketch of him.

Nana Sahib, Rajah of Bithoor—whose correct name is Sree Munt Dhoondoo Punt—is the eldest son, by adoption, of the late Badjee Rao, ex-Peishwa of the Mahrattas.

For many years previous to his death, Badjee Rao had been a dethroned pensioner of the East India Company. When in the fullness of his power, he had, as a native prince, assisted the East India Company in their war against Tippoo Sahib, the tiger of Seringapatam; and, as a reward for his doing so, the Company, after years of strife with him—after negotiations, and exactions, and treaties, and violation of these treatics on their part—contrived, in 1817, to get hold of his dominions. After numerous and fierce conflicts, Badjee Rao, at the head of 8000 men, and with an advantageous post, was prepared to do battle for the sovereignty of the Deccan; when Brigadier-General Sir John Malcolm, who commanded the British army, sent a flag of truce to him, with proposals for a surrender.

The proposals made on the part of Sir John Malcolm were, that Badjee Rao, the Peishwa of the Mahrattas, should renounce his sovereignty altogether; that he should come, within twenty-four hours, with his family and a limited number of his adherents and attendants, into the British camp; that they should there be received with honor and respect; that he should be located in the holy city of Benares or in some other sacred place of Hindoostan; that he should have a liberal pension from the East India Company for himself and his family; that his old and attached adherents should be provided for; and that the pension to be settled upon himself and his family should not be less than eight lacs of rupees—that is, £80,000 per annum.

After long and anxious deliberation with his prime minister and other great officers of state, the Peishwa accepted these proposals—went with his family and adherents into the British camp—and Bithoor was afterward assigned as his residence. The East India Company, with their usual grasping and illiberal spirit of coveteousness, were displeased with Sir John Malcolm for his granting these terms. But they, and the governor-general, Lord Hardinge, could not recede from them; and they took care to limit the stipulated allowance to the smallest sum mentioned in the treaty—namely, eight lacs of rupees, or £80,000 per annum.

We have stated that the pension was to be conferred upon Badjee Rao and his family. Now, before we proceed further, we must mention, that by the Hindoo Shastera, or Scriptures, there is a fearful doom awarded against those who die childless; that doom is, the being consigned, after death, to "a place called Put, a place of horror, to which the manes of the childless are supposed to go, there to be tormented with hunger and thirst, for want of those oblations of food and libations of water, at prescribed periods, which it is the pious, and indeed indespensable duty of a living son to offer.

Such are the principles of the Hindoo religion with regard to the want of natural male issue. Now, the same principles, in order to remedy the defect, permit the system of adoption where natural issue fails. It was in accordance with this that Badjee Rao, in his old age, finding himself naturally childless as to male issue, by his will declared Nana Sahib to be his eldest son, heir, and representative.

In his day, Badjee Rao, as chief of the powerful Mahratta nation, had been a great sovereign. He survived his downfall—exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction, on a limited scale, at Bithoor—thirty-five years. On the 28th of January, 1851, he died.

No sooner was his death made officially known, than Lord Dalhousie tabled a minute at the council board of Calcutta, ruling that the pension, expressly guaranteed to the great Badjee Rao, and his family, should not be continued to the latter. Nana Sahib, Badjee Rao's widows and the other members of his family, were naturally stricken with grief and terror. They saw themselves reduced to poverty. They had no other pecuniary resource than some trifling sum which Badjee Rao had left behind him.

On the 24th of June, 1851, Nana Sahib forwarded a memorial to the lieutenant-governor of the nort-west provinces of India on the subject. In reply, he was told that the pension could not be continued, but that a certain tract of land would be his for life. The commissioner of Bithoor, a public officer of high rank and standing, and who knew the circumstances and claims of the ex-Peishwa's family, forwarded an urgent appeal on their behalf; but, in a letter from the Secretary of the Governor-General, of date September the 24th, 1851, he received a severe reprimand for so doing. His recommendation was stigmatized as "uncalled for and unwarrantable."

After some further efforts in India, Nana Sahib addressed the Court of Directors, at Lendenhallstreet, in England. His appeal to them was dated the 29th of December, 1852.

In the eyes of the East India Company, the appeals of native princes of India do not seem to have been matters of much consequence.—The Company appear to have considered that it added to their dignity to have the advocates of such priaces waiting in their ante-rooms. Somewhere about December, 1853, the Company sent back Nana Sahib's memorial to the government in India, and the result was, that nothing was done.

It would appear that Nana Sahib, with smooth and gentlemanly manners, unites superior abilities; and that to these abilities he adds passions of the strongest and most vindictive nature. His spirit is high, and his vehemence of the most determined character. At the period of the breaking out of the mutiny which has rendered his name infamous, he seems to have become a monomaniac on the subject of what he believed to be his wrongs.

In the preceding sketch, subject, of course, to correction, we have endeavored to state facts, not with a view to advocating any cause, but simply for the purpose of communicating to our readers information as to some of the numerous causes which have led to the dreadful events which have recently occurred in the East.

An Oriental, named Azimullah, was in London in 1855, for the purpose of making a last appeal in behalf of his employer, Nana Sahib. He lodged in a respectable private hotel in Georgestreet, Hanover Square, where he lived in gentlemanlike style, and appeared a well-bred, agreeable person, of good intelligence about English matters. A person, on lately visiting the house, learned from its proprietor that the polite Azimullah, before departing from England, showed symptoms of a moody and soured feeling, and let fall several hints to the effect that England would yet regret the manner in which it had used his master. This same Azimullah has since appeared in the dismal transactions connected with the destruction of the Cawnpore garrison. [Chamber's Journal.

POLLOCK'S COURSE OF TIME.

LONG AFTER this world is ended; after the judgment and the retributions of eternity, a youth from some planet of the Universe came flying toward the paradise of God. On his way he saw the place of the lost, and being much perplexed about the things he saw, he sped on his course seeking for information. He soon fell in with two sons of heaven. To them he proposed his questions. They could give him no answer, but spoke of an ancient bard of earth, to whom they offered to lead the "new arrived." They searched out the bard, and when he was asked concerning the subject, by their permission he struck his harp, and recited the life of man and the history of time. The hard viewed matters from the stand-point of eternity. From this position he was enabled to unravel many things which to us are mysterious. The fall; redemption through Christ; the workings of the Gospel on earth; the consummation of all things earthly; the "resurrection morn," and the judgment day; all got before the poet's eye, and are vividly presented to the reader's view. Pity that the poetry does not equal the scheme!

The first hint of the poem was suggested to the author by Byron's lines to Darkness, which he read at a time of great mental depression. While reading the lines, the thought came to him that something new might be written on the resurrection. Straightway the mind laid hold of the subject, and bright-winged images came up, till his scheme reached far beyond its first scope, and all at once, like the glow of a prophetic vision, the whole plan of the "Course of Time" burst upon his mind. One night, while sitting alone in the old room in Moorhouse, his mind wandered back and forth over the plan of God in creation, and at such a time the plan of the poem came up to view. A strange feeling came over him; he trembled from head to foot, overpowered with emotion. The scheme opened up to his view a great success or a great failure. From this time his soul was on fire. In his old Moorhouse room, on the path from Moorhouse to his place of worship, on the hights of Balagich, and when in the silent night-time he lay feverish upon his bed, his mind groaned under the mighty plan, and images all poetic and heaven-tinted flitted o'er his ardent mind. The outward frame sunk enfeebled, while the spirit grew strong in its flight. His Bible was ever beside him, and morning and evening he offered up prayer for God's help in the work. The inspiration of the book was not that of Parnassus, but of heaven, and that Christian invocation of his at the commencement of his poem is but a true prayer for help from on high.

THE DUST-COVERED BIBLE.

Some years ago a clergyman in Ireland took for his text, one Sabbath morning, "Search the Scriptures." In the course of his sermon he quoted a passage from John Wesley, to the effect that the Bible "sometimes had dust enough on its cover to let you write 'damnation' on it." One of his hearers was struck by the remark, and on her return home repeated it. She was overheard by her brother, who had causelessly absented himself from Church that day. The startling thought fixed itself in his heart like an arrow. He retired to his room, and took down his Bible. Looking at its dusty cover, and scarcely knowing what he did, he traced on it the appalling words of the preacher.

He looked at them, read them again, and bursting into tears flung himself on his knees, and confessing his past sins, sought grace that he might prize it more in the future. The Bible became his companion, to his dying hour.

OUR CHILDREN GROW UP IN OUR LIKENESS.—Our children that lie in the cradle are ours, and bear in them those lines which shall yet make them to appear the boy like the father, and the daughter like the mother; and we are God's, growing up, we trust, into the lineaments which shall make us like unto him. "It doth not yet appear what we shall be."

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1858.

"THE SUMMER IS ENDED."

In this semi-tropical South-western clime, the Summer does not end with August; October is really the first month of Autumn. The eventful Summer of 1858 is gone; but the memory of its momentous events is not gone. India has been virtually reconquered by British arms. China has been humbled, and has thrown open her long-closed gates to Christianity. Mexico is without a Government, and ready to fall into the hands of the United States, where she ought to be. The Atlantic cable has been laid; and, whatever difficulty may be temporarily experienced, it will doubtless prove an ultimate success. A great revival of religion has prevailed in the United States, and elsewhere.—The Southern Methodist Church has cut herself loose from the unfortunate and unscriptural entanglements with political questions which have cursed most of the modern Churches, thus developing an ecclesiastical whiggery, as bold, progressive, and important in principle, as the political whiggery of the American Revolution. The yellow fever, after an absence of five years, so far as a general epidemic is concerned, has visited, in great fatality, most of our Southern and Southwestern sea-port and river cities; especially has it been severe in New Orleans—as severe an epidemic as she has ever had, except 1853, and only falling below that year in lack of unacclimated population.

The return of autumn, always a season suited to reflection, is peculiarly so this year, in this latitude. It harmonizes with the temper and thoughts of the bereaved and desolate—and they are many. Besides the thousands of sorrowing hearts in this city, mourning is in many families throughout the land, of which our obituary department is an indication. The rich green robes with which the beauteous spirit of the Spring-time clothed all nature, are beginning to become dim, and to wear out; striking illustration of the fading and decay of thousands of beaming faces and buoyant hopes. Many who neglected their salvation for a more "convenient season," have been unexpectedly called to leave the opportunities of a gracious probation forever. Many have died in peace, and left cheering testimony of the power of the faith of Christ to save from sin and the fear of death. The summer of life will soon be ended, and the winter of age and death shall come. But there is an eternal spring-time coming. Its beauty and glory shall never be dimmed. And it shall call into everlasting life the precious hopes, aspirations, affections and joys which have found but an unfruitful soil, and an uncongenial climate, in this world.

SHALL WE HAVE A GENERAL REVIVAL?

During the early part of the present year, and indeed up to the present time, a glorious revival of religion has been spreading over the largest part of the United States. Hundreds of thousands have been brought to "the knowledge of the Son of God, and to faith in Him."—Ministers of the gospel have witnessed an amount of good, done in a few months, which exceeded what they had hoped for in a life-time. Through that revival, the cause of evangelical religion, of practical, soul-saving gospel preaching has made an advance which ten years in the ordinary course would not have compassed. And last, but not least, the faith and practice, in reference to revivals, of thousands of ministers, and hundreds of thousands of christians, have been made to approximate conformity to the scriptural standard—which, with many of them, might never have taken place in the ordinary course of things. Pentecost, the Baptism of the Holy Ghost, the saving power of the gospel, have a meaning, and a present application, which many of them never dreamed of before.

Now, the many embrace the views and adopt the practice, of the previously few. Caughey, and Methodist preachers generally, have succeeded, at length, in indoctrining the christian world, on this subject. Spurgeon, Guinness, and others, are fruits of their ministry.

This revival, however, has been much more prevalent in the North than in the South. Why this has been so, it were fruitless to inquire. But recently, there are indications that we are on the eve of a general revival in the South. All our Church papers are filled with revival intelligence. The question should dwell, and swell, in every christian heart, "Shall we have a General Revival in the South?"

Why not? Why not now? Would united prayer, in every Church, by every minister and christian, with the use of all the means, fail of this great blessing?

THE GREAT OFFICIAL.

The Nashville Christian Advocate is pleasant to look upon. Besides the usual racy and pithy editorials of Dr. McTyeire, it has very choice correspondence from New Orleans, St. Louis, Virginia, South Carolina, West Tennessee, Kentucky, the Indian Territory and China. It is beautifully printed. The Church may well congratulate herself upon the tone, style, and prospects of her central paper. It only needs to be let alone in the hands of its editor. He is capable of taking care of it. There is no need that the Book-agent should publish notices, and write correspondence for the different papers, to prove the difference in ecclesiastical relations, between the central and the other papers. We all understand it without such tuition. We are aware that the popular custodianship, so long exercised by him over the interests of that paper, is naturally hard to forget. But the General Conference, by a large vote, determined that he was the best man for another position. He should be content to fill that well—which he is eminently capable of doing. The central and the other papers will never "lock horns," if they are let alone in the hands of the editors. Mark that.

READ THIS TWICE.

Unconverted friends, you admit and feel the necessity of conversion. You know you must be converted or be lost. You know, you feel, that you are unfit to die, and to appear in the presence of the Judge of the whole earth. You may not be willing, seriously, to converse on the subject. You may laugh at those who admonish you. But, nevertheless, you feel the solemn conviction that "except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

And you feel that it is hard to be converted. It is so hard, that you think of it somewhat as you do of death. This is one reason why you put it off as an evil day. It is not hard to those who desire nothing but God, and who have given up every purpose but to live for Him. But it is hard for you, for you have not done this. You feel the need of salvation, but your heart is set on the world, and is therefore hard and unbelieving.

Feeling the necessity and the difficulty of conversion, you should do nothing to make it more difficult. You should adopt every means to lessen the difficulty; especially, you should encourage, cultivate, yield to, and follow, every good impression, every tender drawing of the Father. Be "not disobedient to the heavenly vision." It may never again be so clear and convincing. During the present autumn, throughout the bounds of the circulation of this paper, there are many revivals—many earnest sermons—many visitations of the Spirit. Let not this season pass away and leave you unconverted. Upon peril of your soul, do not.—Begin now to call upon the name of the Lord, through our Lord Jesus Christ. Begin as soon as you read this, or you may never begin. All the lost, from Christian lands, intended to begin, but did not.

"READING, MEDITATION AND PRAYER."

These three things will prevent any disciple of Christ from backsliding—will cause any Christian to "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." Read the Bible much, meditate upon it much, and pray over it much, and the fullness of Christian experience will be enjoyed in a manner not dreamed of now. A passage from the experience of Mr. Whitefield, that eminent saint and powerful preacher, will illustrate this subject. He says: "My mind now being more enlarged, I began to read the Holy Scriptures upon my knees, laying aside all other books, and praying over, if possible, every line and word.—This proved meat indeed, and drink indeed, to my soul. I daily received fresh life, light, and power from above. I got more true knowledge from reading the book of God in one month, than I could ever have acquired from all the writings of men. In one word I found it profitable for reproof, for correction, for instruction; every way sufficient to make the man of God perfect, thoroughly furnished for every good work and word. About this time God was pleased to enlighten my soul, and bring me into the knowledge of his free grace, and the necessity of being justified in His sight by faith only. Burkitt's and Henry's Expositions were of admirable use, to lead me into this and all other Gospel truths."

To these habits of reading, Whitefield added much secret prayer. "Oh, what communion had I daily vouchsafed with God in prayer! How often have I been carried out beyond myself, when meditating in the fields! How assuredly I felt that Christ dwelt in me and I in him, and daily did I walk in the comforts of the Holy Ghost, and was edified and refreshed in the multitude of peace!"

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE LA. CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: In comparing the statistics of the last Conference with the one immediately preceding, we see that a decline in membship is clearly manifest. And to us, it is a matter of real importance to know the cause of this real or apparent decline. For my own part, I am inclined to believe it is in part to be attributed to the incorrect reports of the preachers of the various charges.

For instance, I find on the class-books of the Circuit on which I am traveling, the names of many persons who have not for eighteen months been regarded, by themselves or others, either as probationers or members in full connection. Now these persons were reported at the last Conference as members, but certainly will be expunged from the list of the next; consequently, an apparent decline will be quite visible. Now the probability on my mind is, that such might have been the case at the Conference, held February, 1857; and that the preachers of the Conference-year immediately succeeding, struck their names from the class-books; and, of course, did not report them.

But how will the case stand at the next Conference? Will our figures show a decline or an increase? Well, brethren, no matter what the consequence may be, begin immediately, if you have not already begun, and strike from your class-books all who are not legal members; then will our figures tell the truth with regard to our strength.

Another consideration is, there are many of the above-mentioned class, who are not creditable to the Church.

Brethren, these things ought not to be; for as long as it is the case, the Church is chargeable with their sins—Zion is retarded. Such members prove stumbling-blocks in the way of sinners; and, instead of benefitting the Church numerically, do, in a few years, seriously injure it. Begin the work, dear brethren; and begin it now. One of you.

[Be very careful about it.—Editor.]

Western Virginia Conference.—Brother Abbey returned last Saturday from the Western Virginia Conference. We expected to be able to insert the appointments this week, but a copy has not been received.

We learn that the vote to expunge the General Rule on slavery was unanimous, or nearly so. Perhaps there was one or two dissenting voices. [Nashville Advocate.

QUESTIONS OF DISCIPLINE.

Mr. Editor: I see that the General Conference adopted the following Rule in reference to class-leaders.

6.—"Let improper leaders be removed from office; Provided, That no leader shall be removed, except by the Preacher in charge."

Now, suppose that the majority in all the class should consider the leader to be a proper one, and the Preacher in charge, should think differently—shall he remove him? Or, suppose a majority in all the class, should consider the leader an improper one—and the class not attend class-meeting in consequence of which—and the Preacher in charge should consider him a proper one—should any steps be taken against the members thereof, for non-attendance? Has the Preacher in charge, the power to retain him in office under such circumstances?

Again—Was the following Resolution adopted?

13—"The editors, elected from time to time by the General Conference, shall exclude from their periodicals all anonymous matter reflecting, injuriously, upon the character of individuals; and all editorial and other articles, calculated to destroy or weaken the confidence of the public in the doctrines or institutions of our Church."

If so, what is meant by "institutions of our Church?"

I regret troubling you with those questions; but, I have no doubt your answers, which I hope you will willingly publish, will be satisfactory to others besides the writer.

HONEST ENQUIRER.

LAWYERS IN A REVIVAL.

A correspondent of the Savannah Morning News, writing from Athens, Ga., says: "It is worthy of note, that lawyers of this (western) circuit are now carrying on a most extraordinary revival at Jefferson, in the adjoining county of Jackson—Superior Court being in session there. The most prominent movers are Hon. James Jackson, the representative from this Congressional District; Thos. R. R. Cobb, Esq.; B. H. Overby, Esq., former candidate for Governor; Hon. James P. Simmons, former candidate for Congress in this district; and W. J. Peeples, Esq., of Lawrenceville. These gentlemen are all active and ardent Church members, and are exerting their utmost efforts in carrying on the great religious work which seems to be pervading this whole country. Just such a work was commenced by the same members of the bar, last week, in Walton county, which is now going on, I learn, in the hands of the regular ministry."

This is one of a class of the most hopeful signs of the present time. Two of the great triumphs to be achieved by modern Christianity, are, the consecration of money, and the consecration of the personal influence of public men, to the glory of God. Just think of what could have been accomplished for the cause of Christ, had such men as Gen. Jackson, Mr. Clay, Mr. Webster, and Mr. Calhoun, devoted their vast personal influence as energetically and as effectively to the good of the cause of religion, as they did to the advancement of their respective policies! Georgia is blessed greatly, in that her public men, in Church and State, are all trained in the same general religious sentiments, and are intimate with each other as fellow citizens. And many of her best statesmen are actively pious men.

THE PACIFIC METHODIST.

This paper is the organ of our Church in California. Its editor, Rev. O. P. Fitzgerald, is from Georgia, and makes one of the best papers in the Church. His wife, whom we will mention, as she is known to many of our readers, is from Alabama. The daughter of an old, wealthy, and devoted Methodist, who resides at Enon, at the eastern end of Chunnenuggee Ridge. She is a jewel of a woman, as we know. The corresponding editor, is the Rev. O. Fisher formerly of the East Texas Conference, whose "praise is in all the Churches."

The price of the paper is five dollars a year, in advance. It is of more importance to us than thousands upon thousands of dollars, invested in other things. It is true, that the last General Conference voted them $1000, annually, from the Missionary Society. But, in California, where prices are at figures unknown here, that is but small help. They are hard pressed. Such personal sacrifices as they have made to sustain their paper, entitle them to succeed.

The downfall of the paper would be well-nigh the downfall of Southern Methodism in California. And the Abolitionists there, in Church and State, are fighting against us with all their might. But Southern Methodism, in its relation to political questions, is in harmony with the sentiments of the great body of the people of California. We have nothing to do, but hold on, and a glorious day is ahead of us. Oregon, too, is opening her arms to receive us. Great revivals have visited our Church there, and recently. We have two or three educational institutions there, which are said to be promising.

Now, the question is, will not the people of the Southern Church sustain that paper? Will a half million of Methodists, in as rich and liberal a country as the South, suffer it to linger for lack of a little of their abundance? Bishop Pierce is going out there in the Spring; and enough money ought to be contributed, and put in his hands, to build a fine Church at San Francisco, and to place the paper above want. Let our liberal people, all over the South, take the Pacific Methodist, and then give what they can to build the Church in San Francisco; or, they can give to both, if they wish. Anything sent to this office, for these interests, will be carefully attended to. We should be glad to see Bishop Pierce take $20,000 for the San Francisco Church, and a thousand cash subscribers for the Pacific Methodist.

Of course, we advocate the sustaining of California, upon the principle that there is to be no setting off, either in connection with the Northern Church, or, alone, into an independent connection. When things take that shape, of which we have no apprehension, we shall have neither part nor lot in the change.

To show the necessity of the labors of our Church in California, we have only to mention that, out of a population of over 400,000, there are only about 7,861 members of all the Protestant Churches—distributed as follows: Methodist Episcopal Church, North, 3,112; Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about 2,000; Baptists 1000, probably; Unitarian, 100; Swedenborgians, 30. Besides the above, there is one German Lutheran Church organized in San Francisco; and the Universalists and Campbellites have organized societies, at different times and places, and have had stated preaching.

Recent numbers of the Methodist inform us that at the Bodega camp-meeting, seventy-nine joined our Church; at the Gilroy camp-meeting, sixty-four joined; at the Sacramento camp-meeting, twenty-three joined. These are only a few of the successes reported. A large increase will be reported, it is hoped, at the next Conference.

NEWSPAPER WRITERS.

When any one sits down to write for publication, it should be with the conviction that nothing ought to be published which is not valuable. Nothing valueless should be made a matter of record. The immense amount of reading necessary to the attainment of what is called general information, is largely owing to the neglect of this rule. And the difficulty becomes greater with every age. But, apart from this general and comprehensive view of the interests of the world, and of future times, we should, when writing for publication, remember that it is a sin against mankind, and therefore against God, to make them eat a bushel of the chaff of unnecessary words in order to obtain a quart of the good wheat of valuable facts or thoughts. It is a waste of their time, and an injury to their minds.

It is equally an injury and an injustice to the writer. Spreading the precious metal of his thought out into gold-leaf, it is valueless. Condensed into coin, it would pass current in the mental exchange. A wad of cotton has no force in its loose state; but we have seen boys chew them up so tightly that when shot out of a gun, they would pierce through an oak board half an inch thick. This is a good illustration of the difference in power between a prolix, wordy writer, and one who condenses, and is terse in his language. A writer who is brief, pointed, and pithy, is always read. A long winded writer, who strings out his words into ponderous columns, is always voted a bore.

In order to write well, we must do much hard thinking, and write with great pains-taking. This is the only way to attain to ease, elegance, and power. Some writer truly says, that Shakespeare, we may fancy, wrote with rapidity: but not till he had thought with intensity; long and sore had this man thought, as the seeing eye may discern, and had dealt and wrestled with dark pains and throes, though his great soul is silent about all that. It was for him to write rapidly at fit intervals, being ready to do it, and herein truly lies the secret of the matter. The hot furnace having long worked and simmered, let the pure gold flow out at one gush. It was Shakespeare's plan. No easy writer was he, or he had never been a Shakespeare. Dante sees himself growing gray over his "Divine Comedy," in stern solitary death-wrestle with it, to conquer it if he may. Hence it is done and prevailed over, and the fiery life of it endures forevermore among men.

THE QUARTERLY.

The October number is on our table. This is a fulfilment of the pledge to be prompt.

It closes the twelfth volume with an index. The articles present variety, and a sufficient number of them are on fresh and current topics. The table of contents, with the authors' names, will whet the appetite of the reader into whose hands this number is to come:

I. John the Apostle, and his Writings. By Prof. Reubelt.

II. Psychology. By W. S. Graysou.

III. Class-meetings. Editor.

IV. Probationary Church-membership. By Rev. J. Anderson.

V. Mary, the Mother of our Lord. By Mrs. Martin.

VI. The Unity of the Christian Church.

VII. Natural Goodness. By Rev. D. Stevenson.

VIII. Brief Reviews. Editor.

IX. Notes and Correspondence. Editor.

X. Biblical, Literary, and Religious Miscellanies. Editor.

These three last departments are full to opulence of thorough and entertaining criticisms, news, and views. The third article is mainly a reproduction of the entire action of the General Conference on the subject, with some preliminary and historical remarks. This is desirable the rather as the report on Class-meetings was allowed to remain on the table, and does not appear in the Journal.

The next number, beginning the thirteenth volume, will be a rich one. We have had some intimation of the materials on hand for it. One of the bishops (they heretofore have not contributed to the Quarterly) makes a valuable contribution to it. We can't give up the Quarterly. Never! Send on not only your names, but your subscriptions, at once—$2 per annum. We are glad to hear that subscribers are coming in. [Nashville Advocate.

BISHOP KAVANAUGH'S FIRST CIRCUIT.

Bishop Kavanaugh's First Circuit, was around Greenupsburg, Kentucky, where he recently presided at the Western Virginia Conference. Thirty-five years ago, he preached his first sermon there. There was then not a professing Christian in the place. On his occasional visits, he lodged with Mr. Koons, a prominent citizen of the place. At the recent Conference session, he was entertained by his old friend, the same person. He has been in Greenupsburg but little, if at all, from that time until this. These facts we learn from a letter of Rev. R. Abbey to the Nashville Advocate.

OBITUARIES.

We have, heretofore, been in the habit of condensing the obituaries, leaving out redundant words, and merely expressing all the important facts and characteristics. Some time since, we published an editorial in regard to this matter. Many of our good brethren have very earnestly differed with us; and some of them have expressed themselves in very earnest language. One good brother in the ministry, a warm personal friend, sends us a long obituary, and a long, censorious article, in favor of long obituaries. We publish the obituary without abridgment. We trust that will be satisfactory. We cannot well afford to publish both at once.

This week we have adopted the course insisted upon by our friends who favor long obituaries. We have published them without abridgment. The result is, that the "Children's Column" is crowded out, the "Home Circle" is crowded out, more than a column of advertisements have to be removed to the inside—thus depriving the paper of a column of news. One brother favors putting the obituaries in large type, and on the first page. Had we done so this week, there would have been nothing else on that page; the communications would have filled the second page, and there would have been no editorial matter in this paper. Indeed, were we to publish them all, without abridgment, and not write a word insisting on shorter ones, the paper would soon be entirely filled with them.

Little as our censorious friends believe it, the editor reads the obituary of a saint of God with as much pleasure and profit as they do. But the fact, above stated, that the paper would be filled with them, stares us in the face. What are we to do? All we can do, and all we have done, is, to pray our friends, in view of their satisfaction and ours, and for the interest of the paper, to forego the questionable pleasure of "many words." Who will blame us for this? No sensible person.

There are some merdel obituaries in this week's paper. The one of Mrs. Pamela L. Massey, deserved, according to the philosophy of our censorious friends, to have been a column long; and yet, a most eventful and worthy Christian life is set forth in seventeen lines. Another, Mrs. Amanda F. Peterson's, also worthy to be as long as any, Bro. Shapard sends in eight lines. Mr. Wesley's obituaries of his preachers were the best ever published. In the Minutes of 1777, in answer to the question, what preachers have died this year? we read: "John Slocumb, at Clones—an old laborer, worn out in the service; John Harrison, near Lisburn—a promising youth, serious, modest and much devoted to God; William Lumley, at Heram—a blessed young man, a happy witness of the full liberty of the children of God; and William Mingthorp, near Dunbar—an Israelite, indeed, in whom was no guile."

DESPISING EACH OTHER'S GIFTS.

The Nashville Advocate has some well-timed and well-uttered remarks on this subject. Referring to the godly advice of the Discipline in reference to it, the editor remarks: "Preachers are sometimes very severe, if not censorious, critics on each other's gifts, and by their remarks bring them into contempt with many people who would otherwise be benefitted.—They lessen instead of increasing the entire availability of the ministry.

"Once tainted by this spirit, the next step is jealousy, and the next a system of horizontal detraction of all with whom he may be brought into rivalry, unless, perhaps, he may be bound by some selfish tie, such as that of party or clique.

"If we lame and damage the instruments, and diminish, by manner or word, their influence, how can the work be done? Verily, in despising each other's gifts, in speaking lightly of each, preachers do the devil service."

"From envy, hatred, and malice, good Lord, deliver us!"

DEATH OF REV. JOSEPH TRAVIS.

From the Memphis Christian Advocate, we learn, that this venerable man of God fell asleep in Jesus, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith, on the morning of the 16th day of September last. He resided at China Grove, Carroll county, Mississippi, and was a superannuated member of the Memphis Conference. He was one of the powerful pioneer-preachers of the West, and had been abundant in labors for more than half a century. His auto-biography has been published, and should be read by all. It can be obtained at all our Depositories. The writer in the Memphis Advocate says: "He was deeply afflicted for years before his death, but he triumphed over it all in the strength of grace, and on my last visit he told me that "all was peace," and that he would "soon be at home with God, and in the society of the redeemed and saved of earth, who had gone before him." He was exulting in hope. His conversations about meeting the fathers in the ministry with whom he had labored in his youth, were thrillingly interesting. Humility, and an unwavering trust in Christ's sufferings and death, marked every word he spoke. The grace of God was his theme, and as sweetest music in his ear. He was a few days past seventy-two years of age; entered the ministry in 1806.

BISHOP SOULE.

After preaching last Sunday in City-road chapel, we walked over to the house of our venerable senior superintendent. He was in bed, and had been for several days, and, as he expressed himself in answer to our salutation, his "constitution is much shaken." He conversed cheerfully of the Conferences, and of his desire to visit them, but thought it likely he "never should be able to do so again." He spoke precious words, to be treasured in memory. The bishop desires us to say to his correspondents that he has not been able to read, much less to answer, their letters for some time. [Nashville Advocate.

A REMEMBRANCER.

Will our brethren and friends, in the ministry and out of it, bear with us in asking this, as we think, very pertinent and righteous question? Why is it that the accounts of glorious revivals, and numerous conversions and accessions to the Church, which are sent us every week, are not accompanied with long lists of new subscribers to the Advocate? Be not offended, dear brethren, at this "remembrancer." We know what we are talking about. We know, by personal trial, that at all these revivals, new subscribers can be obtained in large numbers. If these opportunities are neglected, when shall we have as good? Ought not the people, the new members especially to have the paper? Is not this neglect the reason why Southern Church papers do not have as large circulation as Northern ones?

PERSONAL.

In answer to numerous letters of friends—too numerous to answer—anxiously inquiring after the health of the family of the editor of this paper, during the present fearful epidemic, we are thankful to be able to say, all is well, so far. A child and a servant have been attacked, but both have recovered. No anxiety has been endured. Trusting in God, we have feared not. "Hitherto the Lord hath helped us," and He is able to keep those who have been committed to Him.

Rev. Francis Walker—of the Jones' Valley Circuit, Alabama Conference—complains that our printers, in a camp-meeting notice, put P. E. (Presiding Elder), instead of P. C. (Preacher in Charge). Really, we beg pardon. But Brother Walker deserves to be a P. E., we suppose. At any rate, no harm is done. We are glad to hear from our old friend once more.

Things Lost Forever.—The following words from the pen of Mrs. Lydia H. Sigourney are full of instructive meaning: "Lost wealth may be restored by industry; the wreck of health regained by temperance; forgotten knowledge restored by study; alienated friendship smoothed into forgetfulness; even forfeited reputation won by patience and virtue; but who ever looked upon his vanished hours, recalled his slighted years, stamped them with wisdom, or effaced from Heaven's record the fearful blot of wasted time? The foot-print on the sand is washed out by the ocean wave, and easier might we, when years are fled, find that foot-print than recall lost hours."

Not Going Back.—It is stated, that actual statistics show that during the last fifty years "the number of members of the Evangelical Churches in the United States has increased from four hundred thousand to three millions and a half, being an increase of eightfold; while our population has increased only four-fold." So much for the oft-reiterated statement that the growth of Evangelical Churches has not kept pace with the growth of population.

Bequests.—The Book Agent takes pleasure in acknowledging the receipt of $3000 from William Barnhill and Joshua Smizer, executors of Michael Smizer, deceased, of Kentucky; who bequeathed one half to the cause of missions, and the other half to the Sunday-school cause.

The funds will be faithfully appropriated according to the will of our departed brother.

Liberality.—The Southwestern Bible Society, of New Orleans, has received $1000 from a man who can neither read nor write. He is not a member of any Church, nor does he live within twenty-five miles of one.

THE TEXAS EDITOR.

Rev. J. E. Carnes, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, Galveston, we are happy to learn, is now convalescent; having had the yellow fever. Since he is recovering, we are glad he has had it. That trouble is now over, once for all. A genuine attack of yellow fever is never repented. It either kills, or acclimates for life. Many testify to the contrary, but all the reliable testimony supports this view. If a preacher's work calls him into a yellow fever latitude, let him go, stay, "face the music," meet and conquer the enemy, and be done with it. We congratulate our brother Carnes.

The Home Circle for October is out. The promptitude is refreshing. Let it continue. The present number is unusually handsome and interesting. The paper and type cannot be excelled. Indeed, we know of no Magazine equal to it in these respects. And the literary attractions are in harmony with the mechanical. The editor, Dr. Huston, popular enough before, is winning a still higher degree. The editor who shall succeed in the establishment of a first class Magazine in the South, will accomplish a work of incalculable difficulty and worth.

Stevens' History of Methodism.—The first volume, of the issue of which our readers have already been advised, has been sent us by Carlton & Porter. We have not had time to read it; but we have full confidence in the value of the work. We shall notice more at length hereafter.

"The Concurrent Vote."—Kentucky, Western Virginia, and Missouri Conferences have already concurred in the recommendation of the General Conference for the expunction from the Discipline of the General Rule on Slavery.

Rev. S. J. Davies, of the Louisiana Conference, writes us that he has had an attack of the yellow fever, but has recovered. We rejoice with him. His friends will be gratified.

Rev. Dr. Reuben Post—the venerable Pastor of the Circular (Presbyterian) Church, Charleston, South Carolina—died, of yellow fever, recently, in his sixty seventh year.

Dr. Wightman recently preached in Washington City. His discourse is highly spoken of by the National Intelligencer.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

BAPTIST MISSIONARY UNION.

The donations and legacies to the Baptist Missionary Union, up to the close of the financial year, March 31, amounted to $85,850,74, which, added to the sums placed at the disposal of the Executive Committee, for specified purposes, by the United States Government and co-ordinate societies, swells the entire sum, in round numbers, to $87,000. This amount is equal to the sums actually paid out by the treasurer, and leaves the debt the same as the previous year, $37,000. The amount received into the treasury during the month of March was $34,000.

JEWISH OPINION OF THE REVIVAL IN AMERICA.

The Rev. D. W. Wright has recently taken a continental tour to visit the stations of the London Society for promoting Christianity amongst the Jews. In his journal, under date of Monday, June 7, he says: "We started from Strasburg for the Duchy of Baden. A Jew sat next to [illegible] (in the railway carriage;) I said, 'Are you an Englishman?' 'No,' he said, 'I am an American citizen.'—'What do you think of the great revival in America?' 'I think,' he said, 'that it is the work of God, and that many careless souls have been awakened by it.'"

THE TONGUE OF FIRE.

A pious lady—widow of a minister of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the South—has purchased a number of copies of this work for circulation among the clergy of communion. John Henderson, Esq., of Park, Scotland, has presented a copy to each of the ministers of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland, in the mission field, and the colonies, including Canada. Our Agent would be glad to receive an order to supply all our Ministers with a copy.

THE POET OF METHODISM.

A writer in the London Watchman suggests the propriety of having a suitable monument erected to the memory of the Poet of Methodism—Charles Wesley. He states that the tomb-stone in the old churchyard of St. Marylebone is in a state of corrosion and decay, and rapidly sinking into ruin. Surely he whose language "encircles the entire earth with a belt of sacred melody" is entitled to some substantial monument.

THE PARIS UNIVERSITY ON ENGLAND.

In the course of an article on the "Confessional in Belgravia," the Univers says: "The world will never recover substantial peace until England shall have become Roman Catholic, or shall have ceased to be a first-rate power.—With England no alliance is possible. The nations of the earth ought therefore to come to an understanding, and heal against her the famous sentence of the Roman senators, Delenda est Carthago."

A UNION OF TWO DENOMINATIONS.—The two branches of the Presbyterian Church, known as the Associate and Associate Reformed Synods, have united under the name of the "Synod of the United Presbyterian Church."

News from our Home Work.

"To spread Scriptural Holiness over these Lands."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Opelousas Circuit—

Rev. B. F. White, writes: "Up to this date, we have built two Churches; bought a good parsonage; increased the number of appointments from five to ten, and had one hundred and twenty-four accessions to the Church. To God alone be all the glory."

Carroll Circuit—

Revs. L. B. Spencer and J. F. Wynne, write: We feel thankful to God, that we can make a favorable report of Carroll Circuit. Our first protracted meeting was held at Vista Ridge; which resulted in fourteen conversions and sixteen accessions to the Church. Our next protracted effort, which was our third quarterly meeting, embraced the fifth Sabbath in August. Our Presiding Elder, Brother Reid, was with us two days. The meeting continued till the following Sabbath. At this meeting we can truly say, the Lord was with us in great power. Numbers of sinners were made to fall down and cry for mercy. About thirty-five or forty professed a saving faith in Christ; and thirty-three were added to the Church. The next effort was made in Floyd. In consequence of Court being so near, the meeting lasted only three days. Two or three were converted to the Lord; nine whites and three or four blacks joined the Church. A more warm-hearted people than those of Floyd are hard to find in any country; though a goodly number of them are la lack of the "one thing needful." O, that they may all become religious. We are about to succeed in building a Church at this place; and, also, one near Vista Ridge. We have had la all, within the last six or eight weeks, about seventy conversions, and between eighty and ninety accessions. Thanks to our local brethren, Smith, Sage and Shyriagh, who have labored with us very successfully.

Vermillionville—

Rev. B. F. White, writes: "Doubtless it will be pleasing to the lovers of Methodism, to learn that we have at last a house of worship in the town of Lafayette, or Vermillionville, Lafayette parish. On last Sabbath I had the pleasure of dedicating it to God. During the meeting of three days' six whites and five colored, united with the Church—and I baptized some seven whites, six of whom were children, and about fifteen colored. Brother Kimball, the preacher in charge is doing a good work."

LaFourche Circuit, and Bayou Black Mission—

Rev. N. A. Chaffee, Rev. Dr. Keener, writes: "My report for the LaFourche Circuit, and Bayou Black Mission for the Third Quarter is as follows—baptized one hundred and thirty-two, received on probation sixty-one. Several have professed religion and two have died in peace. The congregations are large and attentive, and hope is entertained that good is being accomplished although no general revival has been realized. This is a section of the state, where stubborn difficulties have to be met and overcome, if ever spiritual religion shall take deep and firm hold upon the masses, pray for us.

Warren Circuit—

Rev. P. E. Green, writes: "We have had two or three good meetings on the Circuit, since our meeting at Mount Alson. On the 20th we closed a three days meeting at Bogue Sinn, with many mourners at the altar, some had been happily converted; and one white and several colored persons united with the Church. On the 27th we closed another meeting of four days at Asbury, would have continued the meeting longer; but for sickness, and absent friends and brethren. And I am happy to say that the Rev. C. K. Marshall, and brother Curtiss, gave them very fine sermons. Several have joined the Church this year, at this place, but no one at this meeting. Yet such liberality upon the part of the people and such soul-stirring sermons, s came from the pulpit, cannot be lost. God will bless the preachers and people. I was too unwell to be with them the first day of the meeting, and on Sabbath I had to go to Bethel and attend to other duties. Hence I gave the meeting up to brother Curtiss. God was with us at Bethel. Some mourners and many Christians came into the altar, to pray for full salvation. A glorious revival of religion in that community. At three o'clock, we had a very large congregation of colored people, some were happily converted, and five joined the Church. As the colored people left the Church, our white brethren and friends came into their afternoon prayer meeting, many were made happy in the love of God. At night I married a couple of colored persons, at a Quarter, where we have been preaching; baptized twenty or more persons young and old. After which we had a prayer meeting. I asked them to sing the "old Ship of Zion." And such singing you never heard, as came from these sons and daughters of Ham. Their owner and I both got so happy that we could scarcely tell whether we were in the body or out of it; and some of the colored people left the house praising God aloud. What would some of our friends on the other side of "the line" have thought had they been there?"

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Scooba Circuit—

Rev. J. B. Stone, writes: "Let me say through the columns of your paper, that the rivulets of divine grace, that have been flowing through Scooba Circuit, have swollen into rivers. We have held protracted meetings at every appointment on the Circuit. At four of them we have witnessed exhibitions of the convicting, and converting graces of Christ. At the other we had but two conversions though the Church was greatly blessed. We will give you a synopsis of the whole. In this Circuit some sixty whites and fifty colored, have been converted, some forty-five whites and thirty-five colored have joined the Church.—We feel grateful to the following brethren for their efficient labors, C. C. and M. Callawny, J. M. Hood, Shaver, Shieffer, Boyd, Chery, Gilbert Bracroft, and our beloved Presiding Elder, T. Y. Ennisey, who labored with his usual zeal and success."

Bladon Circuit—

Rev. J. F. R. Ramson, writes: "We have had another gracious revival, at Mount Zion, the meeting commenced by our local brethren Friday, before the second Sabbath and lasted one week. I joined them Monday, and the result fourteen professed conversion, twenty-nine or thirty joined the Church. Blessed be God."

Suggsville Circuit—

Rev. H. Uhlhart, writes: "That a gracious revival is going on at Suggsville. Last night there were about forty penitents at the altar."

Belmont Circuit—

Rev. J. W. Stones, writes: "We have just closed a meeting of eleven days continuance at Trinity, on this Circuit, which was truly a season of grace. The whole membership was greatly revived and strengthened, and some ten or twelve souls were converted. Nine persons joined the Methodist Church. My colleague, brother B. Melton was with us two days, but owing to a distressing cough was able to preach only one time. Brother D. Duncan was with us four days and preached efficiently and acceptably. The balance of the time the burden of preaching fell upon the writer, and with such laymen as Bros. Dallas, Shelton, Garrett and others, to hold up his hands, together with divine assistance, he was able to preach two times each day, for five days in regular succession. Praise be to the Lord for such a season of refreshing as we had at Trinity.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Paulding Circuit—

Rev. W. Paine, writes: "We have just closed an interesting meeting in Paulding; fourteen professed to experience forgiveness of their sins, eighteen joined the Church; three by letter, and fifteen on probation. The Church was greatly revived; We hope to be able to make a good report at Conference; Brothers F. W. Sharbrough, H. A. Jones and Jackson, labored faithfully and with great acceptability. O Lord, revive thy work more abundantly."

Sea Shore Circuit—

Rev. J. Nicholson, writes: "I have just closed my fourth Quarterly Meeting at Handsboro; protracted eleven days. Our Presiding Elder failed to reach us by reason of affliction. There were thirty-seven joined on probation and four by letter. The Church was gloriously revived. About twenty-five conversions and a number of reclamations—We have a good state of things at Biloxi, also at Coleville. To God be all the glory."

Gainesville Circuit—

Rev. H. D. Benny, writes: "We have just closed our Fourth Quarterly Meeting; our venerable and beloved Presiding Elder, brother Pipkin, was not able to be with us on account of ill health. Brother Noyes from the Columbia Circuit, came in time to render us faithful help. I also feel very grateful for the assistance of brother Laurence. The meeting lasted six days, during which time I baptized eighteen children and four adults, and took twenty on probation into the Church. The Church was greatly blessed, and great good was accomplished. About seventy-five have joined the Church during the year. May the good Lord carry on the work."

EAST TEXAS CONFERENCE.

San Augustine—

Rev. S. A. Williams, writes: "It affords me no little pleasure to add to the revival intelligence, good news from San Augustine. With one exception; I believe it is the oldest town in Eastern Texas. I have witnessed several seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, since my first acquaintance with this people, but I think this present revival has resulted up to this writing, in a greater number of conversions than any previous one. The meeting began Friday night 10th instant, and has continued up to the 28th, results between seventy and eighty conversions. The precise number added to the Church I cannot tell, as the preacher in charge of this work has taken their names. Many have come from the country, for miles, to witness the wonder-working and soul-saving power of God. We are still holding prayer meetings at nine o'clock each morning, and the young men's prayer meeting at four o'clock P. M. The sisters have two prayer meetings, and we have preaching at night."

Personal.

Yeh, the Great Man of China.—The English are now surprised to find that Yeh knew every event that happened in Europe and had carefully read, or had translated to him every day, the debates in the British Parliament. His conversations, as reported for the English press, show not only a philosophical but an intellectual mind. It disposes of the charges against him by showing that they were grently magnified, and that the policy he pursued was not only the best, but perhaps the only one that could be pursued towards the people he governed. He demonstrated that he had made all preparations to defend Canton; that he had done all in his power; he had not been careless of the future; had not neglected any available means; his troops were quite willing to fight; but that the fire of the English guns was overwhelming. Therefore, he ceased to resist.

Col. Sam. M. Williams, an old and well known Texian, and President of the Galveston Commercial and Agricultural Bank, is dead.

Laurent G. Sigur, an eminent Louisianian, is dead.

Ex-Gov. Hagby, of Alabama, is dead.

Mr. Bore, a Louisiana planter, in 1796, discovered that the juice of the Louisiana sugar cane would crystallize. The plant had been introduced in 1751, and used only for making syrup.

Jose De Garay, a native of Mexico, descended from the best Spanish families—projector of the Tehuantepec route—died recently in New York.

Robert Burns.—On the 25th of January next, one hundred years will have elapsed since the birth of the national poet of Scotland, and it is likely that the day will be celebrated with more than usual enthusiasm.

Hon. E. Ellis, who has been forty years a member of the British Parliament, is on a tour through the United States. Mr. Ellis is seventy-eight years of age, hale and hearty; and worth upwards of a million of dollars. He traveled through the United States fifty-six years ago, this being his second visit here.

Baron Humboldt says that he shall die the next year, and has desired the postponement of the publication of an edition of his works until after that time.

Brigham Young is said to be worth $30,000,000 besides having control of all the Church property in Utah. The latter exceeds in value all the rest of the property in the territory, and is exempted from taxation by the territorial law.

The Duchess of Kent—Queen Victoria's mother—is seventy-two years old.

Lieut. John N. Maffit, commander of the United States brig Dolphin, the vessel which captured the sluver, is the son of the noted Methodist preacher of the same name.

J. G. Baldwin, Esq., author of "Flush Times of Alabama," has been nominated by the Lecomptonites of California, for judge of the Supreme Court of that State.

Thomas Carlyle has recently set out for Berlin, whence he proceeds to Saxony and Silesia, in order to survey the battle-fields of the seven year's war, in relation with his forthcoming "History of the Great Frederick."

Dred Scott, who recently died, was a very old negro, and enjoyed perfect freedom even after the famous decision. At the great Railroad Celebration in St. Louis, in June, 1857, he was upon the fair ground, and an object of greater curiosity to most people than any of the white lions in the city. He was quite proud of the "lime" he had created in the United States, and enjoyed his notoriety mightily.

Death of Wm. L. Calhoun.—The Abbeville (S. C.) Banner communicates the mournful intelligence of the death of Wm. Lowndes, the youngest son of the late John C. Calhoun. He died on the 19th ult., at his plantation in Abbeville District, S. C.

The Very Latest Intelligence.

Great Britain.—The British Government has renewed the contract with the Pacific Steamship Navigation Company, of Liverpool, for the period of six years, for the conveyance of the semi-monthly mails along the west coast of South America, from Panama to Valparaiso.

Sir E. B. Lytton, the Colonial Secretary, had made arrangements for opening a bank at Vancouver's Island, and ultimately in British Columbia. He had also suggested a plan for uniting a fortnightly postal communication to New Zealand and South Australia, via Panama, with a pistol service by the same route to Vancouver.

Mr. Brew, of the Irish constabulary, who served with distinction in the Crimea, had been appointed to organize a constabulary police in British Columbia. Two chaplains are sent to the colony by the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.

It is stated that the Spanish expedition against Morocco, to embark at Ferrol, is to be commanded by Gen. Prim.

Captain-General Didee recommends, it is said, the raising of the state of siege in Catalonia, which, with short intervals, has lasted upwards of twenty years.

Italy.—The Neapolitan Government had received notice that a quantity of fulminating grenades, in the form of fruit, had been sent to Malta, whence they were to be introduced into the Neapolitan States.

Prussia.—Advices from Berlin reiterate the statement that the Prince of Prussia will soon be proclaimed Prince Regent.

Austria.—The Aulic Council of Austria had decided upon the erection of six fortified fortresses for the protection of Vienna. They are to be erected on the right bank of the Danube.

Turkey.—Constantinople letters state that a conspiracy existed there, to get rid of the present Sultan, and replace him by his brother, Abdul Aziz. It is further stated that the conspiracy had gone so far that the majority of the foreign ambassadors at Constantinople had thought proper to inform certain leading persons in the plot that if Abdul Aziz came to the throne by violent means, he would not be recognized by the European powers.

Turkey and Persia are said to have been on the brink of a complete rupture.

Vienna journals state that the Turkish Government has announced officially in Bosnia and Herzegovina, that the levying of the tithes shall be henceforth be left to the communes. By this concession one of the principal grievances of the Christinas is removed.

China.—The French Government proposes to maintain in China a stronger naval squadron than in times past. A division of gunboats will remain there permanently, and a body of marine infantry will also be kept there, until the conditions of the treaty have been carried out.

Failure.—Ascole, Hartwig & Co., of Manchester, in the Mediterranean trade, has failed.

YELLOW FEVER! YELLOW FEVER!

TO THE AFFLICTED CITIZENS OF NEW ORLEANS!

Read Carefully and Thoughtfully.

DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID.—The greatest known agent for Purifying the Air. It is a new and important discovery. It is a triumph of scientific skill. It is the result of learned inquiry. It is the fruit of patient research.

This invaluable Agent is now presented to the people of New Orleans, for the first time. It is a Chemical union of materials, provided by Nature herself, for rendering the air we breathe pure and healthful. It is not a mixture, but a true Chemical compound. Its action is to obey silence to fixed laws, quick, sure, powerful. It purifies dwellings, sewers, sinks, privies, kitchens. It removes all offensive odors immediately. It cures burns, bites and stings of insects. It relieves boils, cleanses ulcers, heals sores. It cleanses teeth, sweetens breath.

It has been used with most remarkable success in Typhoid Fever, Scarlet Fever, Measles; indeed, to all contagious diseases it is invaluable.

In the City of Charleston, S. C., it is now in constant use by Leading Physicians, in Yellow Fever.

Orders from that City represent it, as in the most active demand. It has not been advertised there but one month, yet orders for hundreds of bottles, have been filled for that City.

In this City the Howard Association, is now using it in the treatment of Yellow Fever.

For it can be had at, J. WRIGHT, & CO'S, Drug Store, 21 and 151, Chartres Street. Price 50 cents. s22

EDUCATIONAL.

GREENSBOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL.

REV. J. W. N. MEARS, A. M. M. D.,

PRINCIPAL AND PROPRIETOR.

IN this School a thorough course is laid out for Pupils in the Classics, Mathematics, French and English, and young men desiring to enter the Freshmen, Sophomore, or Junior Class in "The Southern University," or any other College, will have every necessary facility afforded them for that object.

A commodious building is now in the process of erection, with ample play grounds attached, and a most delicious shade. New School-room Furniture, of the most approved kind, consisting of Desks, Settees, Chairs, 12x18 Black board Slates, Maps, Charts, Paintings, and a Chemical and Philosophical Apparatus, has just been purchased by the Principal in New York; and indeed every thing reasonable has been done to render the school room comfortable and attractive.

The object of the Principal is to make this School what its name imports, A High School, where young men can prepare for College, or for entrance upon business life. Instruction, if desired, can be given in German and Hebrew. Those having charge of the education of young men, would do well to investigate the claims of this School.

Provision has been made for a limited number of Misses, who will be placed in a separate department, under a competent and experienced instructress. They will be taught all the branches necessary to a finished education.

The Principal desires to urge upon the consideration of those who intend to educate their sons in the Southern University, the propriety of placing them at once where they can commence a course of study which will be carried on during their collegiate career.

The second annual session will commence (Providence permitting) on the 1st of September, and will continue nine consecutive months, including the usual vacation. It will be divided into three terms of three months each.

The tuition must be paid at the middle of each term, or interest will be charged. The justice of this claim will be at once acknowledged, when it is recollected that the Principal has incurred great expense for the benefit of the community, and needs the prompt payment of tuition bills to enable him to meet it.

No pupil will be admitted for less than a session. Any injury done to the house, or furniture, or premises, beyond the legitimate use of it, will be charged to the pupil in whose care the desk, &c. is.

No deduction will be made for the absence of any pupil; if, however, any pupil is absent on account of sickness for more than a week, the place of the absentee may be supplied by another.

In case of the expulsion of any pupil, the relinquishment of the claim for tuition to be optional with the Principal. The full payment of the tuition in such case will be most positively required where the Principal is not satisfied that he has had the entire co-operation of parents in the full extent of parental authority, "in bringing the disobedient to the wisdom of submitting to the powers that be." The Principal will decide this matter. It is his determination to throw the responsibility for the deportment of his pupils upon their parents, where it belongs. Children trained properly at home, will, as a general rule, behave properly at school. For the good of society, idleness, obstinacy and malice should never find even a temporary home in the school-room. They are a Pandora's box, out of which spring a multitude of evils.

It is desirable that pupils commence promptly with the commencement of the session.

For further particulars apply to the Principal.

DR. T. McGOWN'S

SARSAPARILLA

AND

IODINE OF POTASI,

THE GREAT

BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,

Prepared from sasaparilla root, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a Panacea or Catholicon than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Cohnet, Baron, Bardsley, Manson, Ricord, Gendrin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy; diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Ulcers, Old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally;) Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Rheumatism, Tonsilitis; Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cachexy, Palsy, Tumors, Cancerous, Ulcer; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Fordyce says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in constitutions infected and emaciated by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparations of Sarsaparilla."

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

LOUISA ALABAMA BLANKS, departed this life on the 29th ult., near Scottsville, Louisiana; at the residence of her father Col. W. E. Blanks. The deceased was in the bloom of life, being only 17 years of age at the time of her death; and though, she had not attached herself to the Church, she died in the full triumph of a living faith. The death of her sister who died in October last, in the 21st, year of her age, and who had been since her 12th year a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, It is thought had a salutary influence upon Louisa's mind, and was doubtless effective in bringing her to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ.

The circumstances surrounding the death of that sister, afford a happy illustration of how a Christian can die.—Her dying admonition, says our informant, was, "the vain things of this world may do to live by, but not to die by." Louisa died with a happy prospect before her view, her last moments being spent in shouting and praising God. As the lamp of her existence waned to a close, she exclaimed, "I am going home to Jesus!" And with the exclamation the soul, released from its tenement of clay, rose upon the pinions of the angelic throng which hovered over her death couch, ready to bear away to the sun-lit fields of eternal day her happy spirit.

Contemplate the death of the righteous, and who would not be a Christian? In the language of the departed; "how insignificant are the vain things of this world!" And even more than insignificant when compared with the fadeless joys of heaven! Wealth with its pageantry and hoards of gold, affords only a morbid thirst for further gain. And even fame when possessed is fleeting as the wind, or bursts like a bubble leaving a devoted victim to mourn its disappearance. But a crown of life will outlive the flight of years, yea, the wreck of time, and endure forever. H.

Farmersville, 15th Sept., 1858.

LEMUEL S. GANN, son of the Rev. James M. and Elizabeth Gann, died July 22d 1858, at the residence of his father, in Marion, county.

The deceased was born on the 20th of April 1841, and consequently had just entered his eighteenth year, when he received his Master's summons to depart, and be at rest with Him. A loving father, a kind and gentle mother, affectionate brothers and sisters, and a large circle of warm and sincere friends are left to mourn his early death, yet not as those who sorrow without hope, for they know that "their loss, is his eternal gain."

The deceased embraced religion in September 1855, and having connected himself with one of the Churches under the ministration of his father, he lived a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and better still, an humble and devoted Christian.

He was attacked with the prevailing epidemic, on Saturday 17th, and on Wednesday following, calling his father to him, he told him "that he never would recover. His father asked him "if he was prepared to die," his reply was, "Yes, I have a father and a mother who are too good to be lost." His reply made his father anxious to know what he meant and he said to him, "my son, your father cannot save you." He replied "no, Jesus is my Savior, and I thank God that I was early taught to serve Him."

He [illegible] began to exhort all that were present to meet him [illegible]. To his father he said, "Oh! Pa, never [illegible]—farewell, I will see you in heaven;" to his [illegible] "weep not for me, you will be lonely when Pa is [illegible] to pray." While [illegible] and sisters were [illegible] To Mr. Terrell, his [illegible] "I thank you, [illegible] all you can for me, promise now to meet [illegible] To [illegible] aunt and cousins, he proclaimed, "how sweet was the consciousness of sins forgiven," encouraging them to tread the straight and narrow way which leads to eternal life.

Thus passed this young soldier of the Cross to his reward—with the light of victory flashing from his eyes—the Gospel banner unfurled in his hand, and the glad shout of triumph on his lips—he stood before his great Captain, whilst the glorious words rung forth—"Well done thou good and faithful servant enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." A FRIEND.

REV. PRESTON COOPER. Hark! list ya to the voice of the [illegible] choir chanting their songs of welcome around the throne of the Most High—and the Throne-voice speaks: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant! Enter thou into the kingdom of heaven." Such was the faith and such the devotion of him whom now we mourn; and such his reception in that heaven for which he lived while on earth, and for which he died, that therein he might more fully live at the right hand of God above. Such was the life and such the death of the Rev. Preston Cooper, whose last prayer, voice, thought, and breath were given in praise of that God who on earth had been his friend, protector, and father, and now, in heaven, his eternal happiness.

The subject of this memoir was born in Warren county, Tennessee, on the 29th day of December, 1806, and are his feet had trod upon the blossoms of his 18th year, he became imbued with the true spirit of piety, and lent a listening ear to the warning voice of God's sorrowing angel, who, as a spectre of the silent past, rebuked his every deed of error, and bade him put on the "whole armor of God." And 'twas enough for him to know the gift was from his great Creator. Within his breast, amid love's blasted bliss, joy's faded wreaths, and hope's pale withered garlands, one bright flower was still unstained undimmed—the holy flower of Faith divine; and through that flower he yielded his heart to God who gave it, and thus became the chosen instrument in the hands of Omnipotence to spread abroad the glad tidings of salvation—whispering to suffering and dying, "The spirit and the bride say come;" consoling the bereaved and broken hearted, and bidding them "take of the waters of life freely."

Feelings of sadness fill every bosom at the thought of one more being gone; but particularly should those feelings of gloom be increased when we think of the one thus taken, as a blessing and ornament to society lost; one whose unspotted reputation, whose zealous and devoted christian character and teachings, have so fully entitled him to the respect of all—and to the love and reverence of those who knew him, as did the author of this humble tribute to his memory.

On the night of the 2d of August the archer inatiate came. 'Twas a night of calm and peaceful breeze. No arrowy beam of moonlight lay across that silent chamber, o'er which the craped wings of the destroying angel were fanning the breezes of death; beside his dying bed were those around whom his heart-strings clung, gazing with anguish upon the severing of the silver cords, and the shattering of the "golden bowl." But alas! one pure and gentle being was far away; the spirit of her sunny life alone was wanting there. In beautiful unconsciousness of the drape sorrow cloud that hovered o'er her horizon, she was dropping pleasures and strewing flowers culled from the garden of talent, by the tasteful hand of genius, in the pathway of those who were so fortunate as her, to be near. "But she was not thrown as a loosened bud to float upon the dark and stormy waves of time, a thing of lone and blighted life." No, no! other ties and other joys still, still are here. Remember ye bereaved ones, those that were bound by the dearest ties that unite our race in gentleness together, that your loss is his infinite gain.

Particularly do such feelings take possession of my bosom as I sit beneath the shade of the old oak, towering above me, with a gentle zephyr to fan my brow; and my ear enchanted by an occasional sweet, strain of melody wafted from the halls of dazzling mirth, stealing through the air and sinking into my soul as with an angel power. Whilst I watch the returners from the old Well, and behold faces so recently marked with the pallor of disease, now blending the rose hue and lily, (and here it is that many from far distant lands have met, and fates, oh! happy destinies decided forever.)

Thus musing I ask, and why am I here? Whence the source of so much joy and gladness? And echo answers, "it was not all a dream, nor dreamlike passed away;" for in the stillness of the midnight hour, when the pale sweet stars shone calm and beautiful in the "blue diadem of night, the gentle dew sleeping upon the flowers, whose silvery edged petals were upturned to receive the embrace of night's beauteous queen," a form as of some being of the spirit land stood near the sleeper, and whispering gave a message from realms above; the vision fled. Its voice was hushed, the sleeper awoke and yielded obedience to its commands, but without success. Again and again it came, until with one mighty effort the dream was realized, and forth from the deep fountains of the earth the glad waters came, those waters which were to prove so great a blessing to the suffering invalid, and a source of so much delight to the gay and happy.

What lasting tribute then do we not owe to the memory of this chosen one of God, for the great health restoring discovery? and greater still the tribute should we pay to him who died as the true sentinel in the cause of man's salvation. But alas! he is no longer with us. To that voiceless hall where budding raptures have perished all, he has been called. Another hearth stone is left husbandless and fatherless. No more when morning's rosy wings are spread o'er earth—no more when twilight blushes gambol abroad, or the flowers hold up their fairy cups to catch the sparkling dew drops, will his low and softly fervent voice be heard asking gilded blessings to descend on those about him—no more, will he tell in accents of voice divine of the glories of a better land, a home beyond the skies. That home is his and angel hands now chant a happier, sweeter day to welcome him there. "To him the grave hath lost its victory—death has no sting—when comes the summons he with joy obeys—and like the setting sun he leaves behind his golden virtues to adorn the earth—while his immortal spirit is removed from this cold world to the garden of his God," then

Weep not ye friends, but oh prepare
To meet him in the skies,
Where tears are never shed, and where
Bliss never, never dies.

Though in the solemn silent sod
His relics now repose,
To the blest garden of his God
His pious spirit rose.

Weep not, with angels bright above—
He knows no grief, no care,
But dwells in cloudless light and love;
Oh, may we meet him there.

WILL WILDWOOD.

MRS. RACHEL D., wife of Mr. Francis P. Marshall, and youngest child of the late Jonathan English, died in Atlanta Georgia, on the 26th of July last. She was born November 1833, in Monroe county, Alabama, whither her father had removed from Richland District, S. C., in 1823.

She was naturally of a beautiful and gentle character and was early chastened of the Lord into a yearning after heaven. In 1854 her second born, little Alfred, was taken and set among the angels. Thither his mother's heart turned ever afterward, and the graces of the Spirit were added to the foregone graces of nature. The same year she joined the Methodist Church, on Cedar Creek Circuit, Alabama Conference. For some time a dark cloud rested upon her soul as she stood by the grave of little Alfred, and the question of Job continually recurred. "Why is light given to a man whose way is hid, whom God hath hedged in?" To the sinner this questioning of the heart has no end, but to our sister it had an end. On returning from the funeral of her child she said to me. "For several months I have suffered the deepest gloom, ever revolving the question, why is it? Now I feel the love of God and rejoice that I am counted worthy to suffer in his hands." From that day her subdued soul unfolded into the heavenly life. After that she was called upon to mourn the loss of another infant, but she kept the beginning of her confidence firm unto the end, and was made a partaker of Christ. One could read her heart in her eyes, so meek were they, and it read thus. "I have gone through fiery trials. The loves of earth have not satisfied me. Now I live for a higher life."

In July last, through the advice of physicians, her husband started with her to the mountains of Tennessee, she being in deep decline with consumption. On arriving in Atlanta Georgia, she was too feeble to go further. A letter from Rev. C. W. Key, of the Georgia Conference, will tell the triumphant conclusion: "Friday, 24th of July, I was called to see her as one of the pastors of the Methodist Church in this place. I found her exceedingly feeble, but in the possession of all her mental faculties, and calmly reposing in her Redeemer. Saturday I visited her again and found her faith wavering; she spoke of the two children she had in heaven, and how little dread she had of death except the act of dying. Sunday morning very early I saw her again, she was still confident and asked me to pray that she might have an easy exit. In the afternoon I saw her again; her end was nigh. Not a cloud seemed to flit across her spiritual vision to obscure the blessed Savior. She was the most patient and tranquil creature I ever saw. About two o'clock Monday morning she breathed her last; she went out like the quiet setting of an evening sun. Just before her death she threw her arms around her husbands neck, and bade him farewell with these words, 'You will meet me in heaven, wont you?'" In a recent letter from her bereaved husband, there is an underscored sentence, which I trust will be hereafter talked of in the company of the redeemed above. It is this, "There is a sacred promise recorded in heaven, I will meet you there, my blessed Rachel." Amen. Even so, come quickly Lord Jesus, and celebrate thy nuptials with his bereaved heart! In the same letter there is narrated a touching incident of her death that deserves to be recorded, as illustrating the gratitude of the true Christian, that while nearing the crowns and harps above she forgets not the meanest favor below. "After parting affectionately with all in the room, and when the power of speech had almost failed, after many efforts to make us understand, I heard indistinctly the word—'Rose' This was her servant who from fatigue had fallen asleep. I aroused her as soon as possible, and Rachel took her by the hand and kissed her, saying something to her. The only words I could distinguish were 'been good,' I inferred her meaning to be, she had been good to her, etc." O, ye proud mistresses, who spend your time petulently with those who toil day and night to minister to your ease, learn a lesson of humility from this receding angel who stops from heaven to kiss a slave!

WALTER C. HARRIS.

ANOTHER PREACHER LOST.

REV. WM. E. HOLLIDEY died on the 20th September, 1858, in the forty-fifth year of his age.

The subject of this notice was born the 29th of April, 1813, in Abbeville District, South Carolina; he embraced religion in his eighteenth year, and one year afterwards was licensed to exhort; commenced preaching in his twentieth year; he was ten years a traveling preacher; the rest of the time he was a local minister. His early duties were with the South Carolina Conference, and his later, with the Alabama. Early last Spring he moved to Mississippi, and located in Yazoo county. At the first Quarterly meeting afterwards he produced his Church papers, and was received as a Local Elder. He commenced preaching immediately, mostly to the blacks. At the time he was arrested by disease, he was preaching every Sabbath; and it was his intention to re-enter the traveling connection. It was my happy lot to be present at the time of his death, and for several hours before; and I felt, truly, that it was better to be at the house of mourning than at the house of feasting. He was perfectly rational until near the close of life, and enjoyed the most perfect confidence, and the strongest evidence of any one I ever saw leave this world. When I first approached him, I asked him if he knew me? He responded in the affirmative. I then asked him, if he knew Jesus? O yes, I know him! I said to him, God is good. He responded, Yes, Brother; He is good. I said to him, you have preached the Gospel to others, now you come to prove it yourself. Yes, Brother, he responded; and I feel it is good. Some time afterwards, when we thought all would soon be over, I asked him, do you still feel that God is good? He responded, O, yes, Brother; I feel that He is, better and better. Do you feel, my dear Brother, that your evidence is strong. Yes, my brother; stronger and still stronger. Then he repeated, several times, sacred evidence, with emphasis. The last word he articulated was—Yes; to the question, Do you still feel that God is good? Brother H. was a good preacher, and a true Christian. God bless his poor wife, and children.

MRS. MARY SHAW BROWN, departed this life on the 8th day of April 1858, in Chicot county Arkansas, at her residence near Eudora, in the 71st year of her age.

She was born in September 1787, in the county of Down, near the city of Belfast, Ireland, and at a very early age came to the United States with her parents, John and Isabella Shaw, who settled near Lancaster, in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, where soon after she had the misfortune to lose her mother; after her mother's death, she resided with her father until December 1805, when she was united in matrimony with John J. Brown, soon after which she left her father and other relatives, and went with her husband to what was then called Mississippi Territory, now the State of Mississippi, and settled near Washington, in Adams county, where they resided until 1825, when they moved into Warren county near Vicksburg, and thence in 1848 to Chicot county Arkansas, where on the 28th day of September 1851, she lost the partner of her life with whom she had lived nearly half a century. After the death of her husband she continuing to live in the same place until her death.

She raised seven of ten children to the years of maturity, three of whom preceeded her to the grave but a few years. She and her husband had been raised strict Presbyterians, of the old school, but neither professed religion until the Autumn of 1828, when they attended a camp-meeting at the old "Wren Camp-ground" in Warren county near Vicksburg, at which they were both converted and connected themselves with the Methodist Church, of which they continued faithful members until death. Her home was the seat of hospitality. She was proverbially kind and affectionate as a wife and mother, and while life lasts her memory will be revered by her devotedly attached children, grand-children and friends whose hearts cling to her, though they are separated by the grave. Mild and affectionate and industrious, she literally looked well to the ways of her household. Her children were blessed in such a mother, her husband was happy in such a wife, in her tongue was the law of kindness, and all were seasoned with the fear of the Lord. Long, long will the hearts of her children bleed for the loss of such a mother.

Her funeral sermon was preached to a very large and most respectful audience at Masonic Hall, near her late residence, on the 15th day of August 1858, in a most appropriate discourse, delivered by Rev. William R. Davis, pastor in charge of the Circuit, from the following words: "For we knew that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." 2d Corinthians, 5th chapter 1st verse.

SARAH FORNEA, wife of Joel Pearson, of St. Helena parish Louisiana, died at home Sept., 19th 1858. Sister Pearson was born July 8th, 1808, joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, and professed religion when twelve or thirteen years old, and was married to Joel Pearson Aug. 26th 1830.

She was an affectionate and faithful wife, a tender mother and consistent member of the Church. She took up the cross both in public and private; in the absence of her husband, who has been a class-leader for many years, she has often been known to lead the class. Sin, wheresoever and in whomsoever it was seen always met with a proper reproof from her both by precept and example. She suffered not sin upon her brother. Her faithful warnings' bold, but gentle reproofs and rebukes administered in a spirit of meekness and love, were the means, in the hand of God, of doing much good, as her husband and most intimate friends can testify from experience. She lived the life of the righteous and her death was like his. Her sufferings though protracted above five months were borne without a murmur, and in the end she calmly met and gloriously triumphed over the monster death. As the time of her departure drew near she expressed herself fully prepared for the change. Just as she was quitting the shores of time she gently whispered, "Jesus! Jesus!" and called her husband and one of her daughters. They drew near to recieve her last message, but speech had failed; she gave them a last lingering look which spoke what the tongue could not utter, and then sweetly fell asleep in the arms of her Savior. She has passed the cold flood, and now stands on the "glory shore"; and calls us as she did with her last breath on earth, the loved ones behind. May that call cheer them in temptation's darkest hour to struggle on and meet her in heaven. C. P. S.

MRS. KATE HOLBROOK, consort of Geo. Holbrook of Pensacola Florida, died in this city on the 8th inst., of the prevailing epidemic, aged 22 years, leaving a husband, infant and relatives, to mourn her loss. The deceased was a native of Philadelphia, and a member of the Ebenezar charge, Methodist Episcopal Church, at the time of her death.

She reached here the 11th inst., enroute to join her husband in Pensacola, but the steamer not being allowed to land any person there from New Orleans, on account of a rigid quarantine; she was detained here, and in forty-eight hours afterwards she was attacked with the fever, and died after an illness of about four days. She bore her affliction with Christian fortitude; her spiritual prospects during the early progress of the disease were somewhat beclouded, this however was temporary, the shadows of doubt soon gave way to the tranquil smile of assurance. She requested those round several times to sing; and tried to raise her own voice in a hymn of praise, when it was almost entirely inarticulate with the paralysis of death.—Just before the mind began to wander amid the shadows of delirium, which I was anticipating, I said to her, "My sister do you feel that you now have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ?" She replied promptly in the affirmative; again I asked: "Do you feel that all is well?" She replied yes; again I said: "Do you feel happy?" She replied slowly (from the difficulty of articulation) three times: "Happy! Happy! Happy!" Seeing that she articulated with such difficulty, I asked, if she felt that she was going to heaven, to place her hand in mine, which she immediately did. It was cold with the chill of death, in a few moments she was in that state of mental aberration, so common in this fever, which remained until death. Her loss has caused the clouds of sorrow to cast their shadows over a large circle of friends, and distil their damps upon many cheeks, but upon the falling spray of wounded affection is reflected the bow of hope.

"Unfading hope! when life's last embers burne,
When soul to soul, and dust to dust return,
Heaven to thy charge resigns the awful hour—
Oh! then thy kingdom comes, immortal power."

Yes, we point husband, parents and friends, to the soul-inspiring hope of a reunion with their beloved Kate, when the storms of life are quieted into the calm of their final repose, as the only consoling aspect in which to view such an event; such a hope will cheer the dark night of their bereavement and be an anchor in the tempests of affliction. May the Father of us all, kindly interpose to temper the severity of this dispensation to the bereaved; lighten the burden of their sorrow and soothe their lacerated spirits, is the prayer of the attending minister. R. J. HARP.

LARKIN C. EDMUNDSON, died of typhoid pneumonia Sept. 27, 1858, in the 29th year of his age. He was happily converted to God at the age of 18, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he continued faithful until his death; he has left a wife, to whom he was married April 29 1858, and many kind friends and relatives to deplore his death. He was an honest unassuming man, loved and respected most by those who knew him best. Many things can be said in his praise, but as the just die as well as the unjust, it has pleased God to take him to himself. The clock had just struck twelve when the death warrant came, yea, "the voice at midnight came" and he calmly responded to the call, and as the body sank into the cold arms of death the spirit winged its way to the paradise of God, to rest until the morning of the resurrection.

"When what we now deplore
Shall rise in full immortal prime
And bloom to fade no more."

MRS. AMANDA F. PETERSON, daughter of the late Capt. J. Shivers, and consort of Dr. F. W. Peterson, died in Greensboro' Alabama, Sept. 15 1858, aged 32 years. For about twelve years Mrs. Peterson had been an exemplary member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was universally esteemed as a consistent spiritual Christian. She was of good report, and her loss is deeply felt by the Church. W. SHAFARD.

LARKIN M. TUCKER, died at the residence of his parent's Ire J. and Priscella A. Tucker, near Helicon Alabama, Sept. 5th, aged eighteen years, two months and fourteen days. Notwithstanding his last illness was protracted for weeks and exceedingly excruciating, he endured the same with almost unparalleled calmness and fortitude. And when he learned he must die, that his disease, aneurism of aorta, was beyond medicinal control, he expressed a calm and perfect resignation to his fate and like the great Apostle, "was ready to be offered up." How inscrutable the ways of Providence in calling from time and the fond embraces of parents and friends, to an unknown eternity, a youth of promise and much beloved, just as he was about to enter the great arena of life! Yet we can confidently though sorrowfully surrender him into the hands of that God, "who doeth all things well," while we indelibly stamp his name and virtues on the tablet of memory and breath the soul-stirring desire of

Bright be the place of thy soul
No lovelier spirit than thine
E'er burst from its mortal control,
In the orbs of the blessed to shine.

Light be the turf of thy tomb
May its verdure like Emeralds be,
There should not be the shadow of gloom
In aught that reminds us of thee.

Young flowers and an evergreen tree,
May spring from the spot of thy rest
But not cypress nor yew, let us see,
For why should we mourn for the blest.

Helicon Sept. 25, 1858. AMERICUS.

W. B. HARPER, Jr., aged 9 years, ten months and 20 days, died on the 20th August, 1858, in the Parish of Rapides, Louisiana.

At the early age of five years, he seemed to be religiously impressed; and would not retire to bed without saying his prayers. He joined the Church, September 2d, 1857; was baptized last June, answering the questions as an adult; voluntarily partook of the elements of the broken body and shed-blood of the blessed Savior, lived in the use of the means of grace—fasting prayer etc. Little Buck, as he was called, loved his Testament; and frequently conversed with different members of the family about its teachings, with astonishing correctness. Was sick but a few days; about half an hour before he died, he said, I am going to die; closed his eyes and commenced praying, continued about 15 minutes—closing with these words, O Lord, our Heavenly Father, forgive my sins, Amen. O Lord, my blessed Savior, receive my soul in heaven; where I can forever praise thee, Amen, Amen. O Lord, our Heavenly Father, save us all in heaven, where we can praise Thee more perfectly; for Christ our Redeemer's sake, Amen, Amen. He was told, he would not die. And asked, if he did not love his papa? Yes, I love my Pa. Oh, my Savior! My Savior! Thus, without a struggle or groan, he fell asleep in the arms of that Savior who was his only hope, and on whom he called. The last words he ever uttered: Amen, Praise the Lord. W. D. STAYTON, P. C.

MISS MYRIAM M. NORMAN, in her nineteenth year, died on the 3d of September, at her father's residence, of typhoid fever, after twenty-six days of intense suffering. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She was talked with concerning religion, and her prospects in another world. She was always ready to answer—"I do not fear death; if it is the Lord's will it is mine. Nothing obstructs my path, between this and the heavenly land." She died in the full triumph of a glorious immortality. Thus beautiful and hallowed was her leave-taking of earth. Is it not far better. Cut off in the blossom of life—while her body moulders, her spirit still lives—lives, and becomes a flower, transplanted from earth's wilderness to heaven's garden of delight, there to bloom forever in unfading beauty—beside the pure river of the water of life—ever expanding in celestial loveliness, as it unfolds in God's presence and amid the sun-shine of His love. To her young friends, her early death speaks in tones of solemn admonition, bidding them "be also ready." To her bereaved parents, whose hearts have been so sorely smitten, none but a God, rich in mercies, can bring consolation. Many sympathizing hearts will sorrow with them, in this hour of bitter trial. Loving friends and numerous kindred, who knew her worth, will mourn—and miss this sweet young girl, so endeared to them by her gentleness, her affection, and her many virtues. Farewell, dear Myriam, though in a strange land, friends who loved thee bore thee to thy burial, and wept over thy grave. May we follow thee! and, may we, too, die the death of the righteous, and our last end be like thine. N.

MRS. PAMELA L. MASSEY, relict of Joshua Massey formerly of Queen Ann county, Maryland, mother of Mr. J. H. Massey of this city, and mother-in-law of the late Rev. A. F. Dobbs, formerly rector of the Trinity Church, New Orleans, was born March 22, 1795, of an ancient and highly respectable family in Kent county, Maryland, and died in La Grange, Tennessee, Sept. 10, 1858, in the faith and peace of the Gospel. Early widowed, she devoted herself, with remarkable energy, to the education of her children. Afterward, upon the death of her only daughter and son-in-law, of the epidemic of 1853, in New Orleans, leaving a large family of children, she commenced with the devotion of former years, the education of her orphaned grand-children. Death found her in the midst of these labors, but found her ready. Her life was devoted to others, and she rests with the Savior whose example she followed.

JOHN CORDILL Jr., son of Joseph and Mary J. Cordill, died in Tensas parish, Louisiana, August 21st 1858, aged 1 year 5 months and 16 days. This lovely child died

WILL EFFECTUALLY CURE

LIVER COMPLAINT, DYSPEPSIA, JAUNDICE,

Chronic or Nervous Debility, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases arising from a disordered Liver or Stomach.

Such as Constipation, Inward Piles, or Fullness or Blood the Head, Acidity on the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or webs before the Sight, Fever and Dull pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin, and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil and great Depression of Spirits.

The proprietor, in calling the attention of the public to this preparation, does so with a feeling of the utmost confidence in its virtues and action in the diseases for which it is recommended.

It is no new and untried article, but one that has stood the test of a ten years' trial before the American people, and its reputation and sale is unrivalled by any similar preperations extant. The testimony in its favor given by the most prominent and well-known Physicians and individuals in all parts of the country is immense, and a careful perusal of the Almanac, published annually by the proprietor, and to be had gratis of any of his Agents, cannot but satisfy the most skeptical that this remedy is really deserving the great celebrity it has obtained.

LETTER FROM VIENNA.

Capuchin Church—Tombs of the Great—Gardens and Imperial Palace—The Young Archduke.

VIENNA, May 24th, 1858.

MR. EDITOR: Since my last letter from this place, we have visited the Church of the Capuchin monks; interesting, only, as containing the remains of Royalty.

We were led down into the Vault by one of the Brothers, by the light of a torch we passed through these subterraneous chambers of the royal dead. They were inclosed in metal coffins; some of which are elaborately ornamented. The oldest of them begin with the Emperor Mathias, 1619. The most splendid, is that of Margaret of Spain, first wife of Leopold I., which is of pure silver. Those of Maria Theresa, her husband, Francis I., and that of her son, Joseph, are the most magnificent. For fifteen years after the death of her husband, it is said that Maria Theresa descended into this vault every Friday, to weep and pray beside his remains. This monument, which now contains the remains of both, is very large, costly, and splendidly adorned with allegorical figures and angels, with the crowns of each placed over their heads in regal majesty. The coffins are all handsomely arranged over a marble pavement, with their distinctive names and honors. Among them all, graved by the purest efforts of art, none appeared so interesting as the simple, unadorned one of the Duke of Reichstadt, son of Napoleon, with a raised cross upon the top, with these words—"Napoleonis Galliae Imperatoris Filius." Upon which no one can look without associating him with one of the greatest men of the age; whose destiny, though brilliant with mighty achievements, was nevertheless woven with dark shades of sadness, sorrow and disappointment, when the waves of the vast ocean sang his funeral dirge in mournful cadence, around Helena's Isle, as he passed away from the earth—to meet her, the lovely, accomplished Josephine, whom he had so cruelly divorced—and whose heart was martyred at his shrine of worship. He merited all the chastisement he suffered, for that open violation of the laws of God and man.

And this son, whose birth was hailed with triumph through France, to perpetuate his name and dynasty to succeeding generations, was cut off in the bloom of youth and promising manhood—without sight of that father from early childhood, or, the land which gave him birth—which he so much desired to see. He was represented as an amiable youth, and an object of the most devoted attachment of his grandfather, the Emperor of Austria.

This method of Kingly entombment, is vastly more secure from the ravages of time than any we have seen. The metallic coffins have scarcely changed, and do not crumble away like the marble of Westminster Abbey.

The Church of the St. Augustines is a small, but beautiful and chaste edifice, free from all gaudy tinselling; its chief ornament is the monument of the Archduchess Christiana of Saxe-Teschen, designed by Canova—one or the most exquisite works of art, of his composition, we have ever seen—in which his superior genius shines most transcendently. It consists of a pyramid of greyish marble, thirty feet high, placed against the wall of the Church; in the centre of which, is an opening into the tomb, approached by two broad steps. At its entrance stands three figures—two little girls of angelic beauty, with faces beaming with spiritual intelligence, are seen, bearing torches of light on each side of Virtue; whose form of dignity and grace, with a most heavenly expression of countenance, holds in her hands an urn with the ashes of the dead, to be deposited in the tomb. Behind these, stands Benevolence, supporting an old man, tottering with the infirmities of age, with a life-like expression of poverty in the decline of years—so perfect, that it speaks to the soul in a language of its own supplication, not to be mistaken. By his side is an orphan boy, with a downcast look, sad face, and clasped hands, which tells its own tale of woe.

On the opposite side is a recumbent lion, with a subdued expression; and leaning upon him, in a most graceful yet desponding attitude, stands Genius, moulded in beauty's form of symmetry and grace—transcendently lovely.

Above the tomb is the medallion figure of the Archduchess, sustained by another of Happiness. Opposite to that is Genius, on the wing, holding the palm of Victory.

This allegorical group of figures is so touching, so impressive, so full of meaning, that its lesson can be read at a glance, and treasured up in the storehouse of memory, to instruct and improve the heart—for the marble was made to breathe, with an eloquence more powerful than the language of the lips, and the pure white marble seemed to have "words that burned."

In another small, circular apartment, called the Chapel of Loretto, were seen extended around the walls upon a shelf, silver urns, containing the hearts of the royal dead; that of Maria Theresa, was in the centre, and mounted by a silver cross.

We were only permitted to look at these through a little circular glass, fixed in the wall. There were other rooms with distinguished monuments; but Canova's was the chief work. The nave of the Church was small; its organ, white, ornamented with gold, and no paintings or ornaments to detract from the group—which leaves upon the mind the impress of fadeless beauty never to be erased.

The palace of Schonbrunn, the Summer palace of the Emperor, is situated in the environs of Vienna, about two miles from the city—one of the most lovely spots of nature which the country affords. This elegant retreat is laid out in parks and gardens, in a style quite different from any hitherto seen. They compass many acres of ground, level and undulating, rising back from the palace; upon the august elevation, directly opposite the Imperial palace, is a temple with a colonade of pillars, called Gloriette, ornamented on each side by carved colossal statues of wood, with their coats of mail, or, the arms of the country. The prospect from this temple is magnificent, commanding a view of Vienna and the country around, with its romantic scenes of castles among the hills—ruins of the feudal ages; chateaus, villas, the rural dwellings of cottage life; ranges of mountains in the distance; relieving the back ground with the soft and delicate shades of a lovely landscape, of great variety.

The gardens are laid out in straight walks and long avenues from a central square, in grassy plots and flowers; with artificial ponds, goldfish, grottos, with groups of figures—statues adapted to this position—old Neptune figures conspicuously, trident in hand. Around the square, from which the avenues radiate—opening in arched vistas, with a beautiful perspective—the trees are clipped like a hedge, sixty feet high, surrounded by colossal statues of white granite—presenting a most peculiar aspect. We felt as though we were walking in nature's vast temple, walled in by its green foliage. The grass, beneath, was closely shaven, and the flowers, of rainbow hues, were exceedingly brilliant—planted in circle-plots, with distinct colors, like the different stars of the upper hemisphere. The long, arched avenues were interspersed with fountains and wood-nymphs; the cleanest gravel walks we ever trod. In another part of the grounds was a botanical garden and a menageric. On one side of the square was a dense green wood, with natural walks, lakes and cottages, with little boats to sail about the water, and fish to angle for..... On the side of a most lovely dell was a Roman ruin, so faithfully represented that we took it at first for reality—a most beautiful imitation, fitted to its romantic position in the wood, among its rocks and waterfalls, and so disposed as to make it appear in its natural position, detached from the straight lines and tall hedges which characterize these grounds. These walks are thronged with beauty and fashion, in their Summer drives to this cool and green retreat.

THE PALACE. This building is large and lofty, covering a large space of ground, with its paved court and gallery; but it has no picturesque beauty. It is a common country dwelling, lofty in height as it is, and in the most picturesque place that it is possible to imagine. We walked through its spacious halls; some of which are splendidly furnished—each with different shades of color. The Empress's boudoir was draped with blue damask and gold trimmings—the most beautiful of all. All the floors were inlaid with precious wood, in beautiful patterns, waxed, to shine like a mirror; no carpets upon any of the floors. Three or four rooms, called the Rose-rooms, from the magnificent landscapes of Salvator Rosa, which adorn their walls, glowing with rural life and romantic beauty. One room was ornamented with the embroidery of Maria Theresa, in small patterns covered with glass, set in the wall, with gilded frames from the floor to the ceiling, suited to the pattern of the paper, in different positions, as if made to fit the place—a most singular method of preservation. Although they are faded and divested of their rich coloring, yet the form and shade of the flowers are perfect, and tell of the Queen's industry in other days. This palace has historical associations, never to be lost, but to be handed down to posterity with increasing interest. For here, in one of the rooms of this mighty palace, was signed the treaty of Schonbrunn, in 1809; and Napoleon Bonaparte occupied a place in the same room and slept upon the same bed on which his son, the Duke of Reichstadt, died, at the interesting age of twenty-one; a wise Providence defeating the object so unrighteously designed, to accomplish the ambitious motives of the Emperor Napoleon.

While we were in the palace we saw the young Archduke, brother to the present Emperor of Austria, as he walked up the garden with an attendant—a small, common-looking boy, of blond complexion, about fifteen years old, with nothing striking in his appearance; but all the people bowed and paid him reverence as he passed, and he politely lifted his hat.

The present Empress is much admired for her beauty; the portraits of the Emperor and herself are hung up every where in public places. She is about twenty, with a sweet expression, what is called pretty, without any classical beauty of features. Her form is tall, and very graceful, which gives her an air of elegance. The Emperor has a severe expression—not prepossessing. The Empress appears to be a favorite with the people.

At Vienna we attended worship on the Sabbath, at the house of the English Ambassador; where Service is performed in the English language. The English government make this provision wherever they have interest in foreign countries. In Rome the Church is without the gates of the city. In Naples, in the house of the English Legation, where a regular price has to be given for a seat every Sabbath, to support the ministry.

What a contrast does our beautiful country, America, present, as it regards religious influences and privileges, to any other part of the world; with all its faults, it is a Pharos of light to other countries, and outshines them all in its rising position. It seems as though the angel of pure religion had taken its flight from the Old World, and passed over to the New. The star is in the West! And the banner of the Cross is unfurled by the breeze of heaven, and waves over its vast territory, from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, gathering under its graceful folds the sons and daughters of our happy land, to be lights to the rest of the world.

America, land of the blest! Its political and religious rights have been written with the blood of our forefathers, and anointed with the prayers of the faithful of succeeding generations. The more we see of foreign lands, and the oppressions of Kingly power, the more beautiful and lovely does Columbia appear. She holds a prominent position among the mighty nations of the earth, and will, we trust, forever—while time lasts—and the thrones of Kings and Emperors feel her sway.

LETTER FROM MOBILE.

Yellow Fever—Death of Rev. Mr. Tipton—Death of Rev. Dr. Mandeville—Rev. Mr. Weir, Sick.

OCTOBER 5th, 1858.

MR. EDITOR: We have yellow fever here, and I think it advisable to make some statements in the Advocate to relieve the anxieties of our friends at a distance. Little more than a month ago the disease first appeared in our midst—since which time, between seventy and eighty have fallen victims to its power. Fifty seven of these have died during the last two weeks. The sickness has been principally in the South-western part of the city. I have heard of but three deaths from fever, north of Dauphin St—except those who died in the hospitals. It is, however, spreading, and seems to be on the increase. The number of deaths, compared with the sick, is small—showing that the disease is more easily managed than usual. As a denomination, we have been remarkably exempt. I have heard of but few cases in our different charges. Brother Weir says, he has but one or two sick: which is remarkable, as his people live in the Southern part of the city. A great many of our people, however, are away. Of those, in my charge—(the Franklin St—) who were sick one Wm. B. Tipton, is dead. He died on Friday, the 1st inst., aged 35 years. He was a local preacher, and well and faithfully performed his duties. A few years ago he joined the Alabama Conference, and traveled two years, when he located. It was not his wish to leave the regular work of the ministry, but peculiar circumstances and influences, which he could not well control, caused him to do so. He was a man of excellent spirit, and sterling worth; modest, retiring and unobtrusive; yet ever ready to labor to the extent of his ability, for his Master's cause and kingdom. His end was not only peace but a perfect triumph. On the Sabbath preceding his death, at sunrise, he met the different classes of the State street Colored Church; at 11 o'clock he preached in Wesley chapel—it is said, with unusual unction and power; at three in the afternoon, he was again at State street Church, laboring with the negroes. He went home, with a burning fever. Prompt medical aid was immediately rendered, but it was of no avail. This work on earth was done, and God took him. Just before he died, a friend asked "are you ready?" "Ready," he exclaimed, "I have nothing to get ready. Christ has prepared all things for me." In the full possession of his mental powers, and without a cloud or doubt to disturb him, he left the earth for his far more glorious abode in heaven. As I looked upon him, while conducting his funeral services, calm and placid in death, and thought of the glory he was then realizing, I felt it was a privilege to point the disconsolate and bereaved to that Savior, who, not only comforts in the hour of distress but softens the dying bed, and sweetens the last hours of earthly existence with the prospect of a glorious and enduring life hereafter. Who does not consider it a privilege to die the death of the Christian?

A few hours after Brother Tipton's death, our Presbyterian brethren had to give up one of their ablest and most useful ministers. Dr. Henry Mandeville, Pastor of the Government street Church, died at 1 o'clock, Saturday morning, October 2d, of the prevailing epidemic, after a brief but very severe illness. While his death is a special bereavement to those to whom he ministered, it is a very great public loss, for there are but few ministers more zealous, devoted and able, than he was. He was very much beloved by his Church, and respected by all who knew him. In early life he had charge of a Congregation in New Jersey; afterwards, he served Churches in Geneva, Utica and Albany, in New York; every one of which felt and prospered under the influence of his piety, zeal and ability. For a number of years he was a professor in Hamilton College; during which time, he prepared and published a series of School books. Since 1854, he had been in this city, preaching with great power to a delighted congregation, and exerting a wide-spread influence for good. Not having passed through a yellow fever epidemic, he was unacclimated and of course exposed to the destroyer's power. The above facts, I gathered from some remarks made by the Rev. Mr. Michael, at the funeral of the deceased. He was 54 years of age. It is needless to say, he died with his harness on, and has gone to receive the righteous man's reward. Thus has passed away one of the most prominent citizens, and efficient ministers of Mobile. But long will the memory of his good deeds and active piety remain, to encourage the drooping and strengthen those who, like him, are endeavoring to call sinners to repentance. Who, of his brethren of the ministry, will be the first to follow him? God only knows. But, I trust that when our time shall come, we may feel, like the sainted Tipton, and the venerable and glorified Mandeville, that "Christ has prepared all things for us." The other pastors of the city, who are at home, are well, I believe.

After a protracted and very severe spell of bilious fever, which commenced on the 1st of August, I am again out; and able, to a limited extent, to perform my ministerial duties. Since my spell, my general health has greatly improved; and, I hope, my full strength will soon be restored. It is the opinion of many, that my bilious attack will in a measure exempt me from liability to yellow fever, or, if I should take it, will make it lighter.

Since the above was written, Rev. T. C. Weir has taken the fever. On Monday he went to Point Clear, to spend the night with a friend, and during the night was taken sick. This, Wednesday morning, he is doing well; and his friends indulge the hope that he will soon recover.

M. S. ANDREWS.

For the N. O. Christian Advocate.

LETTER FROM EAST TEXAS.

"Brier" after "Philo"—East Texas in a Fix—Galveston and New Orleans.

MR. EDITOR: In the New Orleans Christian Advocate, a writer from "Mount Airy, East Texas," calling himself, "Philo," writes "To the Preachers and Members of the East Texas Conference."

He takes for his text a general subject, I suppose, to give himself "room to air;" but, seems to have his eye upon what he calls "a focal point;" and says there is no suitable one in "East Texas;" and, in answer to the question, "What is the Conference to do, under these disadvantages?" concludes that New Orleans is the best chance.

Well, now, East Texas is in a fix! Can we go to New Orleans? All will not agree to that. Shall we go to Galveston? This don't suit every body. Shall we, literally, make a place in our interior? (for there is none made to hand). This will not receive universal consent.

Consult Geography, it only divides our thoughts. Ask the rivers, if they rise in the wrong place, and run the wrong way? or, do not run at all? The old ocean is all on the south of one little point of the East Texas Conference. Well, but railroads—some one will say. We shall all be dead before they can make any place convenient to all. And then, the "commercial business" of the world, is a perfect scatterment, only, that "Philo" says that "nine tenths of it goes to New Orleans;" and where does the other "tenth" go? Divided between "Jefferson, Shreveport, Magnolia, Sabine Pass and Galveston."

Then, where is the inducement to go to any other place than New Orleans, unless it be to New York? which gets a part of the "commercial business" of East Texas. Now, I suggest, that East Texas take that point into consideration. What do you say, "Philo?"

Now, Mr. Editor, I propose to think a little, for the benefit of those concerned. At the first session of the East Texas Conference, as there was great need of a Church-paper in Texas, and none had been established, the East Texas Conference took action; and commenced the project. One thing after another, towards its establishment, took place; and now, we have the magnificent "Texas Christian Advocate;" a credit alike to the State and the Church, and to all the Annual Conferences in the State. After a time the Texas Conference originated the "Soule University;" and the East joined in its patronage, etc. This was designed to be of universal benefit to all Texas.

Here is the second link, tying the Conferences together. After the General Conference of 1854, providing for a Depository of Books at Galveston, but leaving it discretionary with the Book-agents; they saw cause to decline. The matter was getting airier; and from "East Texas," there came a proposition or suggestion, and this small pebble rolled; and at the last session of the East Texas Conference, that body took the first Annual Conference action ever taken, in favor of a "Depository, at Galveston."

Since that action, some of the brethren have been writing against it, and some, writing for it. So here is the state of fix we are in.

But the Texas Advocate refused to publish a few articles in opposition; and to Nashville the brother goes, for redress. Others make it a source of great complaint. Well, some one wrote a reply to one of the Nashville articles, for the Nashville Advocate—but, from some cause, it was not published. Has he any right to complain?

All this was written over proper signatures; but now it comes from the New Orleans Advocate, over a fictitious name. Well, let it come; I am in for a share.

Now, I ask, why not let this third, or threefold, cord of interest unite all Texas in a matter that is so well calculated to do good, so long as time shall last?

Our position is not as favorable to Galveston, as is the Texas Conference; but a part, about one third, of the East Texas Conference, can go no where else so well as there; and now that East Texas Conference sustains the relation she does to the "Galveston Depository," with the assurance that she shall share in any and all the benefits of said Depository, in proportion to her sanction and contributions, what consideration will pay for the loss of these things, if she dissolves her connection with this matter, and attempts to set up for herself, or, go to New Orleans?

We never expect to do any thing against New Orleans; and, indeed, we would get books from that Depository, if most convenient. But New Orleans does not need our help; nor have we the prospect of ever being benefitted any further than the purchase of books from there.

I predict, that the day will come when East Texas Conference will see, and probably regret her error, if she declines further joint co-operation in the Galveston Depository. We have rights and prerogatives, if you will allow me to call them such, at Galveston, in Texas, which we cannot have in New Orleans.

What, if our position, geographically and as a Conference, deprive us of many advantages which other Conferences in Texas may enjoy? Our territory reaches within six miles of Galveston. Some of our most important work lies contiguous to that point. We have excellent laymen, capable to take charge of any part of the business that may be assigned them. The East Texas Conference can always have suitable men—ministers, in that region, attend promptly to any interest she may chose to have at that point.

We can only be tacked on to New Orleans, and if we take the back track in reference to Galveston, at our next session, we never will again be in any other situation than tacked on to Galveston, should we desire to be identified with it. But who would have any confidence in our stability, any where, after such vascillation? Think of that "Philo."

Well, perhaps this is enough from me at the present; and I will wait till "Philo" writes on "other subjects bearing upon the same point."

He is very liberal in admitting some important facts; and seems to write like a man who thinks for himself; with much candor and good temper. I presume he has been in your city not long since; and, may be, he is not writing for nothing. We would be glad, any how, to see all the arguments, within the range of reasonable possibility, on both sides of the question. As to myself, as I am not very often before the public in this way, should it happen that you publish this scribbling, I may be so encouraged as to follow "Philo" out again. You may put me down at Mount Cool, East Texas.

BRIER.

THE WASHINGTON CITY CHURCH—A NEW VOLUME OF SERMONS.

MR. EDITOR: In the last week's Richmond and Southern Christian Advocates I announced to the public that, in a short time, I would issue from the press a volume of sermons, by a number of our ministry; and that the proceeds arising from the sale of said volume, would be applied to the payment of a debt now due upon our Church, in this city. I write you, to request you to publish my card in your paper; and to request you, also, to direct the attention of the ministers to the work, and ask their co-operation in its sale. If I can get the aid and co-operation of our ministers, I shall succeed—we shall be able to sell copies enough to pay off the debt that is now due on our Church, and which is pressing and annoying us more than our brethren are aware of. I am sure, that if our brethren understood our true condition they would aid us, they would come readily to our assistance. Well, allow me to say, that we are really in need of help; indeed if the truth must be told, we cannot much longer sustain ourselves, without we get help from some quarter; we have signally failed in begging, and we now come to our brethern and offer them the worth of their money—we offer them a book, which in fact would be remarkably cheap at $2. per copy—we offer it to them at $1. 50 per copy. A book, that contains food, both for the mind and soul. It will also contain the portraits of all the ministers, whose sermons it contains, whose names are mentioned. I see from a notice just published, that 160,000 copies of Spurgeon's sermons have been sold in America. Now, why can we not sell as many copies of my book? The sermons in my book are superior to Spurgeon's, and a copy ought to be in the hands of every Methodist family in the South. Let all bear in mind that the publication of this work is no individual enterprise, for individual interest; but an enterprise of the Church, for the benefit of a weak branch of the Church. Now, my brother, will not you and your people, help your weaker brethren—brethren that are trying and struggling to help themselves? We are working, praying and striving to get out of debt; once out and then we can swim without further aid. Is there any way by which we may persuade the brethren within the bounds of the Louisiana Conference to subscribe for the thousand copies of my book? The book is costly, and we shall make but a very small profit on the sale of it. Indeed we shall have to sell a large number to make any thing. The first two thousand copies will cost $2. per volume. I have been under the necessity of soliciting subscribers and funds, in advance of the publication of the work. This, I was obliged to do, for the reason that it will take a considerable amount to bring the book out, and I have not the funds to spare to publish the book and send it out for sale in the ordinary way. I want to make sale of the work myself, and thereby avoid paying commissions. And in addition to this fact, we are pressed for funds to pay off the debt that is severely pressing us.

I earnestly beg you, to do all you can for us. We are anxious to support a Southern Methodist Church here and we are trying hard to do so: and we can do so, if we can only once get out of debt. I am sure our Southern brethren will assist us, as long as we are trying so hard to help ourselves.

Excuse my importunity, if you please: There is really a necessity for me to plead hard for our Church here.

PRESTON COOPER.

Sicily Island Camp-meeting—The Young Preacher—The Presiding Elder.

MR. EDITOR: I have just seen some items from the pen of Rev. J. G. Jones, in relation to the early history of Rev. Preston Cooper. My acquaintance commenced five years after Brother Jones's; but I shall never forget, while I remember any thing, my first interview with this noble Christian minister.

It was in the Autumn of 1832, on Sicily Island, Louisiana, at the first camp-meeting that I ever attended. I had been a member of the Church for about one year, but had not obtained religion. I had gone there, a stranger to God, to seek salvation; a stranger, also, to most of the people. Among the ministers present, was Preston Cooper, a young preacher.

Every thing was new and strange to me. I had been brought up wholly irreligious. The singing, praying and preaching, made a deep impression upon mind. I felt that I was a poor sinner, and was very sad. Whenever there was an invitation, I was among the first to go, and among the last to leave.

One morning, after the preaching, the prayer, and the dispersing of the congregation, I remained alone at the altar, weeping. O, the sorrows of my poor heart were great, while I pondered over my condition—a stranger among strangers—seeking, with a sad heart, something that I knew nothing of. In this miserable condition, the young minister, Preston Cooper, approached me, laid his hand upon my head, and began to exhort me to look to Jesus Christ as the great friend and savior of man. He talked and I prayed, and cried like a child; and, though I did not obtain religion, it was a great comfort to know that there was some one who cared for my soul. I should have remembered the young preacher, if I had seen him no more.

The camp-meeting closed, time rolled on. Finally, God, for Christ's sake, converted my soul. Soon, I found that there was a work for me to do. After a struggle of eighteen months I yielded to the conviction of my mind, and in the Autumn of 1834, I was received into the traveling connection, and appointed to Harrisonburg Circuit.

At the first Quarterly Meeting, I again met the young minister, who was now my Presiding Elder. How changed the condition of things! I now felt that I needed instruction in another department—and greatly bowed down under the obligation to preach the Gospel, and the responsibility it involves—Brother Cooper was ever ready to encourage my poor heart. He was then on a district that extended from the Mississippi River to the Texas line—embracing all north Louisiana.

It is with feelings of pleasure and gratitude, that I think of Brother Cooper.

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY, FLORENCE, ALABAMA

History—Facilities—Graduates—Revivals—Endowment.

MR. EDITOR: Less than four years ago we removed to this place, in compliance with the requisition of the Conferences patronizing Lagrange College. The local trustees refused to remove; and the Faculty had to sever their connection with the Board in order to preserve their allegiance to the Conference.

This subjected them to a painful trial, and to the severest animadversions. Hence, a storm arose, such as the present writer does not wish to witness again. Under these circumstances, the College was opened without buildings, apparatus, library, or other fixtures, essential to the success of an institution of learning.

Since then, we have seen completed, and are now occupying one of the handsomest and most convenient College-edifices in the South. We have an elegant chapel, fine lecture-rooms, magnificent society-halls, and good libraries.

We have sent out more than fifty graduates, who are already occupying positions of honor and usefulness. We have educated several young men for the ministry, who are already engaged in their noble calling; and discharging, with fidelity, the duties of itinerant ministers. We have been blessed with successive revivals, of great power; and whose influence is ever present, felt, and appreciated.

Almost without the assistance of an agent we have obtained in bonds, funds for the permanent endowment of the College, to the amount of twenty-five thousand dollars. The Tennessee Conference is seeking to endow the chair of sacred literature, with not less than twenty thousand dollars.

Our Session has just commenced, with more flattering prospects than any previous one. Our young men are, many of them, pious; and we have several preparing for the ministry.

The location is healthy, the society refined, the faculty efficient, the moral tone of the Institution good, hoarding cheap, and the fare excellent. In every respect, the Wesleyan University presents strong claims to public patronage.

CANINE INSTINCT.

We were informed by a reliable individual of a singular incident that occurred a few days ago at Trenton, a station on the Detroit and Toledo Railroad. A little girl about two years of age, the child of a brakesman living near the road, got upon the track, and was in the act of crawling across the timbers that span a cattle guard, when an express train appeared in sight, coming at full speed. The engineer saw the child, and whistled down the brakes, but the train was under such headway and so near, its destruction would have been certain, had not a little dog, a playmate of the child's, ran out, caught the child by its dress, and dragged it from the track in to the ditch, where it held it until the train passed.

NEW ORLEANS:

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1858.

FREE COMMUNION.

As a fruit of the great revival of the present year, the evidently truthful doctrine of the unrestricted inter-communion of all Christian denominations, is beginning to acquire greater force than ever. "The unity of the Spirit," and "the unity of the Faith," the only desirable and practicable bonds of union between the different branches of "the Holy Catholic Church," are beginning to be better understood. The prospect is, that warfare between the various Christian Churches, on their non-essential points of difference, will cease; and that in their respective folds and fields, they will heartily and lovingly labor together to promote the spread and power of the fundamental principles of "the faith, once delivered to the saints," in which they all agree. And what a delightful prospect! Would that we might live to see it realized! It would be, without exaggeration, a second reformation, and its past would be looked back upon as partly belonging to the dark ages. We have always contended that the warfare between the Churches was a sin against God, and an incalculably fruitful cause of the infidelity, wickedness and impenitence, so prevalent in the land.

The New York Observer has a judicious editorial on this subject, setting forth the prominent signs of the "good time coming." It says: "The 'Episcopal Recorder,' of Philadelphia, a paper that uniformly breathes the spirit of the Gospel of peace and love, in a very elaborate article, discusses the question, 'Does the Episcopal Church hold to close communion?' And answers it decidedly in the negative. With great seriousness, that Evangelical paper affirms:

"'To refuse to participate with our fellow-Christians in this highest act of a Christian's faith, is no slight offence against the religion, the name and the authority of our common Master. Nothing but necessity can justify it.'

"The 'Watchman and Reflector,' of Boston, a Baptist paper of high standing, and at present a warm supporter of close communion, speaks of 'the hue and cry raised against close communion all over the land;' and, although it deprecates the evident tendency toward the unity of the Church, it does not fear to present such facts as these:

"'Pedobaptists have announced and defended open communion sentiments. John Bunyan and Robert Hall, [illegible] break down the barriers between Baptists and [illegible], advocated, with great ingenuity and eloquence, the opinion that baptism is not pre-requisite to communion, but that all true Christians have a right to the Lord.'

"The 'Boston Recorder,' a Congregational paper of great ability, has been publishing a series of letters to Baptists, by the Rev. Dr. Hooker, of Vermont, advocating the inter-communion among Christians."

And, while the tendency of opinion is in the right direction here, we learn that young Spurgeon, in England, is doing a great and good work there, by advocating the largest Christian Charity and the fullest freedom of communion consistent with Christ's house.

In a sermon, on 'the Holy Spirit and the one Church,' on the text, "These be they who separate themselves; sensual, not having the Spirit," Spurgeon says, I think this bears rather hard on our friends, the strict communion Baptists. I should not like to say any thing hard against them, for they are about the best people in the world; but they really do separate themselves from the great body of Christ's people. The Spirit of the living God will not let them do this really—but they do it professedly. They separate themselves from the great Universal Church. They say they will not commune with it; and if any one comes to their table who has not been baptized, they turn him away. They "separate," certainly. I do not believe it is wilful schism that makes them thus act; but, at the same time, I think the old man within has some hand in it.

"Oh, how my heart loves the doctrine of the one Church. The nearer I get to my Master, in prayer and communion, the closer am I knit to all his disciples. The more I see of my own errors and failings, the more ready am I to deal gently with them that I believe to be erring. The pulse of Christ's body is communion; and woe to the Church that seeks to cure the ills of Christ's body by stopping the pulse. I think it sin to refuse to commune with any one who is a member of the Church of our Lord Jesus Christ. I desire, this morning, to preach the unity of Christ's Church."

WASHINGTON CHURCH.—REV. A. R. WINFIELD.

Wm. T. Sampson, Esq., the indomitable friend of our new Church in Washington city—the originator of "the great picture" of the Bishops and General Conference—is getting up a volume of Sermons—advertised in another column—from our most distinguished preachers, the proceeds of which, are to be devoted to the same purpose. We copy the following from his letter to the Southern Advocate: We have much to discourage us here, of which our sympathising brethren know nothing. Some of our brethren in the ministry come to this city and give us the go-by altogether, forgetting that there is a Southern Methodist Church in Washington city, or, through choice, they seek out the Northern brethren and worship with them—fill their pulpits, while we are neglected and unnoticed for. Such was not the course, I am happy to say, that the noble, the pious and the eloquent, A. R. Winfield, of the Washita Conference, pursued, when he visited this city. He sought out our Church, made himself known to our pastor, and preached for us four or five times, to the great satisfaction of our people. All were delighted with Brother Winfield. Brethren who come to this city from the South, and overlook us—go and worship with other Churches—are, perhaps, not aware how much they damage our cause and our Church, in this latitude.

NEW ORLEANS CITY MISSION.

The Louisiana Conference at its last session appointed a Missionary to the city of New Orleans. The object of this enterprize was to bring under gospel influence the multitude of the inhabitants who, from indifference or remoteness of residence, were without the privilege of public worship, or other means of grace.

It was presumed that this Mission would find favor with the Church, and that hosts of friends would rise up to its support. Hence there was no Missionary appropriation made, but it was sent forth an unballasted bark to float upon the favor of Christian sympathy, wafted by fair and pleasant gales to a safe port, or tossed, (perhaps wrecked) by a storm of adversity.

The necessity of a more extended system of Missionary effort becomes more apparent as we draw nearer to it. Our stand point is a practical one, our arguments are facts. The religious destitution of a large portion of our city, during the prevailing epidemic, is a loud appeal to heaven for more laborers in the harvest. Will the Church consider her duty, and respond to the call?

We assume that the Methodist Church is emphatically Missionary. Organized to spread scriptural holiness throughout the land, she has labored for more than a century to effect this great object. Her policy and her practice are Missionary. Other Churches have labored nobly in the cause of foreign Missions. She, not neglecting these, has yet labored more than all others in the especial work of home Missions.

The voice of the Methodist Preacher is heard almost simultaneously with the first woodsman's axe, as he begins his clearing on our frontier. He is the first to preach the gospel to the hardy settlers of our western wilderness, organizing classes and laying the foundation of flourishing Churches of after-times. But for him hundreds would have lived and died without hearing a gospel sermon. The untold privations and sufferings of these gospel pioneers are not surpassed by any who go to foreign climes.

The regular "Circuit Preacher" is a Missionary. The preacher preaches wherever he can get a congregation, and organizes Churches wherever practicable. Thence new and Missionary appointments are continually being made, which, being afterward put on the "regular plan," in their turn become circuits, and make new Conferences necessary. There are very few places in all the great South and West, in which the gospel was not first preached by a Methodist Missionary.

It is not only expedient, but positively essential to our existence, that we retain this primitive feature of our organization, and bring it into operation every where.

New Orleans contains a most interesting field for home operation, and the time has now fully come for us to occupy it. In fact we have greatly neglected this work, and rendered ourselves culpable. The progress of our city is steadily going on. Already we have annexed Lafayette city, and now reach out to take in Jefferson city. The convents but a little while ago, far down below the city, is now in its lower edge—gradually the woods in the rear of our city recede at our approach, and handsome cottages, and a permanent population are found where five years ago the hunter found plenty of game.

In 1850, the population of New Orleans numbered 116,375. Lafayette, 14,190, making a total of 130,565.

In 1852, it was 145,449, an increase of 14,884. Calculating the increase of population for last five years by that of the three previous years, and we have in 1858, a population of 170,254. An article recently quoted in the Advocate makes it 225,000. This we suppose includes the Suburbs.

There is not a single Protestant Church, so far as we know, in the whole length of the four districts of the city, back of Dauphin or Barrone streets, except the German.—And yet it is a section of the city thickly populated.

Whatever progress has been made in the Churches already established, one thing is true, we have made no persistent effort in the cause of home evangelization for many years. A season like this, when sickening and death stalk openly among us, shows the great religious necessities of our people. Chas. J. Halbero.

A REVIVAL IN ENGLAND.

There are some signs of a revival of religion in Britain. The American Revival of 1858, is destined to exert an influence for good upon the British Churches. Mid-day meetings for prayer are springing up in various parts of the kingdom. In Liverpool, these meetings have been commenced in Hacken's Hall, close to the Exchange, every Tuesday and Friday, from half-past twelve till half-past one—a time thought most suitable for merchant's clerks and others to attend. The result has been greater thus far than its promoters expected. The attendance has never been less than eighty; the average being one hundred and twenty. A deep, earnest prayerful spirit has pervaded the meetings; great searching of heart, and humiliation on account of local transgressions have been felt and expressed. Those who attend have, at the close, been reluctant to depart, feeling it good to be there. In addition to these meetings, a third has been opened on Thursday evenings. The attendance has been encouraging; and next month the number of mid-day meetings will be increased.

GREENSBOROUGH HIGH SCHOOL.

We have heretofore forgotton to call attention, as we had intended, to this institution.—Rev. Dr. Mears, the Principal, is an Instructor of first-rate acquirements and long experience, in Georgia and in Alabama. We know whereof we affirm. Boys can be fitted for admission into the Southern University, at the same place, Greensboro, Alabama; or finish a first-rate academical education in the High School—embracing the Classics, Mathematics, French and English.

AN INCIDENT OF THE EPIDEMIC.

A Touching case was presented yesterday to the consideration and charity of one of the good Samaritans who now take care of the sick, relieve the destitute, and feed the starving.—A boy was discovered in the morning lying in the grass of Claiborne street, evidently bright and intelligent, but sick. A man who has the feelings of kindness strongly developed went to him, shook him by the shoulder, and asked him what he was doing there. "Waiting for God to come for me," said he. "What do you mean?" said the gentleman, touched by the pathetic tone of the answer, and the condition of the boy, in whose eye and flushed face he saw the evidences of the fever. "God sent for mother, and father, and little brother," said he, "and took them away to his home, up in the sky; and mother told me, when she was sick, that God would take care of me. I have no home, nobody to give me anything; and so I came out here, and have been looking so long up in the sky for God to come and take care of me, as mother said he would. He will come, won't he? Mother never told me a lie." "Yes, my lad," said the man, overcome with emotion; "he has sent me to take care of you." You should have seen his eyes flash, and the smile of triumph break over his face, as he said, "Mother never told me a lie, sir; but you've been so long on the way." What a lesson of trust, and how this incident shows the effect of never deceiving children with idle tales! As the poor mother expected, when she told her son "God would take care of him," he did, by touching the heart of this benevolent man with compassion and love to the little stranger.

[New Orleans Delta.

THE GREAT REVIVAL STILL GOING ON.

The New York Observer has an account of the Anniversary of the first prayer-meeting, in the old North Dutch Church, New York, September 23, 1857, which was the commencement of the wonderful daily-prayer-meeting-revival which has spread over the country, and which has not yet subsided. The meeting on 23d September last, was crowded. Many denominations were represented, and many sections of the Union. The meeting was held again next day, and is to be kept up, it seems, for another year. At the opening of this meeting, a large number of requests were offered, not less than thirty or forty in number; so many that they could not all be read entire. They were read in four or five different parcels, at different times and stages of the meeting.—They came from London, from Paris, from Geneva, from every quarter of the Old World, as well as from every state in this great Republic. They bear the most unmistakable marks of the anguish and agony of desire for unconverted friends, which only converted friends would feel. There all the relations of life are represented; asking prayer for brothers, sisters, husbands, wives, fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, acquaintance, friends, churches, parishes, prayer-meetings, ministers. Among the interesting incidents of the morning, was the reception of a note from the Mayor's office, enclosing two requests for prayer, which had been forwarded to him from abroad, from persons who evidently did not know any other channel through which to send to the prayer-meeting.

In many other places beside New York the good work is going. Let christians in all parts of the country, wherever practicable, take hold and have such meetings as the circumstances will allow; and this winter may be more blessed than the last one.

"GENEALOGICAL BIBLE."

Mr. Editor: The Financial Secretary is a most busy agent of the Church; a famous man for constitutions and financial expedients. Among other births of his prolific brain, we have the "Genealogical Bible." The Financial Secretary has, and ought to have, the merit of originating this expedient for advancing the publishing interest of Southern Methodism; but as all inventions are susceptible of improvement upon the original model, it may be the Secretary will allow an inquiry and a suggestion or two.

The Secretary says, that those who subscribe a hundred dollars towards Conference Depositories, are to have, among other privileges, a "Genealogical Bible;" and, that said Bible is to be the property of the descendants and heirs of the owner. Truly, this is a privilege for which the owners of the "Genealogical," cannot be too grateful.

But here, a grave difficulty arises. Which of the heirs? Does the law of primogeniture govern the case? Will the female descendants inherit equally with the males? Or, will the Salic law of France, which excludes females from the throne, be made to bear upon the inheritors of this Genealogical treasure? Do let us know, and relieve the public of its suspense. Remember, this is an age of woman's rights, and much may be involved in a prompt and satisfactory answer.

Now for our modest suggestions. Would it not enhance the value of the "Genealogical," and make it a much more interesting memorial to our people, if its paper were made out of the worn-out linen of the itinerant ministry? Who would not prize such a book? Is it not a suggestion worthy the pondering of the financial, not to say Methodistic mind of the Secretary?

Again, a word about the binding—"the best Turkey Morocco"—this, if not Heathenish, has at least a strong Mahommodan smack. Ought not the "Genealogical" to be bound with leather, made from the hides of horses long used in the itinerant service? Would it not enhance the interest of the book, and, as a species of historical reminiscence and memorial of the past, be invaluable?

By the way, I would suggest that no horse merely employed in local service, should be admissible. The hide should be from a horse that has seen at least ten years of itinerant service—and those from the frontier should be preferred.

THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT'S INDIAN POLICY.

The conflict between the philosophers, such as Lord Stanley, in conjunction with the "Old Indian School," on the one hand, and the upholders of a Christian policy on the other, as to the course to be pursued in Indian, is gradually approaching a crisis. The government, it appears, have decided, or are about to do so, to withdraw all educational grants in aid of Protestant mission schools—that is the express principle and intention of the regulation—from all schools in which the Bible is read. Even if such schools were supported by Christian lay gentlemen, the same rule would be enforced. The effect of this will be to deprive the Methodist mission schools, in the province of Mysore alone, of aid to the amount of £1000 per annum; which has been granted only in consideration of proportionate subscriptions raised, or money allowed in connection with the Society, and of work, in the way of general education, efficiently performed. The most distinguished among Indian captains and statesmen of recent years, have been and still are, thoroughly opposed to the policy to which the present government are thus showing their determination to return.

The memory of the good and noble Sir Henry Lawrence, in reference to whose ripening character in his latest days, a beautiful account has recently appeared in the papers from the pen of Col. Herbert Edwards; the authority and character of his yet greater, though not nobler brother, Sir John himself, undoubtedly the savior of India, and of such men, his worthy coadjutors, as Mr. Montgomery and Col. Edwards; the influence of several such "Old Indians" as Sir H. Rawlinson; the power of the great Quarterlies, and the force of such leaders among the daily press as the Times and the Daily News; and the combined, resolute, deeply convinced determination of all branches of the Christian Church and public, from such Episcopalians as the Bishop of Oxford to such dissidents as President Eckett, of the "United Methodist Free Churches," from these who may be represented by Mr. Gladstone, to those whose views agree with those of Mr. Mall, M. P., and editor of the Nonconformist, not to endure the longer continuances of the traditionary policy; all these together form such a phalanx of resistance to the uttermost against the course on which, in what looks like perfect infatuation, the present advisers of her majesty have entered, that we cannot but anticipate a tremendous conflict, an agitation and opposition such as have seldom been known, if the ministry persevere.

PERILS OF BALLOONING.

The Previaene Journal has compiled quite a list of fatalities, and adds that it does not know of one distinguished æronaut that has not met with a violent death by means of a balloon:

Among the first who commenced these voyages were M. Pilatre and M. Romain, of France. They made an ascent from Boulogne, June 15, 1785, with a Montgolfier balloon, a fire being kindled underneath, and the balloon ascending by means of rarefied air. At an amazing height, the baloon took fire, burned the cords by which the car was suspended, and the unhappy occupants were precipitated to the earth, dashing them to pieces in a manner too shocking to mention.

M. Zambeccarri, accompanied by a friend, made an ascent from the same place, September 2, 1812. On his descent, the balloon became entangled in the branches of a high tree, and ere it could be disengaged, caught fire.—The æronauts leaped out. Zambeccarri was killed on the spot, and Bonoga survived but a short time.

About the same time a mechanician, named Bittorf, ascended from Manheim. At a considerable height, he perceived too late that his vehicle was damaged. He opened the valve, descended with great velocity, and was dashed in pieces against a house.

Madame Blanchard ascended from Tivoli, July 8,1819, during the progress of a fete there. At the height of four hundred feet, her balloon caught fire. She was precipated upon the pavement and instantly killed.

Mr. Harris, a very experienced aeronaut, was killed May 24, 1824. He went from City road, London. At the height of two miles, he commenced to descend very rapidly, was precipated to the earth, and dashed to pieces.

A Mr. Green ascended Cardiff, July 11, 1849. His body was found some time after, on the Flat House shoals, in the centre of Bristol Channel.

Mr. Arban, a celebrated French aeronaut, ascended from Barcelona, in September, 1848.—Nothing was heard of him till the middle of November, when his body was found near Rosas.

Lieut. Gale ascended from the Hippodreme of Vincennes, on Sunday, September 8th, 1858. Some days subsequently, the body was found in a clump of ferns his limbs broken and mutilated, the face completely eaten away by dogs and other wild animals. He had previously met with several narrow escapes.

James Goulstone made an ascent in the evening from the Bellevue Gardens, June 2d, 1852. The balloon was a new one, forty feet high, thirty-three feet in diameter, holding twenty-three thousand cubic feet of gas. It being cloudy at the time, the car was lost to view in two minutes. He fell from his vehicle in attempting to descend, at the town of Lees; a considerable quantity of blood and brains, spattered over a wall, marked the spot where he struck the earth.

Mr. Knight ascended from Bombay, December 14th, 1853, in the presence of a large concourse of natives, amongst whom was the Rajah of Dar, who promised the aronaut two hundred rupees if he went up and came down again, of which the Rajah seemed to entertain great doubts. The balloon traveled straight out to sea, and Mr. Knight has not since been heard from.

In September, 1851, M. Merle and a companion were carried off by a balloon that broke from its moorings. They ascended to such a height that Merle was frozen to death, and the other descended in the greatest peril.

Mr. Thimothy Winchester made an ascent from Norfolk, Ohio, in August, 1856, starting in good spirits, and amid the cheers of a large concourse of people; since which time he has not been heard from. He may have gone on an excursion to the North Star, as the last last seen of him he was passing rapidly over Lake Erie.

ROMISH PUBLICATIONS GOING DOWN.

In England and Ireland, the literary organs of Popery, from the review to the newspaper, are going down; and the cry is raised for more readers and more funds. The Church of Rome has never looked kindly upon the exercise of the intellect, or encouraged appeals, even in her own behalf, to the understanding; they are foreign to her nature and habits; and therefore, while money has ever been forthcoming for the material agencies by which to perpetuate and extend her dominion, her intellectual instrumentalities have always been feebly supported.

Romanism can build a sumptuous cathedral easier than she can support a printing press—organize a crusade with less labor than it would cost to issue a few volumes. Hence the anomaly, with which it is impossible not to be struck, of Popish cathedrals and nunneries springing up in all the large towns in that country, while the noted Tablet of the Popish Church is compelled to go a-begging.

This is finely illustrative of the genius and working of the Papal Church. She has no trust in the invisible and intellectual. Her hopes rest on the visible, the sensuous and the material. Hence, wherever she has reigned, edifices and processions, statues and paintings, have been as plentiful as books have been scarce. And now she reaps the fruits of her past policy. In a literary age, she is compelled to put on a semblance of literary zeal; but in vain she appeals to a taste among her adherents which does not exist, which, indeed, she has long and studiously repressed.

WESLEYAN LITERATURE.

An english correspondent of the Northwestern Advocate says that the sales of the Wesleyan monthly periodicals have been in excess of the previous year. Each month 89,250 copies of these serials have been issued; while of Hymnbooks, more than 200,000 have been sold, and a million and a half of tracts. The new Life of Adam Clarke, by Dr. J. W. Etheridge, has been quite a success, from 6000 to 7000 copies having already gone into the market. The weekly Watchman and the London Review, although not under the supervision of the Book Room, are nevertheless Wesleyan periodicals. The Watchman, conducted by J. C. Rigg, Esq., is to the Wesleyan body what the Freeman is to the Baptists, the Patriot, Banner, and Standard to the Independents, the Witness and Guardian to the free Church of Scotland, and the Scottish Press to the United Presbyterians. According to this writer, the London Review is still advancing in its influence upon the best minds of the land, and has already taken a high position among the English Quarterlies.

MONTENEGRIN PRIESTS.

A Letter from Ragusa contains the following curious account of the Montenegrin priesthood, in which it appears that a facility of cutting off heads, and a pugnacious disposition, supply the absence of theological instruction and the practice of Christian virtues: "Religion with the Montenegrins is only a name and a matter of mere form. The priesthood is there transmitted as a family inheritance. I have been informed by the two Bishops of Ragusa and Cattaro that several of the Popes are not able to write. As a set-off to this defect, they are excellent soldiers, and fight like liens.—Their character obliges them to expose themselves to danger, the same as rank would in in any other country. I have seen two young Popes of only twenty years of age, one of whom had cut off nineteen heads in different battles. An idea may be formed of the relative importance of the preponderating influence of the priesthood in this country from the following statistic:—The diocese of Ragusa, which possesses a less number of inhabitants than many parishes in Paris, has one bishop, one chapter of the Cathedral Church, two Collegiate Churches, five deaneries, forty-four parishes, twenty-five chapels, and eighteen convents. There are 212 priests and lay pupils."

DOCTORS DISAGREEING.

Infant regeneration is the subject of considerable discussion in the Nashville and Memphis Advocates. Mercein's theory—that infants being in a state of innocence, through the atonement, are also, by consequence, in a state of purity—is the text. Rev. C. D. Elliott, Dr. Hanner and Dr. Boswell, affirm—countenanced by the editor of the Memphis Advocate. The editor of the Nashville Advocate, and Dr. McFernin, deny.

It is an old question. The theory of Mercein has been taught by some Methodist preachers "time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." But it has never received the sanction of our Church, nor of any of our standard writers. Persons, with no more common sense than we have, are unable to see how the doctrine now again asserted, does not effectually sap the foundations of the doctrine of human depravity. But, having become rusty, we have concluded to read "Fletcher's Appeal to Matter of Fact and Common Sense," over again.

BISHOPS' COLLECTION.

The amount apportioned to the Louisiana Conference, for the support of our Superintendents, is the sum of $250. If our preachers, will collect one per cent, upon their total allowance, it will be amply sufficient to meet this claim—which we are sorry is no larger.

DEATH OF DR. WARD.

We are grieved to learn of the death of Dr. Charles A. Ward, of Galveston, Texas, by yellow fever. He was the son-in-law of our friend and brother, Rev. Dr. J. Boring, of Macon, Georgia; having married his eldest daughter. He settled in Galveston early in the present year, and by his demeanor, as a high toned and courteous gentleman, and his skill as a physician, was in the enjoyment of a fine practice. He and his amiable and now bereaved wife lived in the family of the editor of this paper until he left for New Orleans. Dr. Ward was a sincere and devoted Christian, letting his light shine even amid the strangers of his new home. Of his preparation for this solemn change we have not the slightest doubt. Farewell, dear friend, until the happy day of final re-union in Heaven. Dr. Ward was brought up in Columbus, Georgia, where he has numerous relations and friends. His last words were, "all is bright, very bright."

THE YELLOW FEVER.

Three Hundred and ninety deaths from this disease for the week ending Sunday morning last; ten more than the week before. This is a falling off from the figures of some weeks past, but only, we judge, in consequence of the smaller number of unacclimated persons in the city, as the fever is now more malignant and dangerous than theretofore. In spite of all that can be said, unacclimated persons are pouring into the city, and thus keeping up the epidemic—foreign immigrants, persons having business, and young men from the North seeking business.

TO THE MEMBERS OF ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren; Please bear in mind, the resolution of the last Conference, to raise $30,000 this year, for the cause of Missions. How shall we do it? Easily and certainly, by observing the three following rules—First, Do not delay another moment, but take up the collection at the earliest opportunity; Secondly, Take up the collection, at every appointment; Thirdly, Solicit the aid of every man. Do this, and failure to meet the demand of the resolution is impossible. E. J. Hamill, Treasurer.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE FIRST NAPOLEON.

Arrangements have been made with publishing firms in London, for bringing out a translation of the "Correspondence of Napoleon I," of which the French Government has commenced the publication at the national expense. This correspondence will occupy a great many huge volumes. A correspondent of the Literary Gazette says: "I have been afforded an opportunity of examining many of the letters of Napoleon which are to figure in the collection; and I assure you that the commission which is charged with the duty of saying what shall and what shall not be published, have an arduous task to perform. For of all the "cramped pieces of penmanship" that were ever seen, his are the most cramped and unintelligible. The manner in which letters are formed, would frighten a writing-master into fits, and the lines never run straight, whilst not unfrequently they came into collision. And what is singular, is that a great many of the words are grossly misspelt, and that others are only half written. The man who conquered more kingdoms than Alexander knew not orthography.

Shooting a Minister.—We learn that the Rev. P. E. Green, Methodist preacher in charge of Warren County Circuit, was shot at Montalbon, on yesterday morning, by a man named Fisher. The wound is supposed to be mortal. All we could hear of the cause of the shooting was, that Fisher's wife had joined the Church lately, and Fisher meeting Mr. Green, abused him terribly, and finally pulled out a pistol and shot him. We hope the miscreant will be apprehended and meet his just deserts. [Vicksburg Whig:

REV. E. D. PITTS.

We learn from the Auburn Gazette, that Rev. E. D. Pitts, formerly professor of Mathematics in Mansfield Female College, Louisiana, has been chosen President of Auburn Female College, Auburn, Alabama. Mr. Pitts will, no doubt, give high satisfaction to his new patrons. His standing, as one of the Faculty of Mansfield, was highly creditable. We wish him success; and take this occasion to recommend him most heartily to our old friends about Auburn.

DEATH OF THE OLD CHINESE CIVILIZATION.

The Chinese treaty with Britain (and the United States) provides, that Christianity, whether Protestant or Roman Catholic, is to be tolerated throughout the Empire. British (and American) subjects are allowed, to travel for trade or pleasure, to all parts of the interior. Ministers, from both countries, are allowed to permanently to reside at Pekin. The old Chinese civilization, which has been stereotyped for thousands of years, is at length to be broken up. There is really no calculating all the bearings and influences of unrestrained intercourse with China, of the United States, Great Britain, France and Russia, as conceded by the recent treaties.

The Burning of the Austria, with the loss of over five hundred souls, is another of those shocks to the civilized world, so frequently occurring in water travel. Until some conductors of railroads and captains of vessels are hanged, there will be no diminution of these things. The strongest argument for capital punishment obtains in their cases. If we hang a man for one murder, what is to be done with him who murders hundreds?

"Obituaries.—The Watchman and Reflector of Boston says:—"A subscriber writes, under a recent date, 'Your paper suits me to a charm, except those long obituary notices which are hardly ever of any interest to the general reader. I wish you could manage to make them shorter.'"

FIRST THINGS.—The Boston Transcript, in a "Chapter on First Things," gives the following: "The first Methodist meeting-house built in New England was erected in Stratfield parish, town of Stratford, now Trumbull, New Haven county, Connecticut, in September, 1780, and was called 'Lee's Chapel,' from Rev. Jesse Lee, the apostle of New England Methodism. The next, was in Lyan, Massachusetts, 1791, a few months after Mr. Wesley's death. It was begun June 14, raised on the 21st, and dedicated on the 16th—the frescoing, carpeting, cushioning, and the putting in of gas and other dainty 'fixings' being of course omitted. The first annual conference of the Methodists in New England was held in this house, by Bishop Asbury, August 1, 1792, the precursor of a great number on the same spot. The first Methodist Conference in America was held at Philadelphia in 1758. It consisted of ten preachers."

Literature, Education and Art.

GRANT WHITE, "Shakespeare's Scholar," is out with four volumes of his edition of Shakespeare's works. Said to be valuable.

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW is about to issue another volume of Poetry.

THE FINE STATUE OF JAMES OTIS, which was ordered by the Trustees of Mount Auburn Cemetery, has been received at Boston.

FRENCH PAPER IN KANSAS.—A weekly paper, in the French language, called L'Estafette du Kansas, has been started at Leavenworth City.

ONE OF THE MOST HERCULEAN TASKS, in the way of manlabor, is that prepared for the first volume of Allibone's Dictionary of Authors. The volume itself will contain the bulk of fifteen and a half volumes such as Putnam's Irving; twenty-one thousand subjects are chronicled in the index; and between sixteen and seventeen thousand authors are described.

THE SCULPTOR has finished his model of the statue of Henry Clay, ordered by the Clay Monumental Association of New Orleans. The likeness is said to be perfect. The model goes from Florence to Munich, where it will be cast in bronze, and the inauguration will probably take place in New Orleans on the anniversary of Mr. Clay's birthday in 1860.

A SILENT PRINTING OFFICE.—In the town of Zwiefalten, Wartemburg, there has been lately opened a new printing establishment, by M. Theodoro Helgernrd. All the compositors and pressmen are deaf and dumb, to the number of one hundred and sixty; eleven of the former are women.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE IN VIRGINIA.—The Rev. Wm. S. Plumer, of Pa., a few days since delivered an address at the opening of a Female Seminary at Wheeling. The following is an extract:

Pronounciation, he said, might be included in a general remark about reading—but it deserved especial mention. Virginia was settled when Dr. Johnson gave us Orthography, and Walker Orthoepy. Virginia had abided by these standards and in his opinion she had done well. It was said, that were a well educated Virginian to speak in the British Parliament, after he got through, every member would claim that he was from his particular district. The English language is found in greater purity in Virginia than in any other part of the continent.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.—The story that the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" is to leave the Atlantic Monthly, is without foundation. He will merely change his title, not his place. "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," is to be published in November in a volume, with Illustrations by Hoppen.

BISHOP DOANE, of New Jersey, has forbidden Rev. Richard A. Carden, of Philadelphia, to officiate in the diocese of Philadelphia, because during a recent visit to Cape May he invited a Methodist clergyman to assist him in the administration of the sacrament.

VIRGINIA DARE.—Miss Landor's statuette of Virginia Dare, arrived in ship Malabar with Crawford's statue of James Otis. This beautiful work of art, which is in Italian marble of rare delicacy in color and texture, is about three feet and a half high, and represents Virginia Dare, the first white person born on the American continent, as she looked when standing on the shores of the great lakes, with the surging sound of the waves in her ears, and vague memories of her childhood's far-off home in her heart. She stands on the sandy beach, her fine head erect, and her folded hands resting upon the fishing net, which is gracefully drawn around her for drapery. Indian ornaments are on her arms and neck, and a beach-bird, the pet and companion of the young Indian maidens, is by her side. This statue en petite is full of originality and sentiment, and we hope ere long to see it reproduced the size of life.

Personal.

BISHOP MCILVAINE, was to have spent the month of September in Switzerland.

REV. DR. MANDEVILLE, of the Government street Presbyterian Church, Mobile, died recently of yellow fever.

REV. W. B. TURLEY, of the Methodist Church, Mobile, died recently of yellow fever.

BISHOP JANES is recovering from his gun-shot wound.

REV. H. M. DENISON, of St. Peter's Church, Charleston, a relative of Assistant Bishop Bowmen of Pennsylvania, and son-in-law of Ex-President Tyler, died recently of yellow fever.

THIEVES are about, and are preparing for the opening of the business season.

ACCIDENTALLY DROWNED.—Samuel Sampson, a native of New York State, aged 25 years, employed as a deck hand on the steamer Princess, was accidently drowned by falling out of the yawl while launching a plank. He was brought from the water in about ten minutes, but efforts to revive him were unsuccessful.

MRS. ANN MARIA LOWE, of Livingston Mississippi, is said to be a grand-neice of Oliver Cromwell. Her maiden name was Crowell, and she came from North Carolina to Madison county with her late husband. Her father, John Crowell, was the son of John Crowell or Cromwell, the brother of Oliver Cromwell.

REV. FRANCIS BURNS, Bishop elect of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Africa, arrived at Baltimore in the ship Mary Carolina Stevens. The Bishop has come out to receive ordination.

EX-PRESIDENT FILLMORE and seventeen governors of States are expected to visit Louisville during the fair.

JOHNSON S. HOOPER, the "Simon Suggs," of funny memory, has retired from the editorship of the Montgomery, Alabama, Mail.

COL. JOSEPH R. CHAN, a native of Georgia, but for a number of years a prominent citizen of Mississippi, and author of "Leisure Labors" and other essays, died in Columbus, Mississippi, on the 15th instant.

THE BOSTON TRANSCRIPT learns that letters by the last mail from England state that the health of Bishop Potter, of Pennsylvania, is not improving. He was still at Malvern.

IT IS RUMORED that Marshal Canrobert is to be married to the Duchess of Sotomayor.

MRS. LE VERT, left New York on the 22d, having accepted invitations from Judge Ruggles and Judge Davies to visit them at their country houses in Poughkeepsie. She is also to pass a few days at Idlewild and Sunnyside, the residences of N. P. Willis and Washington Irving.

PRINCE METTERNICH, the famous Austrian diplomat, is eighty-five years old, and is yet physically and mentally vigorous.

DR. MEILE D'AUBIGNE'S marriage, at his mature age, for he must be over sixty, and to a Dublin lady, has excited some interest. Dr. D'Aubigne was married on the 14th of August, in St. Peters Church, Dublin, to Miss Fanny Hardy, third daughter of the late Rev. J. Hardy, rector of Kilcullen.

THALBERG'S DEPARTURE.—It is known that Sigismund Thalberg, the pianist, left his concert troupe in Illinois and departed for Europe secretly and in disgrace. The cause was never publicly stated here, but foreign papers, since his return to Paris, intimate that it was the seduction of Madame D'Angri's youthful daughter.

ROSSINI.—The Municipal Council of Paris, on the proposition of Baron Haussmann, Prefect of the Seine, and on the report of the engineer-in-chief of the Bois de Boulogne, has unanimously ratified the concession made to the celebrated composer, Rossini, of a piece of wooded ground at the Passy entrance of the Bois de Boulogne.—The price offered and accepted is considerable. The city of Paris was disposed to make the concession free for M. Rossini's life, but the offer was refused. "I should never feel myself at home," he said, "and, besides, I am neither poor enough nor rich enough to accept such liberality."

EBENEZER FRANCIS, Esq., known as "the richest man in Massachusetts," died in Roston last week, at the age of eighty-three, leaving his property behind. He came to Boston a poor lad, at the age of sixteen, and acquired his wealth in mercantile pursuits. At the time of his death he had on deposit in Boston banks about $2,300,000, and his wealth was variously estimated at from $3,500,000 to $400,000,000. The only survivors of his family are two daughters, Mrs. Nathaniel I Bowditch and Mrs. Robert M. Mason, of Boston, who are understood to receive most of the property.

A STATUE OF GEN. MASSENA, is to be erected on the square of that name at Nice. The work has been entrusted to M. Megret, and the General will be represented in the act of sending the Emperor Napoleon, who enjoined him to hold out for another hour, at the battle of Essling, the following reply: "Tell the Emperor that I never give way!" The expense is to be defrayed by subscription, both Napoleon III, and Victor Emmanuel II, having contributed.

MR. GOUGH.—J. B. Gough, says a foreign correspondent of the Springfield Republican, in spite of the attacks of Dr. Lees, is lecturing all over England with great success, and his patrons are of a higher class than formerly. He receives ten thousand dollars per annum from the Temperance League! Whisky-drinking is on the increase in Scotland, although the duty has been increased, and an act for the closing of spirit shops on Sunday has been rigidly enforced. Gough is going there for three months to try what can be done. He is backed by six hundred Presbyterian ministers.

THE POET BAILEY.—Philip James Bailey, the author of "Festus," born in Nottingham, in 1816, is now in his forty-second year. He was educated mostly at home, but spent two years at Glasgow University. He was originally designed for the bar, but has never attempted to enter into practice. In person he is about five feet seven and a half inches high, well made, though spare of flesh. He has a fine open crown, with an abundance of rich dark brown hair, much disposed to be curly. His complexion is sallow; his aspect staid and thoughtful; and his whole appearance that of a man more advanced in life than he really is. In company he is cheerful, witty, and jocose.

Miscellaneous Items.

Cranberries Cure Erysipelas.—A Correspondent of the Providence Journal says that, in ninety-nine cases out of every hundred, cranberries applied as a poultice will effectually cure the erysipelas. There is not an instance known where it has failed to effect a cure, when faithfully applied before the sufferer was in a dying state. Two or three applications generally do the work.

A Rapid Flight.—A German paper says, the quickest rate of locomotion, after the electric spark, light, sound and cannon-balls, is ascertained to be the flight of the swallow. One of these birds, liberated at Ghent, made its way to its nest at Antwerp in twelve and a-half minutes, going at the rate of four and a-half miles per minute!

Turtle Soup.—Industrious people at Key West are making a fortune out of prepared turtle soup, put up in hermetically sealed cans, and sent to distant ports. It is represented as very lucrative.

Taxation in the Different States.—According to an official table comprizing eighteen of the States, it appears that North Carolina pays less tax, per capita, than either of her sisters—it being only twenty-five cents for each individual, annually—while the tax of the State of Maine, the highest in the list, amounts to three dollars per head.

Mysteries of the Russian Court.—An extraordinary statement is made in the St. Petersburg journals: "In demolishing a wall in the apartments of the Hereditary Grand Duke, in what is called the 'Great Palace,' in that city, the skeleton of a woman was found still covered with fragments of clothing, which fell to dust on being exposed to the air. There is not the slightest tradition, they add, why she was closed up in the wall."

Donati's Comet.—This comet is now the great attraction. One half the world gaze and wonder nightly. Brilliant as it now is, it seems that it is yet to attain the maximum of its glory, as appears by the following note from Prof. Bond, of the Cambridge Observatory, which is published in the Boston Advertiser: Donati's comet will in a few days appear to increase rapidly in size and brilliancy. It will be nearest to the earth on the 9th of October, at which time its brilliancy will be nearly three times as great as on the 23d of September, and its distance from us about 52,000,000 miles. According to Mr. Hall's computation, the tail of this Comet, on the 23d of September, extended 15,000,000 miles. The nucleus will be near the bright star Arcturus, October 5th, and nearest the earth's orbit on the 20th. Some confusion seems to prevail in regard to there being two comets, similar in appearance, visible to the naked eye, but such is not the case. Donati's, which is seen in the north-west after sunset, is the same which has been seen in the north-east before sunrise in the morning. This is owing to the considerable northern declination of the comet, with a right ascension differing but little from that of the sun. I mention this, because I have received several letters from different parts of the country, making the inquiry, whether there are two comets now to be seen by the naked eye. Encke's comet is barely visible to the naked eye. Tuttle's Third Comet, of 1858, can now be seen only with the assistance of a telescope.

A Scene on the Gallows.—P. S. Turley, formerly a clergyman, was executed on Friday week in Kanawha county, Virginia, for the murder of his wife. On the gallows he made a speech attributing the commission of the crime to his intemperance. The Kanawha Star says:

After speaking, he requested that "Jerusalem, my happy home," might be sung; he said that many present had sung it with him on more happy occasions. He started the tune himself. While singing, he called his aged father on the platform, threw himself upon his neck, interrupted his singing only long enough to say "farewell," and then continued to take the lead. His mother, with his little daughter, came forward at his request, and he shook hands with her, and took his little one in his arms, kissed it, and all without seeming to be interrupted. So also with a brother. They all left the ground before he fell. He also, while singing, shook hands with some twenty others. Among them two of the brothers of his murdered wife. He had a smile on his face most of the time. There were but few dry eyes on the ground during the scene.

When they ceased singing, he turned about and said, "Sheriff, I am ready to die," and soon after the rope was cut, and the unfortunate man launched into eternity.

Another Balloon Accident.—On Friday last, there was a balloon ascension from the Illinois State Fair Grounds, at Centralia. The aeronaut ascended at 4 o'clock P. M., and at 6 o'clock descended about ten miles Southeast of Centralia, and, fastening his balloon to a fence, went into a house near by for refreshments. While he was eating, two children, a girl eight years old and a boy four years old, clambered into the balloon and unfastened the rope.

It was just dark and the moon shone bright, but the balloon was out of sight in an instant. The children were given up as lost, no one supposing that they would ever come down alive. But on Saturday morning, the balloon was discovered in a tree top, about ten miles from the starting point. The children were found safe. The girl said that her brother complained of being cold, and she laid him down in the bottom of the car, and covered him with her apron, and he went to sleep, but that she did not sleep at all.

The anchor of the balloon was out and caught in a tree-top, and she found by pulling on the anchor rope that she could pull the balloon down; but the tree was dead and it soon broke loose. The anchor then caught in a green tree, and she pulled the balloon down and fastened it to the branches, where it held until morning, which was then not far off.—Buffalo Republic.

Asses and Men.—Perhaps men are the most imitative animals in all the world of nature. Only one ass spoke like a man, but hundreds of thousands of men are daily talking like asses.

Good, even for Prentice.—"The United states Treasury is in a bad way. It has 'shelled out' until there is nothing left but a Cobb."

The Forensic "We."—Barristers have a ludicrous habit of identifying themselves with their clients, by speaking in the plural number. "Gentlemen of the jury," said a luminary of the Western Circuit, "at the moment the policeman says he saw us in the taproom, I will prove that we were locked up in the station-house, in a state of intoxication."

Parisian Gossip.—A Paris letter in the Nord of Brussels has the following: "Lord Palmerston, during the last days of his residence at Paris, saw more than once Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, Lord Cowley, Lord Howden, Baron de Rothschild, and M. Thiers. M. Thiers came up from his retreat at Francouville, where he is completing the last two volumes of his History of the Empire, to see the ex-Minister. At one of their meetings at the Hotel Bristol Lord Stratford de Redcliffe was present, and the conversation having turned on the state of Turkey, M. Thiers asked Lord Palmerston if he thought the 'sick man' was about to die? The English statesmen replied, according to his custom, by pleasantry! 'I was one day walking in the streets of London,' said he, 'when a person told me that my pocket handkerchief was hanging out of my pocket, and that I should lose it. Thank you, Sir, I answered, but I believe that unless some one pulls it out it will not fall! Well, Turkey is in the same position; if she be not thrown down she will, I am convinced, maintain herself perfectly.'"

LOST.—Two lost little girls were recently found by an officer, who could give no account of themselves; and Mr. and Mrs. Morel, of Columbia street, have lost their little daughter Marie, only twenty-eight months old.

J. H. CHARLES ESQ., of the Home Mutual Insurance Company, formerly of the house of Robb and Sons, started to Ocean Springs on the steamer. His baggage landed, but he was not to be found. His wife is almost frantic.

POST OFFICE ROBBERS are busily of late. Demart, a boy, has been robbed at Indianola Texas, after leaving abstracted thousands of dollars; and Hertz, a larger boy, has been caught in this city, after having forged receipts of several valuable letters.

RAILROAD ACCIDENTS are beginning to happen in New Orleans, Sunday before last a German lady lost an arm, and two little boys were killed.

CAPT. ISAIC ROWES, U. S. A., U. S Commissary at this post, died of yellow fever recently at Pass Christian.

YELLOW FEVER MANIAC.—A man, wild with yellow fever, got out of his room on Camp street last week, and created a great excitement. Making all sorts of dreadful noises, he ran into a milliner's shop, scared the women almost into fits, and then, rushing out again, entered the Bible House, where he succumbed to his sickness and vomited all around. He was then secured, placed in a carriage, and sent to the Charity Hospital, probably to die.

NEW YORK CRYSTAL PALACE BURNT.—New York, October 5.—The Crystal Palace was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon. The annual Fair of the American Institute was being held in the edifice. The loss is very heavy. The fire originated from a furnace. The flames spread fearfully, and quickly enveloped the entire building, which was soon reduced to ashes. The Palace was filled with the large collection of valuable articles on exhibition at the annual fair of the American Institute. The whole amount of insurance on the building and contents is only $60,000.

THE OPELOUSAS RAILROAD.—The portion destroyed by the crevasse has been thoroughly repaired, and a connection will be made with the section above the crevasse today. The balance of the road is but slightly injured—the whole distance to the Lafourche having recently been traveled by Mr. Seger, the Vice President, on a hand car.—The water still remains on a portion of the road traversing the prairies beyond the Bayou des Allemands. The business of the road will be resumed by the first of November, if not before. This the public may rely upon.—Opelousas Courier.

A MINISTER TO SPAIN APPOINTED.—The New York Times says they are enabled to announce, from sources entirely authentic, the appointment of Hon. Wm. Preston, of Kentucky, as the American Minister at Madrid. Mr. Preston has accepted the appointment, and will make his arrangements for an early departure to the seat of his mission.

ADMIRALS IN THE UNITED STATES NAVY.—At last we have an Admiral in the navy.—The Navy Department, it is rumored, has just decided that Naval Captains, when in charge of expeditions similar to that now about to start for South America, shall be justified in assuming the title of and be entitled to the honors and salutes of an Admiral. Accordingly, Admiral Shubrick now flies his broad flag at the fore instead of the main, where Yankee Commodores have hitherto located their pennants.

LATER FROM ARIZONA.—Washington, October 6.—Letters received here from Arizona state that the Fort Yuma wagon road was nearly completed, and would be opened in a short time.

THE SILVER MINES.—The San Pedro silver mines were yielding more largely than ever, and several new mines had been opened.

OVERLAND MAIL ROUTE.—Memphis, October 6.—The overland mail route to California is progressing satisfactorily.

THE GOVERNOR OF KANSAS.—Washington, October 6.—The Administration have requested Governor Denver, of Kansas, to withdraw his resignation.

A SLAVE RESCUE.—Chatham, Canada West, October 6. Some ten or twelve negroes were arrested here to-day for forcibly taking a slave from the cars of the Great Western Railroad. The slave was the property of Mr. Merlin, of St. Louis.

EXTENSIVE DEFALCATION.—New York, October 6.—Robert Canning Brown, a clerk in the London and Liverpool Insurance Company's employ, was arrested to-day for defrauding the company to a large amount.

THE NICARAGUAN MINISTERS.—Washington, October 6. The Nicaraguan Minister, Yrissarri, is not superceded by the reception of Jerez. The former represents that he has full powers to ratify the Nicaragunn Treaty.

ORDERS TO THE CENTRAL MEXICAN SQUADRON.—The Secretary of the Navy has sent out additional instructions to our naval officers at the Eastern end of the Nicaragua transit route respecting the protection of American interests, and the lives and property of citizens of the United States.

POSTMASTER GENERAL.—Washington, October 6.—Postmaster General Brown, leaves Washington to-morrow for a visit of a few days in Tennessee.

LATER FROM UTAH.—Salt Lake City, September 11.—The California overland mail was robbed in Carson Valley by the Indians.

THE ISTHMIAN QUESTION.—Some months ago, says the Philadelphia Ledger, President Martinez, forgetting all that the United States Government had done to prevent the success of filibustering in that country, put forth, with Costa Rica, an appeal to the European Powers for protection against the United States Government, he pretending to believe that the Government at Washington had designs upon the territory of Nicaragua. This scandalous imputation and falsehood, though perfectly in character with the Nicaraguan Government, was adding insult to injury, and General Cass, it appears, has not let the libel rest without demanding an explanation. It appears that he instructed General Lamar to demand reparation for these unworthy imputation. He calls the attention of the Government of Nicaragua to the fact that it owes its political existence, or rather the power it exercises, to the laws of the United States, as executed by the Government at Washington. The establishment of a political protectorate by the powers of Europe over the independent States of this continent, he says, the Government of the United States has always been avowedly opposed to, and will be resisted by all the means in its power. The transit routes over the Isthmus are to be open to the world, and American citizens will be protected in traveling across them. The weakness of the Central American Governments will no longer be received as an excuse for violating the rights of American citizens, nor as shielding them from the consequences.

FOREIGN.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET, September 20.—The estimated sales on Monday, the day of the steamer's sailing, were 10,000 bales, of which 2,500 bales were taken for exportation and speculation. The quotations exhibit an advance of 1-16d. in some cases, and holders were demanding an advance generally.

LIVERPOOL, September 22.—The sales of the three days preceding were 30,000 bales, of which 3000 were taken by speculators and 6000 for export. Middling qualities had improved most—the advance being 1-16d., the market closing firm.

LIVERPOOL, September 25.—The sales of the week amounted to 57,000 bales, at an advance during the week of from 1-6@1d, but the quotations were barely maintained Holders offered freely, but showed no disposition to press sales.

September 27.—The sales of cotton for the last two days amounted to 14,000 bales, 1200 by speculators, and 1200 for exportation.

September 20.—The estimated sales on the day of the steamer's sailing were 4000 bales, 1000 by speculators and exporters. The market closed generally quiet, and quotations were unchanged.

HAVANA MARKETS.—Havana, October 2.—Sugar declined a trifle—10½ reals. Stock 120,000 boxes. Lard in active demand, $17 75 per quintal for tierces and bbls, and $18 for kegs. Stock 1500 bbls and tierces and 4010 kegs. Exchange on London, 13¾; New York, 4¼; New Orleans, ¼.

NAPOLEON AND THE POPE.—The French Emperor has sent a copy of the treaty between France and China to Pope Pius, at Rome.

TAHATI AND MARQUESAS FREE PORTS.—The Paris correspondent of the London Times, in a late letter, says the ports of Tahati and Marquesas are about being declared free.

PRUSSIA.—The Prince of Prussia has assumed the nominal title of co-Regent, but with unlimited powers.

SPANISH FORCE ORDERED TO CUBA.—The Spanish Government has ordered 3000 men and all the disposable vessels-of-war to Cuba.

SPAIN.—Affairs at Madrid were approaching a crisis.

NAPLES.—Numerous arrests had been made in Naples.

HOLLAND.—The States General of Holland was opened on the 20th September, by the King in person.

BANK OF FRANCE.—The Bank of France had reduced its rates of interest to three per cent.

ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH SHARES.—Shares in the Atlantic Telegraph Company had declined to £306.

THE CHINA TREATY.—The amount of indemnity which France gets from China by the treaty is 15,000,000 francs.

EXPLOSION AT HAVANA.—The large naval magazine at Havana, filled with powder, shells and rockets, blew up on the afternoon of the 29th ult. By the explosion, 28 persons were instantly killed, and 105 were wounded.—Many yet are under the ruins of the building. Nineteen new sugar houses were totally destroyed. The gas works were rendered entirely useless, leaving the city in darkness, but guarded by the police and troops during the night. The whole city was affected by the shock, and many of the buildings were damaged. Gen. Concha was the first official on the ground, aiding in person the unfortunates. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

SOCIETY ISLANDS.—It seems that the authorities of these Islands are quarrelling among themselves, and to settle matters, at last accounts the party in power offered Consul Owen, of the United States, to surrender the Islands of Tahaa and Raiatea to our Government, and handed his official letters to that officer for transmission to Washington. This movement gave great offense to the representatives of England and France, who incited a sort of revolution. In this state of affairs the French war brig Hydrographe, arrived, and her commander took Mr. Thomas Croft and Mr. Jordon, American citizens, into custody, and conveyed them to Taiati, on account of their annexation proclivity.

INTERESTING FROM JAPAN.—Intelligence from Japan to 10th July, says the authorities were doing all in their power for the execution of the recent treaties with Christian Powers. An imperial decree authorized the erection of commercial exchanges at Simoda, Nangasaki, and Hakodadi, and appointed a number of merchandise brokers to facilitate commercial intercourse with the various nations included in the treaties.

It will be recollected that the Americans presented a railroad and telegraph to the Emperor. The latter has been put up by a Japanese engineer, and is in successful operation. It is five leagues in length. The Emperor is so well pleased with the invention that he has ordered telegraphic communication to be established between Jeddo and the provinces of Gokinah, Tokaido, Fekuro-Kudu, Saugodo, and Saikaido. An American house established at Simoda has offered to furnish the requisite materials.

The most important act of the reigning Emperor is the revocation of the edict against the Christians issued by the Emperor Dola-Fusam in 1614. In future, foreign agents accredited at Japanese ports will be privileged to bring with them one or more Christian preachers for their own and their countrymen's benefit.

VOLUME OF SERMONS.

I SHALL, ON OR ABOUT THE 25th OF OCTOBER NEXT, ISSUE FROM the press a book of Sermons, handsomely bound in cloth, by the following eminent Ministers of our Church, with steel plate engravings—neat as likenesses of all of them—executed in the finest style of art, by C. Burt, Esq., of New York: Rev. Bishop Joshua Soule, D.D.; Rev. Bishop George F. Pierce, D.D.; Rev. David S. Doggett, D.D.; Rev. Jos. Cross, D.D.; Rev. Lovick Pierce, D.D.; Rev. Wm. M. Wightman, D.D.; Rev. C. B. Parsons, D.D.; Rev. Alex. Means, D.D., LL.D.; Rev. J. W. Hinmer, D.D.; Rev. L. D. Bosom, O.D.; Rev. Thos. L. Boswell, D.D.; Rev. E. Wadsworth, D.D.; Rev. Wiltshire Smith, D.D.; Rev. S. G. Starks, A.M.; and Rev. John C. Granberry, A.M. The net proceeds arising from the sale of this work are to be appropriated to the liquidation of a debt now due on our Church in Washington city; also, to other interests connected with the Church. Will brethren in the ministry at once send me, upon an average, ten subscribers—an order for the copies? Owing to the expensive style in which the work has been gotten up, I am under the necessity, in order to make but a small profit, to place the Subscription Price at at $1 50 per volume; and, I may add, that it will then be the cheapest work of the kind ever offered to the public. Any one, therefore, who will enclose me $1 50, will receive per mail, free of postage, a copy of this valuable work. Let a number of persons unite together in every neighborhood, and send for ten or more copies, enclosing at the same time a check on any of the Northern cities, or bank notes on good and solvent banks in any section of the country.
☞ Remittances may be made per mail, at my risk. The precaution of registering letters, enclosing funds, should be observed and adhered to. ☜

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer the Little Children to come unto Me."

CHILDREN'S COLUMN CHANGED.

The children, we suppose, have noticed before this time, that their column, for the last few weeks, has been put second instead of first, on the fourth page. This has been done by mistake, in making up the paper. But we have changed it back, and made it right, this week.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN CROWDED OUT.

Our little readers were no doubt disappointed last week, when they found that there was no Children's Column in the paper. We could not help it; but we were very sorry for it. We were compelled to fill up the space with matter that could not be laid over. Our little friends had to "wait," as they sometimes have to wait until older persons get done eating, before they can have their meals. But we will try to make it up, by paying more attention to them than ever.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

The yellow fever has been raging in New Orleans for the last two months. Between four and five hundred die of it every week. Funeral processions are seen in all parts of the city from morning till night. People are sick, and many dying, all over New Orleans. A great many little children are left without father, or without mother, or without both. And a great many children die. Our little readers ought to be very thankful to God that they are out of the reach of the dreadful epidemic, and that their fathers and mothers are not taken away from them.

A CHILD BAPTIZED.

A few Sundays ago, the editor of this paper had to preach in the Carondelet street Methodist Church, in New Orleans, the pastor being away at the time. Just before service commenced, a child was brought forward to be baptized. The parents were of a French family. The child had a beautiful French name. We love to baptize children. Christ said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." And since He has ascended to heaven, the Church receives them in his name. And as "He took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them," so the Church, in His name, is to take them in her arms and bless them by baptism. Have our little readers all been baptized? Inquire about it. Every child ought to be baptized, and pray, and read the Bible, and attend church, and be a Christian.

LETTER FROM ARKANSAS BOY.

We have received the following letter from a little Arkansas boy, and publish it with much pleasure. It has been a long time coming. We trust he will continue to study, and will become a wise and good man. He wants to know if the Editor is a preacher. Yes, but a very poor one. He cannot guess, in a thousand guesses, we imagine, what C. C. in the Editor's name, stands for. The bonnet came safe, and is very pleasant. We shall give it to the little girl. He says:

Dear Mr. Gillespie:

"I have read your editorial to the children, and as I cannot write well enough myself, I have asked my Ma to write for me. I am a little Arkansas boy, seven years old, never went to school but two months in my life; my dear Ma has taught me all I know. I can spell, read in the Second Reader, cipher in addition and am learning how to write. O, I like to have forgot, I have just commenced the study of geography, which I like very much. I am studying Latin now so that when I am grown, I may become a preacher, only I am afraid I shall never be good enough, for I find it so hard to do right all the time, or to pray without thinking of my plays or toys. I have learnt part of a hymn you had printed for the children and will learn the whole to recite at our Sunday-school celebration on the first of October. Please come up and bring all of your children and their kind Ma, to our celebration. I do want to see and learn the name of your dear little girl. I send her the prettiest boquet I have in my herbal, I have two little sisters, Ella and Martha, whom I dearly love. I asked my Ma, but she could not tell me, what C. C. stood for in your name. I guessed one C. was for Charles. Pa, says all editors are not christians, but I know you are one or you would not love the little boys and girls as you do. Are you a preacher and an editor too? May I call myself your little friend?"

JOHNNIE BIRD CRAWLEY.

Ashley county, Arkansas Sep., 17 1858.

REV. WILLIS D. MATTHEWS.

Perhaps our little readers will recollect reading in the Advocate, a few weeks since, an account of the revivals in the Talladega District, Alabama Conference. It was written by Rev. Willis D. Matthews, the Presiding Elder of that District. Mr. Matthews was the first Methodist preacher, indeed the first preacher of any sort, that the editor of this paper ever heard preach. He preached in our father's house. It was in the Creek Indian nation, in Western Georgia, about thirty years ago, when the writer of this editorial was but a small child, only five or six years old. There were but few white people in that country then, but hundreds upon hundreds of Indians. It was at a place called "Black Dirt," named after an old Indian Chief. It was on the beautiful Chattahoochee river, near the mouth of a creek called "Snake's Creek." Our father's house was a little log cabin, of one room. Our father's house was a little log cabin, of one room. The women were in the house, and the men were under a bush arbor before the door, outside. The preacher stood in the door and preached. That day, one of the first, if not the very first, Methodist Churches was organized, west of the Chattahoochee river. We recollect seeing our dear and holy mother join the Church that day. She joined by letter, having been a member before she moved into that wild country, even from the time she was a young girl. Although it was thirty years ago, and the writer of this was a small child, we recollect distinctly how she looked. We can even now see, in our memory, how she looked, and how she stepped, as she came up to give the preacher her hand. She was dressed in white; and she is now clothed in white robes at the right hand of the majesty on high, in heaven. A few years ago she joined the Church triumphant. We humbly trust, through the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, to meet her there, after a while. She was a blessed and holy mother, so gentle, so loving, and so pious.

PULLING TEETH IN OLD TIMES.

The primitive method of abstracting teeth is thus described: One end of a firm hemp string was fastened upon the aching member, while the other, securely tied around a bullet purposely notched, was put in the barrel of an old flint-lock musket, loaded with an extra charge of powder. When all was ready, the desperate operator caught hold of the gun and 'let drive.' Out flew the tooth, and away bounded the musket several feet. This mode of extracting teeth became the chosen and only mode practiced in this region for many years.

EXAMPLE FOLLOWED.

The children of the Sandwich Islands have caught the passion for ship-building from our American Sabbath-schools, and have purchased two small sailing boats for the use of the missionaries, at a cost of $200 each, one being paid for by the native children, and the other by the children of foreign residents. The boats will be very useful in facilitating the operations of the missionaries among the islands.

BIBLE IN RUSSIA.

The return of the Emperor of Russia to St. Petersburg, from Archangel, was accompanied by the publication of a ukase, restoring to the Bible societies the privileges they formerly possessed, of which they were deprived by the late Emperor Nicholas.

A HUNDRED YEARS.

Mr. Shaw, of Biddeford, Me., has got up an almanac showing the days of the week and month for the whole of the nineteenth century. It is only about the diameter, and one quarter the thickness of a silver dollar.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

"Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee."

We publish the following with unfeigned pleasure. We must be allowed to complain a little, however, that we have been cut off from communication with the "Log Cabin" for so long a time. We have fallen in love with it.

LETTER FROM A "LOG CABIN."

Bayou Bartholomew Ashley, County Ark., Sept., 19.

Mr. Editor: The "Advocate" does not reach me weekly as I had hoped, owing to the irregularity of the mail, but it is none the less welcome when it does come. I congratulate you, on its improved appearance, its clear type and beautiful paper, and above all the very interesting reading it contains.

My little ones are much pleased with the children's column, and make many inquiries about yourself, and the articles it contains. I think you will have to write a short autobiography to satisfy the curiosities of your young readers. I assure you, that your efforts in their behalf, are appreciated by the parents as well as by the little folks.

'Tis a most lovely day. I have just returned from a ramble in my woodland yard. How dreamily the cool winds moved the vari-colored leaves, to which the soft twitter of the native birds, and the low hum of wild bees, but added a quiet pleasing harmony. 'Tis so delightful to stroll through a forest of lofty trees, and under natural bowers of grape and muscadins, loaded with delicious fruit, and seating one's self upon a mossy bank or the body of a fallen tree, take in by every sense the beauties of nature. Immediately around are thousands of differently shaped and colored leaves, grass and plants. Analyze that most common weed, with a delicate purple flower and long pointed leaves, near by. "How beautiful" you exclaim, "I had no idea that common looking flower was formed of so many dainty little petals, tiny pistils and stamins, and the leaves how prettily shaped and edged with almost imperceptible scallops, and the innumerable veins running throughout. What wisdom and power are written upon this neglected weed." A large, gaily painted butterfly flits noiselessly by alighting here and there to secure the sweets of the many yellow and purple flowers. How light and free, trusting to the present for happiness, yet how soon its short summer-life is o'er, bringing to mind the many fashionable human butterflies who are seemingly as careless and free of care, for the hereafter. The almost tame birds look at you confidingly, from the waving boughs, cheering you ever and anon with their simple songs. Ah! there, you have stopped a long procession of ants, each one in the greatest haste to fulfill its duty.—How industriously they go to and fro laying up their winter's store. Would that human toilers would work as perseveringly in laying up treasures, that moth nor rust doth corrupt. Communion with nature, how salutary, ennobling and cheering. When I am lonely or sad I take a walk with my children, in the beautiful woods which surround my log-cabin, and in pointing out to them the wonderful objects of the great Creator's bounty on every side, my mind becomes calm, and the spirit of contentment again nestles in its wonted place. I would not exchange my humble Arkansas home with its dear associations of loved ones, and its homely domestic duties for the fashionable amusements of city life. The visits of friends, the distant tinkling of the stock-bell, the gambols of calf, kid and lamb, the matronly hen with her numerous brood, the dozens of eggs daily gathered, the rich milk, and yellow butter, the golden fields of corn, and snowy ones of cotton, the cultivation of my flower and kitchen gardens, are the old fashioned pleasures that delight me. M. A. C.

LEARNING HYMNS.

Children are fond of learning hymns, and, next to the Bible, they can learn nothing better. But why should not these hymns be such as they may and should remember for their use as long as life lasts? Childish hymns may be read by children, but most of them will pass with childhood, whereas those of the greatest value in the language are not above their comprension, are as easily committed to memory, and will remain in the mind as a rich source of instruction and of devotional assistance until we leave this world. How often, in hours of discouragement, and gloom and fear, do such hymns come as a ministering angel to sooth the soul, and send it on into the unknown future, if not rejoicing, at least resigned and cheerful.—That teacher or parent has done a good part by a child who has caused him to commit thoroughly a dozen hymns such as might be named. "Show pity, Lord! O Lord, forgive!" furnished to Mr. Webster the language of prayer in his last hours, and "Rock of Ages cleft for me!" has performed the same office, for hundreds; among them three of the most devoted of the Lord's ministers now come to our mind. Some hymns, such as "Come, ye sinners, poor and needy," and "All ye that pass by," exhibit the plan of salvation in a condensed yet complete form, which could not be attained in prose in a form so easily remembered or likely to be so impressive.

SYMPTOMS OF INICPIENT INSANITY.

An alienist physician of judgment and experience would be able to point out, in the circle of society with which he is acquainted, nearly all the men who are very likely to become insane; but were he imprudent enough to make known this invidious prescience, it would be found that his judgment differed widely from the opinions on this subject which are current in the world. It would be found, for instance, that his prophecy would not rest upon those men who are called eccentric. Eccentricity more frequently depends on a disregard of public opinion in trifling and non-essential matters, than upon any twist or perversion in the mind of the individual. The eccentric man is often a large-hearted and a courageous man, and, as such, one of the last to become insane. The ominous forethought of the physician would rather rest upon the man over susceptible concerning the good opinion which others may entertain of him; the suspicious and timorous man, who hears scandal before it is spoken, and apprehends the commencement of every possible mischief; the man who has not at the bottom of his heart a sincere liking for his fellow creatures, but who is querulous and contentious and who perpetually finds himself in disaccord with the world. This is the type of man whom predisposing and exciting causes are most likely to plunge into insanity.

"HALF DRESSED."

Mr. Editor: Taking it for granted that you are a good judge of morals and moral subjects, I would like to have you give your opinion on a subject that has caused me considerable reflection. The subject was brought forcibly to my mind a few Sabbaths ago. In looking over the Sabbath School that I attend I saw a great many very pretty little girls, not, in my opinion, much over half dressed. I think I am safe in using this term, counting from head to foot. I then run my eye along among the little boys, and was much struck with the difference in their dresses, the boys being covered from heel to chin. I saw this marked difference, even among the same family. In the first place I would like to ask, why is this difference? and in the next place, if you think it consistent with good morals, so to send little girls into the streets, with their persons thus exposed. Morals.

LEARNED BOYS.

I have seen silly parents trying to get their children to say that they liked school-time better than holiday-time; that they liked work better than play. I have seen, with joy, manly little fellows repudiating the odious and unnatural sentiment; and declaring manfully that they preferred cricket to Ovid. And if any boy ever tells you that he would rather learn his lessons than go out to the play-ground, beware of that boy. Either his health is drooping, and his mind becoming prematurely and unnaturally developed, or he is a little humbug. He is an impostor. He is seeking to obtain credit under false pretenses. Depend upon it, unless it really be that he is a poor little spiritless man, deficient in nerve and muscle, and unhealthily precocious in intellect, he has in him the elements of a sneak; and he wants nothing but time to ripen him into a pick-pocket, a swindler, or a horse-dealer.

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

MRS. SOPHIA R. WARE, daughter of G. C. and Mary S. McNeill, and wife of Henry H. Ware, was born in Fayetteville, North Carolina, October 21, 1833, and died in Selma, Alabama, September 16, 1858. Her parents were members of the Methodist Church. Their children were baptized in infancy. These pious parents died when the subject of this notice was a little girl. By this calamity three children, bound together in sisterly affection, were sadly bereaved. They were not left in hopeless and helpless orphanage. Affectionate relations opened their doors, their arms, and their hearts, to receive and nourish them. Mrs. Ware was adopted by her maternal uncle, Col. S. R. Blake. She was educated in the Wesleyan Female College of Macon Georgia. By the appliances and under the influences, used and exerted in that excellent and popular Institution, her mental and moral faculties were much improved. She came with the family of her uncle to Alabama in 1850, and in December 1855, gave her hand in marriage to him who now mourns her early death. She was distinguished by her fascinating conversation, her graceful manners, her cordial hospitality, and her reverence for God. By her hospitality and kindness she contributed very much to the comfort of the preachers and visitors, who attended the last session of the Alabama Conference. On the 20th of last June she joined the Methodist Church as a seeker of religion, and the next day she experienced conversion while attending a prayer meeting. The evidence of this gracious work was perfectly satisfactory. Her raptures was overwhelming. Of the genuineness and the divinity of this wonderful change she never had a doubt. We all rejoiced with her, and looked forward to a long life of piety and useful labor in the Militant Church. Sunday the 12th of September, she was in her place in the congregation and her serious and fixed attention to the preaching was noticed by the pastor and by other persons. Monday morning the 13th, while making preparation for a charitable visit, she was attacked by sickness. All alarming symptoms yielded readily to medicine and the fears of her numerous friends were dismissed. On Thursday the 16th, she was suddenly prostrated by a chill and horrible convulsions, and in less than two hours, sunk submissively and peacefully into the arms of death. The attack, though sudden and violent, did not deprive her of her reason. She knew she was approaching the holy and angust throne of God, to whom she said she had given her heart. We mourn on account of our loss; we trust she has gained the blessedness of heaven.

Edward Wadsworth.

Selma Alabama, Oct. 1 1858.

BROTHER J. S. MARTIN, died on Sunday the 26th September 1858, in the full hope of the resurrection unto eternal life. At a meeting of the Sabbath-school Society of the Carondelet street Methodist Church, it was

1st. Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Martin, this society has lost one of its most useful members, and a bright example of Christian meekness, and faithful discharge of duty.

2d. Resolved, That the sympathies of this Society, are hereby tendered to his afflicted widow, and bereaved children, with the earnest prayer, that the God of the widow and the fatherless may be their support in the hour of affliction.

3d. Resolved, That these resolutions shall be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

MISS MARGARET HAWTHORN, died at Pearlington Mississippi, on the 26th of August, in her 16th year.

The deceased was a great sufferer from some chronic disease for the last four years. But though her sufferings were great, she put her trust in God, and found in him that comfort which consoled her when all creature help failed. A few minutes before dying she called her relatives and friends to her bed side and bid them all good by. Oh that this affliction may be sanctified to the salvation of her mother and sisters, who are left to mourn on account of her absence. According to her request we sung that beautiful hymn at her burial, which commences thus

O sing to me of heaven,
When I am called to die.

I hope all the little boys and girls will memorize this hymn. H. D. Berry.

TO THE AFFLICTED CITIZENS OF NEW ORLEANS!
Read Carefully and Thoughtfully.
DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID—The greatest known agent for Purifying the Air. It is a new and important discovery. It is a triumph of scientific skill. It is the result of learned inquiry. It is the fruit of patient research.
This invaluable Agent is now presented to the people of New Orleans, for the first time. It is a Chemical union of materials, provided by Nature herself, for rendering the air we breathe pure and healthful. It is not a mixture, but a true Chemical compound. Its action is in obedience to fixed laws, quick, sure, powerful. It purifies dwellings, sewers, sinks, privies, kitchens. It removes all offensive odors instantly. It cures burns, bites, and stings of insects. It relieves boils, chronic ulcers, bed sores, etc. It cleanses teeth, sweetens breath.
It has been used with most remarkable success in Typhoid Fever, Scarlet Fever, Measles; indeed, in all contagious diseases it is invaluable.
In the City of Charleston, S. C., it is now in constant use by Leading Physicians, in Yellow Fever.
Orders from that City represent it, as in the most active demand. It has not been advertised there but one month, yet orders for hundreds of bottles, have been filled for that City.
In this City the HOWARD ASSOCIATION, is now using it in the treatment of Yellow Fever.
TRY IT—It can be had at J. WRIGHT, & CO'S, Drug Store, 21 and 181, Chartres Street. Price 50 cents: s.22

DR. T. McGOWN'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
IODINE OF POTASI,
THE GREAT
BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,
Prepared from PARSEE ROOT, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a PANACEA OR CATHOLICON than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Colmet, Baron, Bardsley, Munson, Ricord, Gendrin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy; diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Biles, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally;) Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cancroxy; Palsy, Tumors, Consumption, Gleet; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Forcyce says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in constitutions enfeebled and emaciated by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodium of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparations of Sarsaparilla."
FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Irregularities, Suppression, Diseases of the Womb, Leucorrhea, Tumors, Enlargement of the Uterus, Breasts; Chorea, etc.; Impurities of the Blood or System, and all diseases dependant thereon. Make the skin clear and smooth an object of interest with the fair. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.
McGOWN'S ESSENCE TAR—A certain cure for Bowel Complaints, as Diarrhea, Dysentery, Flux, etc.
McGOWN'S DOGWOOD AND IRON—A permanent cure for Chills, Ague Cake, Night Sweats, Debility, Dyspepsia, etc.
McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.
McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.

LETTER FROM MUNICH.

Passage on the Danube—The Monastery—Ruins of Durrenstein Castle—Church of Mary of the Little Table—Singular Tradition—City of Passau—Catholic Festivals—Arrival at Munich—Fine Arts.

We left Vienna the last day of May, on our way to Munich, and again took passage on the Danube, the scenery growing more interesting as we ascended the river; the hills along its banks were lofty, and clothed with the richest foliage. The ruins of old feudal castles crowned some of their heights, of most romantic beauty. Towns and villages, in quiet nooks, were scattered along the way; Churches and Convents.

We saw one Monastery, like a large palace, coveriog the side of a very high hill, where its Church—with three towers, lofty dome, and extensive buildings—rose in solitary grandeur, away from the haunts of men; a Convent of the Benedictines, where thousands could live in seclusion.

The ruins of Durrenstein Castle were of peculiar interest and great romantic beauty; situated upon a rocky eminence, and scarcely distieguished from them except by its crumbling towers and broken arches, through which the light penetrates and reveals their shapes. The rocks rise up on each side in bristling pinnacles, like those on the summit of the Alps, in peculiar shapes, above and below almost to the water's edge, like a natural wall of defence, without the least sign of vegetation upon them. It is relieved on the back ground by a hill clothed with trees of evergreen—which renders it more picturesque. A room is shown in this castle where Richard Cœur-de-Lion was imprisoned by Leopold of Austria fifteen months, in the year 1192.

Mary of the Little Table, built in 1661, we saw as we passed along these romantic scenes. A Church, situated upon the top of a high hill, of most commanding prospect, amidst one of nature's fairest landscapes. Its lofty towers with singular shaped spires; its portico, with trees shaven like columns, with large capitals to support it, standing in front; its fine, extensive buildings running back, designed to accommodate pilgrims; the surrouading groves, with undulating hills, covered with the liveliest green, the richest hues of Spring, gave a finishiag touch to the whole scene, as it burst upon our sight in the bend of the river.

A singular tradition is attached to this Church, from which it receives its name. There was an old oak which once stood upon the site, with the image of the Virgin Mary attached to it. Beneath its spreading braaches the peasantry used to assemble every year, to pray for a good harvest. As the tree begnn to decay, one of the peasantry took it into his head to cut it down; but as he struck at the tree with his axe, it missed the blow, and passed into his foot. In the mean time he looked up, saw the image, and was miraculously healed. From this curious tradition, the people of the country make pilgrimages to its shrine every year—from 50,000 to 130,000—who come to the feast of the Church of the Little Table. Fronting the river, upon a bank at the foot of this hill, stands three crosses, for the crucifixion, where hangs the carved image of our Savior, marking the road which leads to the Church.

We saw several rude Chapels along the banks of the river, for the Virgin and child, as places of worship in the open air. The scenery for a great distance continued to unfold its bold and picturesque aspect—with the lofty and grand—with chateaus perched upon perpendicular ledges of rocks, crowned with evergreen trees down to the bed of the river—in most fearful places. Some of the scenery, in its wild and romantic character, resembled that of the upper Mississippi, above St. Louis—along the shores of Iowa, Indiana, Wisconsin and Minnesota—which, detached from the ruins of feudal castles, is equally interesting with that of the Danube, whose waters assume the color of clay, like unburnt brick.

We arrived at Passau, a city situated between lofty hills, at the junction of the Inn and Danube. Opposite the city rises an almost perpendicular cliff of great height, upon which once stood a fortified castle—with its towers, walls, and steps down to the bed of the river.

Passau was once the capital of an Ecclesitical community, exteading over a region of twenty-four square miles, containing a population of 60,000 inhabitants; it is now a frontier town of Bavaria, containing some fine Churches and massive buildings, of considerable beauty and strength, situated on the hill-side, which shows to advantage.

Here we took passage on a small boat up the River Inn, for Munich, one of the principal branches of the Danube, and bears some proportion to the Danube, as the Missouri does to the Mississippi. It is a beautiful river, lined with villages and towns, in the midst of a fertile country, highly cultivated—for we did not see one barren spot. The fields were waving with grain; and meadows, rich with clover and tall grass, where the fragrance of new-mown hay already perfumed the air.

We passed along the walls of the ancient town of Wurzburg, where, upon the opposite shore, we saw crowds of people gathered, celebrating some feast-day of the Catholic Church. Our captain gave a salute of guns in honor of the festival, and hoisted five different flags upon the mast—the object of which we could not tell. The common people were dressed in their national costumes of picturesque style; the higher classes adopt European customs—French and English. This is a great country for feast-days and pilgrimages.

"It is astonishing," says an author, "how many thousands and hundreds of thousands of pilgrims, throughout the Austrian and Bavarian dominions, as well as France, Spain and Switzerland, make annual journeys to some shrine of worship, which has a miracle-working image or picture. Books are sold on the spot, with a narrative of the facts. The treasuries of these Churches are stored with rich dresses, jewels and trinkets, for the image of the Virgin, and costly plate for the service of the altar. Princes, Popes, Emperors, and Kings, even down to the present day, have contributed largely to these objects."

The Danube is almost as circuitous as the Mississippi; and, by this town, the banks had something the appearance of its bluffs, with broken sand-banks of great height.

Rosenheim is a beautiful little city, further up, in another bend of the river, with fine streets and well-built houses, and a castle upon a hill. We stayed at this place all night, and took the cars in the morning for Munich, which we reached in a few hours. A fine city, situated on the banks of the river Isar.

The country through which we passed to reach Munich was very flat and uninteresting. The city, itself, is peculiar—its quaint-looking houses with a multitude of windows in their fronts, and their tall, sharp roofs perforated with little windows, which look like pigeon holes in the distance, add to its picturesque effect. Some of the houses are ornamented with scroll-work or stucco-patterns and rude frescoes, with lantern-like projections or oriel-windows at the corners—producing a singular, but not disagreeable effect. The streets are broad and clean, and built far beyond its old walls, adding quite a new part to the old city.

The buildings erected for the fine arts are splendid specimens of Grecina architecture, in the form of temples. The Sculpture Galleries and those for paintings are opposite each other, detached from any buildings, and exceedingly beautiful, and an ornament to the city. They owe their origin to the late King, Louis, who was himself a poet, and made art his study from early youth. He has filled those halls with his own collections, which do justice to his good taste. We had a sight of his person as we passed along one of his parks; he was plainly dressed, and unattended.

The Sculpture Gallery is of beautiful white marble; in the front, Corinthian columns and ionic capitals—with wings and niches filled with statues; bas-relief around the cornice; and frescoes, with classic illustrations. Some of the rooms, within the halls for sculpture, resembled those of the Vatican. The walls, of the richest coloring; the floors, of marble; the arched ceiling, decorated with stuccos and gilding. The collection was small, but fine—Grecian, Roman, Etruscan and Egyptian antiquities. The hall of colored sculpture, had some curious works of art—a female statue, with head, shoulders and arms, purely white, and a drapery of black marble.....The works of Canova and Thorswaldsen occupied the principal place in the halls of modern sculpture.....The galleries for painting were very beautiful; their arrangement was as fine as any we have seen in Europe, at least, in the splendid temple designed for the exhibition of those we saw.

NEW ORLEANS CITY MISSION.

"I must work, while it is called to-day."

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, that do with all thy might."

This is Bible rule: work to-day, work with all thy might. Ascertain what there is to be done; then, with an earnest diligence equal to the importance of the subject, work. There is no field so ample, nor so important as the Home Mission of New Orleans. Its value to the Church, in all her operations at home and abroad, is great. Large cities bear important relations to the country; they are the reservoirs into which flow every variety of character, and from which issue influences that effect the homes and habits of our entire people. Who can estimate the numbers that are swallowed up in the maelstrom of irreligion and vice, peculiar to large cities? The influences that make against religion in New Orleans are potent.

As a general thing, the press advocates Sabbath-breaking; merchants, shippers, and the traveling public, practice it; our steamships and finest river packets, make the Sabbath the day of their departure—thus rendering drays and carriages necessary.

With Sabbath-breaking comes every other vice. A City Mission, properly organized and conducted, affords a strong means by which much of this evil can be checked. We have slept so soundly, while "the enemy sowed tares," that the effort of the present Mission seems as if made by one not quite awake.

The Mission this year for want of sympathy and means has been crippled, and, in a great measure, failed to effect the objects proposed at its institution. We do not say that the Church has attempted nothing, or done nothing, in the work of Home Missions in New Orleans, but that the effort has not been equal to the necessity.

In 1842 or 1843, Brother C. Bremer was licensed to preach the Gospel; he immediately began to labor among the Germans in the city, and laid the foundation of our present German Missions. New Orleans appreciated the work and has borne her share of burthen.

The City Colored Missions, under the fostering care of the Church, in its labors and results, silence the noisy, unmeaning sympathies of Northern negrophilists; and show the liberal and enlightened policy of the Southern people, in regard to the negro, and the effort which the Church in New Orleans makes for his salvation.

In 1848, an abortive attempt was made to establish more Churches in the city; but we hardly know which to wonder most at, the crude nature of the enterprize, or the too hasty abandonment of so important a work.

Had it been made missionary, instead of self-supporting; and one man appointed to the work, with the promise of co-operation from brethren of established congregations, it would, without doubt, have succeeded. But we have succeeded latterly, more by private enterprize than by regular Missionary effort, in gathering two congregations and building three Churches; but this, though a cause of congratulation, does not fill up the measure of our duty or answer the demands of the case. There is yet a great work to be done. The Church should always have some enterprize under way, some field to call into action the benevolence of the heart and the labor of the hands.

The success of Methodism, in its earlier days, has been ascribed, under God, to the fact that its members were "all at work, and always at work." No field affords better opportunities for the exercise of grace and gifts than the Mission field in New Orleans.

Many suggestions have been made in regard to the sphere of operation, and the duties of a City Missionary. Two prominent ones compass the whole. 1st, To visit families, invite them to attend the Churches, and distribute Bibles, tracts and religious newspapers, 2d, To preach in the public squares and other resorts on Sabbath days.

After a careful examination of the subject, and of the real wants of the city, we believe them to be wrong. Every Methodist preacher is a distributor of religious books, but this is only incidental to his office. Laymen can be procured, who are competent colporteurs, and you can find work enough for two or three in the city. Laborers in the vineyard are too few, to permit us to take them away from their legitimate calling to do the work laymen can do. Establish a colportage, and put it under the superintendence of the Missionary; but, if he preaches, organizes Sabbath schools and Churches, and attends to the general duties of an itineraat, he will have as much as he can do.

We are not disposed to question the utility of preaching in the squares, but there are several reasons why it should not be made a special duty of the City Missionary: Firstly, it can only be done in summer, and in fair weather. Secondly, it is too indefinite in its results. The Rev. Mr. Heistaad preached in this way for many years; that he may have done some good we do not deny, but we find no permanent results of his labors at the present time. Thirdly, when the season is over, he has to seek new localities to labor in—which might as well have been done at first.

But, it is said, that the regular congregations are increased by it. Then let the regular pastors engage in the work; a City Missionary is not necessarily "a runner" for established Churches; he can do better work.

The objects of a City Mission are, to establish Sabbath schools and gather congregations beyond the limits of the settled congregations. If the Missionary can do anything else, whereby the cause of religion is advanced, let him do it; but the main objects are these. Sabbath schools are not mere appendages to the Church; they occupy a position and do a work, which the Church cannot; and not unfrequently become the germs of Churches. We have cases in point in this city, only one of which we will specify. The Rev. Wm. H. Watkins was appointed in 1839 Missionary to the Third District; he began with a Sabbath school, without sufficient members to form an official board. That Mission is now a Church occupying a handsome building on Morean street; and has sent out two preachers into the itinerancy. Too much cannot be said in favor of Sabbath schools.

While States and Corporations are alive to the importance of educating the youth, let us not forget that the peculiar work of training the heart for God, and forming their character for eternity, is ours. Our children are associating daily with others, in public and private schools, and exerting mutual influences. "Evil communications corrupt good manners." How careful ought we to be of the character of those who stand in the relation of schoolmates to our children. The Sabbath school can do here what nothing else can do; hence they are important to the Church and to the community.

An organized Sabbath school will soon gather a congregation, and that congregation build a Church. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

In 1853 a "Church-extension Society" was organized in Louisville. At their request, a Missionary was appointed to labor in connection; twenty-four local ministers offered their services; thirteen itinerants agreed to aid, so far as they could without neglecting their own congregations. The result in one year, as reported by Rev. C. Welburn, was, four Sabbath schools, forty-four teachers, and two hundred and ninety children; three hundred and eighty-six members received in the Mission Churches, and the old congregations increased at least twenty per cent.

Shall we then have a City Mission—one that will reflect well upon the piety and intelligence of the Church? "The field is white unto the harvest." They stretch out their hands to you for help. We need the means for carrying out this project. Who will respond? There are rooms to rent and benches to procure; books, tracts, and Sunday school visitors to provide. As yet we have received nothing for the enterprize. Shall we report to the Conference that meets here in December, a well-organized Mission? Then, brethren, heed this appeal, and come to our help.

CHAS. J. HALBERG, City Missionary.

MINUTES OF CONFERENCES.

The duty of preachers in charge, and of secretaries of Conferences, in reference to Church statistics, has been published in all the Church papers, in the July number of the Quarterly Review, and also in the Book of Discipline; but in order, if possible, to secure full and correct returns for the General Minutes, I beg leave to copy from the Discipline, as follows. Among the duties of a preacher in charge, the following are specified, pp. 69, 70:

"13. To see that a register be kept, in which shall be noted the names, with the time and manner of the reception and disposal of every person belonging to the Church in his station, circuit or mission, distinguishing between local elders, deacons, and preachers, members and probationers, white persons, colored persons and Indians, and report to the Annual Conference the number of each that may be under his charge at the time of its session.

"14. To promote all the interests of the Missionary, Sunday-school, and Tract Societies of our Church, in such way as the Discipline or the Annual Conference may designate; and to report to the Conference the amounts raised during the year, within the bounds of his charge, for these several societies.

"15. To report at each session of the Quarterly Conference the number and state of the Sunday-schools; and annually to the Quarterly and Annual Conferences, for insertion in their respective journals, the number of Sunday-schools, scholars, teachers, superintendents, and Sunday-school library-books in his circuit, station, or mission."

On pp. 53, 54, we read:

"4. Let every Annual Conference have a record of its proceedings kept by a secretary chosen for that purpose: let said record be signed by the president and secretary, and a copy of the same be sent to the General Conference, at its next ensuing session; and let the secretary forward to the editor of books at the publishing-house full and correct answers to the foregoing twenty-one questions, for insertion in the general minutes, according to the form therein adopted."

In view of the foregoing, and of the necessities of the case, I very respectfully and earnestly solicit the attention of the secretaries of Conferences to this matter. I beg them to procure a copy of the general minutes, and see how the statistics are reported. They will discover that the sixteenth question is not answered by simply saying, "No. of preachers, 53; members, 8105; probationers, 2237." I cannot copy that on the general minutes. Every circuit, station and mission must be reported, and all the particulars in each; or we must print the last year's statistics.

Again: it will be observed that the names of the elders are printed in the list of appointments in italics: they must therefore be underscored in the manuscript.

Categorical answers, too, are required for questions 17, 18, 19, as well as the rest; and, in particular a fair copy of every memoir.

I have furnished all the secretaries of Conferences with blank forms of minutes, with directions as to their use.

I have furnished the Bishops also with blank forms, and hope that by their returns I may be able to get the necessary answers. I depend upon both sources, determined, if possible, to secure prompt and reliable reports; through I almost despair of success.

The editors of all our Church papers will oblige me my copying this notice.

RELIGIOUS OPINIONS OF MR. CLAY.

Rev. Dr. Bullock gives an account of a visit of Henry Clay to his family. He says: Just before he left, the young ladies of my family, (about sixty of them,) to whom he had been introduced in the morning, at his own request came to receive his farewell. He arose, and with great feeling addressed them for about twenty minutes. It was one of the most sensible, appropriate, and pious addresses I ever heard. He alluded to his age and infirmities, and its being, in all probability, the last time he would ever meet them on earth, and he wished to leave with them his testimony to the value and importance of the Christian religion. He expressed his deep interest in the education of the rising generation of females, of the refining and elevating influences of education, with religion, to fit them for the positions they would be called upon to take in the world. He also alluded to his past life, and in the most feeling and impressive manner recommended to them the daily study of the Bible as well as attention to the text books of the school.

He said: "I am an old man. I have been a very wicked man. I have seen a great deal of the world, and I tell you nothing is so important to you as to be the true followers of Christ." It was to me a beautiful and sublime spectacle to see the first citizen of the Republic, upon whose accents our Senate had often hung entranced, and whose name and fame were world-wide, standing in the midst of that lovely youthful band, counseling and blessing them in patriarchal style. Although I had heard Mr. Clay in some of his greatest efforts at the bar and before the people, on no occasion did I ever feel that he was more truly great than when commending the religion of a crucified Savior to those young and admiring hearts. Another thing that deeply impressed me with the conviction that he was a true Christian was, the subdued and kindly feeling that he manifested to every human being. In the course of a long summer's day, things both past and present were freely touched upon, and in no instance did I discover even the shadow of bitterness or unkindness toward those who had opposed him in his most cherished plans. His great efforts in the Senate the ensuing winter for the preservation of the Union, and his calm and peaceful death in the spring, are a part of the public history of the country.

Bishop Pierce passed through Nashville, on his way to the St. Louis Conference. He made but a brief call, but long enough to visit the venerable senior Superintendent.

THE HISTORY OF STEAM.

Mr. Everett, in one of his eloquent addresses recently, gives the following strange and interesting account of the earlier efforts to introduce steam as a motive power. According to this history, the discovery was made three hundred years ago. Believing, as we do, that all sciences and arts are matters of divine revelation, how comprehensive and forcible the words of the prophet: "Lord who hath believed our report, and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" And how striking the words of Christ: "I have many things to say unto you, but ye are not able to bear them now."

Mr. Everett says: Providence offered this great problem of navigating the ocean by steam to every civilized nation almost on the globe. As long ago as the year 1543, there was a captain in Spain who constructed a vessel in the presence of the Emperor Charles V. (I state facts, sir, of but limited notoriety,) and in the presence of Charles V. and the court at Barcelona he exhibited a vessel of 200 tons propelled by an engine-construction which he kept a secret. But ancient documents tell us it was a monster cauldron boiler of water, and that there were two movable wheels on the outside of the vessel. The emperor was satisfied with the operation, but the treasurer of the kingdom made great objection to its introduction. The engine itself seems to have sprung to a point of perfection, hardly surpassed at the present day; for we are told that it was very expensive, and that the boiler was apt to explode. No encouragement was given to the enterprise. Spain was not ripe for it—the age was not ripe for it—and the poor contriver, a certain Blasco de Guerero, wearied and disgusted at the want of patronage, took the engine out of the vessel and allowed the ship to rot in the arsenal, and the secret of his machine was buried in his grave. This was in 1543; a century passes away, and Providence offers the same problem to be solved in France. In reference to this we have an extraordinary account, and from a source equally extraordinary—from the writings of a celebrated female, sir, in the middle of that century, equally renowned for her beauty, for her immoralities, and for her misfortune in longevity—for she lived to be 134 years of age—the famous Marion de l'Orme. There is a letter from this lady, written to her Admiral in 1641, which contains these astonishing details. It is an account of a visit she made with the Marquis of Worcester—where do you suppose, Mr. President?—"an account of some invention in steam navigation made in a mad-house." Marion de l'Orme says in this interesting letter, that, in company with the Marquis, she was crossing the court-yard of the dismal establishment, almost petrified with terror, and clinging to her companion, when she saw a frightful face through the bars of the building and heard this voice, "I am not mad; I am not mad. I have made a discovery which will enrich the kingdom which shall adopt it." Well, she asked the guide, what it meant; he shrugged his shoulders and said laughingly, "Not much—something about the powers of steam. "Upon this the lady laughed also, to think that a man should go mad on such a frivolous subject. The guide went on to say that the man's name was Solomon de Coste; that he came from Normandy four years before, and exhibited to the King an invention he had discovered, by which, by the power of steam, you could move a carriage, navigate the ocean—in short, if you believed him, said the guide, there was nothing you could not do by the power of steam. Cardinal Richelieu, who at that time was France itself, and who wielded the whole power of government—and, in truth, was an enlightened man, as worldly wisdom goes—was appealed to by Solomon de Coste. De Coste was a persevering man, and he followed Cardinal Richelieu from place to place, exhibiting his invention until the cardinal, getting tired of his importunities, sent him to the mad-house. There he was, sir, and there, the guide went on to say, "he has written a book, and here is a copy, called 'Motive Power.'" Well, sir, the Marquis of Worcester, who was an inventor, was much interested in the book, and incorporated a considerable portion in his well known work called "The Century of Invention." But you see, sir, from this anecdote, how France proved in 1641, as Spain proved in 1543, that she was unable to take up and wield this mortal thunderbolt. And so, sir, the problem of navigating the ocean by steam was reserved for the Anglo-Saxon race.

GOV. WISE ON HORSE RACING.

Gov. Wise, of Virginia, regretfully declines to attend the great horse show at Springfield. In his letter he says: "It has been said that nothing else than horse racing will improve and keep up the breed of fine blooded stock. I am not willing to believe any such thing.—Improved agriculture and the wealth it produces, will, in my opinion, do far more for the horse than ever the turf did. Race tracks, with a fashion for the sport of racing among the leading proprietors of a people, will impoverish them and dwindle the horse to a pony. The fine blood ought to be kept pure, in order that it may be crossed on the large and coarse stock. The thorough bred stallion crossed on the large Conestoga mare, until the cross attains three quarters of the blooded stock, is superior, I think, to the Cleveland bays of England. A venerated friend, Alexander Reid, Esq., now no more, of Washington county, Pa., introduced that cross, and I commend it to every man who knows how to make "a spire of grass to grow where one never grew before."

Emigration.—The Waco Democrat states that emigrants have already commenced pouring into that section of our State. The farmers all say that they are gathering from one-third to one-half more corn to the acre than they had anticipated. They have an abundant mast of acorns and pecans, and a heavy crop of plums and mustang grapes.

LAST DAYS OF BUNYAN.

At the little upper window of that lowly cottage in Bedford, is to be seen, of an evening, a faint light, casting athwart the curtain, a dark, deep shadow, as of a man in deep thought. It is Bunyan, with his Bible, and his glowing heart, and his magic pen, "sequestering" himself to his "beloved work of setting forth the glories of Immanuel." Night after night his studies are protracted far into the morning; for he does not serve the Lord with that which costs him nothing. Within the sixteen years which elapse betwixt his liberation and his death, that midnight lamp witnesses the production of not fewer than forty-five separate works. During the day his hours are occupied with his beloved flock, and with his evangelistic wanderings.

His iron frame is not what it has been. The twelve years in the "den" have left their traces, in a tread less elastic and in a brow more furrowed, though not less serene. And his abundant labors since have not arrested the course of the furrows, deepening line. It is the seed-corn of a great to-morrow which he handles, and he may not trifle with his errand.

And one trial visits him, which goes deeper into his soul than all the rest. It is that "poor blind one," smitten by the icy finger of death. It is said of the Swiss, by one of our poets, that,

"The loud torrent and the whirlwind's roar
But bind him to his native mountains more."

To this afflicted child, because of the very ruggedness of her lot, her father's heart has clung with a most peculiar love. She is sick now; and this other self, as she lies there so faint, seems to prostrate him at her side. Day after day, night after night, the harrowed father watches. But she is gone! And O, what a blank! "In all these dead," says Vinet, "we ourselves die. A part of our life, and of our heart, is buried in each of these tombs." The stroke Bunyan never recovers. It seems as if already he were more than half away.

His spirit, too, is trembling for the ark of God. The apostate James has been imbruing his hands in the blood of God's holiest saints. Argyle has fallen on the scaffold, "thanking God that he has supported him wonderfully." And Rumbold has fallen at his side, "blessing God's holy name" that he has "given him grace to adhere to his cause in an evil day," and declaring that, "if every hair of his head were a man, he would in that quarrel venture them all." "Deliverance," indeed, according to the almost prophetic words of Argyle, pronounced in his closing hours, "is to come in very suddenly;" but the cloud is as yet dark overhead, unrelieved by any silver lining.

In the town of Reading there resides a family, bitterly opposed to the work of God. The eldest son has been at Cambridge, and hearing of the great preacher, has gone one night to listen. Arrested by the word, he has returned to his home "a new man." The father, greatly offended, has determined to disinherit him. Day by day the estrangement grows more painful. At length the thought occurs: "Will not my spiritual father come and mediate? And his prayers, will not they avail?"

Bunyan sets out for Reading, and having earned the blessing of the peacemaker, he reaches London on his way home. A drenching rain upon the road has brought on fits of shivering, and he is taken seriously ill.

From the first a presentiment seizes him that he is nearing the "black river." Calling for pen, ink, and paper, he addresses to his flock a few sentences of parting tenderness. "Thus have I written to you," says he, "before I die, to provoke you to faith and holiness, and to love one another when I am deceased and shall be in paradise, as through grace, I comfortably believe."

Already the air of Beulah surrounds him with fragrant breezes. "In heaven," says he to one kind friend who has come to visit him, "we shall find blessings in their purity, without any ingredient to embitter, with everything to sweet it."

And again: "Before you enter into prayer ask thy soul these questions: To what end, O my soul, art thou, retired into this place? Art thou come to converse with the Lord in prayer? Is thy business slight? Is it not concerning the welfare of thy soul?"

In these last hours, this closet-fellowship, again and again he urges. "Pray often," he says one morning, with great earnestness, "pray often, for prayer is a shield to the soul, a sacrifice to God, and a scourge to Satan." And still again: "When thou prayest, rather let thy heart be without words, than thy words without heart. And remember," he adds emphatically, "either prayer will make thee cease from sin, or sin will certainly entice thee to cease from prayer."

The ague grows more alarming; and once and again, in the intervals of its feverish paroxysms, his eye is lifted upward, and the whisper is breathed: "O to depart and to be with Christ! far, far better!" A few more hours and the longing is granted; he "leaves behind him in the river" his "mortal garment;" and from the humble dwelling in Snowhill, his great spirit is wafted upward to "the city beyond the clouds."

It is on the last day of August, 1688, and in the sixtieth year of his age. [Baillie's Life Studies.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

"Dictionary English is something very different, not only from common colloquial English, but even from that of ordinary written composition. Instead of about forty thousand words, the number estimated in the language, there is probably no single author, who has employed our tongue, from whose works, however voluminous, so many as ten thousand words could be collected. And of the forty thousand words, there are certainly many more than one half that are only employed—if they are ever employed at all—on the rarest occasions. We should any of us be surprised to find, if we counted them, with how small a number of words we manage to express all that we have to say, either with our lips, or even with the pen. Our common literary English, probably, hardly extends to ten thousand words; our common spoken English hardly to five thousand."

Such are the facts of our language as expressed by a late writer in the Dublin University Magazine. Very similar is the opinion of Dr. Johnson, given in the following extract from the Preface to his Dictionary: "From the authors which rose in the time of Elizabeth a speech might be formed adequate to all the purposes of use and elegance. If the language of theology were extracted from Hooker and the translation of the Bible; the terms of natural knowledge from Bacon; the phrases of policy, war, and navigation from Raleigh; the dialect of poetry and fiction from Spenser and Sidney; and the diction of common life from Shakspeare, few ideas would be lost to mankind, for want of English words, in which they might be expressed."

NEW ORLEANS:

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1858.

THE LAY QUESTION.

For some time previous to the last General Conference, the question of "lay delegation" was freely discussed in some of our Church papers, and the proposition to incorporate it in our ecclesiastical economy received more or less commendation. Nothing more clearly reveals the confidence, liberality, and freedom of thought and speech, existing in the Southern Methodist Church, than the facts, that the General Conference very decidedly declined to adopt such recommendations, and yet re-elected their authors to their former editorships, and that the whole Church is content with such action.

The wise and good men who have been oracles in our Church have always had an abiding conviction of the utter difference between theories, however plausible, and the practical workings and wants of Methodism. Theoretical Methodism is just as different from practical Methodism, as French Republicanism is from American Republicanism. French Republicans have always built upon favorite theories. American Republicans upon present facts and necessities. And so with theoretical and practical Methodists. From the days of Whitefield, down through the succession of offshoots from the main body, the theorists have had the advantage in words, and the practicals have had the advantage in facts. Consequently, to this day, the most "taking" theories of Methodist economy are outside of the pale of regular Methodism; but they continue theories and nothing else—souls without bodies; while regular Methodism, leaving theories aside, has been an increasingly wonderful fact, the great root of innumerable other facts—a soul and a body.

We have been satisfied, therefore, to let the whole matter alone—to not insist upon the introduction of "lay delegation," for we could not decide as to its necessity or benefit—and to not violently resist a tendency supported by many wise and good men. We have long since determined, on this and all other questions, to be true Wesleyans—that is, to simply follow, without presumptuous haste, and without tardy unbelief, the indications of Providence, as did our great founder. This, we are convinced, is the true Methodistic philosophy in all questions of the kind.

Whenever there is a general conviction in the laity and ministers of our Church that the interests of the cause of Christ, as committed to us, demand such a radical change in our economy, we have no fear but that the General Conference, without any injurious agitation, will incorporate it. Until there is such general conviction, we have perfect confidence that the General Conference, as at the last session, will decline such action. That there is no general conviction of the necessity of "lay delegation" at present, either in the laity or ministry, is self-evident. "Lay co-operation," as now provided for in our Discipline, promises everything we have sought in the discussion of the subject. "Lay delegation," as distinguished from, and additional to, "lay co-operation," promises absolutely nothing at all. And our editors, in discussing this matter previous to the General Conference, meant, substantially, "lay co-operation," when they used the other word. The end they sought has been obtained, and the question is settled for good, we suppose.

Whatever may be the final fate of the question, we have no fears of any "lay conventions," or other injurious agitations, as in the Northern Methodist Church. The conservatism, the harmony, the entire confidence, prevalent in our Church, on all subjects, is matter of devout gratitude to God. There is in our laity an elevated moral tone, a consciousness of possessing all legitimate influence, and a knowledge that their counsels have as much weight in our Conferences as any other counsels, not to be found, we apprehend, in the laity of any other branch of Methodism.

"Lay co-operation," to the fullest extent, has long been felt to be essentially necessary, and the last General Conference, re-affirming and expanding its action taken in 1850, has formally provided for its introduction. With that we are perfectly content, and we hope to see the provision made generally and fully available. And we trust that there will be no confounding of the two ideas of "lay delegation" and "lay co-operation." Such confusion would "darken counsel," destroy confidence, and paralyze legitimate action. It has been said by one of our Advocates, that "lay co-operation" is only the "poetry," and "lay delegation" the "prose." The reverse is the case. And as to the greater "political adequacy" of "lay delegation" assumed by the same paper, that is precisely what the last General Conference and the "fathers" of Methodism generally have failed to be convinced of. Evangelical adequacy would better become Methodist pens and tongues. Those who have acted upon the theory of this greater "political adequacy" have not realized their assumptions and hopes in its adoption. Let us not be hasty to forsake the fact of a successful economy, in order to adopt a theory unsuccessful, so far, in practice.

We wish to distinctly record our denial of the assumption of the Christian Advocate and Journal, to the effect that there is any active and increasing interest in our Church on the question of "lay delegation." With great unanimity, the General Conference declined adopting it, and there has been no demurrer to its action. The whole Church is content to develope the benefits of "lay co-operation." In the language of the Nashville Advocate, "'lay delegation' hath an extent, tendency, association of ideas, a 'political adequacy,' and ecclesiastical significance of its own. It is a different thing, and in past controversy was disposed of. We should regret to see the line of policy which our Church is so safely pursuing and gradually enlarging upon to the satisfaction of all, interrupted and thwarted by the introduction of invidious terms, dividing policies, and misleading issues."

"NOTHING TO GET READY."

This was the language, in his last moments—not of Bishop Bascom, not of Bishop Capers, not of Dr. Bunting—but of William B. Tipton, an humble, unnoted, local Methodist preacher in Mobile. "Just before he died, a friend asked, 'Are you ready?' 'Ready!' he exclaimed, 'I have nothing to get ready. Christ has prepared all things for me.'" In the whole catalogue of dying utterances, treasured in the heart of the world, we recollect nothing more simply sublime. An esteemed friend, on reading the account, remarked that such a dying testimony was worth living for, and that he had read nothing of the kind that possessed more moral grandeur.

What a comprehensive statement of the sufficiency of the atonement of Christ! "Nothing to get ready. Christ hath prepared all things for me." What a vivid view of the power and sufficiency of faith, alone, in the blood of Jesus for pardon and salvation! "Nothing to get ready. Christ hath prepared all things for me." "Faith, without works, is dead." "Show me thy faith without thy works, and I will show thee my faith by my works." We are to be "created anew in Christ Jesus, unto good works." And hence, we hear of Bro. Tipton, that he "well and faithfully performed his duties; ever ready to labor to the extent of his ability for his Master's cause and kingdom." "On the Sabbath preceding his death, at sunrise, he met the different classes of the State street Colored Church; at eleven, he preached in Wesley Chapel—it is said, with unusual unction and power; at three, in the afternoon, he was again at State-street Church, laboring with the negroes." From thence, he went home with a burning fever, to die and go to heaven.

APPOINTING AUTHORS.

From a letter in Zion's Herald, from England, we learn that the biographer of Dr. Bunting is to be his second son, Thomas Perceval Bunting, Esq.; his elder brother, Rev. William M. Bunting, declining the task. The correspondent is dissatisfied that a minister was not appointed to this work. He says the Wesleyan Conference could have supplied more than one eminently qualified writer, for the work of preparing a life worthy of the best and most richly endowed of Methodist preachers. We need only mention, he adds, the names of Thomas Jackson, John Scott, Isaac Keeling, George Osborne, W. L. Thornton, William Arthur, Dr. Hoole, Dr. Johnson, and Dr. Hannah.

We have long been impressed with the conviction, that one of the greatest evils of religious literature is, the appointment of particular men to write particular books. It seems to us to be utterly opposed to all ideas of spontaneity, inspiration, and power. If men write books, otherwise than of their own instinctive motion, they will be very apt to be dull books. Books must grow, not be manufactured. The Church should encourage, sanction and patronize authorship, but not divide the field of literature into "cironits," "stations" and "missions," and "appoint" men to "fill" them.

One evil fruit of this and kindred policies is, that, while general literature, on its own merits, takes the country, religious literature has to be too much pushed by agencies. Let us have more books which push themselves. The "middle-wall of partition" between pure general literature and religious literature should be "broken down," and our endowed Church publishing-houses should encourage the cultivation of the whole field. Dr. Wightman's Life of Bishop Capers comes out in the right way. The Church sanctions and patronizes a great and demanded work, written by the right man, of his own motion And the result is, it is a book of the times, not of the Church merely. But why not also patronize writers of history, philosophy, poetry and polite literature? Why not? Who will answer? Why not sanctify and make available the entire genius and taste of the country? The genius and taste of the country which have a fitness to take form in literature, needs a nursing mother, and that mother need a larger family of children; especially should she desire to call home to her own protection and nurture, her children who have strayed from her.

THE CENTRE OF THE GREAT VALLEY.

We verily believe that not until recently have the people of this city and of the interior, begun to fully appreciate the present importance and future destiny of this great commercial metropolis. The Bulletin, in a notice of the Mayor's message, and in urging the importance of a city government composed of the best and wisest citizens, without respect to party, says that it seems to be conceded on all hands, that nothing but local matters stand in the way of one of the most splendid destinies for this city that was ever realized by any metropolis since the dawn of civilization. Philosophers, business men, persons of all shades of opinion and of varied pursuits in life are found concurring in this grand idea. Situated at the mouth of a stream that drains half of this part of the Continent, and of which it is nature's own great outlet; an area that in respect to soil and climate is certainly unsurpassed, if equaled by any portion of the globe of the same dimensions, what but local obstacles can prevent its swelling into a magnificent cornucopia, a mart of opulent commerce that should excite the wonder and admiration of the world?

Intelligent travelers and writers, at a distance, do not attempt to conceal their surprise either at the vast resources within reach of New Orleans, or the little which its citizens, represented in its authorities, do, to develop these resources, or to reap from them that harvest of wealth and greatness which they stand ready to yield.

Our trade can be increased four-fold; the value of our real estate similarly augmented; manufacturers may give steady and remunerative employment to tens of thousands in our midst, by the right kind of Municipal policy—a policy that should encourage every species of honest industry, and make the city at once the abode of health, safety, wealth, science, arts, and refinement.

In this connection, it is proper to say that the Churches should also be fully awake to the importance of this great field. An article on our first page, by Rev. C. J. Halberg, is appropriate, on this subject. In our own Church, every power that can in any wise strengthen our interests here—our paper, our depository, our Churches—is demanded, and will, if brought to bear, redound to the good of the whole Church.

TREATMENT OF YELLOW FEVER "EMPIRICAL."

The True Delta of this city, in an article on "two new remedies in yellow fever" proposed by Dr. Fenner, makes use of the following remarks:

"It certainly cannot be doubted, as Dr. Fenner very truly states, that up to this time the practice in the disease has been empirical, indeed. • • Our conviction this day is that, had there been no doctoring whatever, and the disease been left to the care of good and attentive nurses solely, the mortality would have been less than it is known to have been by many thousands • • Are the new remedies now proposed, as in some measure specifics, entitled to any more credit than the thousand other nostrums which, with reputed partial success, have been tried, confided in, and finally discarded? • • Dr. Fenner and his opinions are entitled to very great respect. • • But feeling, with laudable mortification, the opprobrium which attaches to medical science from the past unsuccess of its ministers, it is not surprising if, in his extreme anxiety to find a curative agent of reliable character, he should in his first satisfactory trials of veratrum viride and chlorine, give way to hopes the future may not realize.

The above remarks, we respectfully suggest, are too sweeping—not justified by the facts, and unjust to the physicians of this city. They seem to insist upon a "specific" in yellow fever. There is, we believe, no specific for any fever. To say nothing of the remarkable assumption that "nurses"—uneducated women—know more about the treatment of yellow fever than men thoroughly educated and largely experienced, we think it plain that nurses have learned most of what they know from physicians. As to the asserted "past unsuccess" of physicians in the treatment of yellow fever, our observation is, that physicians are as successful in the treatment of yellow fever as in the treatment of bilious, typhoid, congestive, or other fevers. Did these last-named fevers prevail as epidemics, in large cities, with large foreign and poor population, there would be as much cause, we suppose, of the complaint of "unsuccess" as now exists in connection with yellow fever.

Numbers of the experienced and established physicians of this city have been successful, in the present and past epidemics, in curing as large a majority of their yellow fever cases, as can be cited in the practice of the best interior physicians in connection with the common fevers of the country. This can be established by the most reliable testimony. Many die, it is true; but it should be remembered, that the sickness is prevalent among thousands at the same time—most of them are dissipated, poor, and unprovided with necessary comforts—many are not heard of until they are nearly dead; and, worst of all, many of them, either from ignorance, neglect, or parsimony, or all three together, have been sick long enough to be well-nigh hopeless before they call in a physician.

In the ten to fifteen thousand victims of yellow fever in 1853, but about fifteen hundred, we are informed, were Americans. And, according to what we have seen this year, many of them died from relapses, caused by imprudence after convalescence; many died of quackery, and many died from the amount of spirits they were in the habit of drinking, which in yellow fever, is more dangerous than the disease. The experienced and successful physicians can no more be saddled with all these things than can ministers of the gospel be saddled with the wickedness of an ungodly world. When we learn what is meant by "empirical" medical practice, in yellow fever, we may be inclined to ask if there is any other kind of practice, in any fever.

LAY DELEGATION IN THE NORTH.

The Oregon Annual Conference of the Northern Methodist Church, at its recent session, adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That this Conference request the General Conference at its next session to provide in the Discipline for lay representation in the annual and General Conferences on all the financial, educational, and benevolent matters usually receiving Conference action; and also to provide that the laity shall never have a vote in the Annual, or General Conference, which shall either modify or abrogate the itinerancy.

Resolved, That the bishops be respectfully requested to bring the action of this Conference, on the subject of lay delegation, as contained in the foregoing resolution, before the Annual Conferences, requesting their concurrence therein.

The Christian Advocate and Journal favors the movement. It says: "This, then, brings the question formally before the whole Church, as represented in the Conferences. The bishops will do well, we think, to present it, according to the last resolution, at the earliest possible time, that it may not be forestalled and crowded out by other questions. Personally, we believe the time has come, not only for the discussion of this momentous question, but for prudent and effective action upon it; and its practical settlement will, we doubt not, be one of the greatest securities of future prosperity to Methodism."

We apprehend that the same confounding of of "lay delegation" and "lay co-operation," which, to some extent, has existed in the Southern Church, is about to occur in the Northern Church. Although called by the former name, the above resolutions only provide, in fact, for the latter, so far as we can see.

Mexico, according to present appearances, is about to lose her nationality by a "natural death." What was that magnificent country designed for? is a question for every Christian and patriot. Has the United States no duty in this direction?

WHY INSINUATE?

"A Dueling Methodist.—The Montgomery Confederation says that it is apprehended that the Hon. Sherard Clemens, M. C., who was severely wounded in the late duel with O. Jennings Wise, one of the associate editors of the Richmond Enquirer, is not likely to recover. At the fourth fire, it will be recollected, Clemens was wounded in the hip joint, and there are evidences of mortification having taken place. Mr. Clemens was a prominent member of the Methodist Church, and is constantly surrounded, and every possible attention paid by his religious associates, as well as others.

The above we find in the Bulletin of this city, but have seen it in other papers also. Whether or not Mr. Clemens is a Methodist, we cannot tell. We should regret to learn that he is, however worthy as a gentlman of the world. If he is, we do not object to the statement of the fact, and of the lamentable inconsistency and delinquency in which the duel involves him. But the statement, in the same connection, that he receives "attention" from "his religious associates," is conceived in a spirit not to be envied. Why should not "his religious associates" pay him attention in his sufferings? Should common humanity be denied an erring friend, to any nothing of the ties and obligations of friendship? A refusal, on the part of Christian men and ministers, to visit any man, friend or not, in a similar situation, would be an abominable Pharisaism, and would soon receive the denunciation of those very journals which now delight in whispering about the insinuation, that Mr. Clemens, being a Methodist and attended by "his religious associates," something must be wrong about those "associates." Such is current candor.

"PREACHERS WITH SMALL SALARIES."

The Courier of this city gives the public the following item of information. In an article denouncing, most justly as we conceive, that system of commercial "spying out," said to be carried on by what is called "Commercial Agencies," whose "chief implements are a great number of people who are sent all over the country to pry into the private concerns of every merchant, shopkeeper or man of business, from northeast Maine to southwest Texas." It says:

"These Paul Prys are usually preachers with small salaries, two-penny lawyers, who are too lazy to work and too timid to steal, or idle vagabonds willing to earn dimes enough to pay for their whisky, by gathering facts or inventing falsehoods about their mercantile neighbors."

These "preachers with small salaries," are said by the Courier to be among the informers "resident in the vicinity," in contradistinction to those "sent" out from the "Eastern cities." Putting different things together, we have this assertion of the Courier, in substance: That preachers, resident in the South, in the employ of Churches on "salary," are engaged in a "work which military men universally regard as worthy of summary and disgraceful death." We publish the item simply as a matter of news, and also, as an instance of the superior facilities possessed by the Courier of finding out facts? hitherto unknown to the press and the public. According to the Courier, "lawyers" are also a different class of people from what we may imagined. In the South, we did not know that any thing could be obtained for "two-pence," much less lawyers' services.

LOUISVILLE CONFERENCE.

Mr. Editor: The Louisville Conference is now in session at this place; and all things are moving on prosperously, and with most commendable good nature and harmony. Bishop Kavanaugh is presiding.

On Wednesday morning the Conference received on trial, and into full connection, a force of eighteen fine-looking, strong young men, who looked very much to me like doing something in the way of fighting the battles of the Lord and of truth.

One of their number, the Rev. Absalom Davis, has fallen in the ranks, but his death was not known till the morning of the second day of the session. O how mysterious is the Providence of God!

The Louisville Conference is a fine body of preachers, doing a work of God in this country; they are making a very favorable impression upon this community. The weather is fair, and every thing proceeding as well as can be desired. This Conference is in an improving condition.

On Friday morning, the Committee previously appointed on the question of a Book and Tract Depository, made their report to Conference. The Committee had held three sessions, in considering the matter and in consultations with the Financial Secretary.

The Plan, as published and submitted to the Conferences, was examined with unusual care and discrimination. Every point was most carefully and critically examined; and the Committee was unanimous in its report of a Constitution establishing a Depository, with a capital of Fifty Thousand dollars, with another Fifty Thousand Dollars for the publishing-house.

The report was well received and carefully considered by the Conference. It closed by a resolution asking the appointment of Brother A. H. Redford, by the Bishop, to the Agency of the Book and Tract Society. The whole measure passed the vote of the Conference unanimously, and with marks of decided approbation. The vote requesting the appointment of Brother Redford to the agency, was made with marked interest and respect to the appointee. It was a unanimous, rising vote.

This Conference appears to be well waked up with regard to this enterprise; and will, I think, in a reasonable time, raise $100,000 for its Depository, and the Publishing-House, that is, $50,000 for each.

The Church is waking up to this enterprise in earnest, and will carry it forward.

I will endeavor to send you the appointments, if the press of my engagements permit.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Oct. 8, 1858. R. ABBEY.

Mr. Editor: The Louisville Conference is drawing to a close. The session is most pleasant and harmonious. The Conference is in a most prosperous and increasing condition. Quite a large accession is made to it at the present time.

Hopkinsville is a pleasant town of 3,000 inhabitants, without a doggery. This speaks well for this part of Kentucky—in this age, when it is said that drunkenness is increasing in the State.

A tolerably fair business is done in this town in the way of churches. Besides the Methodist and Presbyterian churches, which are large and commodious, there is the Baptist church. They claim to be the only Church of Christ, I am told, in the place. Then we have here the "Christian Church," which is the only Christian Church in the place. And then, last and least—I beg pardon for not placing it first—we have "the Church," which, in contradistinction from the "sects," is the only true and authorized Church!

Bishop Smith did not arrive here on Sunday last, as was expected, and consequently the town suffered the misfortune of not having the Gospel authoritatively preached in it on the Sabbath. Where will folly end?

This would have been a good opportunity for the compassionate, capacious, and expansive bishop to have consummated his intention of taking the Methodist church into his little sect. The bishop's horse got lame, or some other such like calamity, caused the four crowded churches here on Sunday to be without a Gospel "by authority;" for in the absence of the "by authority" bishop, there were no persons here to preach except Bishop Kavenaugh, and fifty or a hundred other such like preachers.

The vote on concurrence with the General Conference, in relation to striking the Slavery Legislation from the Discipline, was taken this morning. It resulted as follows:

For concurrence, 48.

Non-concurrence, 17.

There were about fifteen or sixteen absent. Some few gave reasons for the vote they gave, but the question passed off without a manifestation of more interest than is usually seen on other questions.

On Monday afternoon the Conference proceeded to subscribe for shares in their Book and Tract Society under their Constitution, when $2,000 was immediately subscribed. Their prospects are good.

The Conference adopted the plan of book and tract operation, submitted by the Financial Secretary of the Publishing House, with promptness and readiness. They will do well in this regard.

Brother A. H. Redford, one of the old and most efficient members of the Conference, was appointed agent of the Book and Tract Society. It was on all hands conceded that he was eminently the man for the work.

Yours, truly, &c., R. Abbey.

Hopkinsville, Ky., October, 1858.

EDUCATIONAL SOCIETIES.

Summerfield, October 14, 185

Mr. Editor: As President of the Preach Educational Society, permit me to say we doing a good and great work. We had past session five indigent young men in sch all of deep piety, and much promise to church. During vacation they have been gaged in teaching and preaching, doing good.

We now have nine, and others to come To aid these young men in qualifying selves for useful positions in the ministry, work that commends itself to all the lovers Methodism, and of God.

I want to say to our brethren of the mini of the Alabama Conference, to pay the boa and tuition of these young men, we need $2,000. Summerfield is the only place that given a generous response to this good c this year. It is very highly appreciated the laity. Do give them a chance to before Conference. Yours truly,

R. A. Bass.

P. S.—Our schools are opening well: three hundred in the three schools. In Female College one hundred and thirty entered, and many others to come in.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

By a private letter, we learn that the pres session of this Institution opened with an couraging number of students, and that siderable increase is expected, soon. The bers of the Faculty are all at their post fine health and spirits. They have had sickness at Jackson. The good prospects this excellent Institution will be matter of gr fication to its many friends throughout Southwest.

We heard of an incident, the other d which, to us, was of great interest. At late Commencement, three of the most grace speakers were Spanish students, sent fr New Orleans, we believe, by their friends this country, to whose care they had been by their parents or guardians. Spanish dents of English, and English students Spanish, are among the most significant hopeful indications. They sustain a relation the future character and extension of Southe civilization not now fully realized. No you Southerner's education should be deemed com plete unless he is master of the Spanish lan guage; and Spanish youths should pay equa attention to the English. A college which neglects this, is not a college for the time.

REV. DR. WALKER.

Last Saturday intelligence was received in this city that Rev. Dr. J. B. Walker, Presidin Elder of this District, was sick with yellow fever at Baton Rouge. Rev. Dr. Keener, takin boat on Saturday evening, hastened to attend him. We are glad to learn that he is recover ing. He had been holding a quarterly meeting on Bayou Grosse Tete, and was attacked in the cars while on his way to Baton Rouge, where he took his bed at the residence of Dr. Buffing ton. He was under the impression that a fever which he had in 1854 was the yellow fever; but it seems he was mistaken.

REV. DR. PALMER.

Last Saturday Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer, of the Presbyterian Church, was attacked with yellow fever. We are happy to learn that he is recovering. Most of his family have been attacked, but are recovering. We rejoice with them, and with our Presbyterian brethren. Our brother editor of the True Witness, and several of his family, have had the fever, but are now well. The Lord has been very merciful to the unacclimated ministry during the present epidemic.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

HOW THINGS RIPEN.

It does seem, says the Northern Christinn Advocate, as if the seeds of great and small movements and inventions and devices were scattered broadcast, lodging here and there in the souls of many men. And as the same vegetable ripens in many gardens in about the same time, and turns red and golden at nearly the same epoch, so that when one man has ripe tomatoes, another man is just on the point of having them, and the former can brag little. So the same device comes to its maturity in many minds about the same time. It is not doubted but if Columbus had not discovered American, some one else would speedily have found it, for the navigation of the time shows that the idea of a Western Continent was maturing itself in many minds. Many were thinking of a Reformation when Luther arose; a new Evangelism was dawning on many when Wesley caught its radiance. DuFay and Franklin worked out the fact of electricity at the same time, without the least connivance, one in France and the other in Philadelphia.—There are many competitors for the honor of discovering the nature of steam, and inventing its various useful appliances. Fulton must divide his honors, Stephenson must divide his honors. It is now claimed for Oersted, a Dane, that he hit upon the telegraphic secret before Morse, while in the details, Morse has to give a share of honor to House and Bain. All these things illustrate the march of mind. The world gets up to an idea, as an irregular procession goes up a hill, reaching points here and there, not all at once, nor yet any one, even the foremost, much in advance of the others. How drolly the idea of the sewing machines was reached by the many artists now so clamorous in the market! And even the Ocean Telegraph, if Mr. Field had not laid it, would have been laid at about this time, for the thought was with many people. We cannot now say what will be the next thing, what thing shall turn up ripe and ready to human uses. But it will be something not just now thought of, but which will follow the things we now have, as successive summer fruits and vegetables follow each other in an easy and delightful succession, making life wholesome and luxurious.

There is seed enough, too, to be ripening for a long summer. We mean the human mind is shifty and copious enough to improve on its improvements, and devise better devices, until it has subdued this earth, and furnished it with fixtures as far beyond the present as this is beyond simple barbarism.

Thus, all history is organic, and events, and systems, and human doctrines and customs, generically develop from a pristine germ or seed. A great thought lies just here. Action and re-action, influence prospective and retrospective, relation, connection, cause and sequence, are traceable in all the operations of mind, and in all the actions of men in society. The event of to-day is the seed of a previous planting, and in its turn, the harbinger and proximate or remote cause of another event still in the future. We talk of men as discovering, acting, and accomplishing, but each man's acts, each discovery, each developed idea, is complicated with other men's thoughts and acts, which have by cause or incident evolved it. And so it is that where there is no written or preserved thoughts, no permanent form in which to place them so that one man cannot avail himself of another man's labor, there is no improvement—the human mind is staguant, dwarfs and deteriorates—is indeed what all savages are. And where so many minds work at one and the same result, it often happens that one man, perhaps not the most worthy, gets the chief glory. Thus, Columbus discovers this country, and Americus gives it a name.

HOW TO SELL BOOKS.

Take a catalogue with you on the circuit, or in your pastoral visitations in your station. Exhibit the various items to your brethren; point out especially such works as you think adapted to the age, condition, and circumstances of each member. One wishes a family Bible, another a Hymn Book, a third wants a Discipline, a fourth Wesley's Sermons, and so on. You will soon have a sufficient quantity engaged to fill a box. Then make out your order and send for the books; and by the time they reach you, you can engage enough for another box. Thus progressing, you will soon go far towards supplying your people with such works as they may need, and run no risk of having unsold books on hand. Try It.

JACOBINISM IN ENGLAND.

An English correspondent says that the anti-Protestant policy of the present English Administration is substantially that of James II. Refusing army-chaplains from the Free Church of Scotland, and the Presbyterian Church, they have recently appointed nineteen Roman Catholic chaplains, besides those appointed during the Crimean war. The course they are pursuing is the very same anti-national, anti-Protestant, time-serving, truckling course which landed the country in all the humiliations, disasters, and disgrace from which it was mercifully delivered by the opportune appearance on British shores of the Prince of Orange, with banner unfurled, "For the Protestant Religion and the Liberties of England."

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

We call attention to the new advertisement of this Institution. Our good friend, Rev. Dr. Thweatt, is still at its head, and pushing forward its interests and fortunes with his usual enthusiastic vigor. We wish him a success as solid, as large, and as luxuriant as his body and his soul. He has a full corps of assistants, and will spare no pains to increase and maintain the reputation of Mansfield. Commit your daughters to his charge, and he will give a good account of them.

The Memphis Christian Advocate is flourishing, rejoicing particularly in a fine corps of correspondents.

THE REVIVAL.

We are led to believe that a great revival—greater than any in the past—is now within the compass of the Christian Churches of this country. In illustration, we simply call attention to the revival intelligence which has reached us during the present week.

From the Alabama Conference, we have received the following accounts:

Bow Ridge Circuit, as we learn by a letter from Rev. Angus Dowling, has been blessed with a revival at the Woodham settlement—conducted by Rev. R. Smilie, assisted by Revs. Miller, Gibson and Metcalf—in which the altar was crowded with penitents, almost from the beginning—many were soundly converted, and fifty-nine joined the Church.

Since then, the local preachers began a meeting at Old Zion Church, which is still going on. At the date of writing, several had been converted, and nineteen had joined the Church. Since the last quarterly meeting, Sept. 5, ninety-four persons, known to the writer, had joined the Church, and there were other meetings he had not heard from. Bro. Dowling writes, that the power of God was being manifested in a wonderful manner.

From Mount Zion Circuit, Rev. E. B. Norton writes: "I have just closed a round of protracted meetings. The first was held at a Church called New Bethel, embracing the third Sabbath in July. For depth and interest I do not think I ever saw it exceeded. During the nine days, twenty-eight conversions, and forty added to the Church—which was most powerfully revived. The next one was the third quarterly meeting; Brother Hoger, P. E., preached ably for us. It continued four days; two or three conversions and six accessions. The next one, was at Mount Pleasant—there were sixteen accessions, and twelve or fifteen conversions. The Church, generally, was revived. The next was at Bethlehem; there the Lord met with us, and poured out his Spirit abundantly. There were added to the Church twenty-three souls, and twelve or fifteen professed to find peace in Christ. The next, was at a Church, called New Prospect, in a neighborhood where little good had heretofore been accomplished. We held nine days. The good Lord was gracious—there were fifteen conversions, and twenty accessions. It was certainly a good meeting. I went thence to Central Point, where the Baptist brethren had just closed, having baptized nine souls. We held several days; there were several who professed to find peace in Christ, and nine connected themselves with the Church. The next meeting was held at Mount Zion Church. Seven converts, and twelve accessions—the Church was graciously revived. I then went to a Church, called Pleasant Ridge, where the good Lord was with us in mighty power—eighteen professed faith in Christ, and twenty-three accessions to the Church. The last, held at Hopewell Church—it was certainly a gracious time—ten were converted, and twenty-six joined the Church. In all, seven have joined us from the Baptist Church, not proselyted, but "ring-fired." I would have named something about the local help which I have had, but, as I intended to be short, I have omitted it. The Mount Zion locality is pretty hard to beat. I have thus given as short and concise a sketch of the revival on Mount Zion Circuit as I could."

From Honeytown, Dale county, Rev. Z. Dowling writes: "God has mercifully visited us with a most gracious revival at Zion Church. Our meeting commenced on the 18th of September, and continued till Wednesday, the 29th—and resulted in eighteen admissions, on trial; four or five professed to have obtained pardoning mercy through faith in Christ Jesus. The Church is, also, very much stirred up to duty. We consider this a very signal triumph of grace in this neighborhood—carried on, mainly, by the labor of local ministers."

From Scottsville Circuit, Rev. J. T. M. Gregory writes: "The Lord has visited the people of Scottsville Circuit, in much mercy. On the 23d July, I commenced a meeting at Scottsville, which continued till the first day of August; which resulted in thirty-six conversions twenty-three accessions, and about thirty mourners still pleading for mercy. The Church has been abundantly revived. On the 6th of August, we commenced a meeting at Shiloh Church, which was conducted, principally, by local brethren—and resulted in a number of conversions and fifteen accessions. On the 16th September, began a camp-meeting, at Friendship Camp-ground, which continued until the morning of the 22d. The power of God was manifested, as never before witnessed in this portion of the country. On Monday night the convicting and converting power of God was displayed—nearly one hundred mourners were at the altar sueing for mercy. It resulted in fifty-three accessions—forty white, and thirteen colored. The number of conversions I am not able to give."

From Lower Peach-tree Circuit, Rev. T. S. Abernathy, writes: "God has not forgotten us. There is a revival-spirit all over the circuit. Within the last few weeks, some fifty or sixty have been converted to God, and added to the Church. None oppose us, but the admirers of Graves and the Iron Wheel. This is a great circuit. I hope God will send them a good preacher another year. The people are now ready for a general revival of religion."

From Dayton Mission, Rev. J. C. Hackabee writes: "I now transmit my report of the condition of the above-named Mission, for the second and third quarters of the present year. Since my last report, two appointments have been added to the Mission; and, one white person, and between twenty and thirty colored persons have been added to the Church. Forty-four adults, twenty colored and two white children have been baptized. The Mission now embraces some fifteen appointments, and, all circumstances considered, is doing well. There are many drawbacks, perhaps, neither necessary nor profitable to mention. Perhaps, no other people in the world more readily profit by the Gospel than the negro. If left to them, I am inclined to think, no plantation in this country would be destitute of preaching."

From Arcola Colored Mission, Rev. John Williamson writes: "I send you a third quarterly report of this Mission. There is no remarkable revival spirit in the bounds of this work; but, I am constrained to believe, there is a marked improvement in the piety of much the larger portion of the membership. I have received eight on probation, and baptized ten children. I have at last accomplished what has been often attempted—to collect funds to purchase a Mission-house, where the Missionary may find a home. I have purchased a house in Arcola, for which I have a deed to the Trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I have collected and paid over, $300; $100 is still due on the house and lot, which I shall be able to raise this year. This Mission suffers great loss of membership by removal; thirty-three have removed with letter, recently."

From the Mississippi Conference, we have received the following accounts:

From Monticello, Rev. A. B. Nicholson writes: "We have just closed a protracted meeting in this place, 15 whites and 10 blacks joined the church, and a goodly number professed religion. Those who joined were mostly young people, and of the first class. There never was such a meeting in this community before. Monticello is destined to become an important appointment in our Conference. They now talk of petitioning for the Annual Conference to be held in their town. Monticello is located on the banks of Pearl river, on a very high sandy bluff, one of the prettiest towns in the State, and is distinguished for intelligence. The Methodists have had an organized church here for several years, but badly situated, for the want of a suitable house of worship. Finally, the good women determined to have a church house. They persevered, in spite of opposition and ridicule, and have succeeded in completing in large, commodious, and well finished brick church, the most pleasant and beautiful in this part of the State, except the one Brother Whitworth build at Brookhaven. We now wind up our protracted meeting of ten days, in fine spirits—old church members glad, new converts rejoicing, and the best missionary collection for the size of the congregation I ever saw. The women made sister Lumbuth and child, in China, life members of the Missionary Society; the men made brother Lumbuth a life member, and the church in Monticello a life member. We have taken in one hundred and thirteen whites, and some fifty or sixty blacks, on our little circuit this year. Should not forget to say that it was under the preaching of brother Porter, of Copiah County, that our revival started in this place."

From Scotland Circuit, Rev. J. R. Bowen writes: "We commenced a meeting at Bethesda on the 25th September, and closed on the 30th. The Lord was with us in power. The entire membership have been revived. The spirit of class and prayer meetings is in the ascendant. Backsliders were reclaimed, and commenced working again in good earnest. Ten whites and eleven blacks were added to the church. We did not ascertain the precise number of converts, but there were several, of the clear and decided sort. This church has been in rather a depressed state for a long time, with heavy indebtedness for the new edifice bearing upon its energies, but this indebtedness is now swept away, and Zion is free. Congregations are larger and interested, and everything moves with a newborn life. Brother A. B. Nicholson, and W. G. Millsaps were with us. Rev. S. L. L. Scott was also with us, and preached with great power. A pleasing feature of our meeting was the union of spirit and effort among the brethren of the different denominations, all entering heartily into the work. O, for a universal spiritual brotherhood, rising above the narrow precincts of sect and party, and aiming at the one grand object, the salvation of souls. We have just closed a two days' meeting at Sweet Water. The fruits of our past revival were still manifest. The church was very much refreshed. On Sabbath, the congregation contributed in money and pledges $50, Conference collection."

From Bayou Pierre Circuit, Rev. V. H. Johnson writes: "The Lord has been with us in great power at Sarepta. We began the meeting September 25th, and continued until October 3d, during which time we had large congregation, and very attentive to the word—deep, pungent conviction among sinners—Holy Ghost conversions among mourners—the church greatly revived, and the cause of God gained a fresh impetus in that community. The immediate results of the meeting are, twenty-one accessions, about fifteen conversions, baptized ten children and two adults, received several into full communion, $22 Conference collection, $100 Missionary collection. Left between thirty and forty mourners at the altar."

From Rocky Springs Circuit, Rev. L. Ercanbrack writes: "We closed a nine days' meeting, held about five miles from Rocky Springs, in a beautiful grove, yesterday. There were seven very clear conversions, and two admissions. Among the converts were two aged men, both, I should judge, not far from sixty years old. One of them told me he had tried to believe for many years that religion was the greatest farce in the world—that he had read the Bible to see what he could find against it—that he had had no use for christians, nor any good feeling towards them, but that God had brought him to the very verge of the grave ten or eleven times, and raised him up, and he believed he had a design in it, and that was his salvation. He remarked that he had not joined for six months, but for life. He is a man of mind and decision, and no doubt he will make a valuable member. His dear wife was overjoyed with gladness, and gave praise to God that her prayer at last was heard. The membership was a good deal revived. Thanks to brothers Owens, Parker, and Ford."

From Georgetown Circuit, Rev. R. T. Hennington writes: "We have just closed our eighth protracted meeting, the whole occupying about forty-one days. Several things seemed to be against us, especially the want of ministerial aid, and sickness. On this account, several times when the Lord was present we were compelled to close. Yet the Lord has been with us in power. Our daily prayer has been, "Lord revive thy work," and in a great degree our prayer has been answered. We have not, however, realized all we desired, yet we are thankful for what has been done. About seventy whites and twenty-five blacks have joined the church this year. We are not certain as to the number of conversions, but not more than forty or fifty. The circuit is in good condition. It "pays the preacher" well, and gives liberally to the missionary cause. Our Conference collection is good."

From Buffalo Circuit, Rev. C. A. McNeil writes: "We closed a four days' meeting at Hopewell Church last Sabbath. God is with us in power and great glory. Twenty-six accessions—seventeen conversions—nearly the entire membership have been powerfully revived—many backsliders were renewed again unto good works. Such is the spirit of the work. May God be praised forever and forever."

From Athens Circuit, Rev. J. D. Cameron writes: "We are in the enjoyment of a gracious revival on this circuit. Have had a revival at every protracted meeting we have held, and have been engaged in holding protracted meetings ever since the middle of July. Have just closed a camp meeting which was one of the best I ever attended. There were about fifteen good tents, and one of the finest arbours I ever have seen, all built this year. We had the assistance of Bishop Paine and brother Crouch, of the Aberdeen station, with the local brethren of this and the adjoining circuits. The camp meeting lasted one week, and resulted in about seventy-five conversions and forty-four accessions to the church, and we left about forty or fifty penitents at the altar. It was also a gracious time with the membership. We still have protracted meetings ahead, at which we hope to have revivals."

From the Louisiana Conference, we have the following accounts:

From North Rapides Circuit, Rev. Wm. D. Stayton writes: "The Lord has been with us in his saving power. We commenced building a Methodist church in August, and in five weeks we had it completed. It is the neatest church on the circuit. We began a protracted meeting in it September 25th, which lasted for nine days. We closed with eleven conversions, twenty accessions to the church, the membership greatly revived, leaving several penitents at the altar. We closed for want of preachers to carry it on; besides, my wife was very ill, and I was compelled to leave. We had brother Ivy with us, in his burning zeal, also brother Harper, local preacher; they did us great service. We should not be surprised if some of the fruit of this meeting is seen at the Annual Conference, in December. We have another church building, which will be ready for a protracted meeting in two weeks. We feel like the Lord would revive his work there. The Lord will revive his work where the people will prepare for it by building good churches, and pray the prayer of faith. Memphis Advocate please copy."

From Ouachita Circuit, Rev. T. B. White writes: "I have recently had several valuable additions to the church on my work. At a two days' meeting at Summerville, a short time since, one young man was powerfully converted, several were added to the church, and the church much spiritualized. The Quarterly Meeting on the Ouachita Circuit was protracted several days, and though the P. C. (brother Riley) was not present, on account of severe affliction, yet God's word was owned and blessed, to the comfort of three mourning souls, the strengthening and confirmation of believers, and some were added to the church, such as, we trust, "shall be saved."

From Evergreen Circuit, Rev. D. J. Watkins writes: "The ice broke. Held a meeting one week at Big Cane. Six converted, seven joined the church. Brother A. W. Smith, of the Washington Circuit, did us good service."

From Winnsboro Circuit, Rev. T. J. Upton writes: "There is now a meeting in progress, under the superintendence of brother McClendon, at Magnolia, in this Circuit, at which the good Lord has abundantly blessed his people with copious showers of his grace. Five have been added to the church, and many are inquiring what they must do to be saved. This meeting is being conducted with increasing interest. In consequence of family affliction, I have been able to attend but little, though I expect to attend from this out, Providence permitting."

The Pacific Methodist, of Sept. 10-17 says that the religious sky of California continues to brighten. Formerly the people would neither hear nor believe. Now many hear, and some—a goodly number—believe. The different evangelical denominations—Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational, Baptist, and Episcopalian—are making progress, not only in the steady increase of the number of their communicants, but in their influence upon public sentiment. The editor says, of the Southern Methodist Church: "But we have been favored, perhaps, with more extensive and striking exhibitions of the Divine favor, as witness Berryessa, (hallowed spot!) Mormon Creek, (dear to memory) Gilroy, Hodega, Dry Creek, Sacramento Valley, Volcano, Stockton and other places." Near two hundred accessions to our Church are reported in the paper in which the above remarks occur.

The last Southern Christian Advocate reports glorious revivals in Florida, Southwestern and Middle Georgia, with a very large ingathering to the churches—between three and five hundred.

The Nashville Christian Advocate reports a gracious work of God as prevailing in North Alabama, North Mississippi, Tennessee, and Kentucky, with between seven hundred and a thousand added to the Church.

The Richmond Christian Advocate reports a good work in Virginia, and about five hundred added to the Church.

Ecclesiastical and Religious.

The Moravian Congregation at Bethalem, Pa., have over a million dollars at interest.

Biblical Institute in Germany.—Our missionary brethren in Germany adopted measures at their late Conference for the establishment of a Biblical Institute in Germany.

The New York Chronicle says: "It it is indeed true that sermon-reading is coming into vogue among the Methodists, we shall regard it as the greatest evidence in proof of their doctrine of falling from grace which they have ever urged."

Fejees.—The English Wesleyan Missionary Society reports that 14,000 persons on the Fejee Islands embraced Christianity during the year ending July 14, 1857. In the several circuits on the island, there are now 54,281 professed Christians. Measures have been initiated for the establishment of an institution for theological training.

The Bible a Protestant Tract.—A curious fact is pointed out by the Journal des Debats, France, that the right of distributing Bibles concealed to the Protestants by the treaty just concluded with China is denied them in the French department of the Smithe, where the prefect has just prohibited the circulation of the Bible" and other Protestant tracts."

Unitarian.—The church of Rev. Mr. Coolidge, in Boston, who has seceded from the Unitarians, has been closed since the departure of the pastor, till last Sabbath. Some have thought that the majority of the congregation would follow the pastor, but they have voted to "open it for Unitarian worship," and it has accordingly been so opened.

The Bible in Russia.—The present Czar of Russia has reconstituted the Bible Society, which was suspended during his father's reign, making it a donation of 25,000 (about $20,000,) roubles. There is a new edition of thirty thousand of the New Testament in Finnish and Esthonian, and many religious books and tracts are circulated.

A $200 Prize Offered.—A gentleman of the South offers through the Presbyterian Board of Publication, $200 for the best essay on Religion in the Family. The terms are as follows:

I. The essay, the copyright of which is to be vested in the Presbyterian Board of Publication, is to occupy when printed at least two hundred pages duodecimo.

II. It is to embrace the lucid discussion of (1.) The foundation, nature and importance of the family constitution. (2.) The duties and responsibilities belonging to it. (3.) The best means to secure the ends designed in it. (4.) The relation of the family to the church. (5.) The value, difficulties, and aids to family religion. (6.) Pleas for neglect and delinquencies in family duties, discussed and refuted.

III. The essayists to send their respective productions to the Presbyterian Board of Publication on or before the 1st. of March, 1859 to be subjected to the examination and award of a Committee appointed for the purpose.

Local Intelligence.

The Hell Chemasse is nearly closed.

Deaths by yellow fever, last week, 308.

Another boy killed by the Carrollton railroad cars a few days ago.

City Improvement.—Wharf-building, street-cleaning, house-building, and repairing generally, is the order of the day.

Police Jury of Jefferson had before it at its late meeting, a proposition to open Magazine and Apollo streets from the upper limits of Jefferson City to Carrollton, through Harthville, Foucherville, and other rural property. A full report will be made in November, and there is little doubt that one, if not both these roads will be opened.

City Railroads are advocated by the Picayune. The increase and advantages of railroads in New York and Philadelphia are attractively set forth. In the former, these means of communication, and others of a similar nature projected, are rapidly merging Carmanville, Harlem, Manhattanville, Yorkville and other suburbs in the great city, and in a very few years their very names will disappear forever. The impulse given to business by these railroads can scarcely be calculated. New Orleans is becoming a city stretching for miles along the Mississippi river, its extremities as remote that the inhabitants of the opposite sections have scarcely an idea of the condition of each other. Rents in the heart of the city are advancing and hundreds of families are driven into boarding houses who, if the distant suburbs were easily accessible, would occupy comfortable cottages and rear their sons and daughters under the influence of their own homes. For New Orleans, city railroads would do more than they have done for New York and Philadelphia. They would extend the city in every direction, and people the suburbs that now present only green fields.

The Very Latest Intelligence.

FOREIGN.

Mexico.—Vidaurri, the Liberal Chief in Northern Mexico, has been partially defeated by Miramon, the Zulequipta Chief, at San Luis.

France.—The rumor gained ground that a matrimonial alliance was on the tapis between Prince Napoleon and the Princess Clotilde, eldest daughter of the King of Sardinia. The rumor was strengthened by a report that the Prince is to visit the Court of Turin in October.

Prince Napoleon had gone to Warsaw to invite the Emperor Alexander to visit Paris.

The Duke of Malakoff is to be married on the return of the Emperor from Chalons.

Spain.—The Spanish and French expedition against Cochin China was not expected to commence operations before November.

The Minister of Marine had been to Cadiz to superintend the dispatch of troops and ships to Cuba to not against Mexico, and it appears, from the language of all the ministerial journals, that the Government had resolved to delay no longer in exacting retribution from that Republic.

Russia.—The Emperor had given the order of St. Andrew—the highest—to Prince Gortschakoff, as a mark of satisfaction that two such important treaties had been concluded with China.

The Invalide Russe announces that it is in contemplation to unite Europe with America by a telegraph across the Russian possessions.

The telegraph now extending from St. Petersburg to Moscow is to be continued to the frontiers of China.

General News.—There was no improvement in the Atlantic Cable.

The latest advices from China show an unsatisfactory condition of affairs there.

The American Minister had gone to Shanghai.

The cholera was raging among the Chinese troops.

DOMESTIC.

Col. Kinney.—The old friends of this gentleman will be glad to learn of his whereabouts. At last accounts he was at Austin, Texas. He had previously been at San Antonio. In speaking of his visit there, the Herald remarks: Some of our prominent citizens have requested Col. Kinney to permit his name to be put before the people for the next Gubernatorial election. This he declines, saying that his private business in this State and in Central America will require his undivided attention. He informs us that he has concluded his negotiation with the Mormons for the sale of his interest in Central America, and has received an earnest of $200,000, as a part of the purchase money. He is to receive $2,000 000.

The Government and Jerez.—New York, Oct. 18.—A letter from Washington says that the Government has declined any further communication with Jorez, but will pursue a decisive policy with regard to Nicaragua.

Excitement at Tampico.—Governor Garmo had attempted to collect a forced contribution of $100,000 from the community. He had imprisoned a number of Spanish and American citizens, without food and water, who had refused to comply with his demand; but he subsequently released them on their promise that they would submit to the contribution. A number of them fled. The Spanish Consul took refuge on board of a Spanish man-of-war, and finally, with his family, fled on the Solent to Havana. Important dispatches are on the way to Washington from the Spanish Consul and the American Minister.

To Interrupt a Disease is not to Cure it. Many preparations will secure to the victim of internal worms a brief cessation from pain and irritation, but only one Medicine at present known to the World, will actually extirpate the disease and secure the patient from all unpleasant consequences. That Medicine is Wright's Canadian Vermifuge; it stands alone, unreproached; it has the sanction of the highest medical authority, and should stand on the mantelpiece of every nursery in the United States. Mothers look to it, if you value your children's health and life.

A Sickly, Alternated Appearance in a child is prima facie evidence that its internal organization is tenanted by some one of the many species of worms which afflict and too often destroy the most promising children. The best thing to be done is to administer Wright's Canadian Vermifuge without delay. It will dislodge and discharge the enemy, if present in the bowels, and if no worms exist it will cleanse and invigorate the whole digestive, secretive, and excretive system, and create a healthful appetite.

Board, Lodging, Washing, Lights and Fuel	72 50

Each pupil must furnish her own bed linen and towels. Tuition, payable at the close of each Session; when not paid, eight per cent. interest will be charged. Pupils, who enter two weeks after the beginning of a Session, will be charged full rates; afterwards, the charges will date from the beginning or middle of the month in which the pupil enters; and no deduction made for a shorter time than one month, and then only when caused by sickness.

The Collegiate year, embracing nine months, is divided in two equal terms—the first Session commences on the first Wednesday in October, and closes on the 15th of February; and the second Session commences the next day, and closes with commencement day, which is Wednesday, after the Friday before the first of July.

No extra charge for Latin and Greek.

☞ We wish it distinctly understood, that any applicant can enter the Preparatory Department at any age, whatever; but no student can enter the College Classes until she has attained the age of twelve years.

HILLSBOROUGH MILITARY ACADEMY.
HILLSBOROUGH, N. C.

On January 12th, 1859, this Institution will go into operation, under the conduct of Capt. C. C. Tew, now Superintendent of the State Military Academy at Columbia, S. C. The drill, discipline and course of instruction, will assimilate as nearly as practicable to those of the South Carolina and Virginia State Military Institutions.—The studies of the first two years, or preparatory course, will be—

1st. Year—Arithmetic, Algebra, English Grammar, History U. S., Geography and French.

2d. Year—Algebra, Geometry, History of England, Ancient History, Mythology, French and Latin.

There will be but one vacation of eight weeks, beginning in November. The annual charge will be $300, payable as follows: $100 at the beginning of the Academic year, $100 on May 1st, and $100 on August 1st, for which the Academy will provide instruction, text-books, drawing materials, stationery, quarters, board, fuel, lights, washing, medical attendance, and sickness, among slaves, one week's notice.

No pupil will be admitted under thirteen or over eighteen years of age, and every one entering will be required to sign a matriculation promise.

For more particular information, address the undersigned, at Columbia, S. C., until January 1st, after that date at Hillsborough, N. C.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE,
HUNTSVILLE, ALA.

The latter half of the scholastic year of this Institution will begin January 25, 1858. The splendid buildings, elegant organization, the superior Faculty, and the extraordinary facilities of an accomplished education, recommend this Institution to the consideration of every parent. The French Language is taught by Parisians, and taught possibly more thoroughly than any where else outside of a native French family. This is a regular Boarding School of the highest order. Besides, Huntsville, as a location for a Female School, in point of beauty and healthfulness, has no equal in the South. I would refer to my patrons in Louisiana: Gen. B. M. Lowe, of the firm of Lowe, McReynolds & Co., New Orleans; W. W. Walker, Esq., Mound Bayou, Tensas, parish; E. Miller, Esq. and Rev. Mr. White, Waterproof; also, to the Editor of this paper.

Water and gas pipes are now being laid through the establishment. Every parent will appreciate the comfort and safety of such an arrangement. G. M. EVERHART. d19-1y

Centenary College of Louisiana.

The next term of this Institution will open on Monday, the fourth of October, 1858.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer the Little Children to come unto Me."

CHILDREN'S EDITORIAL.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

The Editor is very much encouraged in his labors for the children. He finds that the children are delighted with their column, and that the parents are delighted too. Our "Letter from an Arkansas Boy," last week, and the "Letter from a Log-Cabin," written by his mother, both tell us that our Children's Column is doing good.

A LITTLE STORY.

One of our physicians in the city was attending a little girl, who was at the point to die with yellow fever. She was so sick, and the parents were so uneasy, that the doctor staid, one night, nearly until the break of day. Being worn out, he lay down for a little while, toward morning, and had just got fast to sleep, when the father of the child came, and said: "Doctor, do you think our poor little girl will die before morning? If you think so, we wish to send for a clergyman, and have her baptized before she dies." The Doctor, fearing the child was worse, sprang out of bed before he was fairly awake. But the little girl was still battling with the fever. While they were all sitting together round her bed, the Doctor pulled the Advocate out of his pocket, to read to them, to pass away the time. And what do you think they read? Why, the "Children's Column!" They all cried over it; and the lady sent and subscribed for the Advocate the next day. We are happy to state, the little girl is now getting well. God bless her! We hope God has preserved her life, that she may be a Christian and a useful woman.

BEAUTIFUL INCIDENTS—BY REV. DR. KEENER.

A very sweet little boy, Johnny Blackman, died a few days since. We knew him well. A very pretty child of three and a-half years—always neatly dressed. Just before he died, he asked his aunt to sing "Happy Land," and "Happy Day." His mother asked him if he could pray. Then he closed his hands and said—"Now I lay me down to sleep," etc. His mother gave him up to the Lord, with many tears, but with cheerful resignation; because it was from the Lord she first received him.

A little girl called upon me to attend a funeral. As we were walking along, I said—"Who is this that is dead?"

"Sarah Ann Evans; a little girl."

"How old was she?"

"Seven years old." We walked on, in silence.

"You know," added she, "that she saw the angels before she died."

"Ah," said I, "did she go to Sabbath school?"

"Yes; to the Carrondelet in the morning, and to the Lafayette in the afternoon." Again we walked on.

"They think she has gone to Heaven," said my little guide. "They think so, because she saw the angels—they think." Still, on we went to the back part of the city.

"She smiled before she died," added the child; "and the smile is on her face now. She bade them all good bye, and kissed the baby."

"What did she die of?" I asked.

"Black vomit."

I found the child in the coffin, with a smile on her face; and the carriages at the door.

"You had better make the service as short as possible," said one, standing by the door.

"My friend," replied I, putting my hand on his shoulder, "let us take time; better shorten something else, than the service over this child."

EFFECTS OF TEMPERENCE.

Mr. Henry Emmons, the oldest printer in Boston, died on the 22d ult., aged 88 years and five months. He had never tasted ardent spirits nor tobacco, nor for the last forty years, tea or coffee.

THE THEATER.

A LAD, sixteen years old, in San Francisco, robbed the Postoffice, and was sent to the State prison. He says he was induced to the act by seeing the play of Jack Sheppard performed once, the only time he had ever been in the theatre.

A HINT TO YOUTH.

Everybody likes polite and amiable children; worthy persons will always pay attention to such, speak well of their good manners, and entertain a high opinion of their parents. Children make a note of this.

STRIVE TO EXCEL.

A man of sense does but one thing at a time, and resolves to excel in it; for, what is worth doing at all, ought to be done well.

WISDOM.

True wisdom does not consist so much in knowing many things, as in choosing and following what conduces the most certainly to our lasting happiness and glory.

BE YE FORGIVING.

If we could read the secret history of our enemies, we should find in each man's life sorrow and suffering enough to disarm our hostility.

SLEEP.

Women require more sleep than men, and farmers less than those engaged in any other occupation. Editors, reporters, printers and telegraph operators require no sleep at all. Lawyers can sleep as much as they choose, and thus keep out of mischief.

GARDENING FOR LADIES.

Make up your beds early in the morning; sow buttons on your husband's shirt; do not rake up any grievances; protect the young and tender branches of your family; plant a smile of good temper in your face, and carefully root out all angry feelings, and expect a good crop of happiness.

BEGINNING OF A LIBRARY.

In 1700, ten clergymen met at Branford, each bringing a few books under his arm. Placing them on the table in Parson Russel's study, each said solemnly: "I give these books for the founding a colledge in this colony." A century and a half have gone by, and Yale College counts her books and her graduates by thousands.

AMUSEMENTS.

Let us not so wrong and vilify the bounties of Providence, as to allow for a moment that the sources of innocent amusement are so rare, that men must be driven, almost by constraint, to such as are of a doubtful quality. On the contrary, such has been the Creator's goodness, that almost every one both of our physical intellectual, and moral faculties—and the same may be said of the whole creation which we see around us—is not only calculated to answer the proper end of its being, by its subserviency to some purpose of solid usefulness, but to be the instrument of administering pleasure. Our Maker, also, in his kindness, has so constructed us, that even mere vicissitude is grateful and refreshing; a consideration which should prompt us often to seek, from a prudent variation of useful pursuits, that recreation for which we are apt to resort to what is altogether unproductive and useless. Yet rich and multiplied are the springs of innocent relaxation. The Christian relaxes, in the temperate use of all the gifts of Providence. Imagination, and taste, and genius, and the beauties of creation, and the works of art, lie open to him. He relaxes in the feast of reason, in the intercourses of society, in the sweets of friendship, in the endearments of love, in the exercise of hope, of confidence, of joy, of gratitude, of universal good will, of all the benevolent and generous affections, which by the generous ordination of our Creator, while they disinterestedly intend only happiness to others, are most surely productive to ourselves of complacency and peace.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

"Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee."

MY CHILD—BY REV. JOHN PIERPONT.

[Some of our readers will not be able to see clearly to read this exquisitely touching and beautiful poem.]

I cannot make him dead!
His fair, sunshiny head
Is ever bounding round my study chair:
Yet, when my eyes, now dim
With tears, I turn to him,
The vision vanishes—he is not there!

I walk my parlor floor,
And through the open door
I hear a footfall on the chamber stair;
I'm stepping toward the hall
To give the boy a call;
And then bethink me that—he is not there!

I tread the crowded street—
A satchalled lad I meet,
With the same beaming eyes and colored hair;
And, as he's running by,
Follow him with my eye,
Scarcely believing that—he is not there!

I know his face is hid
Under the coffin lid;
Closed are his eyes, cold is his forehead fair;
My hand that marble felt;
O'er it in prayer I knelt;
Yet my heart whispers that—he is not there!

I cannot make him dead!
When passing by the bed,
So long watched over with parental care,
My spirit and my eye
Seek it inquiringly,
Before the thought comes that—he is not there!

When at the cool, grey break
Of day, from sleep I wake,
With my first breathing of the morning air,
My soul goes up, with joy,
To Him who gave my boy:
Then comes the sad thought that—he is not there.

When at the day's calm close,
Before we seek repose,
I'm with his mother, offering up our prayer;
What e'er I may be saying,
I am, in spirit, praying
For our boy's spirit—though—he is not there!

Not there! Where then is he?
The form I used to see
Was but the raiment he used to wear.
The grave, that doth now press
Upon that cast-off dress,
Is but his wardrobe, locked; he is not there!

He lives!—in all the past,
He lives; nor, to the last,
Of seeing him again will I despair;
In dreams I see him now;
And, on his angel brow,
I see it written, "Thou shalt see me there."

Yes, we all live, to God!
Father, thy chastening rod
So help us, thine afflicted ones, to bear,
That, in the spirit-land,
Meeting at thy right hand,
'Twill be our heaven to find that he is there!

WOMEN.

Sheridan said, beautifully—"Women govern us; let us render them perfect; so much the more they are enlightened the more shall we be. On the cultivation of the mind of women depends the wisdom of men. It is by women that nature writes on the hearts of men."

LOST BABY.

"You have lost your baby, I hear," said one gentleman to another.

"Yes, poor little thing! It was only five months old. We did all we could for it. We had four doctors, blistered its head and feet, put mustard poultices all over it, gave it nine calomel powders, leached its temples, had it bled, and gave it all kinds of medicines, and yet after a week's illness, he died."

Strange, that.

FUNERALS.

The stupid indifference with which all Americans regard the passage of a funeral procession is proverbial. Now the French people, from a regard for the feelings of the mourners, as well as respect for the memory of the dead, when they meet a funeral procession, stand still and uncover their heads in the street while the procession passes. A most touching tribute to the memory of the dead. We most earnestly wish our people had the heart to imitate it.

CAUSE OF IDIOTCY.

The leading article in the last number of the "Journal of Psychological Medicine and Mental Pathology," published in London, is by S. G. Howe, M. D., of South Boston, upon the causes of Idiotcy. It is an elaborate essay of over thirty pages, and after defining the nature, degrees and extent of idiotcy, discusses its causes under the following heads: The low condition of the physical organization of one or both parents—Intemperance—self-abuse—Intermarriage of relatives—and, attempts to procure abortion.

A WORD TO MOTHERS.

You'll never succeed—I'm sure of it! A child's intellect can't be forced without destroying its healthy tone. If it don't take to music or to anything else naturally, it won't do so by all your driving. Poor little things! What a shame to be always cramming the scales into them before they know harmony from discord; it only breathes discord in their little hearts. Bless them! How it grieves me to see them plodding over "In my cottage near a wood," "God save the Queen," or "Once upon a time," instead of playing in the bright green fields, forming daisy chains, and making dandelions tell what's o'clock! Depend upon it, nature is the best teacher.—Well, and what if the children are called romps, shaking their curls back, and showing their pretty dimples as they come bounding into the room? Isn't it much better than to see them sitting bolt upright on the edge of a chair, pursing their pretty lips into a grim smile, because "little children should be seen and not heard?" Poor little darlings! How I pity you! Perhaps I have a curious taste—perhaps not. I like out-door flowers better than hot-house plants. There they are in simple beauty—natural, graceful, strong and healthy. Look at those forced hot-house beauties. Directly they feel the rough wind of nature, they droop and die. So it is with forcing children's intellects. They appear for a while dazzling and bright. When they mix with the rough rude world, they either become selfish and conceited, or droop and die. Better far to see them in their natural simplicity and innocence of heart—kind and loving, forgetful of self; treasures indeed to their parents in after life. Yes, yes—to govern by love is far better than to rule by fear. How cheerfully they run to obey your request. How pleased and happy they look when you reward them with a smile or a word of approval. It is all they wish, for it is the greatest boon that can be given. Look at that poor thing yonder—see with what a frightened, startled look it flies to execute its parent's commands. Such obedience is only forced—it can't be natural; it doesn't come from the heart. A smile, a loving look, a kind word, does more good with a child than all your angry words. How deceitful, too, fear makes children. If they do anything wrong, they are afraid to acknowledge it to their parents, and when questioned, deny it for fear of the consequences. Teach them to confide in you, to bring all their little troubles, joys and fears to your bosom; sympathize with them, and they will reward your love and care with truthfulness and affection.

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

LONY FRITH, son of Washington Band and Martha W. Nicholson, died September 11, 1858, at Forest Grove, Claiborne parish, Louisiana, aged one year two months and twenty-four days.

MRS. JOYCE H. HOWARD died 13th June, 1858, in her forty-ninth year—wife of James E. Howard, Esq. Sister Howard joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Minden, Louisiana, October, 1844; was noted for her deep piety. Her death was a happy one. D. S. [illegible].

October 6, 1858.

LITTLE MATTIE E., daughter of W. E. D. and Mary Moore, died in Coosa county, Alabama, at midnight, on the 14th September 1858. Mattie was an affectionate child—obedient and docile. When it was certain that she was dangerously ill, her love fur and confidence in her parents seemed to predominate over all other feelings. At length she was made aware that she was dying, when she told her father, feebly but earnestly, she "wanted to go up yonder"—pointing heavenward. Thus this little girl died—rationally, affectionately, confidently and peacefully. T. M. L.

SISTER ANN ELIZA MAYSON died on Monday, the 20th of September, 1858, in Canton, Mississippi, in her thirty-seventh year. She was born in the State of Tennessee; her parents removed to Georgia, while she was quite young, where she professed religion, and in her fourteenth year joined the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1839, she married John R. Mayson—whom she has left with a daughter and three little sons, to mourn their loss. Two daughters preceded her to glory. For some years past, her health had not been good. About a week before her death she was taken with chills and fever; on the evening she died, she seemed to be improving; when, suddenly, without a moment's warning, she gasped, and breathed her last. It was thought she died of disease of the heart. Her zealous Christian character is the best guarantee of her future happiness. God grant those she has left may be as well prepared, when called hence.

JAS. WALTON.

MRS. CATHARINE ELLA, wife of William Reed, and daughter of Dr. Wm. and O. Ferrell, died the 31st August, 1858, in Black Hawk, Carroll county, Mississippi. Her modesty and amiability won the esteem and affection of all who knew her. She was a model daughter, sister, wife, and friend. In her youth, she gave her heart to God, her name to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and rejoiced greatly in the hope of a glorious immortality. She gave clear and repeated evidence of preparation for the solemn hour. After one day's suffering, the gates of Heaven opened. While we condole with the bereaved loved ones left behind, we exhort them so to live, that they may meet their beloved Ella, where parting will be no more.

DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID.—The greatest known agent for Purifying the Air. It is a new and important discovery. It is a triumph of scientific skill. It is the result of learned inquiry. It is the fruit of patient research.

This invaluable Agent is now presented to the people of New Orleans, for the first time. It is a Chemical union of materials, provided by Nature herself, for rendering the air we breathe pure and healthful. It is not a mixture, but a true Chemical compound. Its action is in obedience to fixed laws, quick, sure, powerful. It purifies dwellings, sewers, sinks, privies, kitchens. It removes all offensive odors immediately. It cures burns, bites, and stings of insects. It relieves boils, cleanses ulcers, heals sores. It cleanses teeth, sweetens breath.

It has been used with most remarkable success in Typhoid Fever, Scarlet Fever, Measles; indeed, in all contagious diseases it is invaluable.

In the City of Charleston, S. C., it is now in constant use by Leading Physicians, in Yellow Fever.

Orders from that City represent it, as in the most active demand. It has not been advertised there but one month, yet orders for hundreds of bottles, have been filled for that City.

In this City the HOWARD ASSOCIATION, is now using it in the treatment of Yellow Fever.

TRY IT—It can be had at, J. WRIGHT, & CO'S, Drug Store, 21 and 151, Chartres Street. Price 50 cents. s.22

DR. T. McGOWN'S

SARSAPARILLA

AND

IODINE OF POTASI,

THE GREAT

BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,

Prepared from FRESH ROOT, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too much overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a PANACEA or CATHOLICON than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Coindet, Baron, Bardsley, Manson, Ricord, Cendrin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy; diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Blies, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally); Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic tranquilis, Tonsilitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cachexy, Palsy, Tumors, Gonorrhea, Gleet; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Fordyce says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in constitutions enfeebled and emaciated by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine, of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparations of Sarsaparilla."

FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Irregularities, Suppression, Ulceration of the Womb, Leucorrhea, Tumors, Enlargement of the Uterus, Breasts; Chorea, etc.; Impurities of the Blood or System, and all diseases dependent thereon. Makes the skin clear and smooth—an object of interest with the ladies. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.

McGOWN'S ESSENCE TAR.—A certain cure for Bowel Complaints, as Diarrhea, Dysentery, Flux, etc.

McGOWN'S DOGWOOD AND IRON.—A permanent cure for Chills, Ague Cake, Night Sweats, Debility, Dyspepsia, etc.

McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL.—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.

McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS.—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.

McGOWN'S OINTMENT.—Never known to fail curing old Sores, Cancers, Chronic Sore Eyes, etc.

The above prepared and sold in Memphis by H. H. HUGHES, Druggist, No. 343 Main st.

Agents.—J. Wright & Co., and Sickles & Co., New Orleans; J. Hanley, Galveston, Texas; S. W. Hoff, Warrington, Florida.

AUTUMN WILD FLOWERS.—BY MARY HOWITT.

The Autumn sun is shining,
Grey mists are on the hill;
A russet tint is on the leaves,
But flowers are blowing still!
Still bright in wood and meadow;
On moorlands dry and brown;
By little streams; by rivers broad;
On every breezy down.

The little flowers are smiling,
With chilly dew-drops wet,
Are saying with a spirit-voice—
"We have not vanished yet.

"No, though the Spring be over;
Though Summer's strength be gone;
Though Autumn's wealth he garner'd,
And Winter cometh on;

"Still we have not deperied,
We linger to the last,
And even on early Winter's brow
A cheerful ray will cast!"

Go forth, then, youths and maidens,
Be joyful whilst ye may;
Go forth, then, child and mother,
And toiling men grown gray!

Go forth, though ye be humble,
And worn with toil and care;
There are no fields so barren,
But some sweet flower is there!

Flowers spring up by the highway
Which busy feet have trod;
They rise up in the dreariest wood;
They gem the dullest sod.

They need no learned gardeners
To nurture them with care;
They only need the dews of earth,
The sunshine and the air.

And for earth's lowly children,
For loving hearts and good,
They spring up all around us,
They will not be subdued.

Thank God! when forth from Eden
The weeping pair were driven,
That unto earth, though cursed with thorns,
The little flower was given!

That Eve, when looking downward,
To face her God afraid,
Beheld the scented violet,
The primrose in the shade!

Thank God, that with the thistle
That sprang up in his toil,
The weary worker, Adam,
Saw roses gem the soil!

And still for anxious workers,
For hearts with anguish full,
Life, even on its dreariest paths,
Has flowers for them to cull!

FAITHER'S DEATH.—A GEM FROM SCOTIA.

My day is dippin' in the west, it's gloamin' wi' me noo,
I hear the sough o'Jordnn's waves, that I maun travel thro',
Yet it's na Jordan's wave I fear the gie'in up o' life,
But O! this sinderin' o' hearts, this leavin' wean and wife.

What tho' we hea o' better things, a fairer warld abune,
Where lost frien's are awaitin' us, and n' maun follow sune,
This readin' o' the sillier strings, that tether heart to heart,
It tries puir human nature sair, and makes us laith to part.

Gae rax me hy the Bible, wife, while yet I'm fit to see,
Ere death creep o'er my cauldrife brow, and flap my failing e'e,

And let us sing a partin' sang, the last we'll sing the gither,
For noo ye canna hae me lang, the bairns maun lose their father.

There pit the pillow to my back, an' ease me up a wee,
An' bring them a' to the bedside, to see their father dee;
Noo raise the Bible up a thocht, it's ower laigh on my knee,
An' shift the light a kennin back, it's ower strong for my e'e.

He waled him out the partin' saug, his voice rose firm and clear.
And read the 14th o' St. John, nor did he shed a tear;
Sae is it wi' the man of God, when life's day's darg is dune,
Nae future fears disturb his min', nae rueful look behin'.

LETTER FROM MUNICH.

The King's New Palace—Frescos and Paintings—The Throne Room—The Bronze Statues—The Throne—The Old Palace—The Gold Bedstead—The Royal Painted-glass Manufactory—Statues and Models—The Temple of Fame—Bronze Statue of Bavaria.

THE King's new palace is a most magnificent building; many of the rooms adorned with frescos, from the German poets. One room, made in imitation of Pompeii, and called after the name, with walls and paintings of like character—and beautiful statues like pure, polished marble. Another room, fitted with the portraits of female beauties—from the Royal Princess to the peasant girl. The Throne-room, one hundred feet long and seventy wide, with rows of Corinthian columns, six on each side, white, like the walls, with gilded capitals—between them were twelve collossal, gilt-bronze statues—presenting a most brilliant display of royalty in their rich drapery and kingly costumes, from Otho, the illustrious Elector-Palatine and Duke of Bavaria, down to Charles XII. King of Sweden, 1718. The throne was equally splendid, adorned with a drapery of velvet, starred with gold. The floor was paved with delicately-colored marble, in beautiful forms; no painting upon the wall to detract from the effect of the gilded statues, ten feet high, relieved with pure white—so chaste; in simple elegance, quite new in kingly palaces.

We visited the old palace department—it was furnished one hundred and fifty years ago—quite a curiosity, especially the gold bedstead, as it is called, which was adorned with a canopy and spread of crimson velvet, and drapery around it embroidered with gold, so heavily wrought, that little else could be seen; and, it was told us, that it took forty persons seven years to accomplish the work, at a cost of $400,000—the fringe around the whole was deep, and of pure gold. The curtains, over the doors and windows, were of velvet upon gold ground, and the walls covered with the same material. Mirrors set in the walls, reaching nearly from the floor to the ceiling, with wide-spreading gilt frames suited to the rooms, most elaborately wrought; chairs, of velvet and gold—yet the fine gold had become dim in this room, like some other places; its brilliancy had departed with those who once occupied it—and was mouldering away. All the rooms were richly and heavily furnished. Some fine paintings adorned the walls of several rooms, and looked quite fresh—works of the first artists. One room was ornamented with rare specimens upon a small scale, at great cost, and fixed all over the wall like the embroidery of Maria Theresa, at Vienna—a most singular method, never seen before, except in these two places.

The palaces were very extensive buildings, surrounded with beautiful parks; arcades running their whole length, attached to the palace like galleries, ornamented with paintings and frescoes—one was like a bazaar with fanciful shops to display elegant and costly goods.

The Royal Pniated-glass Manufactory, was a splendid establishment, worthy of observation, where the art of painting in fresco was carried to the greatest degree of perfection. We saw exhibited some of the most beautiful designs—groups of figures, with most exquisite colored drapery; landscapes; and portraits, with the expression equal to the most artistic pencilings of genius, and surpassing them in their fadeless hues, but seen only as brought before the light of a window.

The shops of glass in this city are interesting beyond any thing of the kind we ever saw—the rooms look like a fine palace. Ornaments, of all kinds—exquisite patterns of vases, filled with flowers of every hue; dessert-dishes of all colors, from the most delicate green to a pure white ornamented with gold, the fabric so wrought that it looks more like transparent china than glass ware; little spoons, knives and forks to match, which look like burnished gold, so beautifully wrought—the handles, so solid that they appear made of less fragile stuff than glass; goblets and finger-glasses, corresponding with wine-glasses and coolers, gilded, too beautiful for use. The stores were perfect museums of the fine arts, in glass, surpassing every thing of the kind in the world. These were made at Bohemian factories, the most celebrated in the world. We saw, in the King's palace, glass curtains resembling gold—very heavy material.

We visited the far-famed broom factory, for which this place is so celebrated.

The equestrian statue of Bolivar was in operation; the head of his horse already cast, exhibits all the expression of a warlike steed in perfection.

The models of Jefferson, Patrick Henry, and others from America, were there. Beethoven, by the late artist, Crawford—a most lovely work of genius. Schiller and Goethe were grouped together—design, by a German.

We drove to the Hall or Temple of Fame, a short distance from the city—a beautiful marble building of Grecian architecture, surrounded by Corinthian columns, with wings projecting in front making half a court—in the centre of which, upon a lofty pedestal, twenty-eight and a-half feet high, stands a colossal bronze statue of Bavaria, sixty-one feet high, of most elegant and graceful proportions, with a countenance beaming with light, intelligence and dignified power—in her left hand, elevated above her head, she holds a wreath; in her right, she grasps a sword; beneath, is a colossal lion—the arms of Bavaria. This statue is considered one of the most magnificent of modern times; it has a stair-case inside, for people to ascend to its head, which can hold eight persons; the statue is fully draped, in a flowing costume, adapted to its position.

The situation of this temple is well chosen, standing upon a hill, before a wide extended valley, rich with verdure, the only picturesque spot we have seen in the environs of Munich, which are remarkably flat and tame. In the distance are seen the Tyrolese mountains, whose summits are clad with snow; little woodlands, lovely pastures and rural dwellings, diversifying the landscape. Through the rich valley, covered with wild flowers of every hue, and by grassy lawns, were beautiful roads for carriage drives. Directly in front of the temple is a race-track. The most imposing aspect of the statue was seen just below, reached by a flight of marble steps, where it towers up above the temple in majesty and grace, expressive of power. This beautiful hill is relieved on the back ground by a lofty green wood, in which there are walks and green shades. We were not permitted to drive around it, but only to it. It presents one of the most picturesque scenes the country affords, and the only one we saw near the city.

S. B. THOMAS.

A MARVEL.—The Trinity (California) Journal contains the following story:—"A year ago last February, the Rev. Mr. Brooks perished in the snow on Salmon mountain, and though diligent search was made, no trace of him could be found. He was tracked round the head of Coffee creek, going parallel with the trail, but in evident bewilderment, and fresh snow at length obliterated his track. In October succeeding, the Rev. Messrs. Reasoner and Simonds again went in search of his remains, but, ascending the mountain, were driven back by storms. A few days ago, his bones, watch, a twenty dollar piece, and a package of tracts, were found near a house on the north side of the mountain, telling the sad story of the good man's death. He had perished almost in sight of shelter."

OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENCE.

MY LAST communication was from Washington City, and appeared in your issue of the 3d of July; and now, taking up the thread of my experience again according to the course of travel, I send you a few additional notes of observation.

We arrived in New York in due course, and, during the few days we remained there, I attended some of the Union prayer meetings, in the John-street Methodist Episcopal Church, but forbear remarks of what I saw there, because other pens, I suppose, have kept you fully apprized of all their doings in that locality. I looked in, also, at No. 200 Mulberry street, but it did not feel to me as formerly, and I did not seek to make acquaintances in the "Book Concern." It poured out rain during nearly all the time I was in the city, and I, consequently, saw but little of the improvements—especially in upper-ten-dom.

The Voyage

Was, upon the whole, a very agreeable one. The passengers—of various nationalities, about 180 in number, I was told—were just such as a sea-voyage brings together. Some, as Jonathan would say, were so, while others were only a sort of so; but not a few, I am happy to say, were altogether such as you could not object to be imprisoned with for fourteen or fifteen days. Some could dance, others drink, others play various games for amusement. Some could talk, and others read, while all could walk—except when the breeze freshened, and then matters went rather topsy-turvy. With few exceptions all were sea-sick. Children suffering the least. I shall not attempt any description of this sickness—able pens have often tried, and as often failed to describe it. It must be experienced, to be fully understood; and, besides this motive, I have an unwillingness to approach—personalities.

There were two ministers on board—a Free-Church of Scotland-man, and an American Methodist; and, on the first Sabbath out, which was the second day of the voyage, the Chief Steward was requested to call on the ministers for one or two services. The Methodist, as the older passenger of the two, was waited upon first, but the breeze had been very fresh from the hour of his departure, and his physical man was found in a state of insubordination—having a great repugnance to the upright position. The Free-church man was in better condition, having just completed a West India voyage; and he held one service during that day for as many as were able to attend. Things brightened up by the following Sabbath, and we had two services—the Methodist in the morning, and the Free-Church man in the afternoon. There was nothing very remarkable in either sermons—unless, perhaps, that the forenoon sermon covered all the ground of the afternoon one—though not from the same text. The saloon was crowded with sailors, deck and cabin passengers, all attired in their best; and there was a decorum and solemn seriousness manifested by all, that is not always seen on land. The day was bright, calm and lovely; and, from the exactness of manner the congregation evinced during service, and afterwards expressed, it was evident that God was just as near to those who call upon Him in mid-ocean as He is in the city full or desert waste. The voyage had nothing else remarkable, that would be either instructive or entertaining. But what is say a good many of our readers, perhaps. Wherein does it differ from other steam-ships, the form of which can readily be conceived? This, the "Edinburgh," is a vessel of 25,000 tons burthen—large of her kind. All ocean steamers have masts, and some sails; but in the paddle-wheel ships they depend almost entirely upon steam for propelling them—using the sails only, when the wind is very fair. The screw-steamers, on the other hand, have higher masts and carry a good deal of sail—being ship-rigged; indeed, they depend mainly upon sails for a quick passage. The form of the vessel is alike in both. The paddle-wheel steamers have two wheels, one on each side of the ship; while the screw-steamer has but one wheel, and that is placed behind the ship, between the vessel and the rudder and entirely submerged under water. The principal of propulsion in the two-wheeled steamer is well understood, but in the other not quite so readily. The wheel of the latter works in the water, just as the auger works in wood; when motion is given to it, hence it is called a screw. There are various forms of screw-wheels, though that used in ocean navigation, consists of but three blades or paddles—wheel and blades all in one piece, and of cast iron. In this vessel the wheel is fourteen feet in diameter, and gives fourteen revolutions for every motion of the piston rod. The engine is in the centre of the vessel, and the motion is communicated to the wheel behind by a long rod or shaft, half the length of the vessel. The vessel itself, on the out-side, is wholly of iron, masts and all. The inside is of wood. The blades of the screw-wheel stand equi-distant from each other, and in a perpendicular position, not horizontal as in the paddle-wheel. The screw-blades are, of course, not straight, but oblique or slanting, and, in their revolutions, present their edges first to the water. From the rapidity of the motion given to the wheel, the body of each blade is thus made to press against the water behind it, and thereby, with all attached to it, force itself forward—just as the auger carries the stem and handle along with it, when motion is given to the screw. This is the principle of a screw-steamer wheel; but, perhaps it is not yet understood, and I will try again. Behold then, a boat-hand in a skiff or boat on the Father of Waters, taking a passenger on board of the steamer. See how he stands up in the stern of the boat, and with one oar only, behind, he plies it rapidly, first on one side and then on the other, obliquely or slantingly, presenting the edge of the oar to the water first, and then the body of it—and you will perceive the boat dash forward. So with the wheel of the screw-steamer. The three blades of the wheel are constructed so that each alternately strikes the water, first on one side and then the other, just like the oar, and the vessel is propelled forward. Now this is just as clear as——this paper and ink. A good screw-steamer, without sail, can steam eight or nine knots an hour, while a good paddle-wheel steamer makes eleven or twelve. With sail, and a very fair wind, the screw can keep up with the paddle-wheel, and, even beat her; but, with an adverse wind, must fall far behind. The screw-steamer burns much less coal than the other, and can, of course, carry more freight. She needs fewer hands to navigate her than the other does, and is therefore less expensive. First-cabin fare, by the screw, fifteen guineas ($75): By the others, from eighteen to twenty-six guineas, according to accommodations, ($90 to $130). The living on the screw-steamers cannot be excelled by the paddle-wheel steamers. It is all that a voracious appetite, after the sea-sickness, can desire—five meals a-day, with permission to send to the pantry besides. The time consumed by this vessel, this voyage, with adverse winds nearly all the while (allowing for difference of longitude), was, from New York to Greenock, (twenty-eight miles below Glasgow) where we had to wait for the tide, thirteen days and nine and a half hours. But I forget that we are in sight of Land!

This was first seen on Tory Island, on the North Eastern coast of Ireland; then, Malin Head; then, Kathlin Island; when, through the fog, Scotland is again in view; then we double the Mull of Cantire, and are fairly in the Frith of Clyde, with Ailsa Craig close in view. This last, is a perpendicular rock, rising up in this Frith, it is said, to the height of 600 feet; and what is very remarkable about it, is said to have a spring of fresh water near the top of the rock, although the entire rock is wholly surrounded by salt water. It gives the title of Marquis to one of the peers of Scotland. Burns, speaking of the unreasonableness of one of his characters, declared that

"Meg was deaf as Ailsa Craig."

And sure, as Patrick would say, it must have been a loud deafness. But now we are off the county or shire of Ayr, and but a short distance from the birth-place of Scotland's bard. There, too, is the mouth of the "Doon," whose banks and braes have been so often sung, and are yet as lovely and nosung as ever. Now however, we are approaching the island of "Arran," a bleak, barren, and desolate looking elevation, which also gives title to another peer; and, anon, we approach Bute—the foundation of another peerage. We are now fairly in the river Clyde, and how shall I attempt a description of the scenery around? Indeed I shall not do it; you must behold it yourself, fully to appreciate the reality. The villas, cottages, castles, terraces, walks, woods and gardens, upon either hand, cannot be enumerated in any letter. The fairy-like steamers, crowded with people, are almost every moment seen passing up and down, across and back, and such are the crowds of people who travel in this way, that you are almost led to suppose, surely no body is left behind. But we are now at Greenock.

Where we must wait nine hours for the tide, before we can ascend to Glasgow. All large ships had formerly to load and unload here—the water being too shallow to reach Glasgow; but now they have dredged the bottom of the river, until the largest vessels, at full tide, can ascend readily. This has accomplished a double benefit, for, up to the very edge of the river, the ground has been elevated and redeemed, by the dredgings taken out of the river; so that you now see beautiful buildings, lawns, fields and houses of every description, where twenty-seven years ago, was only a salt marsh, unfit for any purpose. From this same Greenock, in the mouth of July, 1831, an inexperienced youth, full of hope and adventure, took his departure in the good ship Onyx, of London, in quest of the "Land of the free and the home of the brave;"

and with all their knowledge and skill in navigation, and, without any misfortune either—it took them sixty-one days to accomplish what has just been completed in thirteen and a half days. "Tempora mutantur et nos mutamur in illis." Perhaps the quotation is hardly a just one, and yet it is literally true. But we must ascend to Glasgow.

As you ascend, thrift, activity and comfort seem to appear everywhere. On the left is "Dumbarton Castle," a great stronghold before the invention of cannon—a high rock, accessible only on one side by a very narrow passage way. On the right is Port Glasgow, and as we proceed, for many miles below Glasgow, there is heard, all round, the incessant clank of the hammer in the construction of iron ships of almost every dimension and classification. But we have got to the Broomielaw, and are at last where we may land once more on terra firma; and now for passage through the Customhouse. This was no formidable matter after all. Officers came on board the ship and examined the baggage of each passenger separately—noting down the number of packages belonging to each, and as fast as one officer examined a trunk or valise, another would paste a ticket on the article, setting forth "V. R. Customs, Glasgow," and then the owner and the package were at liberty to proceed elsewhere. They were gentlemanly men, and those passengers fared best who regarded them as such in the performance of their sworn duty. Glasgow is a vast city of great commercial and manufacturing enterprise—having a population of about three-hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants. All I conversed with, assured me that every department of business there was yet suffering from the monetary crisis of 1857; but I remained only a few hours, and shall not, therefore, trouble you with particulars. We next took the mail train on the Railway,

and travelled, including all stoppages, which were very numerous, at the rate of thirty miles an hour, intersecting and taking up the mails and trains from Liverpool, London and Edinburgh on the way. We travel north-eastward and pass through Stirling, Perth, Forfar, Stonehaven, and finally reach in safety and comfort the place of this present writing. I shall not attempt any description of the places passed through, because there was a dense fog abroad during all the journey and it was impossible to see them. Of this city, near to which I write, I shall speak hereafter. One circumstance is at once very noticeable here to a traveller from the latitude of New Orleans, in the positive absence of all real darkness during the month of June. This is latitude 57 deg. 10 min., and the sun rises at fifteen minutes past three and sets at five minutes past nine—there being no real darkness in the interval between nine and three. In proof of this I would just remark, that having one night sat up till late, conversing with a friend, of things at a distance, I retired at twelve o'clock, and from the light of day (or night, just as you please,) I could easily read the makers name in the crown of my hat. But of this city, religion therein, and the country around, Balmoral and the Queen, etc., I must defer to another opportunity.

NEW ORLEANS CITY MISSION.

MR. EDITOR:—In your issue of October 13th, Chas. J. Halberg addresses us under the head of "New Orleans City Mission," and informs us that "the Louisiana Conference, at its last session, appointed a Missionary to the city of New Orleans;" but he does not inform us whom the Conference appointed to this important Mission; to carry the gospel of glad tidings to the neglected places of our Crescent City.

By reference to the minutes of Conference, however, we find the appointing power devolved the honors and duties of City Missionary upon your correspondent, the Rev. Charles J. Halberg.

He says: "It was presumed that this Mission would find favor with the Church, and that hosts of friends would rise up to its support. Hence, there was no missionary appropriation made; but it was sent forth an unballasted bark, to float upon the favor of Christian sympathy, wafted by fair and pleasant gales to a safe port, or tossed (perhaps wrecked) by a storm of adversity;" from which the inference may be drawn that the City Mission has not found favor with the Church, and a reflection be made to the dishonor of the Church which facts do not warrant. We shall see how the matter stands.

Let us inquire of our reverend Missionary, here—What is the fate of the Mission-ship? Has she been "wafted by fair and pleasant gales to a safe port? or has she been tossed by storm and adversity" and been "wrecked?" Where has she been sailing? In what waters cruising? What does her log book show of the weather and heavenly observations? What of incidents and progress of the voyage? Again we ask—where does she sail? This is the first indication we have had that she has been "afloat upon the favor of Christian sympathy." Are her sails spread to the breeze? Is her flag proudly flying at the masthead? If so, some of our Sabbath School missionaries, in their privateering through our streets, must have seen and hailed her, and we wonder she has not been duly reported to the Church.

He says: "Conference sent her forth emballasted;" by which we understand Conference constructed and launched the Mission-ship. They appointed her a captain, too; and had Captain Halberg, with proper ballast on board, fully equipped this Mission-ship and put to sea, he would have found ready and abundant christian sympathy from the church to fill her sails and press her on with speed upon her destined voyage. But, Mr. Editor, the ship has never been manned for the voyage. She remains as first launched by the Conference, without ballast or equipments, or effort to get her to sea.

Dropping the captain's figure, we desire to say, in justice to the Churches of New Orleans, that the establishment of an active and effective City Mission meets their approbation, and receives their sympathy. The provision of Conference for the inauguration of such a Mission was hailed with joy, and had the mission been organized and put in operation, in spreading tracts through the lanes and streets of our city, the Church would have responded cordially and abundantly to its support.

The faith of the Conference in the Church was not misplaced. Give the Church the opportunity to exact her Christian sympathy. Send forth the Mission-ship properly fitted, manned and officered, and the Church will supply all the motive power that can be profitably applied.

An active City Missionary, who can go to work in the streets and lanes, on the ships and levees, can pitch his pulpit on a coal boat or a cotton bale—can tote tracts and books, and distribute to the poor and ignorant—can pray with the sick and suffering in the hovel, as in the palace of the rich and sumptuous—can always find work plenty to do and Christian friends, with hearts and hands ready to support him in his labors.

Your correspondent says: "There is not a single Protestant Church, so far as we know, in the whole length of the Four Districts of the city back of Dauphin or Baronne streets, except the German." Here then is an extended field for the labors of the City Missionary; and had he travelled as faithfully over it as have some of our lay-missionaries, visiting, distributing tracts and hunting up the Sabbath School children, he might have learned that in this uncared-for part of the Four Districts of our city are, one Episcopal church, one Baptist, two Presbyterian, and three Methodist Churches, in which regular religious services are held every sabbath day.

We hope our City Missionary will become better acquainted with his field before he again writes us heathens.

H.

WASHINGTON IN TEARS.

AT THE close of the Revolution it is well known that Congress was unable to meet its obligations to the army. Division of counsel existed as to the best method of raising the necessary funds to pay off the army before it was disbanded. While thus the hopes of the unpaid army were alternately elevated and depressed, some traitorous person scattered an anonymous circular among them, fomenting the dissatisfaction already existing, and leading to open rebellion. The individual who was suspected to have been the author of this paper was General Armstrong. Washington summoned all the officers into his presence to hear an appeal which he had prepared—a copy of which is found in Marshall's Life. Neither wild lands, however rich, nor Continental paper, however legal, would purchase bread or clothing. The minds of the army had become embittered by poverty and disappointment, and their principles corrupted by the infidel French literature which flooded our land, poisoned all the fountains of society.

On a certain day the loyal and disloyal gathered around the camp of the "Father of our Country." General Gates, against whom charges made had been withdrawn, presided. General Washington arose with his manuscript in hand, to read a rebuke to treason; but tears suffusing his eyes, prevented him. What a scene for some American Vernet! He grasped the scroll, dashing away the tears, and essayed again to read. But all was silent. His noble frame heaved with emotion. In order to suffer his agitated feelings to subside, he began hunting for his spectacles. "Pardon me, gentlemen," he said, "I have grown gray and blind in the service of my country!"

What a rebuke were these words to the concealed promoters of treason! Many who before might have faltered, were now melted by those tears. They gathered closer and closer around the noble form, and, when he closed, they resolved to stand to the death by their devoted leader. Those tears, under Providence, may have saved our country.

GENERAL PAEZ.

GEN. JOSE ANTONIO PAEZ, conjoined with Bolivar, was the great liberator of Venezuela. In the long struggle with Spain he led the cavalry of the patriots, which swept down like whirlwind over the plains upon their enemies, defeating one after another of the armies organized to complete the subjugation of the country. In valor, and the brilliant impetuosity of his charges, he resembled Murat, while in military skill and in the noble qualities which constitute the true statesman, he has had few equals—at least among those in the New World who sprang from the Spanish race. Without him, Bolivar had been unsuccessful in the effort at revolution; and, when the enemy was driven from the country, but for his noble love of republicanism, Venezuela had only exchanged one monarch for another.

After having served as the first President, under the newly organized Government, he was, by the arts and chicanery of the Monagasas, overthrown and banished from the country to which he had given the boon of freedom. For years, his motives have been assailed, his patriotism denied, and his name covered with reproach; decree after decree, since 1848,—have been passed, stripping him of his titles, confiscating his property, and reversing all acknowledgement of his services. Quietly, the victim of an insolent faction, in the enjoyments of the society of this country, he awaited the time when the atrocious character of the triumphant faction that scorned his banishment should be developed, and the people again are led to recall his devotion to the public good, and remember what they owed to his valor, his principles and his wisdom.

At length the reaction came. Misrule and violence, a depleted treasury and diminished trade, illegal restraints and unjustifiable and tyrannical extortions, aroused the Venezuelans to an act of tardy justice, and the adoption of the safest measure for the restoration of constitutional government; and the veteran exile, by a deputation of the noblest citizens acting on behalf of the State, is recalled to his native land, the acts passed reflecting upon his fame and his integrity, and abolishing his titles and honors, rescinded, and the whole country acknowledging the wisdom of his counsels, and the grandeur of the civic example he has given.

No man on the Continent, not born and educated in the United States, has had a better opportunity to acquire a knowledge of the true principles of free government than he. Familiar with the operations of our institutions, as the result of his ten years of exile, he was prepared to guide the councils of his own State so as to work out a far different destiny than that which seems pressing down upon all the Hispano-Indian republics. CHRISTIANITY IN EARNEST.—An exchange says: "The English Wesleyan Church is one of the largest and most efficient religious bodies known in Protestant Christianity, and their Foreign Missionary operations exceed that of any other Protestant Missionary Board—the annual receipts surpassing those of the established English Church. The receipts of the Wesleyan Foreign Missionary Society for the past year, were over $600,000, and those of the domestic board $60,000. A million of dollars have been spent within the four past years for the extinguishment of chapel debts; $1,050,000 for erecting new chapels and school-buildings during the same period."

The more true merit a man has, the more does he applaud it in others.

"OUR COMMON METHODISM."

That able and excellent paper, the Methodist Protestant, one of the organs of the Methodist Protestant Church, in a very well-digested and well-worded notice of our Quarterly Review, makes the following remark:

"It is our pleasure to receive and notice the current literature of the day, and especially that form of it issued under the auspices of our common Methodism."

In the midst of the unnecessary, injurious, and unscriptural strifes that too frequently afflict and weaken the Christian Church, and especially the different branches of Methodism, such words as the above, let them come from what quarter they may—from our Northern, Southern, English, Canadian, or Protestant brethren—always fall upon our ears as sweet soul-music—as the fore-tokening notes of a better, brighter, more beautiful day, when all the branches of the Church of Christ shall, while they maintain their individuality, labor together in perfect harmony for the speedy coming of the Redeemer's promised triumphant Kingdom.

"Our common Methodism!" What associations, memories, hopes, coming thronging around the soul of the pious Methodist, like the forms of old friends, or the recollections of departed loved ones, at the sound of those talismanic words! In all our branches, we are all inheritors of the glory of a common origin and history; we are the common trustees and guardians of "the faith once delivered to the saints," whose revival constitutes the essence and power of Methodism; we preach the same gospel, hold the same "form of sound words" in our doctrine and devotional standards, and in our preaching and other services; our people are all, in a general sense, converted in the same way, utter the same praises, sing the same songs, and die with the same hopeful phraseology of the Gospel of a risen Savior upon their lips.

While we are imbued with these memories and sentiments, no argument is necessary as to the excellent duty of striving to "keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." On some things we differ, and cannot bring about agreement by strife of words. And what is true of the different branches of "our common Methodism," is also true of the different branches of "our common Christianity."

LOCAL PREACHERS' CONVENTION.

That this Convention form itself into an association to be called the The Local Preachers' Association of the M. E. Churches of the United States.

That the object of this Association shall be, to unite more closely the local preachers of all sections of the United States; to promote thereby Christian unity, and increase their usefulness in spreading Scriptural holiness over these lands.

That we recommend auxiliary associations to be formed in each presiding elder's district, and the members, or a delegation thereof, be elected to form a conference association, and that each conference association elect one for every ten—no conference, however, being restricted to less than two—to form a National Association, and that the next session be held in the city of Baltimore, Md., on the first Saturday of October, 1859.

That it is inexpedient to publish a paper or magazine of our own, but we will depend upon the Church organs already established, unto which we pledge our exertions to extend their circulation.

That our bishops and the members of the several Annual Conferences be cordially invited to attend the meetings of our association.

That we recommend to our brethren a careful and critical study of the works recommended by the General Conference to local preachers.

"That we appoint the first Friday preceding our next Convention for fasting and prayer, to bring about the union of the M. E. Churches in the United States."

The resolutions speak for themselves. The Association is not to be confined to the Northern Church, but is to include the local preachers of "the M. E. Churches in the United States, and they are to seek the "union" of all such Churches. We suggest they should have said "the Methodist Churches," instead of "the M. E. Churches." It would have been more comprehensive, and equally as practicable. When they include representatives from all sections of the Union, and keep the slavery and other distracting questions out of their discussions, we shall feel like congratulating them. Should they work in perfect harmony with the Itinerancy, this movement is capable of much good; otherwise it will do harm.

BISHOP DOANE DEFENDED.

Rev. Mr. Carden, of the Episcopal Church, diocese of Pennsylvania, while visiting Cape May, administered the communion, inviting the resident Methodist Minister to assist him. Cape May is in the bounds of Bishop Doane's Diocese of New Jersey. He immediately forbade Mr. Carden to officiate any more within his ecclesiastical territory. Since then, the entire religious press at the North, Episcopal among the rest, with the exception of the high-church papers, has denounced him in the severest terms. His individual character is assailed by the press of his own Church, (the Protestant Churchman, Dr. Tyng's paper, especially,) twitting him with the charges once brought against him, of dishonesty and drunkenness.

We have as strong a dislike to that exclusiveness, in any Church, which claims that it is the only Church of Christ on earth, as any body can have; and this case is only another strong illustration of its unscriptturalness, bigotry, and folly. But these bitter denunciations of the only too consistent Bishop are all wrong. Dr. Tyng's assault upon his individual character, is a personal uncharitableness, in painful contrast with the ecclesiastical charity of which he has been so long an eminent exponent.

What has Bishop Doane done? He has simply carried out the well known regulations of his Church, to their fullest extent. He is a better man than they who hold to the correctness of such regulations, but "love the praise of men" too much to carry them out. If they are wrong, (as every body knows,) let it be acknowledged, and they be abandoned. If not, let them be carried out to the letter. We feel now more charitable toward Bishop Doane than ever, for he is doing much toward the breaking down of that exclusiveness which is the shame of those Churches who hold it. Our Baptist brethren hold equally exclusive views, but are not half so consistent as Bishop Doane. It is a reproach to them that, holding the views they do, they do not act them out as he has done, and exclude ministers of other Churches from their pulpits. We oppose all such views, but we shall never denounce those who hold them for carrying them out; on the contrary, we shall thank them.

The good time when all Evangelical Churches shall acknowledge each other as branches of "the true vine," is coming on. During one of the noon-meetings last week in Sansom street, Philadelphia, Rev. Mr. Carden rose, and amongst other utterances in sympathy with the spirit of the meeting, expressed a desire for a union communion service. Coming from a minister of the Episcopal Church, it seemed to be accepted as a sentiment in the right direction. It was a new and, to many present, an acceptable thought. Dr. Brantley, pastor of one of the Philadelphia Baptist Churches, rose to express his dissent from such a proposition, and was proceeding to give his reasons, when he was called to order by the Rev. Mr. Newberry, on the ground of the manifest violation of that law of the meeting—which forbids the discussion of controverted topics. Rev. Mr. Jenkins also strongly insisted upon the maintenance of the original platform: "No controversy." The discussion created considerable interest and attention.

A CHARMING BOOK.

Stevens' History of Methodism is one of the most attractive and absorbing books we have recently read. Without intending to pay the author the compliment of saying that his style is equal to Macaulay's, it is nevertheless true that, he is to the history of Methodism what Macaulay is to the history of England. While all the leading facts, events, and developments of Methodism, are most carefully collected, rigidly sifted, and lucidly arranged and stated; the movement of the scenes is rapid, the style is easy, natural, perspicuous, and flowing, and the work has all the charm of romance, and all the satisfaction of reality.

Its characterization of the "representative men" and women of early Wesleyan Methodism is happily successful. They stand out in relief as bold, and make upon the mind an impression as distinct, as do the dramatis personæ of Dickens' David Copperfield, or of any other book we have read. It is a real history, in the highest and best sense, and not a mere Methodist book. It is not written from a Methodist, but from a Scriptural, Protestant, and philosophical standpoint. Methodism is analyzed in character, and traced in progress, in the most catholic spirit, as a development of modern Christianity.

We regard this as the first greatly successful attempt to write such a history. We are frank to say, that no Methodist in the world should fail to read it at once. He cannot read it without benefit. It is as valuable in a devotional, as in a historical sense. Its perusal stirs the soul, and gives it the true evangelical inspiration.—It is really as much a revival work in its tendency as any of Caughey's works. It will do good, in many ways, wherever it is read.

In reply to constant inquiries when the second volume of the new History of Methodism will be out, Dr. Stevens says, in his paper, that "the work has not been hastily got up, and shall not be in haste with its continuance." The second volume could soon be put to press, but may need verification on some points from England. It is also not desirable to put it in the market till the first volume has been generally circulated. It will be, probably, nearly a year before its appearance. Meanwhile, it should be borne in mind, that the first volume is complete in itself. It covers a definite period—that in which Methodism (both Arminian and Calvanistic) was yet a unit; and ends at the death of Whitefield. It can therefore be read without any necessary dependence on the subsequent volumes.

ONE OF OUR MOST VALUABLE BOOKS.

A more needed, satisfactory, and encouraging book has not, in a long time, been issued by the Southern Methodist Publishing-house, Nashville, than "The Preachers' Text-Book: A Biblical Digest, specially designed for Ministers, Bible Classes, Sunday School Teachers, and other Students of the Holy Scriptures. Edited by Thomas O. Summers, D. D."

All the principal subjects of the Bible are arranged under appropriate heads, with all their divisions and subdivisions, and the texts bearing upon them cited. To give a Christian a thorough and comprehensive view of the scriptures, that he may be "thoroughly furnished unto every good word and work,"—to give all conditions and phases of life, character and experience, spiritual "food convenient for them,"—to enable the preacher to be successful in the "study, to show himself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed; rightly dividing the word of truth, and giving to each his portion in due season"—to enable the Sunday School Teacher, and student of the Bible, to understand and expound "the way of the Lord more perfectly"—and to make those who "can earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints" "mighty in the Scriptures," we do not know of so valuable a book in such a small and cheap form.

It is but little larger than the new Discipline, and can be carried in a preacher's coat-pocket; and yet it contains enough subjects, ready prepared, divided, and the appropriate Scriptures cited, to keep him preaching the balance of his days. And yet it is free from the objections most justly urged against those miserable things, aptly called "skeletons." It simply brings the thought bearing upon any particular point, together, in one place, from all parts of the Bible.

In our Sunday Schools, it will take the place of those works for which we have heretofore been dependent upon others. Books demanded by the circumstances of our people are the books to be looked after first of all, and this is one of them. And no body was "appointed" to write it. It is spontaneous, and so will be its reception.

WESLEYAN EX-PRESIDENTS.

An English correspondent of the New York Independent gives the following references to the ex-presidents who attended the last Wesleyan Conference: "Of ex-presidents there are now living ten, nine of whom were present at the recent conference. The sole absentee was Dr. James Dixon, an enthusiastic admirer of your great Republic, whose growing infirmities, including the loss of sight, altogether incapacitate him for taking any part in ecclesiastical assemblages. The nine venerable men who were present at Hull, have all attained eminence in the Wesleyan body by the diverse and signal services which they have rendered for a long series of years. The brothers Jackson have been for more than fifty years admirable specimens of the plain, stern, Baptist-like preaching of the first generation of Methodist Evangelists. Samuel has a good degree of keen logic and pungent wit, which in times of connectional controversy, he has most mercilessly employed in scattering those who have assailed the order and discipline of the Methodist Church. Thomas is the more erudite and stately of the two; for more than nineteen years was the Conference editor at the Book Room, while for the last fifteen years he has been Theological Professor at the Wesleyan Richmond College. John Lomas, the bachelor, sixty years of age, nearly blind, has a mind remarkable for originality, logical power and tasteful beauty. John Scott has a keen intellect, and is an adept in the art of government. Isaac Keeling is known as the cast-iron thinker and preacher. John Farrar has accurate learning, and is skilful in marshaling and usefully employing the thoughts and plans of more original minds. Dr. Hannah is the exact and systematic theologian, and richly evangelical preacher. Robert Young has been a most successful missionary; and, if somewhat ungainly in his modes of thought and address, has nevertheless done good yeoman service in the field at home, as well as in heathen lands. The last on the roll of ex-presidents is Francis A. West, who has just yielded the Chair to President Bowers. Mr. West is a man of immense capacity, and, unlike the general run of the best Methodist preachers, his fame, as a man of intellect, vast moral power, and tangible achievement, increases from year to year."

OUR WASHINGTON CITY CHURCH.

We should be really delighted to hear of the success of the several means adopted, to raise money to build a magnificent "Metropolitan Church" in Washington City. We ought to have such a Church, and the men engaged in the enterprize deserve to succeed. The "Great Picture" of the late General Conference, the Bishops, living and dead, and of the Wesleyans, should be subscribed for by all our people who are able to pay for it. The price is $10, and if a sufficient number of subscriptions be obtained, it will be reduced to $5. The new book of sermons lately spoken of in these columns, price $1 50, will be a valuable work. The proceeds of both of these are to be devoted to the Washington City Church. If you wish either, address William T. Smithson, Esq., Washington, District Columbia.

The Presbyterians are engaged in a similar work. The Presbyterian says: "We learn from the Washington Union that the Rev. Moses D. Hoge, D. D., of Richmond, Virginia, has agreed to accept the pastoral charge of the Second Presbyterian Church, Washington, District of Columbia, late the Rev. Dr. Eckard's, and that it is designed to make this the basis for the "Metropolitan Church," which is to be erected under the auspices of the General Assembly. Dr. Hoge is admirably qualified for such a post; and in his hands, with God's blessing, we shall look for the complete success of the enterprise which has now been so long on hand."

OUR APPROACHING CONFERENCES.

We have always been of opinion, that there is generally too little of the devotional element in the spirit and conduct of the Sessions of Annual Conferences. Business absorbs time and mind. As a general rule, no pains are taken to render them impressive and beneficial as annual reunions of a Spiritual Brotherhood. That such is the proper view to be taken of these Annual Sessions, is self-evident. When we write and speak of them, this idea is always prominent. But the facts and the ideal, hardly ever harmonize. Wesley, Asbury, McKendree; our own Conferences dead; the approaching time of our own summon from the itinerant field; the spiritual good of the Church; the salvation of sinners—all these things should be in our hearts, when we meet, and bind us together—and lead us to "the throne of the heavenly grace."

JEWISH LONGEVITY.

The modern Israelites, it is said, have a longer life than modern Christians. During twenty-three years M. Gatters has been gathering statistics on this head in Wisselburg; and he finds, that as infants, as boys and as adults, Jews live longer than Christians. He attributes their longer life to some peculiarity of race; but it is probable their money has something to do with it. A pauper Jew is an unheard of thing, and poverty and short life have a well known relation.

Death of K. L. Haralson.—We regret to learn the death, by yellow fever, of Kinchin L. Haralson, Esq., U. S. Collector at Point Isabel, Texas. He had but recently left Chambers County, Alabama—was a brother of the late Hon. Hugh A. Haralson, of Lagrange, Ga., formerly M. C. from that district—and was a worthy and excellent gentleman, with many friends among the best citizens in Georgia and Alabama.

THE PRESIDENT AND MR. BENTON.

Mrs. Jacobs is a daughter of the late Col. Benton, and, besides Mr. Jones, was the only person present at the last interview between Messrs. Benton and Buchanan, which took place a short time before the death of the former, and after saying that the interview was desired by Mr. Benton, she thus describes what occurred: "He took the President's hand in his, and said in clear tones, 'Buchanan we are friends; we have differed on many points, as you well know, but I always trusted in your integrity of purpose. I supported you in preference to Fremont, because he headed a sectional party, whose success would have been the signal of disunion. I have known you long, and I know you would honestly endeavor to do right. I have that faith in you now; but you must look to a Higher Power to support and guide you. We will soon meet in another world; I am going now; you will soon follow. My peace with God is made, my earthly affairs arranged; but I could not go without seeing you, and thanking you for your interest in my child. Much more was said that is too sacred to repeat. Col. Benton was much exhausted, and Mr. Buchanan frequently urged him to spare himself. Mr. Buchanan remarked to members of the family that nothing had ever given him greater pleasure. When Mrs. Jacobs returned to her father's room, he called her to him and said, 'My child, you are a witness of what has passed this evening; think of it, and remember it. I am glad Buchanan came; all is peace with me, and I can rest.'"

WESLEYAN ITEMS.

The President of the Wesleyan Conference, the Rev. John Bowers, is appointed President of the next Irish Conference, to commence in Belfast on Wednesday, the 22d of June, 1859. The Rev. John Scott and the Rev. John Lomas are appointed to accompany the President of the next Irish Conference.

The Rev. Joseph Stinson, D. D., is appointed the President of the next Conference in Canada, to be held in the city of Hamilton on the first Wednesday in June, 1859; and the Rev. John Douse, Co-Delegate.

The Rev. Matthieu Gallienne is appointed the President of the next French Conference, to be held at Paris on the 15th of June, 1859; and the Rev. Pierre Lucas, Co-Delegate.

The Rev. Daniel J. Draper is appointed the President of the next Australasian Conference, to be held at Sydney, on Thursday, the 20th of January, 1859.

The Rev. Matthew Richey, D. D., is appointed President of the next Conference of Eastern British America, to be held at Charlotte Town, Prince Edward's Island, on the fourth Wednesday in June, 1859; and the Rev. Richard Knight, D. D., Co-Delegate.

The Ex-President, the Rev. Francis A. West, is requested to attend the next Canada Conference, and also the next Conference of Eastern British America, as the Representative of the British Conference.

PAY YOUR PREACHER.

The Conference year is nearly closed. Soon your preacher will leave. What is not paid before Conference is generally never paid. The preacher's "allowance" is small enough, and if it be not paid, it is an injustice to him, and a sin against God. The Richmond Christian Advocate says: "If the estimated expense for the year is one thousand dollars, and only seven hundred are raised, the minister pays, as his proportion of the current expenses of the year, for the Church he serves, the sum of three hundred dollars! Ought the Church to exact such sums of her ministers? First: There are many—a large class of persons—whose contributions to the support of the ministry is just nothing at all! They do not pay one cent per annum. Yet they are professors of faith in Christ—inflicting to be interested in his cause! Second: There are many, who, able to pay liberally although not wealthy, pay as little as possible to save conscience, or to avoid the shame of paying nothing. Third: There are wealthy members of the Church whose unusual payments to support the Gospel, are out of all proportion to their means, and their responsibilities. They receive much and give little: gather all they can, and keep as much of it as is compatible with the hardly-felt obligation of giving something, not much, but as little as will preserve a reputation for not being wholly indifferent to the subject."

MARRYING A DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER

An English correspondent of the Christian Advocate and Journal says, that a large number of the senior and most justly respected of the British Methodist ministers, hold high canonical views on the above subject—that is, that they are opposed to such marriages. The writer in view of the convenience of the poor, thinks the law of the land ought to be altered, so as to allow such unions. Yet, he believes, "that a refined feeling of social delicacy and propriety will put the thought of marrying a wife's sister at an increasingly greater distance from the minds of gentlemen of the middle and higher classes."

To American ears, this is simple affectation and nonsense. It is either improper, or it is not, to marry a deceased wife's sister. If it is not, it is, at least in this country, where caste has not overcome nature, as proper among people of one class as another. It is not a matter of social propriety, but of personal taste. If it is improper, far be it from a Christian man to encourage among the poor that which is considered indelicate among those more favored.

Bishop Early.—We learn says the St. Louis Advocate that Bishop Early passed through the city, late last week, on his way to the sent of the Missouri Conference. We had not the pleasure of seeing him, he being in haste to reach a meeting in Howard county, which commenced on Friday last. Made no stay in the city. His health, we understand, was good, and his zeal unabated.

THE GREAT PICTURE.

William T. Smithson Esq., writes to the Richmond Christian Advocate as follows, from New York: "Brother Benton and myself arrived in this great and busy city on Tuesday evening last. We are here looking after, and watching the progress of the "great picture" of which so much has already been said and written, and in which so much interest is felt throughout the Church. I am happy in being able to say, to the friends of this truly magnificent work, that the painter has completed his part of the work, and handed it over to the engraver, Mr. J. C. Buttre, who is now studiously engaged in the execution of the engraving. We are very much pleased with the plan and design of the picture; and concur, in the opinion, that Mr. Bellows, the young, though skilful and ingenious artist, who designed and painted it, has wrought out and accomplished a great work—a work which required a great deal of artistic skill, the great number of figures to be introduced making it very intricate indeed. I hesitate not to say, that Mr. Bellows has a bright future before him, and that when this picture shall be brought before the public, all will be ready to bestow upon him that need of praise to which this work so justly entitles him. I will not attempt to say any thing of the picture, as Brother B. has promised to perform that task, which he will do in the course of a few days." I may add, however, by way of gratifying the anxious and inquisitive mind on this point, that the plan of the picture represents the Conference as being called to order by the presiding officer, the venerable Bishop Soule, who is shown in full length, standing. On the right of Bishop Soule, are to be seen, standing, Bishops Kavanaugh, Andrew and Early; and on the left, Bishops Pierce, standing, and Paine, sitting. Just below the platform on which the Bishops are placed, and receding a little to the left of the Bishops, stands a group, of whom the most prominent to be seen are Dr. L. Pierce, W. W. Bennett, Dr. Hamilton, and Gillespie of the New Orleans Advocate. In the foreground, we observe, in full length, in a sitting posture, Drs. Wightman, W. A. Smith, Doggett, McFerrin, Rosser, Marshall, M'Tyeire, Neely, Watson, and others.

"The introduction of the portraits of John and Charles Wesley, together with the portraits of Bishops Asbury, McKendree, Coke, Roberts, Emory, Bascom and Capers, add greatly to the beauty and attractiveness of the picture.

John Wesley is placed just above the platform of the Bishops, in full length, having on his flowing black robe, and his white surplice about the neck, with his Bible spread open before him—and with solemnity, looking down upon the Bishops and Conference below him. Charles Wesley occupies a position in a direct line to the left of John, facing the picture; and just below him, and immediately above the Secretary's desk, are the portraits of Bishops Bascom and Capers. Still further to the left, facing the picture, in a direct line, are the portraits of Bishops Asbury, McKendree, Coke, Roberts, and Emory. All of these portraits have been most appropriately arranged, and certainly give additional interest to the picture."

BOOK CONCERN BIBLES.

Our publishers have been busily engaged in preparing some fine editions of the Bible.—The National Magazine says: "Their bulletin opens with a superior assortment of Bibles, among which is an edition of the Quarto Bible, illustrated by several new and beautiful steel engravings. They also announce as forthcoming a Pronouncing Bible, which, in its orthoepical arrangements, will be in accordance with Webster. In this, the reader will find every proper name of Scripture, duly accented. Each book will be prefaced by a short introduction. It will also have double column references, and marginal readings, in the center of each page. It will contain other illustrative matter, and will prove of great value to families and Bible students. So says the Advocate and Journal. Our Concern also announces Bibles.

LONDON (WESLEYAN) REVIEW.

An English correspondent of the New York Independent, speaking of Wesleyan affairs, says: "The London Review, which was established about five years ago, and which has now taken rank with the older quarterlies; is not properly a connectional publication.—It was originated in Liverpool, by the enterprise of a few ministers and laymen, who had long desired to see a thoroughly good quarterly, imbued with the Christian spirit—catholic, faithful and vigorous—and equal in literary execution to the best in our country. The names of the Revs. F. A. West, F. J. Jobson, and W. Arthur, with David M'Nicholl, Esq., an eminent medical man, resident in Liverpool, deserve honorable recognition as the originators of this noble review; and with regard to its fiscal condition and prospects, no similar publication in this country can boast so great success within the same period of its existence."

OPEN COMMUNION.

The Christian Banner, organ of the Union Baptists, represents that denomination as follows: "We confidently believe that there are thousands of Baptists in the Old Dominion who have no need to be urged to make a "start" in embracing the sentiments of open communion. They have, in heart, principle and sympathy, always been open communionists. They are beginning to look at and examine the subject for themselves; and the time is not far distant when Close Communion Baptist preachers will be forced to fall into the ranks of Open Communion Baptists; or, go to hard work for their bread and butter."

The Yellow Fever is abating, so far as the number of deaths is concerned—two hundred and sixty-six for the week ending Sunday morning last—a falling off of over two hundred from the highest figures of the season. But it only needs material to be as fatal, or more so, than ever. The unacclimated should keep away upon peril of their lives. But they continue to pour into the city.

DEATH OF MRS. JULIA BORING WARD.

By a letter from John J. Dunn, Esq., from Galveston, we receive the mournful intelligence that this lady, the wife of Dr. Ward, whose death we noticed recently, and daughter of the Rev. Dr. Boring, was soon laid in the grave by the side of her departed husband—both having died of yellow fever. She was an amiable, accomplished and pious lady, a devoted and affectionate wife and daughter. Her death, as well as that of her husband, is deeply regretted by all who knew them in Galveston. We deeply sympathize with the afflicted family of our friend and brother, Dr. Boring.

REV. LEWIS B. WHIPPLE.

We learned recently, by a letter from J. J. Dunn, Esq., that our friend and former companion, Rev. L. B. Whipple, Pastor of Ryland Chapel, Galveston, was sick of yellow fever. As no mention is made of him in the last Texas Advocate, we presume he is recovering. A young, devoted and talented preacher, his death would be a great loss to the Church.

THE SIZE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

The Washington Star says that the possessions of the Hudson Bay Company, or the territory of this Continent over which they exercise control, contains an area of two millions five hundred thousand square miles. How much is that? It is fifteen and a half times larger than the State of California; about thirty-eight times as large as the State of New York; nearly twice as large as the whole of the thirty-one States of the Union, and if we omit the territory of Nebraska, is as large as all our States and territories combined! About one-fifth of that extent, or more than three times the size of California, is said to be fit for agricultural or grazing purposes.

BISHOP SIMPSON.

The Pittsburgh Advocate says: We regret to be compelled to say, in answer to anxious inquiries, that Bishop Simpson's health has not improved, and that present indications do not promise an early recovery. He is greatly reduced in flesh and strength within the last month. Knowing the deep interest our readers and the Church generally feel in his case, we have made this statement that, in connection therewith, we may suggest that prayers be offered on his behalf to the Head of the Church that, if it is his will that "the prayer of faith shall save the sick," he would "raise him up" according to his promise.

OUR COLLEGES AND SCHOOLS.

We should be glad to receive accounts from all our Colleges and Schools, of their prospects since the opening of their Sessions during the present Autumn, giving the present number of pupils, the number expected, and other items of interest. Such things would be of benefit to the Institutions, and of satisfactory interest to their patrons and the Church.

TUSKALOOSA FEMALE COLLEGE.

You are aware, Mr. Editor, that Alabama has been doing great things in the past few years for the cause of education. Tuskegee Female College has been built, at a cost of fifty thousand dollars; Centenary has been enlarged and improved; two hundred and seventy thousand dollars have been raised for the Southern University; a hundred and fifty thousand for the Auburn Male College; and now, lastly, the friends of the Tuskaloosa Female College have determined to endow it handsomely and present it to the next Conference. They have gone about the work, too, in earnest, for in one week the committee appointed by the Trustees to solicit subscriptions have reported the sum of twelve thousand dollars already raised, in good notes bearing interest from date. It may be proper to state that $8000 of this sum was contributed by four men, and $2000 by two others. There are not a more noble and liberal set of church members in Alabama than we have here in Tuskaloosa. They pull evenly and strongly together, and give of their means liberally and abundantly.

The endowment thus raised will place this institution above her fair rivals at Summerfield and Tuskegee. The endowment of a Female College has, indeed, been talked about before, but when was it done? We are placed now beyond contingency. A good building, fine apparatus, out of debt, and an endowment of fifteen to twenty thousand dollars, to make up deficiencies. Withal, our School has a fine local patronage, although it has to compete with three other denominational schools of high grade in Tuskaloosa, yet they are largely sustained from abroad; while our School stands pre-eminent at home. Which is the surest foundation it is easy to see. It is a little surprising, nevertheless, that an institution standing so deservedly high as this does, in such a community as constitute the Methodist congregation in Tuskaloosa, should not have attracted a larger patronage from abroad. But this, we humbly conceive, may be accounted for in several different ways. In the first place—the Institution being out of debt, has not had to beg and implore the people all over the country to send to it for the sake of getting their money. In the next place, the course of study being from one to three years longer than in other Female Colleges, it has held out no very strong temptations to those who desire to finish in the course of a session or two, at most. Finally, there has been no humbug used to force the Institution upon the attention of the people. We have had no drummers out, begging and hiring pupils to come in. Our President is a modest, and—in fact, rather a diffident man, rather a stranger in the State—does not go about a great deal—does not wear a big watch-chain, nor flourish a gold-headed cane—speaks moderately of the merits of his School, and of his own merits not at all—and is greatly beloved by all the people of Tuskaloosa, but not much known from home. These have been some of the things that have operated against us—but now that we have got our endowment, we intend to talk a good deal more, and work none the less in our private labors with our pupils.

By the terms of subscription, if anything should remain after paying up teachers' salaries and necessary expenses of the School, it is to be appropriated to paying the board and tuition of Methodist preachers' daughters; and it is the design of the Trustees to increase this fund as far as possible with this end in view. And if the Conference should ever have any funds to bestow in that way, where could they better be placed than here with this fund, already created for the same purpose?

With these facilities in our hands for doing good, we feel that the Tuskaloosa Female College should be more highly appreciated by the Alabama Conference and the Methodist Church. There is room enough for us, and our rivals also. Alabama is broad and long, and three Female Colleges, located as these are, at Tuskegee, Summerfield and Tuskaloosa, need not be in each other's way. But our School has been looked upon as rather a local affair, and we wish to delocalize it—we want it to join the Conference. We want a Board of Trustees appointed from the Conference and a Visiting Committee. We want to be recognized in your Educational Reports, a thing which has not been done before; and we want your influence and favor to be exerted in our behalf among

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

...se who have daughters to be educated, and who are ...t already inclined to send them to some Methodist ...llege.

Lastly, we wish to bring the Tuskaloosa Female College before the minds of the people, that they may be ...tified of the superior advantages afforded by this Institution. And for this purpose we expect still further ...o invite attention to the School through the pens o... some able members of the Board of Trustees.

FRANCES M. GRACE.

THE NEW ORGAN.

Mr. Editor: Many of the friends of the Weekly Tract, called, or, to be called, "The Church Evangelist," are anxious to know what the prospects are for the Establishment of the paper.

Judging from the voluntary offers of aid for its endowment, and the warm and hearty endorsement of the plan by great numbers whom I have met, and by numerous letters daily pouring in upon me from the most influential ...ay, and clerical brethren, I should say the prospects are as good as need be. I am more satisfied every day that it is the paper we need, and must have. It is the only ...ode of reaching the whole body of our people. And until we reach them all we cannot begin to count upon their active co-operation with the spirit of the age in pushing on the victories of the Messiah. Many, probably, do not understand the plan. It is this. We propose to raise a fund in the various Conferences, as large as we may, the interest of which shall pay the cost of editing, printing, folding, directing, etc, etc, so as to make it as cheap as possible, and let every church subscribe for as many copies as will fill see to it that the poor and Sabbathless, prayerless masses of families are supplied. And the weary, worn, and ones whose cares and poverty deny them the Advocates and other means of christian knowledge will be special objects of attention—they must be supplied.

We want to publish several hundred thousand weekly. ...ught to be done, it can be done: how many say, "It shall be done?"

There lies before me a letter dated September 29th, in which the writer says, "I have not been able to devise a better scheme or a more beneficent and useful charity than the one you propose." And then adds a proposal of the donation of several thousand dollars.

If a few noble hearted brethren in each Annual conference would take hold of this enterprise, within two years our church would possess the greatest printing agency in the world. What say you brethren? I should be happy to send my "circulars" illustrating the whole plan to any persons who may address me a line to this place.

THE REVIVAL.

"To spread Scriptural Holiness over these Lands."

The Fulton street Daily Union Prayer-meeting in New York, which is now more than a year old, holds on with unabated interest. The meeting is crowded—the power of God is present, and much good is done.

At Number Thirteen, Old Slip, there are meetings of peculiar interest. No others in any part of New York surpass them. They are fresh, earnest and delightful.—They not unfrequently have a dash of salt water, many ship-captains and sailors attending them.

A gentleman said he had just returned from Boston, where he found the daily prayer-meetings crowded; and the religious interest making increased progress. The 8 A. M. meeting and the 12 M. meeting at the "Old South" were filled to overflowing, and very animated; but nowhere did he see such displays of divine power and grace as in North street, the Five Points of Boston.

The Independent says: Two general public meetings were held in connection with the Sunday-school Convention on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, in Plymouth Church. At the first, addresses were made by Rev. Asa Bullard, the well-known agent of the Massachusetts Sabbath School Society, Rev. Dr. Hague of New York, Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher, Rev. William H. Milburn, the "blind preacher," now pastor of the Pacific street Methodist Church, Brooklyn, and the Rev. Mr. Westbrook of Philadelphia. On Wednesday evening, the building was crowded to its utmost capacity, and the meeting was one of the most impressive which we have ever witnessed.

The meeting held on Saturday last at noon was crowded and overflowing, and was marked with special interest. The leader was one of the rescued passengers of the ill-fated "Austria."

THE JOHN STREET MEETINGS.—The numbers who daily attend these meetings have nearly doubled within a short time past, and there is a greatly awakened interest. The meetings at this Church are not less prosperous than those of other localities.

The last Nashville Advocate reports not far from 1700 persons converted, or added to the Church.

The last Southern Advocate reports over a thousand persons converted or added to the Church.

The last Texas Advocate reports over 300.

Mississippi Conference.

UNION CIRCUIT.—Rev. R. A. Sibley, writes: "We held a meeting at Strong River, commencing 18th September, continued until 22d, resulted in four accessions and three conversions; the Church was wonderfully revived. It was a glorious meeting; there was a great deal of sickness in the vicinity, which curtailed the influence to some extent. We have taken into the Church on probation at this appointment sixteen this year. This is a new appointment. The conversions were three precious little boys, that we hope God may call to the ministry. We have other meetings to come, at which we look for a further outpouring of the Spirit."

BAYOU PIERRE CIRCUIT.—Rev. V. H. Johnson, writes: "We commenced a meeting at Tabernacle church on the 9th inst., which continued until the 17th, during which time the Lord was with us in power. On Friday night it has scarcely ever been our privilege, to see such manifestation of divine power; many mourners converted. The number of converts is about twenty-five, accessions forty-five, many sinners converted. The congregations paid unusual attention to the word, left many mourners at the altar. May the Lord convert them all; the church greatly revived. The Lord has done a great work for this people; conference collection $30, missionary collection $298 70; subscribers to several of our periodicals and papers. Thanks to brothers Thomas, Nixon, and R. T. Beonington for their efficient ministerial aid."

CLINTON CIRCUIT.—Rev. L. Wiley, writes: "The Lord has been with us during this year on Clinton Circuit; some seventy-five or more have professed to find pardoning mercy during the year, and about as many have joined the Church."

EAST FELICIANA CIRCUIT.—Rev. H. T. Lewis, writes: "Rev. W. J. Hamilton and myself have just closed a most interesting meeting at Gilead Church. The church was greatly revived, and built up—backsliders reclaimed, sinners converted, and six additions to the Church."

Alabama Conference.

BRUSH CREEK CIRCUIT.—A Correspondent, R. P. F., writes: "us that this time-honored Circuit, which is supplied this year by Rev. D. H. Smith, a local preacher, is now highly prosperous. Protracted meetings have been held at many points on the Circuit, with wonderful success. Many souls have been converted and added to the Church; at the camp meeting, last September, forty-five whites and many colored persons professed saving faith, most of whom joined the Church. Revs. Hutchinson, P. E. Neely, Dorman, Shepard, Saunders and others, assisted. The P. E., preached a masterly sermon on baptism at 11 o'clock on Sabbath. The financial interests of the Circuit are in a prosperous condition; one new church house been built at a cost of eight or nine hundred dollars, and another, is to be built at a cost of a thousand or more.—They hope also to build a good parsonage.

OAK BOWERY CIRCUIT.—Rev. J. W. Lakey, writes: "Since my last letter to the Advocate, we have had quite a number of additions to the M. E. Church, South, and most of them regenerated, sixty-two in number, and that number, added to ninety-eight, makes one hundred and sixty; during the year eight or ten have been converted, that united with the Baptist society; indeed, they have had but few accessions, only as they came to them through the instrumentality of the Methodist Church. It seems that our antipedo-baptist friends are dependent upon the labors of others, to build up and keep up what they say to be the only Church of Christ. Is it not strange that they have such high pretentions to the Apostolic Spirit, and yet God does not seem to bless their labors? There must be something "rotten in Denmark." They live mostly in this part of the country by proselyting, most of their old members were converted among the Methodists. I think the course they are pursuing will bring the curse of heaven upon them. It is water, water, more than the blood of Jesus; I trust they may become enlightened on the subject of baptism, regard it in the proper light, and love God more than water baptism. Our Church is greatly prospering in this country. Whenever our ministers preach, God blesses their labors. Thousands have been converted all over the land and the Methodist, Episcopal Church never had such strength added to her in one year. If her ministers will only be humble, preach the doctrine of the M. E. Churches, and defend their Church against the misrepresentation of her enemies, we have nothing to fear. I am making collections for your paper, I shall be able to give you some help at Conference. I am glad to say that the New Orleans Christian Advocate is gaining on the affections of the people, it is becoming more hopefull. You can and must succeed; the arrangement of your reading matter is admired, and there being less advertisements. God bless you in your good work."

BELMONT CIRCUIT.—Rev. J. W. Shores, writes: "We have just closed a meeting of a week's continuance at Wesley Chapel, on this Circuit, which was an occasion for devout thanks to God. The members of the Church were made "to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus" and "to rejoice in hope of the glory of God." Several souls awakened and converted, and six whites and four blacks joined the Church. My colleague, brother Melton, and myself were assisted by brothers L. M. Boyd, (local) and J. M. Hood (itinerant,) of the Sumterville circuit. They labored zealously and usefully. We raised a handsome missionary collection, on the last day of the meeting."

CEDAR CREEK CIRCUIT.—Rev. J. C. Loomis, writes: "The Lord has revived his work in most of the churches, on cedar creek circuit this year. Bro. Moody held a protracted meeting at Society Hill, commencing August first, and continuing a week, twenty-seven whites added to the church then and since, with eleven blacks. The week after commenced at Pineville, and received forty whites and twenty-one blacks; next at Snow Hill where sixteen whites have joined the church this year. At Mount Carmel eighteen whites have united themselves to God's people; considerable interest is felt at other places on the circuit, and we feel that the blessing of God has rested upon the faithful labors of our devoted pastor, brother Moody."

Louisiana Conference.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT.—Rev. John Pipes, writes: "The preachers on Shreveport District are well and all at their posts. Perhaps Zion has been favored as much this year as any previous one. One thing, which omens good in our judgment is, that the Sprit of Camp-meetings has been greatly revived through-out this country. We have had four on the District, and a fifth appointed to come off the 22d of the present month. Besides, we have had many protracted meetings, and during the Summer and fall, at these protracted and Campmeetings, we have realized many precious revival seasons and times of great religious power. Our College agents and Tract agent been in the field bestirring themselves, and the various benovelent and Missionary enterprises have been before the people; and, we think, liberally responded to generally. The subject of Parsonages has been before the people, and we think that we are safe in saying that by the close of this year, we will have secured on this district three good preachers, homes. This is what we greately need in the Louisiana Conference. We may say of this Circuit (Mansfield and Pleasant Hill) that there has been a great revival influence, continued during the entire year, and the Pleasant Hill Campmeeting was one among the best meetings that we ever attended.

We learned the other day that Father J. Sale was very ill in Mansfield, his life being despaired of. He is an old Minister and a good man, "full of faith and the Holy Ghost." Only a few months since, in love-feast, we heard him say, "Seventy four years ago my Father, in the Sabbath-school, introduced me to a friend whom he said never would forsake me, which I have found to be true; I know my end is nigh; but my way is clear. Glory to God." We hope that the preachers have done as well for the Advocate as they have in other things."

OPELOUSAS.—Rev. B. F. White writes: "The Gospel still triumphs. Since my last communication we have received 22 more, on probation. "Laudamus Deum."

NOTICES OF ADVERTISEMENTS.

We have but few advertisements in the Advocate, which, in connection with the fact that our circulation is much the largest in the South-west, makes them worth double to the advertisers, what they are in any other paper. Yet we charge little, if any, more than the other papers of the city. We call attention to the following:

Arthur & Co., Wholesale Grocers, Office corner Canal and New Levee streets, Stores on Fulton, Canal, New Levee and Common streets, former stand of Converse & Co., have all sorts of Groceries and sundries, for family and plantation use. It is an old and reliable house; and will attend faithfully to all orders, from all regions trading to New Orleans. Read their Advertisement.

Shelby Nurseries, Bay St. Louis, Mississippi. W. A. Whitefield advertises these Nurseries in this paper; and offers for sale to all who desire, facilities for supplying themselves with Apples, Peaches, Pears, plums, Nectarines, Apricots, Quinces, cherries, Almonds, Figs and almost every other fruit grown in this climate. We hope to see everything of this kind encouraged.

Shelby Medical College.—This is a new Institution, at Nashville, Tennessee. With several of the gentlemen whose names appear in the Faculty, as advertised in this paper, we formed a pleasant and very favorable acquaintance while at the General Conference. Outside of New Orleans, no better medical school, we suppose, can be found.

Read, Hedges, & Drew, Druggists and Apothecaries, have removed from their old stand, 84 Common street, to 108 Canal street, Granite Row where they keep, for families, plantations, physicians, and interior Drug stores, drugs and medicines, chemicals, paints, oils, perfumery, instruments, and patent medicines. They are worthy and reliable gentlemen, and we advise our friends to patronize them.

Daniel Pratt's Cotton Gins are known every where, as he is, and like him, the more known, the better liked. They are for sale in this city 15 St. Charles street, by H. Kendall, Carter & Co., Cotton Factors and Commission Merchants.

DOMESTIC.

Attempt to Murder a Clergyman.—During service in the Methodist Episcopal Church, New York, on the evening of the 14th a Frenchman named Louis Berrier seated himself in a front pew, and soon after drew a pistol and fired at the pastor, Rev. M. D. C. Crawford, the ball grazing his head and lodging in the back of the pulpit. Berrier was immediately seized and given over to the police, when he stated that the minister had insulted him in his morning sermon. He was supposed to be insane.

California Mails via Tehuantepec.—The mails for California via the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, will close at seven o'clock, A. M., to-day, 27th instant. They will be carried by the steamship Quaker City, Capt Stoufeldt, which leaves for Minatitlan at eight, A. M. This will be the first mail to California by this new route. The Company expect to have it delivered in San Francisco in eighteen days from the date of its departure from New Orleans. The instruction to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's officers on the Pacific side, relative to the junction to be made by that line, with the Tehuantepec mails and passengers at Ventosa Bay, went out over a month ago, in ample time for every preparation to complete this junction. The Company's officers here are already busy answering daily applications from all parts of the country, for passage on the Quaker City—many applying by mail, to secure passage as far off as December next.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

"Suffer the Little Children to come unto Me."

LITTLE MINNIE.

AFFECTIONATELY INSCRIBED TO MRS. V. C. BLACKBURN—BY C. LEIGH B.

She is gone—dear little Minnie!
Gone, the "Golden Streets" to roam;
Only lent to thee, from Heaven;
God has called the wanderer home.
Softly came the angel's whisper,
From that far-off land of rest,
"Come to me." Her spirit answered,
"Little Minnie, thou art blest!"

Who can still the ceaseless longings
For the little sunbeam fled!
Hearts are cold and chill without it,
And the world seems dark and dread.
Once the pretty childish prattler,
Lisped sweet music all the day;
Now, with sad heart, vainly list'ning,
Thou canst only wait and pray.

Pray, that He who knows our sorrows,
And who binds the broken heart,
May, the joy religion bringeth
To thine inmost soul impart;
Then, while thinking of the lost ones,
And how dear they were to thee,
If around the shadows darken,
Heaven's beacon light thou'lt see.

Our little readers have read, we suppose, of the burning of the Steamship Austria, at Sea. Between five and six hundred people were either burned or drowned! What a horrible affair! But a few—something less than a hundred—were saved. One of them was named Mr. Phillips Berry. The daily prayer meeting in the old John-street Church, in New York, the oldest Methodist Church in the United States, has been going on for more than a year. Mr. Berry led one of these meetings lately. He opened the exercises by reading a hymn, of which the two following stanzas are a part:

"If, through unruffled seas,
Toward Heaven we calmly sail,
With grateful hearts, O God, to thee,
We'll own the favoring gale.

But should the surges rise,
And rest delay to come,
Blest be the sorrow, kind the storm,
Which drives us nearer home."

He then read the 20th Psalm, and offered prayer—especially remembering the friends of all who perished in the recent disaster of the steamship Austria.

As was expected, Mr. Berry made a most affecting statement of his experience, from the moment the alarm was given that the vessel was on fire to the time when he was picked up. He said, that in that dreadful hour it was terrible to witness the manifestations of ingratitude to God, the blasphemies and dreadful imprecations which pierced the sky. He, with a few Christians, mustered on the quarter-deck and there consulted upon the course to be pursued in case they were compelled to flee the ship to escape the tortures of the flames. One woman declared that death was inevitable, and she was unprepared to meet her fate; she asked what she should do; she was advised to pray to God that the blood of Jesus, which was shed for sinners, might cleanse her from her sins, she said that she could not pray; he (Mr. B.) prayed for her and with her, and trusted that she had made peace with God. As the flames spread rapidly it became necessary for the little group on the poop to separate, some of them to meet no more until they should meet in heaven. His particular friend who had accompanied him on the passage exchanged promises with him that if one of them should be saved he should inform the friends of the other that he had yielded up his spirit reposing on the arms of Jesus. They separated to meet not again until all the saved in Christ meet in heaven.

After leaving the ship, he swam for a long distance. During the time of this struggle his ears were continually pierced with the screams and wailing of the perishing. After having been in the water for a considerable time, he descried a life buoy in the distance, which several parties seemed to be endeavoring to reach. He swam with all his vigor to reach it; he gained it, but soon became cold in every part of his body. He was all this while engaged in sweet communion with his God. He had such a view of God's love as he never had before, and he was rather anxious than otherwise to glide into the possession of the sweet blessings which passed before him, and hovered over him, seeming to invite him home. Never before did he remember those beautiful lines of Wesley so vividly, and never before did he use them with better intent:

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,
While the billows near me roll;
While the tempest still is high;
Hide me, O my Savior, hide
Till the storm of life is past,
Safe into the haven guide;
O receive my soul at last."

After getting possession of the life-buoy, he turned and went in search of his friend; but all was quiet, save the murmuring of the ocean; those wailings and groanings which but a short time previous resounded through the air had been silenced, and many victims were engulfed in that same element through which he was struggling. He hesitated as to whether he should struggle longer; it seemed to be of little use to prolong life, simply to endure more pain in dying at last. Every limb was cold, the blood felt its circulation had ceased, and the bliss of dying was great. He was raised to the top of a wave, and from that eminence he saw a sail in the distance, and almost simultaneously with the glimpse of the possibility of being saved, his body become warm in every part, the blood coursed through his system with renewed vigor; he made for the sail, and was duly preserved as a witness to bear his testimony of God's infinite mercy, long-suffering, and loving-kindness.

DR. FRANKLIN'S SON A TORY.

The children all know the difference between a Whig and a Tory, we suppose. In the Revolutionary War, when the American Colonies were fighting the mother country, Great Britain, to obtain the liberties of their country, the Americans who sided with their country were called Whigs, and the Americans who sided against their country, were called Tories. Dr. Benjamin Franklin was a great man, and a great Whig. But, unfortunately, his son William was a Tory. Unlike his father, whose chiefs claim is for the invaluable services he rendered his country in her greatest need, the son was from the first to the last a devoted loyalist. Before the Revolutionary War he held several civil and military offices of importance. At the commencement of the war he held the office of Governor of New Jersey, which appointment he received in 1773. When the difficulties between the mother country and the colonies were coming to a crisis, he threw his whole influence in favor of loyalty, and endeavored to prevent the Legislative Assembly of New Jersey from sanctioning the proceedings of the General Congress of Philadelphia. These efforts, however, did but little to stay the tide of popular sentiment in favor of resistance to tyranny, and soon involved him in difficulty. He was deposed from office by the Whigs, to give place to William Livingston, and sent a prisoner to Connecticut, where he remained two years in East Windsor, in the house of Capt. Ebenezer Grant, near where the Theological Seminary now stands. In 1776 he was exchanged, and soon after went to England. There he spent the remainder of his life, receiving a pension from the British Government for the loss he sustained by his fidelity. He died in 1813, at the age of 82.

As might have been expected, his opposition to the cause of liberty, so dear to the heart of his father, produced an estrangement between them. For years they had no intercourse. When, in 1784, the son wrote to his father; in his reply, Dr. Franklin says:

"Nothing has ever hurt me so much, and affected me with such keen sensations as to find myself deserted in my old age by my only son; and not only deserted, but to find him taking up arms against me in a cause wherein my good fame, fortune and life were all at stake."

In his will, also, he alludes to the part his son had acted. After making some bequests, he adds:

"The part he acted against me in the late war, which is of public notoriety, will account for my leaving him no more of my estate he endeavored to deprive me of."

The patriotism of the father stands forth all the brighter when contrasted with the desertion of his son.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

"Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee."

BE GENTLE TO THY WIFE.

Be gentle: for you little know
How many trials rise;
Although to thee thy may be small,
To her of giant size.

Be gentle: though perchance that lip
May speak a murmuring tone;
The heart may speak in kindness yet,
And joy to be thine own.

Be gentle: weary hours of pain
'Tis woman's lot to bear;
Then yield her what support thou canst,
And all her sorrows share.

Be gentle; for the noblest hearts
At times must have some grief,
And even in a thoughtless word
May seek to find relief.

Be gentle; none are perfect here;
Thou'rt dearer far than life;
Then, husband, bear and still forbear—
Be gentle to thy wife.

MANTEL ORNAMENTS.

Here is a very simple and, we dare say, very pretty mantel or table ornament: Take bright red asparagus berries, with sufficient stems, and mingle them with cedar, or almost any evergreen, and place them in vases; the berries will retain their bright color all winter, but the cedar should be changed occasionally. The beautiful red berries peeping out of the dark green make almost as beautiful an ornament as a variety of flowers, and they are brilliant by candlelight.

THE TWO LOST HUSBANDS.

The following circumstances afford a beautiful illustration of that beautiful affection, a wife's love for her husband.

The Philadelphia Press says: The wife of Mr. Theodore Gerock, of Baltimore, is now visiting her relatives in Philadelphia, and while they have an doubt of his loss, she alone has a deep conviction that he is not dead.—Either he was not on board the Austria (though he wrote to her that he had actually paid for his passage,) or, if he was, then he must have been among the few who were rescued. It may be within the knowledge of many of our readers that a clergyman of this city was among those who left for Europe on the ill-fated President, and was never again heard of.

His wife, who remains in Philadelphia, and was deeply attached to him, never did, because she never would, believe that he was lost to her. Eighteen years have passed away, and yet that trusting lady—we cannot speak of her as wife, and she repudiates the name of widow—continues to expect his return. Every day a cover is placed for him at the table, where still stands his accustomed chair. Every ring at the bell, we are informed, awakens the cherished convictions of her heart that the loved one will return.

READING ALOUD.

There is no treat so great as to hear good reading of any kind. Not one gentleman or lady in a hundred can read so as to please the ear, and send the words with gentle force to the heart and understanding. An indistinct utterance, whines, nasal twangs, guttural notes, hesitations, and other vices of elocution, are almost universal. Why it is, no one can say, unless it be that either the pulpit, or the nursery, or the Sunday-school, gives the style in these days. Many a lady can sing Italian songs, with considerable execution, but cannot read English passably. Yet reading is by far the most valuable accomplishment of the two. In most drawing-rooms, if anything is to be read, it is discovered that nobody can read: one has weak lungs, another gets hoarse, another chokes, another has an abominable sing-song, evidently a tradition of the way he said Watts' Hymns when he was too young to understand them; another rumbles like a broad-wheel waggon; another has a way of reading, which seems to proclaim that what is read is of no sort of consequence, and had better not be listened to.

DR. DODDRIDGE'S DREAM.

Dr. Doddridge was on terms of very intimate friendship with Dr. Samuel Clarke, and in religious conversation they spent very many happy hours together. Among other matters, a very favorite topic was the intermediate state of the soul, and the probability that at the instant of dissolution it was not introduced into the presence of all the heavenly host, and the splendors around the throne of God. One evening, after a conversion of this nature, Dr. Doddridge retired to rest with his mind full of the subject discussed, and in "the visions of the night," his ideas were shaped into the following beautiful form: he dreamed that he was at the house of a friend, when he was suddenly taken dangerously ill. By degrees he seemed to himself to grow worse, and at last to expire. In an instant he was sensible that he had exchanged the prison-house of suffering and mortality, for a state of liberty and happiness. Embodied in a slender aerial form, he seemed to float in a region of pure light. Beneath him lay the earth, but not a glittering city or village, the forest or the sea was visible. There was nought to be seen below save the melancholy group of his friends, weeping around his lifeless remains.

Himself thrilled with delight, he was surprised at their tears, and attempted to inform them of his happy change, but by some mysterious power utterance was denied; and as he anxiously leaned over the mourning circle, gazing fondly upon them and struggling to speak, he rose silently upon the air, their forms became more and more indistinct, and gradually melted away from his sight. Reposing upon golden clouds he found himself swiftly mounting the skies with a venerable figure at his side guiding his mysterious movements, and in whose countenance he remarked the lineaments of youth and age were blended together with an intimate harmony and majestic sweetness. They travelled through a vast region of empty space, until at length the battlements of a glorious edifice shone in the distance, and as its form rose brilliant and distinct among the far off shadows that flitted athwart their path, the guide informed him that the palace he beheld, was for the present, to be his mansion of rest. Gazing upon its splendor, he replied, that while on earth he had often heard, that the eye had not seen, nor had the ear heard, nor could it enter into the heart of man to conceive the things which God had prepared for those who love him; but, notwithstanding, the building to which they were then rapidly approaching was superior to anything which he had actually before beheld, yet its grandeur had not exceeded the conceptions he had formed.—The guide made no reply, they were already at the door and entered. The guide introduced him into a spacious apartment, at the extremity of which stood a table, covered with a snow white cloth, a golden cup, and a cluster of grapes, and then said he must now leave him, but that he must remain, for he would receive in a short time a visit from the Lord of the mansion, and that during the interval before his arrival the apartment would furnish him with sufficient entertainment and instruction. The guide vanished, and he was left alone. He began to examine the doctrines of the room, and observed that the walls were adorned with a number of pictures. Upon nearer inspection he found to his astonishment that they formed a complete biography of his own life. Here he saw upon the canvas, that angels, though unseen, had ever been his familiar attendants, and sent by God; they had sometimes preserved him from imminent peril. He beheld himself first represented as an infant just expiring, when his life was prolonged by an angel gently breathing into his nostrils. Most of the occurrences here delineated were perfectly familiar to his recollection, and unfolded many things which he had never before understood, and which had perplexed him with many doubts and much uneasiness. Among others he was particularly struck with a picture in which he was represented as falling from his horse, when death would have been inevitable had not an angel received him in his arms, and broken the force of his descent. These merciful interpositions of God filled him with joy and gratitude, and his heart overflowed with love as he surveyed in them all, an exhibition of goodness and mercy, far beyond all that he had imagined. Suddenly his attention was arrested by a rap at the door. The Lord of the mansion had arrived. The door opened and he entered. So powerful and so overwhelming, and withal of such singular beauty was his appearance, that he sunk down at his feet completely overcome by his majestic presence. His Lord gently raised him from the ground, and taking his hand led him forward to the table. He pressed with his fingers the juice of the grapes into the golden cup, and after having himself drunk presented it to him, saying, This is the new wine in my Father's kingdom.—No sooner had he partaken than all uneasy sensation vanished, perfect love had now cast out fear, and he conversed with his Savior as an intimate friend. Like the silver rippling of a summer sea, he heard fall from His lips the grateful approbation: "Thy labors are over, thy work is approved, rich and glorious is the reward." Thrilled with an unspeakable bliss, that glided over his spirit and slid into the very depths of his soul, he suddenly saw glories upon glories bursting upon his view. The doctor awoke. Tears of rapture from his joyful interview were rolling down his cheeks. Long did the lively impressions of this charming dream remain upon his mind, and never could he speak of it without emotions of joy and tenderness.

OBITUARIES.

"Let me die the death of the Righteous."

MRS. SARAH E. HOOKS, wife of Samuel D. Hooks, Esq., died, in Washington county, Alabama, August 6, 1868 after a long and painful sickness—which was borne with patience and resignation. She was a native of Duplin county, North Carolina, and daughter of the late Thomas Wright, Esq. Moved, with a number of her own and husband's relatives to Sumpter county, Alabama, in 1836; where she resided for some years, much beloved by all, for her many excellent qualities as a lady and mistress of a household—where a generous hospitality and good cheer were dispensed; around which linger many fond recollections. She joined the Methodist Church some years since; and for the last five years enjoyed the Christians faith and hope; has cheered the hearts of many a weary minister of her Savior, and made them feel that, at her comfortable fire side, they had a welcome home. She met death without fear. She requested her funeral sermon might be preached from Rev. 22 c. 5, v. H.

MR BERRY HICKMAN, died September 4, 1858, nearly fifty years old. After an illness of six weeks, of typhoid fever in Copiah county Mississippi.

He leaves a devoted wife, a brother, a sister and numerous friends to mourn, but not without hope; for several weeks before his death he exemplified the truth of genuine Christianity. He joined the Methodist Church in the fall of 1867, and lived a consistent member till his death; much could be said of him as a gentleman and a neighbor; sufficient to say that to know him was to love him. About two weeks before his death, he said to his wife, "I know I shall die soon; but when I am gone, dont shed a tear for me, for all will be well." The night before his death, as his wife stepped out of the room, he said, "make haste back, for if I get able to talk, I have something to tell you." What was it? O that we knew! But after that he could speak only a few words at a time. We have the comfortable assurance that our loss is his gain, and that though he cannot come to us we may go to him.

B. Y. H.

W. O. ORMSBY, was born May 31st, 1825, and died in the village of Prattville, September 29th, 1858.

His disease was thought to have been consumption, and though his illness was protracted, and severe, patience and resignation were manifested during all his sufferings, and his death was a signal triumph over the grave. His soul went down without a cloud. The bearer he approached the tomb, brighter grew his hope, and stronger was his confidence in God. At times, such was the joy of his heart, that he would exclaim "Bless the Lord, O my soul." Thus has a good man in the prime of life, been taken from the midst of his numerous friends, but our loss is his eternal gain. As a citizen, "William" was honest, and industrious, while consistency, and piety marked his conduct as a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In the relation of husband and father, he was kind and affectionate, while reverence and love were constantly manifested, as a son. So genial and lovely was his temperament, that a large circle of friends mourn his early death. Let wife, mother, brothers and friends be consoled that "Billy" is not "lost, but gone before." J. B.

YELLOW FEVER! YELLOW FEVER!
TO THE AFFLICTED CITIZENS OF NEW ORLEANS!
Read Carefully and Thoughtfully.
DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID.—The greatest known agent for Purifying the Air. It is a new and important discovery. It is a triumph of scientific skill. It is the result of learned inquiry. It is the fruit of patient research.
This invaluable Agent is now presented to the people of New Orleans, for the first time. It is a Chemical union of materials, provided by Nature herself, for rendering the air we breathe pure and healthful. It is not a mixture, but a true Chemical compound. Its action is in obedience to fixed laws, quick, sure, powerful. It purifies dwellings, sewers, sinks, privies, kitchens. It removes all offensive odors immediately. It cures burns, bites, and stings of insects. It relieves boils, cleanses ulcers, heals sores. It cleanses teeth, sweetens breath.
It has been used with most remarkable success in Typhoid Fever, Scarlet Fever, Measles; indeed, in all contagious diseases it is invaluable.
In the City of Charleston, S. C., it is now in constant use by Leading Physicians, in Yellow Fever.
Orders from that City represent it, as in the most active demand. It has not been advertised there but nine months, yet orders for hundreds of bottles, have been filled for that City.
In this City the HOWARD ASSOCIATION, is now using it in the treatment of Yellow Fever.
TRY IT—It can be had at, J. WRIGHT, & CO'S. Drug Store, 21 and 151 Chartres Street. Price 50 cents. s.22

DR. T. McGOWN'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
IODINE OF POTASI,
THE GREAT
BLOOD PURIFIER AND HEALTH RESTORER,
Prepared from FRESH ROOT, the only kind worthy the confidence of physicians or the public. Old, imported root is inert and worthless, facts too well known to be overlooked by the profession. According to many, this compound is nearer a PANACEA or CATHOLICON than any; and its components have been highly extolled by some of the most distinguished physicians of Europe and America, viz: Sir Wm. Fordyce, Brodie, Lugol, Colndet, Baron, Barnsley, Manson, Ricord, Gmelin, Bell, Harrison, Channing, Hildreth, etc.—for the cure of Scrofula or King's Evil, White Swelling, Gout, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dropsy; Diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Lungs, Skin; Eruptions; Piles, Ulcers, old and obstinate Sores (McGown's Ointment should also be used, applied locally;) Blotches, Pimples on the face, Ringworm, Tetter, Chronic Sore Eyes, Scald Head, Leprosy, Goiter; Pains of the Bones, Joints; Spinal Complaints Lumbago, Chronic Bronchitis, Tonsilitis, Hooping Cough, Bleeding from the Lungs, Typhoid Pneumonia, Scarlet Fever, Erysipelas; Dyspepsia, Jaundice; Glandular Tubercles, especially of the neck; Cachexy, Pales, Tumors, Gonorrhea, Gleet; Enlargements of the Liver, Spleen, Testes; Syphilis, in all its forms. Sir Wm. Forgyce says of Sarsaparilla, when exhibited in constitutions enfeebled and emaciated by long attacks of the venereal, or by the abuse of mercury, it is the "great restorer of the appetite, flesh, color, strength and vigor." Professor Bell, lecturing on the Venereal, says of Iodine of Potash, it is a "powerful, safe and benign remedy, and its salutary operation is aided by preparations of Sarsaparilla."
FEMALE COMPLAINTS.—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Irregularities, Suppression, Diseases of the Womb, Leucorrhea, Tumors, Enlargement of the Uterus, Breasts; Chorea, etc.; Impurities of the Blood or System, and all diseases dependent thereon. Makes the skin clear and smooth—an object of interest with the ladies. It should be used in the spring to purify the blood and prevent sickness.
McGOWN'S ESSENCE TAR—A certain cure for Bowel Complaints, as Diarrhea, Dysentery, Flux, etc.
McGOWN'S DOGWOOD AND IRON—A permanent cure for Chills, Ague Cake, Night Sweats, Debility, Dyspepsia, etc.
McGOWN'S GOLDEN PECTORAL—For the relief of Coughs, Colds, Consumption, etc.
McGOWN'S STOMACH BITTERS—A pleasant invigorating Tonic, to be used before meals in Dyspepsia, Debility, etc.
McGOWN'S ITCH OINTMENT—Never known to fail curing old Sores, Cancers, Chronic Sore Eyes, etc.
The above prepared and sold in Memphis by H. S. HUGHES, Druggist, No. 343 Main st.
Agents.—J. Wright & Co., and Sickles & Co., New Orleans; J. Hannay, Galveston, Texas; S. W. Hoff, Warrington, Florida.
Other responsible agents wanted.

THE GREATEST
Medical Discovery
OF THE AGE.
MR. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures
EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,
From the worst Scrofula down to a Common Pimple.
He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases, both thunder humor. He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.
Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.
One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.
Two or three bottles will clear the system of biles.
Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth and stomach.
Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.
One or two bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.
Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the sars and blotches among the hair.
Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corns and running ulcers.
One bottle will cure scaly eruptions of the skin.
Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of ringworm.
Three or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of rheumatism.
Three to four bottles are warranted to cure the rheum.
Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of scrofula.
Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed growing on the pastures, and along old stone walls, should cure every humor in the system; yet it is a fixed fact. If you have a humor, it has to start. There are no IFS nor ANDS, buts nor ifs about it nothing some cases, but not yours. I peddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston. I know the effects of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts. I give it to children of the year old, to old people of sixty. I have seen poor, puny, wormy-looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to a perfect state of health by one bottle.
To those who are subject to a sick head ache, one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief in catarrh and dizziness. Some who have taken it had been routine for years, and have been regulated by it. When the body is sound it works quite easy, but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it will cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed; they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is no pay, if a bad result from it, on the contrary, when that seeing is goes you will feel yourself like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever was listened to.
Manufactured by DONALD KENNEDY, No. 120 Warren street, Roxbury, Mass. Price $1 per bottle.

GRIEF.

There's good in tears, or they had not been sent
By him who is all good! It is not wise
To keep our sorrows in our hearts up pent,
Where we can give them freedom from our eyes.
The storm-cloud only darkens our fair earth
Until it falleth down in gentle rain;
And then what wondrous beauties have their birth;
So, when the heart is overcharged with pain.
We see a shadow upon every good;
Bet let our heavy sorrows have their way,
And as they well into a tearful flood,
What comfort may not come? Ah, who can say?
Grief hath a mission holier than joy—
It moves the selfish, and it warms the cold;
A common sorrow will e'en pain destroy,
And change the king and beggar to one mold.
Our griefs should make us gentler to our kind,
And as we comfort need, more comfort pay;
So unto sorrow, we our tears shall find
Have washed some grossness of our souls away.

LETTER FROM BRUSSELS.

The Jesuits, or, St. Michael's Church—Built in 1583—

Remarkable for its spacious interior, unsupported by pillars; its length, exclusive of the Choir, is 269 feet; its width 81. To us especially interesting, as it contains the monument, erected by his wife—the sister of the King of Bavaria—to the memory of Eugene Beauharnois, Duke of Lachenburg, son of Josephine Bonnparte. The design was by Thorswalden. It is placed in a recess of the wall, with a full length figure of him standing before the closed door of a tomb, upon a platform—plainly clad and divested of all ornament—a wreath in his hand; at his feet his crown and arms. At his right hand sits his wife with a pencil, as if sketching the group—for we understood she was an artist. On the opposite side two angels stood, ready for flight. The whole wrought in pure white marble, beautiful in effect. This Church is very rich in ornament—adorned with many statues of the Emperors and Princes of Germany, and of our Savior. The altars shine with gold and silver.

The Old Cathedral is a huge pile of brick, with the tallest windows of old fashioned cut glass we ever saw. Its towers are high and square—built without much architectural beauty,—it covers a vast space of ground with its massive walls, and is interesting from its peculiarity of shape and antiquity.

Municipal Squares in Parks and Gardens for all classes of people; and, those near the suburbs were filled with the common people, who assemble in multitudes every evening to drink beer, their favorite beverage; and on the Sabbath they are crowded. They are distinguished above all other Europeans for drinking beer and smoking.

The Gardens and Park near the palace and in the central part of the city are very beautiful and inviting, more so than those in the environs, they are much more charming as a general thing, and add much to the beauty of the place. There are a great many shade trees and flowering shrubs, beautiful hedges of lilacs in full bloom and other flowers, which render Munich attractive. A botanical garden and crystal palace with various institutions. The poor appeared to be cared for—we saw no beggars in the streets. They have an asylum for the blind, we were told, and many others of interesting character; also, studios, etc.

The Climate is healthy and delightful. Munich is one of the most elevated cities in Europe, being 16,000 feet above the level of the sea, containing a population of upwards of 100,000 souls—among them, 6000 Protestants. The city is increasing in size and prosperity, and has extended beyond the old walls, we saw a small portion of them in passing through an arched gateway flanked with towers. We heard many singing birds among the trees, as we drove around, which reminded us of the sweet songsters of Louisiana. They brought to mind those dear and cherished friends associated with their melody, and the tombs of the loved and lost—where they now tune their harps over the silent car of death.

The People in the streets of Munich look remarkably healthy, clean and well dressed—the lower classes, plain but neat. The national costume of a head-dress, among the women, called rugel haube—which the King has tried to encourage—is a net-work of gold or silver placed over the comb on the back of the head, and hangs down like the tail of a dove when spread; it is an expensive article, and we did not see a great many of them; in some Provinces they wear black silk kerchiefs tied round their heads, with long folds hanging behind; and some of the peasantry who visited the Gallery of Fine Arts, wore gilded ornaments almost like a helmet on the back of the head, several inches high, with a black ribbon tied under the chin to fasten it on, and several yards streaming from it upon the shoulders behind—a most singular ornament for a head-dress; the lower classes wear no bonnets; have fine healthy complexions and are not as deeply bronzed, although exposed to the open air, as in more southern climes. They labor in the field like men, and are perfect drudges.

The Ruins.—From Munich we passed through a part of Augsburg, and a country richly cultivated, to Heidleburg. We stopped to visit the celebrated castle on the banks of the Necker, one of the largest ruins in Europe—truly magnificent—whose walls are still standing, some of them several stories high; adorned with statuary in niches and carved cornices of considerable beauty. There are towers with massive walls, very high; part of which have been thrown down when attacked by the French, and they lie there resting against the tower, overgrown with vegetation. In the arches above, large trees have taken root and spread their branches among its crumbling ruins; and from the very top, trees of many years growth have thrown their shadows over its sides. The building was very extensive, as shown by detached parts and fragments standing alone. The chapel is entire, with a central hall and tower attached, which commands a splendid prospect from its height, and there we found vegetation growing in luxuriance—in the midst a little flower garden, where the pink and rose attached themselves to its walls, and the wild ivy covered one side of the ruin like a rich mantle of evergreen.

The Castle is built between the Necker and a range of hills, among ledges of rocks and woody dells, where its walls and towers are seen at a distance to rise above them all. The whole scene is of peculiar wildness and beauty. Its winding walks are densely shaded, and form beautiful and cool retreats for a Summer-drive among its ruins.

The Cellar.—We visited the cellar to see the wine ton, as it is called—the largest in the world, which holds 283,000 bottles; upon its side was built a platform surrounded by a railing, where a company used to dance, when occupied by the Elector of Saxony, who built it. There were other casks of smaller dimensions, which would have appeared very large had it not been for this one of mammoth size very near them. The massive walls of the cellar and its extensive arches were still solid, and gave striking evidence of the manners and life of feudal times—when the lord of the castle monopolized the wealth of the country around.

We passed on to Stuttgard, from thence to Frankford and Mayence, and down the Rhine again, to bid

"Adieu to thee again! a vain adieu!
There can be no farewell to scenes like thine;
The mind is colored by thy every hue;
And if, reluctantly, the eyes resign
Their cherished gaze upon thee, lovely Rhine!
'Tis with the thankful glance of parting praise,
More mighty spots may rise—more glaring shine;
But none unite in one attaching maze—

We are at Brussels now, June the 12th, on our way to Paris.

OCCASIONAL CORRESPONDENCE.

My last was from this locality, and of course you desire a brief description of the city of—

Aberdeen,

Which is now, by the census, the fourth city of Scotland. It has long stood as the third; but, by the last census, Dundee has considerably outstripped this in point of population;—for, while Aberdeen had increased, during ten years, ten per cent. on its former population, Dundee had increased twenty per cent. The difference has arisen from the abandonment here of several cotton factories within the last ten years, and the establishment of additional manufactories in Dundee during the same period of time.

In point of architectural structure and beauty, however, the latter is in no way comparable to the former. This had a population, in 1851, of nearly 75,000, and is computed now to be about 80,000. The city is at the estuary of the Dee, an inconsiderable stream here, however dignified by the imposing name of river. The Dee rises among the most northerly and westerly of the Grampians, and running eastwardly falls into the North Sea, at the city of Aberdeen. There is an immense stone structure or pier, running out into the sea for nearly a mile, into very deep water, to guard the entrance to the harbor from the accumulation of sand and the effects of the North wind.

The Port.

There is a very spacious harbor, built entirely of stone—an immense basin or basins with a lock, which being shut when the tide begins to retire, enables all the ships to float as if on the ocean. Vessels drawing from 16 to 18 feet water can enter this harbor. The trade carried on by ships from this port, is with the Baltic and White Seas, the coasting, particularly the coal trade, and the timber business with North America. There is a great deal of ship-building carried on also; so that the Aberdeen clippers in the Australia trade, have as much celebrity as the Baltimore clippers formerly had, on the other side of the water. There are extensive works for engine building, manufactories for cotton, linen and wool; and considerable business done in all the departments of trade and enterprise. Looking through the slowness with which any change takes place in any part of this country, this must be regarded as a rising city.

The writer can testify to extraordinary changes for the better during thirty years past—so great indeed, that one can hardly realize them. This, however, is only descriptive of the face of things, and not of the people; for the people remain nearly stationary. The striking characteristics which were said to belong to them a century ago are to be found here still, and are likely to remain so—notwithstanding progress is the watchword everywhere around, and even upon the face of things, in their very midst. In the centre of—

The City.

There is a large oblong square, or open space, resembling very much (I suppose) a Mexican plaza, but here called Castle street. From this square, streets open in every direction; the principal of which is to the west called Union street. This is the Broadway of Aberdeen.

All the buildings are of stone, Aberdeen granite, an article much exported to London and elsewhere, for building and paving purposes. It is a gray, hard rock, susceptible of high polish, and is esteemed more valuable and durable than Italian marble. The most costly buildings, tombs &c., are erected out of polished granite, and appear as if they would last for ever. The whole of Union street, a mile in length—and including a stone bridge or arch, of 135 feet span, across a ravine, to preserve the uniform grade of the street—is of this durable material. The aristocracy do business and seek residences on, and adjoining, this street. The Assembly Rooms are here also, where they meet to dance, feast etc.; and, to gain admission here, is to gain admittance into upper-ten-dom.

The Cross.

But we are not done with Castle street. Here, near the eastern end of the square, is what is called the Cross, a small octagonal building, surmounted by a spire with a unicorn on the top of the spire. All round the face of this building, just under the eaves, are to be seen carved images, or likenesses, of the Stuart race of Kings. This building is of freestone, and dates its origin to a very early period. It formerly stood near the west end of Castle street, but, a few years ago was taken down, and put up again without spot or wrinkle where it now stands, to make way for the statue erected to the memory of George, Duke of Gordon. This family had been much identified with the whole history of Aberdeen, and the city has commemorated this relation, by erecting this statue to the last duke of the race; the title being extinct.

The statue is of polished granite, elevated on block of the same material, about ten or twelve feet from the ground. The figure is bare-headed, larger than life with either a plaid or senator's toga wrapped around; and is represented as in the act of drawing the sword. It is said to be a good likeness of the late Duke. On each side of it is one or the great guns taken at Sebastopol.

Town Hall.

In front, and on the right, are the buildings called indiscriminately the Town-house, Court-house, Tolbooth, etc., where the wisdom of the city is exercised for the public good; the judges dispense justice, and the erring meet with their recompense. Thither, in the year of grace 1824-5, an impulsive youth, with a lot of his companions, was brought by the inexorable town sergeant, before the sitting baillie, for a threatened attempt against the peace and safety of various citizens; by engaging with his associates, in a battle royal against the boys of another quarter of the city, for no other offence, than the fact that his opponents did not belong to the same school. The magistrate then dismissed him, upon promise of good behavior for the future; and, up to the present time, the covenant has not been violated. But we must go up Union street about forty yards; and then, turning to the right, proceed up Broad street, near the top of which, on the right, we find the entrance to Marischall College and University.

This is an institution which was founded by Keith, the Knight Marischall of Scotland in 1593, and is now a beautiful, stately structure of polished granite, with towers and turrets of very modern plan and construction. There is a full Faculty in all the Arts—classes here having six Professors; and a preparatory school, called a Grammar school, about a quarter of a mile distant, with five teachers. There is also a College of Medecine, with a full staff of Professors; with a partial staff of Professors in Divinity and Law. The Colleges of Arts and Medicine are complete; and, for that reason, it approaches the character of a University; but the Law and Divinity classes are not full, for reasons which will afterward s appear

The Session.

The session of each college commences on the last Monday of October, and ends on the first Friday of April; continuing only a little over five months in each year. Four years are requisite for graduation; though, by the advertisement just out, a student, by examination, may enter any class of the course, and graduate, if found prepared, by examination. They enter the freshman, and all other classes by examination; and graduate by examination.

Benevolent individuals, at various periods since the founding of the University, have bequeathed sums of money to found bursaries, which are open for competition to the whole world, with a few preferences to the sons of decayed burgesses, or of particular names. Of such bursaries or prizes, there are from eighteen to twenty-six vacant every year; and the successful competitor is entitled to his bursary during his continuance at college, or until he graduates. The prizes vary in value, from $30 to $250; and, I believe, there are some even lower than $30; but they all partake of this advantage, however small they may be they pay all the college fees of the course, and give some surplus to the bursaries besides. There are eighteen bursaries, I see, open for competition next October, and the greater portion of them pay all fees, and meet the expenses of boarding besides. Two of the Professors, who were there thirty years ago, during the sessions of 1827-8-9 are all that remain in the land of the living. It was this college that, Sir Walter Scott, in one of his works, from the mouth of Major Dugald Dalgetty (if your correspondent's memory is not at fault) ridicules so much, in the Major's constantly telling what he did and allowed at Marischall College and University; and it was here also, that a deed of darkness gave rise to the adage "airt and pairt in Downie's murder."

Downie's Murder.

Downie, the janitor, at various times had given information of the doings of some of the students, and this led to their punishment. In revenge, a great many of the students determined to retaliate, by an endeavor to frighten him. The large room in the Lemon Tree Tavern was engaged, hung round in black cloth; a bench erected for the judges, robed in the symbols of office; jury-men and lawyers all in their places; block, axe, basin and sawdust in sight of the august tribunal. When all was ready, a message was despatched to the janitor, that a gentleman from the South desired to see him on business that admitted of no delay. He came, and was ushered into this room, and was immediately seized upon by the officers of justice and presented to the assembled judges. An indictment properly drawn up, detailing the instances of conspiracy into which he had entered against the rights and liberties of the students was read to him; proof was then had of the truth of all these allegations, and he was allowed, by himself or any of the advocates present, to defend himself. He declined to plead, and tried to treat it as a joke: but justice was inexorable. The jury found him guilty, and the judges sentenced him to lose his life by decapitation. He was given fifteen minutes to say his prayers and prepare for death; when he began to plead for his life, wife and children, but he plead in vain. He was brought to the block, neck bared for the axe, and his hands pinioned behind his back: when, upon a given signal, a towel dipped in water, instead of the executioner's axe, descended upon his neck—and he was found to be a corpse! He had been frightened to death.

It was never found out how Downie came by his death, until many years afterwards, when an actor in this tragedy came to his death-bed, and he then revealed it. Indeed, so many of the sons of the principal citizens were engaged in this transaction, that they would not allow any investigation. To accuse a man however, in this locality, of being "art and part in Downie's murder," is tantamount to connecting him with some very dark deed that will not bear investigation.

The Church-yard.

But, we must proceed; so let us return to Union street, and about a quarter of a mile from Castle street, on the right, we come to the town's churchyard; in the centre of which are the East and West Churches, separated from each other by a nave which is surmounted by a belfry and and spire of great height and dimensions, containing by recent additions, a complete change of bells. This was formerly, in the time of Popery, the Church—and, is yet the parish—of St. Nicholas. In the nave, you will find inscriptions, setting forth that such a man, at such a time, gave so many merks for such a purpose; and, among the rest, that one man, in the year 1213, gave a certain number of merks to have masses said for the repose of his soul. It would be impossible however, in this letter, to notice even the prominent tomb-stones or inscriptions—my limits are already exceeded.

So, returning from this brief visit, we proceed from Castle street in a north-easterly direction, out King street, and at the distance of a mile and a quarter, we are opposite to King's College and University.

In Old Aberdeen—an institution founded in 1494, upon principles entirely similar to those already noted in reference to Marischall College, with a larger number of bursaries. The Faculties in the Arts and Medicine are also quite full here; but, as in the other, imperfect as colleges of law and divinity—hence, not an entire University. With respect to this anomaly, they are Universities by charter, but not in reality; it may be said that each denomination of Christians in this Kingdom (I mean Scotland) has its own divinity-hall or college; and, consequently, a divinity college is not needed at the University.

Indeed, I doubt exceedingly, even—while all their creeds are Calvanistic, almost hyper-Calvanistic—if a divinity college at the University, managed by trustees, would be acceptable to either denomination, so rigid is each as to the shade of his opinions and Church government. From 300 to 600 students are in attendance at each University during the session. All regular students have to wear gowns made of red cloth. The King's College students have a plain collar, while the Marischall College student has a silk velvet collar on the neck of his gown.

The late Parliament passed an act to fuse the two Universities into that of the "University of Aberdeen," and, as the terms of the act are supposed to have been at the instigation of the King's College Professors, great wrath has in consequence been engendered, and has led to a strife of words that bids fair to be as lasting as the wars of the roses. The Commission meets very soon. The object is, if possible, to have a complete University.

Old Aberdeen lie on the river Don, a stream about the size of the Dee, and has also a chief magistrate and town council. I had forgotten to mention in the proper place, that the chief magistrate of this, and all Scotch cities, is called Provost, and the aldermen, Baillies. King's College is surmounted by a very ancient and curiously-built crown, of the material so abundant here for building purposes. This crown is seen from a great distance, and has a fine appearance far or near. Near to the college is the town-house, and a little further on, the Cathedral (now the parish Church) of old Machar—a very ancient and imposing edifice, with two commanding spires. The "Brig o' Balgowrie," across the Don, described and adverted to by Byron, is not far distant—a wonderful specimen of ancient architecture. It is not known when this bridge was built, but there is a prophecy of Thomas the Rhymer, that it is one day to fall down with a widow's only son and a mare's only colt. The bridge is one span—founded upon rock, and banded into the solid rock, by strong bands of iron. Lower down, where King street crosses the Don, a splendid new bridge of five arches has been built. Near the old bridge is the seat of Lord James Hay.

I intended, in this letter, to have had you out in the country, viewing the crops, the hills, the valleys, etc.; but find that I must, for the present desist—leaving such a purpose for after fulfillment.

J. M.

Near Aberdeen, N. B., Aug. 20, 1858.

Mine About the Cable.—From the statements made by the electricians, it would seem that the Eastern half of the cable was pretty much useless when it was laid down from the Agamemnon—there being many serious leaks in it even then; that, owing to the weakness of the currents, no message sent from Newfoundland to Valentia has ever been recorded by the instruments, the two or three dispatches transmitted being read from the deflections of the galvanometre alone; that, in addition to the great leak or fault some 270 miles from Valentia, there is another quite as serious some 500 miles or more from that place; that the copper conductor is too small at any rate, and that the very powerful electric currents required, both by the existence of the leaks and the smallness of the wire, must very soon burn up the gutta percha near every point where the water already penetrates to the wire. Thus it appears the cable was little better than worthless when it was put down, and must soon be totally destroyed as a conductor of electricity, by the action of the galvanic currents constantly applied to it.

TRIAL OF REV. J. R. GRAVES.

The senior editor of the Tennessee Baptist is, at this writing, says the last Nashville Advocate, on trial before his brethren of the First Baptist Church of Nashville, for slanderous, misrepresentations, etc., which will appear below.

At a distance we heard a good deal of Mr. G. as the author of the Iron Wheel, and the editor of a paper to which Pedobaptists in general, and Methodists in particular, were not much indebted for just representation and Christian courtesy. On reaching the place where his seat is, and whence his books and other publications have gone out, we were not a little surprised at the small figure he made at home, and his moral standing among those who knew him best.

His Character.

We have abstained from any editorial notice of him or his paper, and generally kept allusion to either, out of the columns of the Advocate, and for this reason, principally: According to his mode of operation, such things were capital to him. "See how these Methodists, these Pedobaptists, are after me!" and with this cry he rallied sectarian strength about him, and held himself up as the champion of the Baptist Church.

By a system of warfare upon other Churches, which we do not wish to characterize here, Mr. Graves has sought to intensify the sectarian feeling of the Baptist Church, and to put himself at the head of it. As the head, he would dictate to the body, and strike down any who were in his way.

His Success.

His policy succeeded for a while; but, like every thing of its kind, it has run out. He crushed out the Baptist paper in New Orleans—a paper of independence, of Christian temper, and scholarly tone. Dr. Duncan, the editor, dared to differ from him. Not content with turning to account his sectarian popularity, in making thousands of dollars out of the Baptist Church, as a newspaper and book publisher and author, Mr. Graves attempts to control the Publishing Boards of his Church. He proceeds to lord it generally. The elders and the editors, who had looked on in silence—not all with approbation—while he worried and maligned the ministry and members of other Churches, now began to feel his power. Mr. Graves has the masses on his side; the people are with him—so it is said. And the contest is henceforth within the Baptist Church, where for some months it has been going on.

The Contest.

We must admire the courage of Dr. Howell and others, and of the editor of the Baptist papers, at Tuskegee, Ala., and Charleston, S. C., who undertook Mr. Graves. They have brought him to trial. As every Methodist has long known, there is no difficulty in sustaining, out of the Tennessee Baptist, charges of the kind brought. Whether those Christian gentlemen who stand up for the truth and honor of their Church, having brought Mr. Graves to the bar, can hold him there and be sustained by their denomination at large, remains to be seen. His co-editor—one Dr. D., author of "Theodosia Earnest"—is shaking in his shoes. He has been ominously referred to Vicksburg, Mississippi, for certificates of character, which, we presume, his acquaintances there better understand than we. Another co-editor, "J. M. P.," of Landmark notoriety, has had his case referred, by the First Baptist Church in Nashville, to the church in Murfreesboro' with which he is connected, to be looked into. Elder P. threatens, "if it becomes necessary," to publish things that "will astound the denomination."

How three such men ever got together, on one paper, is a problem in natural philosophy.

"Strictly Private—

"Rev. J. R. Graves—Sir:—I have just been informed that you took the occasion of my absence to take a prominent part in the prayer-meeting. This, you must have known, was unpleasant and displeasing to many of the members present, on account of the course you have pursued toward me, their pastor. I hope you will not repeat it, until you shall retract the charges against me as publicly as they have been made. I am pained to feel under the necessity of writing such a note as this to one who is a member of the Church of which I am the pastor. But duty compels me. Yours, etc., R. B. C. Howell.

"Saturday night, 11 o'clock, April 3, 1858."

Though marked "Strictly Private," it finds its way into print pending the trial, with a long and whining reply from Mr. G., asking "Brother Howell" for a private interview, etc.

The rest we make up from the most reliable sources we can get at—the reports of the various daily papers and our own reporter:

The charges were brought at a meeting held on the 8th September. Adjourned till the 21st.

On learning that Elder Graves was not at home, it was, on motion of Deacon Nelson, resolved to postpone the trial until three weeks from Tuesday, the 21st of September, which was Tuesday, the 12th of October, at half-past seven o'clock P. M., giving him ample time to prepare to defend himself.

Elder Howell, the pastor, remarked that as three of the charges related to matters personal to himself, it would be improper for him to preside.

Trial Begins.

On motion of Deacon A. Nelson, Deacon C. K. Winston was appointed to preside, not only at this meeting but at all subsequent meetings during the progress of the trial.

Dr. Winston is a Professor in the University of Nashville, and one of our City Council.

With a deal of preparatory and prefatory thunder in the Tennessee Baptist—some of which our correspondent, Observer, called attention to last week—meant to scare off the accusers, enlist sympathy for the accused, brag on his country strength, and prepare the way for an easy fall—the 12th October came.

The crowd, at the first Baptist Church on Tuesday night last, was overwhelming. The people commenced assembling in the basement of the church at early candle-light, and, as it would not accommodate all in attendance, they therefore adjourned to the main body of the church, which, together with the gallery, was soon crowded.

The Court was opened by the reading of the 5th chapter of Romans, by Dr. C. K. Winston; after which, prayer was offered.

Dr. Winston explained the object of the meeting, it being an adjourned meeting, and the first thing in order was the reading of the record of last regular church meeting, which was done by the clerk, Mr. S. M. Scott.

The record being read, it was approved by the church, as read.

Communications from the Murfreesboro' Baptist Church having been handed in, in response to matter contained in the record of last church meeting,

Mr. Rutland moved that they be read.

Mr. C. A. Fuller moved in lieu, that they be laid on the table for the present. Motion prevailed.

Mr. Ruthland moved that all communications received from other churches and Associations, having a bearing on this trial, be read. Motion lost.

Mr. S. M. Scott then read to the church the charges preferred against Rev. J. R. Graves, which are as follows:

The Charges.

We, the undersigned, members of the First Baptist Church, Nashville, Tennessee, charge Rev. J. R. Graves, a member of said church, and one of the editors of the Tennessee Baptist, with grossly immoral and unchristian conduct in four distinct cases, as follows:

First, in that he has sought to bring upon Rev. R. B. C. Howell, the pastor of said church, reproach and injury, and thus to destroy his character and influence in the Southwest, by forcing him into collision with Rev. A. C. Dayton, late Corresponding Secretary of the Bible Board, and now one of his associate editors, through the publication in his said paper of various false and malicious representations.

Secondly, in that he has endeavored to distract and divide said church, by means of a conflict between its pastor and four of its deacons, and several others of its influential members, which he has labored to produce, by numerous inflammatory articles published in his paper.

Thirdly, in that he has uttered and published in his said paper, against R. B. C. Howell, the pastor of this church, sundry foul and atrocious libels.

Fourthly, in that he has at various times attacked, slandered, and abused ministers and brethren of high character, belonging to our denomination, throughout the country in his said paper.

J. C. Darden,
Chas. A. Fuller.

Aside from the above, additional charges of wilful and deliberate falsehood, in eleven different instances, were preferred and read, composed mostly of extracts from the Tennessee Baptist, which, from their great length, we omit. These charges were preferred by two other members.

The charges being read, it was moved that they be entertained by the church. Motion carried.

C. A. Fuller then moved that the church take up the order of business, it being the charges preferred against Rev. J. R. Graves. Motion carried.

Graves Tries to Shirk—

When the charges offered September 8, came to be tried, Rev. J. R. Graves, on being asked whether he admitted or denied, inquired whether he would be permitted to defend himself. The Moderator replied that of course he would be allowed ample opportunity at the proper time to make his defence as full as he pleased; but, there being then no motion before the Church, it would be out of order to make any address. He suggested, however, that a motion to nonsuit would be in order, and he perhaps might make his remarks in that manner.

Mr. Graves then said that he denied. Mr. J. B. Rutland moved that the charges be remanded, and the proceedings quashed, for that the scriptural steps had not been pursued. Mr. Graves then offered a written protest against the charges being entertained, and urged four reasons why they should be remanded.

1st. Because the case was governed by the 18th chapter of Matthew, and that had not been followed.

2d. That he was the offended party.

3d. Because the church had no jurisdiction to try offences committed against parties not known to the church as complainants, when the parties said to be slandered had not preferred their complaint. And

4th. Because he had not been furnished with sufficiently minute specifications.

Graves is Headed.

To this Dr. Howell replied in substance, that every thing had been done to effect a reconciliation that an honorable man and a Christian could do: that every step required by the Scriptures had been pursued. All this he was ready to prove. He said that the cause of the abuse heaped upon him by Mr. Graves originated in that church many months since: that at a meeting of the Bible Board, when the proposition came up to have tracts printed for the Sunday-school, he (Dr. Howell) opposed it; and gave, as he thought, satisfactory reasons for so doing; and that he told Mr. Graves at that meeting that he was an interested party in printing those documents; and it was his duty to vote against it. He said, that since that time the editor of the Tennessee Baptist had been bitter against him—his columns had been filled with slanderous articles in respect to him; that he had misrepresented him and other ministers of the Church—that misstatement after misstatement had been published, Graves refusing to correct or retract, the members of the church were determined to settle the dispute, and had adopted the only course which they could pursue. That if Mr. Graves was the offended party, he should have adopted the course he himself recommended, and not commenced and continued a violent assault in his paper, as he had done. That the Church is the guardian of the morals of its members, and is required to take cognizance of their immoralities, whenever committed. That Mr. Graves' complaint with regard to the specifications, amounted to a demand to have all the evidence in the case furnished to him before the trial began, which was not to be required by any one in any case.

Graves Bullies—

Mr. Graves replied, affirming that the pastor had slighted and neglected him ever since he had been here; that he had manifested a settled purpose to ruin him; that he was not afraid of a trial, but he demanded that it should be a trial based on scriptural range; that he counted a fair and impartial trial in the proper manner, and he could produce proof that he had been wronged by Dr. H. I have been slandered by him, said he, and I can prove it.

Dr. Howell—I call for the proof.

Mr. Graves then read a certificate from A. B. Hendren, stating in substance that in conversation with him, he (Dr. Howell) had said that Mr. Graves was a dishonest man.

The reading of this statement was followed by loud applause, stamping of feet, and much disorder. The assembly appeared to be much excited.

Mr. Graves also read letters from ministers abroad, giving their opinions.

Dr. Howell then arose and pronounced the statement false. He said that the congregation had some idea as to how certificates could be procured. [Applause.] Dr. H. made some further well-timed remarks, after which the vote on Mr. Rutland's motion was taken, and resulted as follows: Ayes 41, noes 98.

The Moderator announced that the church had refused to remand the charges, and the investigation would be continued.

Graves Balks—

He called for the ayes and noes, and ascertaining by this test the minority that stood by him, and having in vain tried all the dodges, upon the announcement from the chair Graves arose, and declared that the laws of Christ having been trampled upon by the Church, he could no longer fellowship them, and then he announced his withdrawal.

Runs against his own Fence—

The Moderator remarked that the Baptist Church was the purest democracy in the world; when a person got into it there were but two ways to get out, either by death or expulsion. Moreover, that Elder Graves himself had been foremost in advocating this view of Baptist order. He had procured several Associations to take this ground. It was one of the old landmarks.

The Minority Expels the Majority—

That Majority ought have satisfied any democratic body: it came up almost to the two-thirds rule.

It being 12 o'clock, the congregation adjourned until seven o'clock, Wednesday evening, 13th inst.

On the adjournment of the court, Dr. Dayton requested all brothers and sisters who had voted to remand the charges against Rev. J. R. Graves back, to remain and hold a meeting of conference, and all the Baptist ministers.

Elder Kimbrough was appointed Moderator of this meeting, and A. B. Shankland Secretary.

The proceedings were opened by reading the Bible, and prayer from the Moderator.

J. B. Rutland offered for the consideration of the meeting a written instrument of declaration of rights, if we may so term it, proposing to take opposite ground, stating the object of the meeting to be the withdrawal of the members then congregated from the First Baptist Church, and the declaration that they were the true First Baptist Church. This document was received and accepted by the meeting, after some discussion, and persons present were called upon to subscribe to it. The meeting was addressed by a number of ministers of the Baptist Church, advocating such a course. Dr. Bayless took the ground that they were not proceeding right. Some fifteen signatures were obtained to the declaration, and furthermore, they adjourned at 4 A. M., to meet on Sunday afternoon next in the Baptist Church on Cherry street, South Nashville.

Trial Proceeds—

The court met pursuant to adjournment on Wednesday evening, and was opened by the Moderator reading the first Psalm, and prayer by Rev. Mr. Woodfolk.

The Moderator, before proceeding to business, took occasion to admonish the congregation of the impropriety of making any demonstrations on this occasion.

The charges brought against Rev. J. R. Graves having been read, the Moderator called for the proof to sustain them.

Mr. C. A. Fuller, one of the prosecutors in the case, took the floor, read the first charge in the indictment, and proceeded to prove the correctness of the same by reading copious extracts from the columns of the Tennessee Baptist, which were considered as "bringing reproach and injury upon Rev. R. B. C. Howell, pastor of the First Baptist Church, and thus to destroy his character and influence in the Southwest," and the publication of "various false and malicious misrepresentations."

The proof on the first charge being submitted, the Moderator remarked that it now devolved upon the accused to show that the testimony submitted was incorrect, and produce evidence sufficient to vindicate him from the charge.

The accused, Rev. J. R. Graves, being called upon to defend himself, was found to be absent, together with those who participated in the meeting on Tuesday night last.

Dr. R. B. C. Howell then took the floor, and spoke at some length.

Found Guilty, Unanimously—

After other remarks, the Moderator then put the question, and required all who believed Mr. Graves guilty of the first charge, to stand when eighty arose. He then requested all of an opposite opinion; to rise. No one arose.

On motion, the court adjourned till Friday night, seven o'clock, when the other charges will be taken up in order, and disposed of. Closed with prayer by the Moderator.

Guilty of Second Charge—

On Friday night, the court again met. Attendance of spectators not so large. Religious services. The second charge was read—evidence submitted at length. The Moderator called for rebutting evidence. None was offered. The question, "is Rev. J. R. Graves guilty of the second charge?" was put to the church, and decided in the affirmative, by a vote of eighty-nine for and one against.

Court adjourned to Monday night, 18th, to take up the other charges.

At this writing the third and fourth charges and the "additional charges," have not been tried. If they are not sustained by evidence, we presume they will not be by the verdict, for the proceedings seem to be cautious, and thorough, and honest. If the evidence of "those without," was called for, it would settle the case beyond a peradventure.

His Position—

Mr. Graves has either virtually confessed his guilt or abandoned his own boasted Church government, as insufficient to secure him a fair and scriptural trial. We think he has done both. He may find refuge here and there, and get up mock trials for his whitewashing, but to all unbiased minds his moral character is judicially fixed. He may find other triers, but none who know him so well, or are better able to do him justice, or whose verdict will have more weight with the public. The proceedings in his case, we presume, will have closed before this number of the Advocate goes to press, therefore we speak of it now for the first and last time, unless hereafter to announce the formal sentence which the already ascertained guilt warrants.

A Few Reflections—

1. We rejoice not in iniquity, but in the truth. The fall of any man, in any Church, is a grief and a wound to us. But we do not deny or disguise our satisfaction when one who has been a reproach to Christianity, whose influence, to its full extent, has embittered the spirit of his own denomination, and lowered its character, is thus exposed, and Church discipline vindicated.

2. Let no Church consent to be served by an evil instrument with evil means. There will be a recoil.

3. Our people must be exposed hereafter from noticing the misrepresentations of this man, whether in book, pamphlet, harangue, or paper. In plain speech, if Mr. Graves' lying is not good against "ministers and brethren belonging to our [Baptist] denomination," it ought not to be against others.

Finally—

Having dealt in facts and reflections, let us indulge a few surmises: How long was the rope that Judas used on a certain occasion; and what material was that rope made of; and whether there is any more left of the same sort.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Introduction of Cotton into the Mississippi Valley.—The Baton Rouge Advocate has a letter dated Chapel Hill, Tennessee, August 10, written, as we learn from the Advocate, by a gentleman who was formerly a citizen of Louisiana, and at one time filled a high office in her government, from which we extract the annexed interesting passage:

The person is yet living who saw the first seed of cotton seed brought into the Mississippi Valley. It was introduced by Daniel Clark, father of Mrs. Gen. Gaines, who was a native of Ireland, a Spanish subject, and acting as Consul for the United States at the port of New Orleans. It was imported expressly for Mr. Bringier, a wealthy planter, on the right bank of the river, a few miles below Donaldsonville. Mr. Bringier had also the first cotton gin imported. The cotton seed was distributed to such planters, up and down the coast as desired to try the experiment, and in the fall of the year when it was picked, Mr. B. sent his son, Louis Bringier, the present venerable Surveyor General of Louisiana, with a barge and gang of negroes to collect it for the purpose of being ginned. The cotton was raised and ginned upon shares, and when bagged was sent to Daniel Clarke for exportation. Mr. Bringier told me he had gone up as far as Baton Rouge and Point Coupee, gathering cotton to be ginned at his father's place below Donaldsonville. This was in the latter part of the last and at the beginning of the present century.

Interesting from Syria.—The Boston Traveler has seen a letter from Beyrout, dated August 11, in which it is stated that the American Consul for that place had arrived there about the middle of July, with his family, and that the raising of the flag of the Consulate, for the first time in sixteen months, was a pleasant sight for the American residents. The trial of the Jaffa criminals was then in progress; and it was regretted that the Dixon family, whose numbers were thinned by the Arabs there, had returned to America, as it was feared that some of the miscreants might escape punishment, by lack of means for their identification. It will be recollected that the remainder of this family, who belong in Massachusetts, reached Boston but a few days since.

A rumor of disturbance at Mount Lebanon had reached Beyrout, and the Pasha there, who is only second in dignity to the Grand Vizier, had, upon the representations of the Consuls at that place, dispatched a troop of soldiers to quell the rebellion, as well as to protect the foreigners. A number of missionaries, on their way to different parts of Palestine, were at Beyrout, awaiting the execution of the Jaffa criminals, fearing that it might cause a general insurrection throughout the country, and preferring to remain under the protection of the guns of the men-of-war collected in the harbor.

UNION OF ALL AMERICAN METHODISTS.

The Christian Advocate and Journal, commenting on a proposition of union between the abolition portion of the "Protestant Methodists" and the "Wesleyan Methodist Connection," makes use of the following language:

"We wish success to this design, for however strong may be our convictions of the utility of denominational organizations among Christians, as affording scope for freedom of opinion and more effective Christian labors, we do believe that every unnecessary distinction of the kind is a calamity, and that one of the most crying evils of our land is its sectarianism. Unnecessary as we deem the existence of either of these Methodist communities, aside from the great Methodist family, yet as they are not in opposition to unite with us, it should be matter of congratulation among all Methodists to see them wedded with one another, and peacefully and comfortably settled in a common home, until both they and we are prepared to join hands again in the old homestead; separated for a time, but only to unite again with heartier greetings for our past separation.

We have never abandoned the hope of a final re-union of the Methodists of the new world, and never intend to abandon it. In all theological matters they are one; their ecclesiastic differences, and, indeed, any mere ecclesiastical differences, can be no justifiable reason of hostile division in a body essentially evangelical, and where free brotherly discussion is allowed, and the healthful process of change in such secondary matters is open. We do not despair even of re-union with the South, though the hope may be long deferred. However lasting may be the present position of the South on the question in dispute between us, yet as sure as the progress of opinion, which is now moving over the country, must go on, that position must sooner or later be modified, and must at last give way. This may not be in our day, but will certainly be in some future period when, our contemporary recollections and passions having subsided, and no essential differences of theology or economy existing, our children will see eye to eye, and rejoice in the re-establishment of the old and goodly brotherhood. The God of our fathers speed the time!"

The above, with the exception of one sentence, is in the right spirit. The sentence alluded to is that in which the [illegible] and giving way, of the present position of [illegible] made a necessary condition of the union. [illegible] was the kick that overturned the milk-pail. We [illegible] doubts as to whether even that sentence was more [illegible] necessary clinging to the tyranny of geographical [illegible] and sectional position and surroundings. What is the position of the South? It is the scriptural position of giving unto Cesar the things that are his. It is the position which, if the American Methodist Church had never forsaken it, would have preserved her undivided to the present day, and with which she would have been almost twice as strong as she now is. Her growth and power have been in spite of the existence of "the root of bitterness" which her departure from this scriptural and conservative position implanted. Disconnection, ecclesiastically, with the question of slavery, is the position of the South, and it accords, this day, with the views of the majority of the pious people of the Union, even of the Northern Methodist people. The Northern Church will yet occupy that position before she is done with the troubles growing out of her anomalous position on the question of slavery.

The position of the South "must sooner or later be modified!" It has already been modified. Instead of a sectional anti-slavery position, into which she had been pulled, by her devotion to the union of American Methodists, she now occupies the only position upon which that union ever was, or ever will be, practicable. Her Discipline is now free, or will be in a few months, from all disturbing political questions, leaving her free to follow the example of the Apostles, and preach the unadulterated gospel to both "bond and free."

The position of the South "must at last give way!" It has already given way. From the unscriptural position she held while in connection with the North, of interference with the things that belong to Cesar—a nullity in itself, and doing immense harm—she has "given way" and fallen back upon scriptural ground. Why shall she give way now? What presses against her? Not the Southern people; for, whether they be pro-slavery or anti-slavery, they are convinced both of the scripturalness and expediency of her present position. Not the conservative and moderate of the Northern people—the majority, we believe; for they believe as the Southern people do. Not the ultra people of the North; for they are at this moment dissatisfied with the position of the Northern Methodist Church, and will do doubt yet rend it a second time.

The position of the South is not only scriptural, but national. Its members, as citizens, can believe and act with all freedom on the question of slavery, or on any other political question. The Church claims no control over their opinions, except they violate the laws of the land; and they do not distract the Church with their political partyism. The position of the Southern Church is harmonious with that large conservative majority in politics, which, as yet, keeps the Black Republican faction in check; and which holds to the fundamental doctrine of non-intervention by the General Government. In both Church and State, (Federal) we seek cessation of agitation, allowing freedom of individual opinion. No such agitation was allowed in the Apostolic Church. Her course was precisely similar to that of the Southern Church. If slavery is to be perpetual, the South is right, if, as as the North argues, it is to be ultimately [illegible] away by the gospel, the South is right; let the gospel have "free course."

Let the gospel and spirit of our common Lord and Master judge between us and our Northern brethren.—Will they submit to this arbitrament? Are they willing, as their Southern brethren are, to trust the final solution of this great question, which has heretofore divided us, to the unrestrained and unperverted influence of the gospel, preached to both black and white, without the addition of human opinions or ecclesiastical legislation? Will they unite with us on a Discipline, neither Northern nor Southern—neither anti-slavery nor pro-slavery? Until the North can abide this test, the South has the advantage before the whole world, and to talk of union is an absurdity. On this ground we could unite; and we sincerely and solemnly believe, that the Great Head of the Church condemns a rejection of it, arising more from pride of opinion than from any practicable good in view. No concession would be made to either party, and nothing would be gained by either; but the Church would gain immeasurably. Upon this ground, the South can calmly appeal to posterity, and to the bar of God.

We can truly say, that our heart beats as warmly in favor of the ecclesiastical union of all the American sons of Wesley, as that of any man living. We shall never forget the heart-agonies, bordering on despair, with which, in the spring of 1844—our first year in the itinerancy—we heard the news of the division. We, too, have never fully given up the hope of final re-union. But it has grown weaker with every development in the North.—When, though the aggrieved party, we sent our delegate, the noble old Dr. Lovick Pierce, to the Northern General Conference of 1848, merely bearing our fraternal salutations, as a co-ordinate branch of American Methodism: he was not only repelled, and we thereby denied by our Northern brethren a place among Christian—to say nothing of Methodist Churches; but the plan of separation, solemnly agreed upon in 1844, was annulled, and our share of the Book Concern funds withheld, in violation of solemn covenant, forcing a shameful law-suit, before the South could obtain her rights.

Every thing possible has been done to prejudice us in the eyes of European Methodists and christians, and to induce them to join the American crusade, in the North, against the Church South. The South has never violated a single principle of christian charity, or honor, or courtesy toward the North; while the North has violated every conceivable one. No overtures can ever come from the South, even if she were unitedly desirous of the union.

Nor will the South ever change her position. She will maintain it both on account of its scriptural truth and its wise expediency. Its expediency will be as manifest in the future as now. If slavery were abolished throughout the Union, the position of the South would be more acceptable to the people of the Union than that of any abolition Church.

And we would suggest to the Christian Advocate and Journal that an early movement for the union of the conservative portion of the Northern Methodist Church with the Church South, upon the above grounds, is the only sure method of either preventing the threatened disruption of the Northern Church, or of placing the conservatives in a desirable position in case the disruption takes place. We say this in all good conscience.

Would the Methodist Protestant secession ever have taken place, had Southern moderation and Southern counsels prevailed? We doubt it. We believe the North is responsible for all the divisions that have ever afflicted the Methodist Church, and that it will yet stand confessed before the whole world.

Let us have the union, in God's name, if it can be had. The thought of it is enough to fire the heart and captivate the imagination of any pious Methodist. But let it be upon New Testament grounds—excluding the very seeds of the abolition fanaticism—utterly ignoring all distracting political questions. "A burnt child dreads the fire," and the disenthralled South will most certainly, "stand fast in the liberty wherewith God has made her free."

THOMAS STRINGFIELD AND GEN. JACKSON.

When a little boy, we heard of the eloquence of Thomas Stringfield. We saw him at the last General Conference for the first time. In a few days after its adjournment he died. In the editorial correspondence of the Nashville Advocate we find a most interesting reminiscence of him. R. M. Stevens said: "I must tell of an interview with General Jackson, which Brother Stringfield with myself had, about twenty days before the General's death. We were riding along, and, called at the Hermitage.

General Jackson was sick and not seeing company; but the name of Thomas Stringfield was a password. Stringfield had been a soldier under him—a Christian soldier, for he was converted at eight years of age—and through the war was steadfast as well as brave. We were shown into the room where the old warrior and statesman, whose fame was world-wide, sat feebly in his arm chair. The greeting between him and Brother Stringfield was hearty: it was like the meeting of brothers long parted. The sight of Thomas Stringfield, and the thoughts recalled, pat the old General in tears. They coursed down his furrowed cheeks. General Jackson was a man of tears, notwithstanding his iron nature. 'Ah, Mr. Stringfield, what times have been since we met first! You were a boy, in camp at Emucfaw, and your head was bleeding from an Indian bullet.' So it was, and Brother Stringfield's forehead bore that scar to his grave. He was a modest man, and quickly turned the conversation from himself.

'Well, General, you are weak and failing now. General, how is it with your soul? What are your prospects beyond the grave?' To which Jackson replied: 'My friend, I am not afraid to die.' A pause—'My hope is in the Redeemer of the world: if saved, I shall be a sinner saved by grace.' Had it been at a camp-ground, or even in this church," said Brother Stevens, "I would have shouted out loud; I never wanted to shout so bad in my life. The place was turned into a sanctuary. We all wept. The farewell was touching. 'Good-bye, General; God bless you.' 'Farewell, Mr. Stringfield; I hope we will meet where wars are no more.' And doubtless they have met—the General and his soldier—not as the first, but where,

"No rude alarms of raging foes,
No cares disturb the long repose."

BISHOP PIERCE ON SABBATH SCHOOLS.

We find in the Columbus (Ga.) Times and Sentinel, the following report of remarks made by Bishop Pierce at the St. Louis Conference on Sabbath-school agencies.

"The system of Methodist Sabbath-schools was based upon the supposition that every preacher would be a special agent in the work to superintend its economy. Preachers are at fault as much as parents. The Sabbath-school is the groundwork of household piety—of Scripture discipline and government. An absence of this piety at the hearth or home—of this discipline and government, is the origin of great evils in this world. It is to be remembered that one of the first principles of the church is this—that personal responsibility cannot be transferred to any other person, whether it be parent, teacher or preacher.

"The Bishop read several paragraphs from the Discipline, commenting forcibly upon each. When preachers were asked concerning their efforts in this cause they generally answered that they had done as much as was practible—as much as circumstances would permit. He disliked this kind of answers, it seemed to him very much like a lie against the Holy Ghost. He felt it his duty to speak plain, and it was at all times practicable to do right.

"The Bishop exhorted the Presiding Elders and Preachers to canvass their sections in behalf of the Sabbath-school cause—to conform to the Discipline in this respect, assuring them that thereby they could accomplish more good than by any other measures. He urged them to persevere with a faith that recognized the Providence of God, and to work with a zeal which would result in a harvest in the future, the full value of which eternity only will reveal."

SOUTHERN METHODISM IN CALIFORNIA.

A Discussion had been progressing for some time in the Pacific Methodist, on the question, whether they should hold their Conference at the appointed time—13th October—or wait until the arrival of Bishop Pierce, which, it seems, is expected in January. A call was made for a vote to be sent in to the office of the Pacific Methodist, and nearly all voted in favor of holding it at the appointed time.

The paper says, that a number of young men will offer for admission into the traveling connection, at the approaching Conference. It is encouraging, to find the Church there supplying her own ministry. Bascom Institute, (Female) at San Jose, is represented as in a prosperous condition.

At the Saisun camp-meeting, eighty-five joined our Church; at Bear River camp-meeting twenty-eight; at Butte's camp-meeting forty-six; and at the Nappa camp-meeting eighty-two; and fourteen conversions are reported at the Cachevillle camp meeting, which was still in progress.

Our old friend from Texas, Rev. Dr. T. O. Ellis, writes to the Methodist, that a train of two hundred persons from Texas, several Methodists, and several preachers, would arrive at El Monte in a short time, to his great joy; among whom Rev. Mr. Taylor of the M. E. Church, South, and educated at the McKenzie Institute of the Lone Star State.

MINISTERS AND COLLEGES

In the last Richmond Christian Advocate, we find a very able and interesting discussion between the Editor, Rev. Dr. Lee, and Rev. Paul Whitehead, of a question which, in one form or another, has been much before the Church: namely: as to the propriety of filling College Presidencies and Professorships, and Church Editorships, with ministers engaged in the regular work. Mr. Whitehead denies, in a communication, Dr. Dee affirms, in an editorial. The latter very justly observes: "Even admitting his definition of the specific call, viz: preaching and pastoral oversight, the Church has suspended his general rules," and left "cases" to their legitimate operation and ordinary results, viz: the impression on the public mind of the country, that education ought to be connected with religion: and that the connexion is all the more obvious and prosperous when a christian minister participates in it. We see no cause for regret in this condition of public opinion. We hope it may abound yet more and more; until every college and University in our country shall feel that its success depends upon its identity with religion; and that they all may possess the conservative and sanctifying influence that the presence of able and faithful ministers always exerts over social life."

The Doctor, arguing that the drain, though small, from the itinerant ranks, by calls to educational institutions, should be counterbalanced by increasing the number of ministers, and providing for more educated ministers, and and by providing against locations by better support, adds a third item, and one we do not recollect to have seen before in any of our Church papers, namely:

"By constitutional provision that, preserving the general system of itinerancy, will yet allow of a longer pastorate. As men grow older, the desire for a home, or circumstances as nearly resembling it as possible, constantly grows upon them. This desire, of itself, often induces location; and ministers of age and experience retire from the regular pastoral work, to secure permanency of position, and comfortable provision for the time of old age. Less frequent changes, and these are not incompatible with an efficient itinerancy, and, in many cases, would prove advantageous to the church, would remove one cause of locations, and, by the same rule, strengthen the itinerancy, and increase the qualifications and usefulness of the ministry."

NEW ORLEANS METHODIST PREACHERS.

The epidemic is now drawing to a close. The Protestant clergy of this city are brave and self-denying men. The ministers of all the Evangelical Churches have stood to their posts during the danger, both acclimated and unacclimated. But one has fallen. God has been merciful.

There is, however, one discouraging feature. As families increase in numbers, the same risk has to be encountered in the new members, whether children or grand-children. Some of the ministers longest here have children still unacclimated. For nothing is acclimation in yellow fever, but passing through a genuine attack.

Our own preachers have all been in their places. Rev. Dr. Keener, though spending most of his time in the city, has had his family over the lake during the summer, though mostly acclimated, for necessary recreation to both him and them. Rev. Dr. Walker's family is unacclimated, though here for many years. They are also over the lake. He, as our readers know, has just recovered from the fever. Rev. Mr. Parker's lady, unacclimated, has spent the summer with her friends. He has been at his post all the time, with the exception of a recent visit to his wife and father-in-law, who were quite ill. Rev. Mr. Harp has been in the city all the time, laboring with all his might. Rev. Mr. Halberg, though unacclimated, has done the same. Our German preachers, who never flinch, have all staid with their people. The editor of this paper had his family over the bay opposite Mobile, but when the epidemic broke out, his wife, though unacclimated, would not be prevented from coming home. Our local preachers, have all staid, and done good service. God has wonderfully preserved us all.

A "TOUCH OF NATURE."

"Let me kiss him, for his mother."

The history of the New Orleans epidemic of 1858, like every other one perhaps, abounds in incidents, could they all be verified and written, sufficient to make a volume of most thrillingly romantic reality.

One was recently related to us by one of our city pastors. He was called a few days since to attend the funeral of a young man. Before his sickness, he was a stout, buoyant, manly youth. He was from the State of Maine, and had been here but a short time. He was attacked with yellow fever, and soon died, with no mother, or relative, to watch by his bed-side, or to soothe him with that sympathy which none but those of our own "dear kindred blood" can feel or manifest. He died among strangers, and was buried by them.

When the funeral service was over, and the strange friends who had ministered to him were about to finally close the coffin, an old lady who stood by, stopped them and said, "Let me kiss him, for his mother!" O what a woman's heart was there! Her own motherly heart taught her

"To feel another's woe."

We have yet to find the first man or woman to whose eyes this simple recital has not brought tears. That dear old lady, whoever she is, is probably wholly unconscious of having uttered a sentiment and performed an action, unsurpassed in beautiful simplicity and sublime eloquence. May her sons, when they die, not lack a mother's sympathy; but if they should, may they find one who will kiss them for their mother!

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin."

NORTHERN METHODISM IN CALIFORNIA.

We have just received the California Christian Advocate of September 24, and October 30, containing accounts of the session of the California Conference of the M. E. Church, recently held by Bishop Scott.

The Bishop seems to have traveled much, worked hard, and made a fine impression. The grace of God had been with the preachers on their work during the year, and an increase of five hundred and seventy-five was reported, making the total membership three thousand six hundred and twenty-seven.

Upwards of eighty-five preachers were appointed by the Bishop, and a number of places left to be supplied by local preachers, which, if supplied, make one hundred and eleven. Steps were taken to organize a Biblical Institute on that coast. The Missionary collections for the year amounted to $1803 45, an increase of $786 over last year, being nearly fifty cents to each member of the Church.

Resolutions were passed in favor of continued connection with the Atlantic Conferences, and in favor of lay representation, somewhat on the plan of the Oregon Conference—a steward from each District to be elected by the district meeting; such stewards to have seats and votes in the Annual Conference, in reference to all fiscal, educational, and general temporal affairs—nearly exactly our plan of "lay co-operation."

MOHAMMEDAN FANATICISM.

The Moslem Persecution of Christians in the East is becoming so alarmingly threatening, that the New York Observer strongly recommends the interference of the Christian Powers, including the United States.

For our own part, recent developments have created the opinion that it might have been best, after all, for England and France to have suffered Russia to absorb the Turkish Empire, as she desired. We doubt if these troubles are ever ended, except in this way, or by a general massacre of the Eastern Christians, which is constantly threatened.

BALTIMORE CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

According to arrangements made at the last Session of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, this paper has made its appearence. It is a fair sheet, of good size, seven wide columns, large open type, full of reading matter, few advertisements, and well printed.

It is edited by Rev. Thos. E. Bond, M. D., son of the late Dr. Bond, formerly of the Christian Advocate and Journal—like his father, a local preacher and physician. He is a ready, fluent and sprightly writer, very catholic in his utterances; and, so far, silent on the questions that agitate his own Church.

The design of the paper evidently is, to harmonize and concentrate the opinions of the more conservative members of the Northern Methodist Church—those of the Baltimore and adjacent Conferences especially—so that they may resist the abolition fanaticism of the Church North, or, in case of its success, secede "in good order." The Christian Advocate and Journal advised its establishment; and, "when the worst comes to the worst"—as it surely will—the New York and Baltimore Advocates may be found fighting side by side, either in successful resistance, or in orderly retreat.

"KIRWAN" ON FREE COMMUNION.

"Kirwan," (Rev. Dr. Murray, Presbyterian minister at Elizabethtown, N. J.,) the celebrated author of "Kirwan's Letters to Bishop Hughes," in a recently published communication, says: "Should John Joseph Gurney, or any Quaker like him, be so moved by the Spirit, as to ask a seat at it, for the purpose of testifying his faith in a crucified Savior—rather than forbid him, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, and my right hand forget its cunning. I would prefer his coming in the usual and appointed way of the church; but I would reason, as did Robert Hall, that the omission of one duty was no reason for the neglect of another. I am no advocate for the union of discordant elements into Churches for the sake of an apparent external union; but I am a firm believer in the communion of saints." Popery, in connection with the sacraments, is not confined to the Papal Church; and I prefer the real thing to its milk-and-water-imitation. I have much sympathy with the feeling of Charles Lamb when he said that he regarded a clam with contempt, because it seemed to be always putting forth an abortive effort to bean oyster."

TACTICS OF ANTI-CHRIST.

The New York Observer says, that the way the Romanists work the Bible out of the Public Schools of New York is as follows: "They say in the nominating conventions and committees, you may have the Congressmen, Assemblymen, Aldermen, etc.; but we want Dennis O'Flanaghan and Terence Mulloney, and Patrick O'Brien, on the schools; and so they drive a bargain that seems to be all on one side, as they ask so little and give so much. But, with them, this school question is paramount to all others. They know, that to bring up the children of this country without the Bible in schools, is the surest possible mode of securing the ultimate ascendancy of Romanism and Infidelity! This is the game—The men who are playing it are shrewd, indefatigable and unscrupulous. The men who ought to oppose them are apathetic, indifferent and unbelieving in the existence of danger."

Upon this the Baltimore Christian Advocate remarks; "Catholics will find that they gain nothing by rearing a Godless generation. * * Protestant England has been proved to be a safer place for Romish priests than France, or even Rome, and will prove so again. The time may come in New York, when the men trained in the Bible schools will be called upon to defend the Priests of Rome from the violence of those they have educated without religion.

As surely as all things work together for good to them that fear God, all things work for harm to them that oppose his cause."

METHODISTS IN MISSOURI.

Some time ago, says the St. Louis Advocate, it was stated in our absence from the office, that there were thirty thousand Methodists in the State of Missouri. This was true, but not all of the truth in the case. The number of Methodist members and probationers in the bounds of the St. Louis and Missouri Conferences, which lie wholly in this State, is forty-three thousand seven hundred and eighty-six, and the increase during the year just closed, was five thousand and thirty-one. This is all shown by the abstract of the returns made at the late Conferences, and published in another part of this paper. These, be it remembered, are Methodists, good and true, and not covenant-breaking agitators. Their doctrine and discipline require of them to be subject to the powers that be, as good and loyal citizens, abiding the teachings of the Scriptures in this as on other subjects. With this number, if all be true and faithful to themselves, to God and his cause, what a vast amount of good may be accomplished in the future? The prosperity of the past should encourage us all to labor and hope for great things to come. He who has done so much is able to do more. His arm is not shortened that it can not save, nor His ear heavy that it can not hear. To Him let us look, and on Him rely.

REV. P. E. PITTS, D. D.

"Dominion," in the Memphis Advocate, says: "A great revival is in progress and thousands of people meet there daily, though there are but three campers. One evening, while Brother Pitts was preaching about "the white robed" of earth and heaven, the congregation gradually rose up and began to walk about Zion and praise the Lord; the mourners crowded the altar without an invitation, and the solemnity was so great that none were seen out of the shelter, and scarcely any went away till sun down. That same man Pitts is often the finest orator to be met with among millions of people; I have repeatedly heard the most famed men of America, but there are times when the flame of his pathos licks the everlasting hills with a roar that moves your soul to depths fathomed by few other men. He is not always splendid or moving, but when he is clothed with the mantle of Elijah he makes you feel as if you were actually riding through the heights above in a chariot of fire—you feel dizzy as you ride so high. In him, as a preacher—orthodoxy, piety, pathos and poetry blend like gems and stars and flowers in a diadem of gold.

AGGRESSIVE MOVEMENTS.

From Winchester, Virginia, where, until recently, Northern Methodism, as represented by the Baltimore Conference, had the sway, Rev. W. W. Bennett writes to the Richmond Christian Advocate: "I organized the Southern Church here on the 24th of July, with about thirty members, who had withdrawn from the Northern Church. Three months have not elapsed, and we have now enrolled ninety-three names, all good and true. Upwards of sixty of these have joined from the other side, the rest are the fruits of our own labors.

With present prospects for an extensive revival, we confidently expect to reach one hundred and fifty by Conference.

There is one of the largest and best conducted Sabbath-schools I have ever seen connected with our Church. It numbers two hundred and thirty, including managers, officers and scholars, and is constantly increasing.

THE DANGER OVER.

While we write—Tuesday night, nine o'clock—the indications of the frost of the coming morning are unmistakeable. The "Howards" have declared the epidemic at an end, and disbanded. No one need fear to come to the city now.

A CHAIR, EDITORIAL, OR OTHERWISE.

St. Paul boasted (not in a bad sense) to certain of his brethren of the liberality of certain others of his brethren. Under cover of this high precedent we feel that it is no harm to say that we have been the recipient of a liberality not often enjoyed. For a month past we have debated whether or not to tell it. At length, we have concluded to do so. It may do good. The last phrase may be interpreted just as the reader pleases.

A good friend has presented us with a chair, the like of which we have never seen before. It approaches more nearly to a bed and a chair both, than any thing of the kind we have ever seen. Absolutely unparalleled as a resting-place for a tired man. A simple motion of the foot will roll it to any part of the room. Its cost was—we are ashamed to tell it, but we did not buy it—forty dollars. And the same friend, at the same time—it will never do to tell his name—presented us with other valuable things which cost more than that. Fortunate Methodist preacher—who does not say? These "Methodists of New Orleans" beat the world. Who would not live among them and labor for them? Reader, "go thou, and—do likewise"—to some preacher.

REV. J. E. CARNES.

We are happy to find, by the last Texas Advocate, that our brother editor, who has had a hard time of it with the yellow fever, is "resuming" his pen and labors. He says: "After several weeks of suspension, we resume our editorial duties, an humbler and more thoughtful man. For it is no light thing to be brought near the entrance of the "dark valley." All the joys and sorrows of a life are absorbed by that solemn suspense on which the soul trembles between the probationary and the eternal. The swellings of Jordan are by no means unimpressive. Nor, at such a time, is anything more overwhelming than the thought of "cold obstruction," of this "sensible warm motion" lying in oblivions decay. Yet there is a something within that does not bow down to the material; something that cannot give itself a voice in the question of Job, "If a man die shall he live again?" something that embodies itself with assurance only in nothing less than the declaration that "if the earthly house of the clay tabernacle dissolves, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY.

A correspondent of the Mobile Mercury, writing from Greensboro, says of the Southern University: "A friend found me and placed me beside him, behind a pony with electric heels, and presto we were at the Methodist College. This is an imposing structure, on the eastern extremity of the town—not yet quite finished, located in a commanding position. I know too little of architecture to attempt a description. Its external effect, to me, was strikingly beautiful. Its internal arrangements seem to combine the useful with the beautiful. Under the prestige of a powerful and wealthy denomination of Christians, I look forward to the time when it will be a great seat of learning for the Southwest. Its opening has been postponed another year for a more thorough and complete endowment. I heard it rumored that a wealthy planter in the Canebrake, had just signified his intention to endow one professorship with $25,000.

AN ABOLITION BLUNDER.

It is probably known to most of our readers that the Central Christian Advocate, a very violent anti-slavery sheet, of the Northern Methodist Church, is published at St. Louis. The establishment of such an paper in that place, and its course—in the face of the public opinion of the State, where the Southern Church already fully occupies the ground—has been very surprising, and very offensive.

But, we learn that such folly is not without its cost in money, as well as in other better considerations. From the report of the Northern Book Concern, made to the recent California Conference, we make the following extract.

"The Central Christian Advocate has been published the last year at a loss of $6,828 27. The Agents, at Cincinnati, suggest that this drain cannot long be sustained by the Concern; and intimate that, the publishing of a paper under such circumstances, must be regarded as a missionary interest."

THE TELEGRAPH.

The Paris correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser gives the following hopeful paragraph: "The failure of the Atlantic Telegraph appears to attract more attention here than did the success in laying it down. A leading French scientific writer, M. Figuier, argues in last evening's Press that the cable is still a success, and that it will yet work. A note from the engineer, who has the Irish end in charge, seems to confirm this view of the case, for so long as the central wire is continuous, a fact I believe that is not doubted, a strong hope must be entertained that the difficulty, whatever it may be, is susceptible of being remedied."

CHOCTAW MISSIONS.

The Choctaw Missions of the American Board have been before the public for years, in the way of a contest between its abolition proclivities, and the law and public opinion of the Indians. A crisis is about to be reached, either by a movement on the part of the Board, to get rid of the Missions, or on the part of the Missionaries to get free from the Board and labor in connection with the Presbyterian Church, to which they belong.

Methodist Almanac—1859.—We have just received a copy of this little annual, and expect that the Depositories will early be supplied with enough for all our Methodist population—and others, if they desire it. It is a valuable repertory of Church statistics, and contains a full descriptive catalogue of our publications. If the preachers, says the Southern Advocate, will see it introduced into every family in their respective charges, it can hardly fail to create a demand for our books—for who can have this catalogue in the house, and see even the names of these good books always before them, without becoming desirous of possessing and reading some of them?

The Protestants of Hungary.—The Protestants of Hungary are at present making efforts to establish a Church fund. Baron Nicholas Vay has made the calculation that, if the Protestant owners of landed property would pay for ecclesiastical purposes one krentzer for every acre, the Church would be, after ten years, in possession of 2,278,580 florins. The baron has declared his readiness to pay during ten years his share, amounting to 68 florins a year, and many other Protestants have already followed his example.

Keep the Fire Burning!—Shall the religious flame, says the Pacific Methodist, which has been kindled throughout our bounds the present year, be suffered to die amid the storms and rains of the ensuing winter. Should not every member of the Church, as well as every minister, resolve, that so far as he is personally responsible, it shall not?

The North Carolina Christian Advocate manifests a brotherly interest in the welfare of those of us who are exposed to the yellow fever. Bro. Hatlin is a generous, warm-hearted man. The mental effort necessary to enable a man to make up his mind to face the danger of an epidemic, and expose his wife and children to the uncertain consequences, is not trifling.

Rev. J. E. Evans, wishes us to say, in the paper, that in our articles last summer, about "The Canvass Begun," we had no reference to him; which we do most cheerfully. When we wrote, we had no thought of him. Our pleasantry in regard to him, when he "took it up," had nothing deeper than pleasantry.

Rev. R. Abbey informs us that the "Genealogical Bible" will soon be out, and a copy sent to this office. We have a great desire to see it. If the plan is fully carried out, we have no doubt it will be a more valuable family Bible than any we have ever seen.

The Home Circle for November is out most promptly, and is—though already a worthy candidate—fast ordering itself more and more deserving of popular favor. As to the manner in which it is gotten up, it challenges comparison with any other monthly of the age.

Bishop Soule.—Dr. Summers informs us, says the Southern Advocate, that Bishop Soule is better than when his health was last reported, but still very feeble. Dr. S. thinks that the Bishop will not be able to attend any of the Conferences this winter.

Legacy to the Missionary Society.—We see from the Nashville Advocate, that the venerable Joseph Travis left good notes amounting to $1700 or $2000 to be collected, and the proceeds turned over to the Missionary Society.

The Russian Government has issued a "ukase prohibiting the teaching of Latin in all the colleges of the empire.—Hostility to Roman Catholicism, "Latin Christianity," as Milman styles it, prompts the measure.

Bishop Simpson.—A letter from Pittsburgh, dated October 19, says: "The Bishop is very feeble and confined to his bed, but the doctors in attendance speak hopefully of his ultimate recovery."

Hopeful.—Mrs. H. M. F. Brown, one of the Spiritual lecturers, advances the idea that the devil himself is to be saved through spiritualism.

Meetings of the Conferences.—East Texas Conference, at Tyler, Smith county, November 10th. Texas Conference, at the City of Austin, November 24th.—Bishop Pierce Presiding.

COMMUNICATIONS.

LETTER FROM A YOUNG LADY.

Trip to Otapasa Camp Meeting.

On Friday morning, 8th inst, at half past seven o'clock, in the company of Dr. ——, and other friends, we took our seats in the Jackson Rail-road cars en route for Camp Meeting. The weather was moderately cool, and pleasant; so, with agreeable company, together with the novel scenes and excitement at the different stations on the road, the time passed rapidly away. At one o'clock we arrived at Summit depot, and tarried at the hotel an hour; while our old friend, Bro. C., made arrangements for our conveyance to the Camp ground, which is eight or ten miles distant. The drive out was not pleasant, the road being rough and exceedingly dusty, and, as an additional encouragement, the driver informed us that his mules were in the habit of running away; but that caused us no anxiety, for we consoled ourselves with the promise that, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

As we approached the Camp ground the recollection came, that several dear friends, whom we had met there two years ago, would be missing from among the familiar faces; for a moment we felt sad; but they have gone to the great Camp meeting above; if we are faithful, by and bye we shall meet them there. About five o'clock we got to the Camp ground, where we were soon welcomed by many old and valued friends.

The first sermon was preached that night by the P. E. the Rev. J. G. Jones. The subject was prayer; and it was accompanied by the influences of the Holy Spirit to the hearts of the people. "Father Jones," as he is familiarly called, is loved and revered by all. His move about as a "burning and shining light;" preaching holiness of heart not only in the pulpit, but in all his intercourse with the people. From Saturday morning, penitents were invited to the altar. Many came bowed down with sorrow and went away rejoicing in hope. But, thank God, the conversions were not confined to the altar, for several professed to have obtained pardon at the "Woods prayer meetings."

On Sabbath night the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to about twenty ministers, and a host of followers of the Lamb. This was a precious season. We communed with many that night with whom we shall communs no more, until we meet in our Father's kingdom. After the whites had all partaken, the altar was cleared, and the P. E. invited the colored friends to participate; as many as were disposed came forward and partook of the emblems of a Savior's dying love.

On Monday morning the work was refiewed with more earnestness than had been manifested before. The preachers were baptized with annointed from on high; the Word was quick and powerful, and accompanied by the energies of the Holy Ghost, found its way to the hearts and consciences of the hearers. The "butterflies," as the Presiding Elder called them, had all left; those who remained were in earnest on the subject of Religion. Penitents were unwilling to leave the ground without an assurance of sins forgiven, and professors were unwilling to leave without a special blessing.

Considerable interest was manifested on the subject of Sanctification. Fifteen, we believe, professed to have obtained that blessing during the progress of the meeting. Several of that number were preachers of the Gospel. Among those who professed conversion,—at least forty—were many peculiarly interesting cases. The majority were young people, and not a few children; one of them a little girl seven years old.

I know you love children, Brother Gillespie, and believe it would have gladdened your heart to have witnessed this scene. She went to the altar voluntarily, prayed earnestly for about an hour, then arose with eyes sparkling with joy; called for her Pa, threw her arms around his neck, and said she felt that the Savior loved her and had pardoned her sins. May the Lord keep her faithful and make her eminently useful, and may her example be followed by our scholars in the city Sabbath schools, is our earnest prayer!

Wednesday morning the "horn" was blown for the last time; all came to the stand. After the services were opened, the Presiding Elder delivered an appropriate exhortation. The parting hymn was then sung, and we were dismissed; feeling that the "Lord had done great things for us, whereof we were glad." May heaven's richest blessings abide upon the tent holders, for the liberality which they displayed, in providing for the people on that occasion; may they be rewarded a "hundred fold here," and "in the world to come have everlasting life." After the close of the meeting our party from the city separated. Some of us spent the day and night at Judge H.'s and remainder at Dr. M.'s; and met the next morning at Summit depot. There we dined; then bade our kind friends farewell, and took the cars for the city.

New-Orleans, Oct. 18th, 1858. F. A. E.

REV. PETER E. GREEN.

It has been widely circulated through the public prints that this gentleman was rudely shot by an assassin, and the wound supposed to be mortal. To receive the minds of his numerous friends, I wish to say through the Advocate, that I saw him a few days since, and the probabilities are in favor of recovery. He now sits up and walks about the house, but is still a great sufferer. The wound is in the chest, an inch or two above the right nipple; the ball came out not far from the spine, and just below the shoulder-blade. His mind is preserved in great peace. He deserves the sympathies of his friends and the prayers of the Church.

THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

EAST ALABAMA CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Editor: The following items of news from East Alabama, may be interesting; there are signs of improvement all over the land. It is interesting to visit Tuskegee; there are new brick buildings going up round the public square, and a little back the people are unroofing their old houses and extending them up higher into the air. The Baptists have rolled back their old Church and are erecting a fine brick edifice in its stead. I was on the squnre two days during court, and it occurred to me that it would be a great time to hold a protracted meeting; many Christians and sinners from all parts of the country are there. From day to day, and from court to court; if there was an awning stretched in front of the court-house within call of the Sheriff, they could preach and pray all the time for two weeks. The Colleges are doing well.

La Place is improving also, a new Masonic Lodge has been completed recently; the Collegiate Institute has been enlarged and much improved, and the school is prospering. The Methodists are building a handsome new Church that will cost more than $1,250, it will be finished inside and out, minus the cupola and bell. This has sprung the Methodists at Union Church, and they are plastering their house. That will make two Churches on Tuskegee Circuit finished inside. Texas camp-meeting was only continued four days as there were but fifty odd preachers there; however it was a good meeting, thirty or more professed religion and some, perfect love. On Saturday of the meeting the tent-holders determined to build a shingled-roof arbor, a subscription was started and the last I heard of it, they had more than a $1000; so by next year they will have an arbor one hundred and ten feet by ninety feet, that will keep the rain off.

CORNELIUS.

"BENSON A PLAGIARIST."

Mr. Editor: I observe in your issue of October 6th, an article under this caption; and, if the statement therein be true, it certainly is a humiliating charge, to us, who have always esteemed and reverenced the memory of the holy man upon whom the imputation is cast.

For one, sir, I am not willing to let it rest as it is: for to whatever else we may be lacking as a people, I have never been accustomed to think that our writers were deficient either in industry, originality, or literary longevity; and I do not believe that the time-honored Benson was deficient in any of them.

In the first place, I think that he could have written annotations quite equal to these he is charged with assuming; for I do not perceive any extraordinary merit in them, so far as I am able to judge.

In the next place I always understood, that Benson was urged to write or compile a commentary on the Bible, simply, or mostly, to rectify some prevailing erroneous opinions respecting the eternal sonship of Christ; and consequently, so that he did that part scripturally and originally, he did all his English brethren required of him.

Now, sir, in this compilation or commentary (mostly for devotional purposes) that he mainly preferred Pool, was to him a compliment; but Benson's object, and compilations, I think, are too apparent, for him to be charged as plagiarist.

G. T. VICKERS.

MISSISSIPPI DEPOSITORY,

To members of Mississippi Conference.

The books and accounts of the Book and Tract Society, for the years 1856-7, are in my hands, for settlement; and Dr. Hamilton, the former Tract Secretary, is very anxious to have all the old accounts settled as soon as possible. Our publishing interests require that those old accounts should be paid. We hope, therefore, that all who know themselves to be indebted, will send us the money, at the earliest opportunity; and that, if it cannot be done sooner, that all will be ready at the Conference to pay off those old accounts.

Those who have books on hand which they intend to return to the Depository, (according to our former method of doing business,) will please do so before Conference, so that we may have a final settlement of all the accounts in which Dr. Hamilton is concerned. This is important to all, since Dr. Hamilton has gone out of office.

News from our Home Work.

"To spread Scriptural Holiness over these Lands."

Alabama Conference.

PASCAGOULA CIRCUIT—Rev. W. A. Montgomery, writes: "We closed our camp meeting on Tuesday, 19th instant; it resulted in the conversion of fifteen or twenty souls, and the accession to the Church of thirteen; nine whites, four colored. Some of the conversions were very clear. The membership was much revived; better behavior and attention were never known at this place. Brother J. T. Heard, our Presiding Elder, was with us, laboring most efficiently. We had also the assistance of eight or ten other preachers, for which we are thankful. This Circuit is in an improving condition at almost every appointment; about sixty-five whites and twenty-four colored have joined the Church during the year.

PRAIRIE CREEK COLORED MISSION—Rev. J. W. McCann sends his report, for the Fourth Quarter: "I have received this quarter thirty-four on probation, baptized fifty-two children and three adults—some have died. I asked the class leaders how they died; to express it in their own language, "they died happy." I will not be able to report as many members this year as I did last. About one hundred and seventy-five or eighty, are preached to by other Missionaries, and some fled by the Episcopal clergy; we need suitable places for preaching, but we are glad to get to preach to them at all.

TALLADEGA CIRCUIT—Rev. E. Phillips, writes: "We have had a revival spirit on the Talladega Circuit, during the latter part of the summer, and so far of the fall. There have been good meetings at all the appointments, at some glorious revivals, some ninety-six whites and twelve colored taken into the Church on trial, eight by letter; making in all one hundred and sixteen during the last quarter. The local brethren have done good service, brother Ross from Talladega, was with us in the power of our Lord and Master."

WARSAW CIRCUIT—Rev. W. C. Hearn, writes: "We have just closed a meeting at Hebron, which has been continuing for seventeen days gloriously, thirty-one professed the religion of Jesus, and joined the Church. The Church greatly revived the preachers acquainted with this region and the condition of the Church for years past will join us in glory to God."

LAUDERDALE CIRCUIT—Rev. J. L. Sampey, writes: "The Lord has visited his people on this Circuit, sinners have been convicted, mourners converted and believers made to rejoice; one hundred and seventeen persons have been received into the Church this year, seventy-seven whites and forty blacks, about sixty have professed religion; this is a pleasant country to travel in, it is blessed with rail road facilities."
